Mr. DAVIS presented a petition of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Dakota, praying for an amendment of the omnibus bill for the admission of certain Territories; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented the petition of E. G. Hicks and 84 others, citizens of Maine Prairie, Stearns County, Minnesota, praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the liquor traffic; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. DOLPH presented a memorial of citizens of Whitman County Washington Territory, remonstrating against the passage of the bill now before the Senate authorizing the commissioners of Whitman County, Washington Territory, to issue bonds for the construction of a court-house and jail at Colfax, the present county seat; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. GORMAN presented the petition of Rebecca Allen, widow of John G. Allen, late landsman, United States steam-ship Atlanta, praying for an extension of the arrears-of-pension act so as to cover her ease;

ing for an extension of the arrears-of-pension act so as to cover her ease; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of A. J. Cahall and 194 others, citizens of Kent County, Maryland, praying for the proposal of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation, and sale of all alcoholic liquors as a beverage; which was ordered to lie on the table.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The PRESIDENT protempore. If there be no further petitions or memorials, reports of committees are in order.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am directed by the Committee on Foreign Relations to move an executive session, which I do now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After two hours and fifty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

AFFAIRS IN ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

During the executive session, Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported a bill (S. 3949) to protect the interests of the United States in Panama; which was read twice by its title.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the bill as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate $250,000 to enable the President to protect the interests of the United States, and to provide for the security of the persons and property of citizens of the United States at the Isthmus of Panama, in such manner as he may deem expedient.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS BECOME LAWS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the following bills, having been presented to the President of the United States January 25, 1889, and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which they originated within the ten days prescribed by the Constitution, have become laws without his signature:

A bill (S. 2705) granting a pension to Ellen Smith; and A bill (S. 3733) to abolish circuit-court powers of certain district courts of the United States, and to provide for writs of error in capital cases, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The doors having been opened,

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that so much of the routine morning business as does not give rise to debate may now be received.

Mr. HALE. I do not object to that. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Reports of committees are now in

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair receive petitions?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Petitions and memorials will be re-

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. HOAR presented the petition of L. Kidder, late assistant adjutant-general, second division, First Corps, Army of the Potomac, praying for an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of 84 citizens of Iowa, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HISCOCK presented a petition of 420 citizens of the State of New York, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HAWLEY presented the petition of the Fourth Congregational Church of Hartford, Conn., praying for the submission to the States of a constitutional prohibitory amendment; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BLACKBURN presented a petition of 556 citizens of Kentucky, praying for the passage of a Sunday-rest law; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FAULKNER. I present a petition of 2,000 workingmen of the State of West Virginia, and as it relates to a matter which is of great practical importance, I ask that the petition be printed in the RECORD without the names of the petitioners.

Mr. HARRIS. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the subject of the petition, and to what committee should it be referred?

Mr. FAULKNER. I desire to have it referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia asks unanimous consent that the petition presented by him, without the names, may be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HARRIS. I object to printing the petition in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petition will be received, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FAULKNER. Then I desire to state the substance of the petition, which I have a right to do under the rules. It will not take over ten lines of the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia will proceed.

Mr. FAULKNER. This petition is from two thousand citizens of West Virginia, laboring men, setting out the fact that the contractors in Government employment in the construction of works on the Great Kanawha River, in West Virginia, are employing Italians and other European pauper labor to the exclusion of American labor. The petitioners pray Congress to investigate the matter and pass such a law as will prevent the contract system upon such improvements carried on by the General Government, and that such work may be prosecuted directly by the Government, thereby securing to the American people the right to furnish skilled and unskilled labor upon their own public

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VEST presented resolutions adopted by the Commandery of the Loyal Legion of the United States of the State of Missouri, in favor of legislation by Congress providing for the publication of the naval records of the late war, including the operations of the Navy on Western rivers; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MITCHELL presented the memorial of citizens of Whitman

County, Washington Territory, protesting against a division of that county; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred an amendment submitted by himself January 17, 1889, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill, proposing to pay George K. Otis, late contractor for mail service, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon.

The report was ordered to be printed, and the amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred an amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, to the general deficiency appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and it was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9268) to punish dealers and pretended dealers in counterfeit money and other fraudulent devices for using the United States mails, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. CALL introduced a bill (S. 3950) granting a pension to Samuel B. Hurlburt, of Company G, Ninth Regiment of Iowa Veteran Volunteers; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3951) to establish a railway bridge across the Illinois River, extending from a point within 5 miles of Columbiana, in Green County, to a point within 5 miles of Kampsville, in Calhoun County, in the State of Illinois; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MITCHELL introduced a bill (S. 3952) granting a pension to Mrs. Sarah J. Morgan, of Washington, D. C.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 3953) increasing the pension of George Hayes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions. Mr. STANFORD introduced a bill (S. 3954) for the relief of James Q. Shirley and the estate of Francis De Long; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3955) providing for the establishment of a light and fog-signal to mark the entrance to San Pedro Harbor, California; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. GEORGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CALL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CHANDLER and Mr. SHERMAN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL and Mr. PALMER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be

Mr. STANFORD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

STATEMENTS ON SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent to have the following resolution considered now:

Resolved, That in the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12008) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, the Committee on Appropriations be authorized to employ a stenographer to take down such statements in regard to items therein as the committee may desire to have reported; and the committee may have such statements printed for its use.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks under the rule the resolution should go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. REAGAN (to Mr. Allison). Ask unanimous consent.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the resolution may be now considered without a reference to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be again read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. PUGH. In the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 9, page 1754, where I made a statement in defense of the Fourth Auditor, there is a mistake as to the names of the referees in the card of Mr. Gitt. In printing the referees those who were referred to by H. A. B. Corts were added to the card of Mr. Gitt by mistake. The referees of Mr. Gitt should stop at Mr. Switzler, and the other referees ought to appear on the card of H. A. B. Corts. My attention was called to this mistake by Mr. Gitt; and I desire that the Reporter shall publish the cards as they have been given to me with the names of the referees correctly mentioned.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had announced the appointment of Mr. ERMENTROUT and Mr. BAKER, of New York, as tellers on the part of the House to count the electoral votes for President and Vice-President.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 4792) to pension J. W. Porter; and

A bill (H. R. 8549) granting a pension to Louisa Rogers. The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 2714) for the relief of Thomas Lannigan;

A bill (S. 3640) to amend the laws relating to the selection and service of jurors in the supreme court of the District of Columbia; and

A bill (S. 3663) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the said bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. TOWNSHEND, Mr. ROBERTSON, and Mr. STEELE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President protempore:

A bill (H. R. 8) to restore Mrs. R. S. Horton upon the pension-roll;

and

A bill (H. R. 2261) to increase the pension of Elijah W. Penny.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further morning business, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumes consideration of the unfinished business, being Senate bill No. 3401, concerning the Pacific railroads.

Actific railroads.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 12329, being the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside and that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the bill of the process of the senate may proceed to the consideration of the bill of the process of the senate may proceed to the consideration of the bill of the process of the senate may proceed to the consideration of the bill of the process of the senate may be appropriately senate the process of the pro

Mr. STEWART. I object to unanimous consent.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator from Nevada will not object. There are special reasons for this course. My colleague [Mr. FRYE], who is in charge of the bill which is the unfinished business, was imperatively called away yesterday to Maine by a death in his family. He is not here, and I hope in consideration of that fact, however much the Senator from Nevada may wish for a vote to displace it, that he will not object, in the absence of my colleague, to the bill retaining its place.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]?

Mr. STEWART. The bill can be easily called up again if the Senate is disposed to consider it, and I should like to know when it is to be called up.

Mr. HALE. I hope the Senator will not object in view of this situation of my colleague in charge of the bill. The summons of course came to him unexpectedly, and he was obliged to respond to it.

Mr. STEWART. I shall waive the objection under those circum-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations will be considered as they are reached in the reading of the text of the bill.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 3, line 24, after the word "papers," to strike out the comma and insert a semicolon.

The amendment was agreed to. .

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 20, to insert:

Electric-lighting plants: For installing the monitors Miantonomoh, Terror, and Monadnock with electric-lighting plants, $45,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 20, to insert "and" before the word "wharves."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Right there a committee amendment should go in. After the word "dollars," in line 23, page 8, I move to insert:

For the construction of a building for use by the Naval Torpedo Station and War College as consolidated by order of the Secretary of the Navy January 11, 1889, $100,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I present, to be printed in the RECORD, the Department documents upon this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT in the chair). The documents will be received and printed in the RECORD.

The papers referred to are as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 14, 1889.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 14, 1889.

SIR: I inclose herewith copy of General Order No. 365, consolidating the Naval War College and the Torpedo Station, in pursuance of the direction contained in the last appropriation act, approved September 7, 1888.

There is needed for the purposes of this institution another building, which should hereafter be equipped in a manner so as to illustrate the improvements going on in the arts and implements of war.

I request that an appropriation of $100,000 be now made for the purposes of construction of the necessary building.

Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. H. A. Herrer, Chairman House Naval Committee, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

[General Order No. 365.]

[General Order No. 365.]

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., January II, 1889.

Under a provision contained in the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1888, the institution on Coasters' Harbor Island, in the harbor of Newport, R. I., known as the "Naval War College," is hereby consolidated with, and made a part of, the Torpedo Station on Goat Island, in said harbor, which station, as consolidated, will hereafter be known as the "Naval Torpedo Station and War College," and is placed under the command of the officer in charge of the Torpedo Station.

The library and movable property belonging to the Naval War College will be transferred to the Naval Torpedo Station and War College.

The custody and control of the large building and surrounding structures, with the adjacent grounds, on Coasters' Harbor Island, heretofore occupied for the purposes of the Naval War College, will be turned over to the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting for the use of the naval training station on that island.

The establishment of a more thorough system of instruction, to be pursued at the Naval Torpedo Station and War College, being now under consideration, suitable orders relating thereto will, after such system shall have been adopted, be issued by the Department.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY,

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was under the head of "Civil establishment, Bureau of Yards and Docks," on page 17, line 12, after the word "thousand," to strike out "three hundred and twenty-five" and insert "seven hundred and fifty-four;" so as to read:

Naval station, Sackett's Harbor, New York: For one ship-keeper, at $1 per diem, including Sundays; in all, $46,754.60. And no other fund appropriated by this act shall be used in payment for such services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 16, after the word "Naval," to strike out "Home" and insert "Asylum;" so as to read:

Naval Asylum, Philadelphia, Pa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. At the end of page 32, after the word "dollars," in line 24, I move to add the following paragraph:

line 24, I move to add the following paragraph:

For the purchase of land and buildings thereon, situated adjacent to the Naval Academy at Annapolis and between the Academy grounds and the Naval Hospital grounds, a sum not exceeding $90,000: Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Navy may, if he deems it for the best interests of the United States, proceed to acquire title to such land and buildings by condemnation thereof by judicial proceeding to be commenced in the appropriate circuit court of the United States, which court shall, for the purpose of ascertaining the true value of said land, appoint three commissioners, who shall be competent and disinterested appraisers, and all the proceedings for the condemnation aforesaid shall be in accordance, except as herein provided, with the act of Congress of August 1, 1888, entitled "An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes."

The amountment was agreed to

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I submit a letter explanatory of the amendment, to be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be received and printed in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, Annapolis, Md., July 28, 1888.

UNITED STATES NAVAL ACADEMY, Annapolis, Md., July 28, 1888.

Sir: I send herewith tracings of the Academy grounds, which are inclosed by a brick wall, together with the plot of ground of 11 acres already belonging to the Academy but entirely separated from it by the private property which it is desired to purchase.

It will be seen that the above-mentioned 11 acres are quite useless to the Academy until this plot and the 7 acres lying between it and the Academy are all within the Academy walls.

The discipline of the school requires that the cadets should be restricted to the limits of the Academy, for the greater part of the time, and for this reason they should have ample space for their sports within the walls, as well as for the prescribed exercises. At present but a small part of the cadets can participate in their games at the same time.

In addition to this the improvements at the Academy should be made in a systematic manner, so that at all times in its history it shall present the best arrangement of its parts.

If this land is added to the Academy no more will be required, and the disposition of the buildings and other improvements may be made in accordance with a definite plan.

This has not been practicable heretofore, for lack of space, or doubt whether the necessary space (this land under discussion) would ever be purchased.

The contracted limits of the Academy at its foundation, in 1845, have been repeatedly enlarged by authority of Congress as it became absolutely necessary. The addition nowasked for, though small in itself, will render available a much larger space, now useless, and which will be ample for the future wants of the institution.

Very respectfully,

W. T. SAMPSON,

Commander U. S. Navy, Superintendent.

W. T. SAMPSON, Commander U. S. Navy, Superintendent.

Hon. W. E. CHANDLER, United States Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

Mr. HALE. I also submit for insertion in the RECORD an extract from a report of Commander Sampson, Superintendent of the Academy:

the Academy, and which separates it from another portion of the Government property.

This recommendation has been repeatedly made, and the grounds of the Academy have been added to by the purchase of portions of this property, as it became absolutely necessary. There still remain 5.03 acres between Hanover street and the river, which separate the Academy grounds proper from the (about) 11 acres of Government land on the same side of the river. The walls of the Academy inclose about 50 acres, but the 11 acres above referred to are of no service while cut off by the private property lying between it and the Academy. The discipline of the institution requires that the cadets should be kept within its limits, except upon special occasions, so that the space available for exercises, drills, and sports is now too limited.

A chart of the property is sent herewith, which will make plain the relative positions of the Government and private property. The portion which it is recommended to purchase lies between Hanover street and the river—5.03 acres—together with the small triangle of 1.64 acres bounded by Hanover and Wagner streets and the Government property. This property is occupied by a large number of inferior buildings. The price asked by the various owners is considered just and reasonable, except in two or three cases, notably the gas-light company.

All the lands and improvements should, however, be judicially appraised and condemned to insure fair dealing with the Government. The total amount asked by the owners is $108,000, which is probably $15,000 in excess of what it would be sold for. The 5.03 acres between Hanover street and the river are valued at $99,000; this portion contains the gas-works, which are most overestimated in value.

The reading of the bill was concluded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.
Mr. HALE. The Committee on Appropriations have no further amendments.

Mr. CHANDLER. On page 32 I move to strike out the last three lines, as follows:

For repairing naval hospital building at Naval Academy, to be used as officers quarters, $15,000.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For the construction of additional officers' quarters, as estimated for, $30,000.

I ask to have printed in the RECORD the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury transmitting the estimate for an appropriation for the accommodation of the officers, and also a letter of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy, dated December 10, 1888, giving the reasons why this appropriation should be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The papers referred to will be received and printed in the RECORD, if there be no objection.

The papers are as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 20, 1888.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Navy of the 17th instant, submitting an estimate for an appropriation of $30,000 for the construction of two houses for the accommodation of officers on duty at the Naval Academy.

Respectfully, yours,

C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

The SPEAKER of the House of Representatives.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 17, 1888.

Sin: I have the honor to inclose herewith, for transmission to Congress, copy of a communication dated the 10th instant, from Commander W. T. Sampson, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, calling the Department's attention to the necessity of an appropriation of $30,000 for building two houses for the accommodation of officers on duty at the Academy.

Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

Hon, C. S. FAIRCHILD, Secretary of the Treasury.

United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., December 10, 1888.

Anapolis, Ma., December 10, 1888.

SIR: Learning that an effort is being made to secure additional quarters at the Naval Academy for the accommodation of officers here on duty, I respectfully urge the justice of such a provision.

During the past year fourteen young married officers, besides four married assistant professors, have been obliged to provide their own quarters in the city. The quarters provided by Government are assigned to the officers and professors according to rank, as far as they will go. As a consequence, the younger officers, who receive the least pay and are least prepared to bear the additional expense of house-rent, are obliged to do so.

This has the effect of producing a practical difference in the pay of officers to the disadvantage of the juniors, which the law does not contemplate.

It has also frequently happened that young officers exceptionally fitted for duty at the Academy have declined it because they were not able to live here without quarters.

There are now two apartment houses within the grounds, each of which accommodates eight small families; if two more similar ones were provided I think it would be sufficient. The cost would be about $15,000 each.

If consistent with the Department's views, I request that Congress may be asked to make such an appropriation immediately.

Respectfully,

W. T. SAMPSON,

W. T. SAMPSON, Commander United States Navy, Superintendent.

The SECRETARY OF THE NAVY, Washington, D. C.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment. Mr. CHANDLER. The Superintendent of the Academy states clearly and distinctly enough the reasons why there should be constructed these two additional houses for officers' quarters, and upon the recom-mendation of the Superintendent approved by the Secretary of the Navy and the estimate submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, I trust there will be no objection to making that appropriation. I am led to move to strike out the appropriation of $15,000 for fitting up the naval hospital building at Annapolis to be used for officers' quarters, because I believe that it will be an utterly futile appropriation. The naval hospital building has never been used. It is a very large building situate upon the naval hospital lot, about shalf or three-quarters of a mile from the Naval Academy, and the hospital or three-quarters of a mile from the Naval Academy, and the nospital lot is separated from the Naval Academy grounds by one or two streets and by a piece of ground containing about 9 acres, provision for purchasing which has already been made in the bill by an amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

Now, here is this great hospital building on the naval hospital lot of 75 acres, and the present buildings of the Naval Academy are on the 50-acre lot constituting the grounds of the Naval Academy. At the present time, before the purchase of this lot of land which is being provided for in this bill, it would be absurd to go over to this great hospital lot. vided for in this bill, it would be absurd to go over to this great hospital building and undertake to fit it up for naval officers' quarters and to send naval officers over there to live. More than that, I do not believe that it will ever be found to be ex-More than that, I do not believe that it will ever be found to be expedient to undertake to fit up the naval hospital building for officers' quarters. As I have stated, it is a very large building; it is as large as a first-class modern summer hotel at some watering-place, with its large halls and large rooms, its large dining-room and great kitchen, and it is only fitted to be used as either a hospital or a hotel. It is manifest that no $15,000 will fit up this building, which has been disused for twenty years and is falling to pieces so es to make it mitchle for for twenty years and is falling to pieces, so as to make it suitable for quarters for naval officers and their families. I think the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], who is familiar with the grounds and the buildings, and the Senator who has charge of this appropriation bill [Mr. HALE], will confirm me in the statement that this appropriation of $15,000 under the circumstances ought not to be made. Therefore I hope the committee will assent to the amendment which I have moved.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, there is force in the suggestion made by the Senator from New Hampshire, that as the bill proposes to buy the piece of land lying between the Naval Academy grounds and the the piece of land lying between the Naval Academy grounds and the naval hospital grounds perhaps neither of the plans for repairing the old hospital or building new quarters should be entered into now. The naval hospital is, as the Senator says, not much more than a great shell, built about twenty years ago, and has practically never been of any earthly use. It is pleasantly situated on high ground, about three-quarters of a mile from the Academy grounds, overlooking the water, and in many respects is a desirable place for the houses, for the buildings of the instructors and officers who are detailed for duty at the Academy. Academy.

Whether or not $15,000 can be put to advantage in making these dwelling-houses for the officers is, I think, a matter of some doubt. I should not want to agree to substitute the amendment suggested by the Senator from New Hampshire, but I am willing for one that the House clause may be struck out, leaving the provision for increased officers' quarters to be decided when the new land has been purchased and when it is better seen where these quarters can be erected, possibly upon the new land immediately east. Therefore for one I hope the Senator will withdraw the amendment, and I will not object to striking out all this clause in the House bill.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the provision in the bill as it comes from the House of Representatives making appropriation for the repair of the old hospital, which, as the Senator from New Hampshire has said, is a half or three-quarters of a mile from the Naval Academy, I think myself would be entirely useless, the money would be thrown away, and it would be found, as the Superintendent of the Academy states, absolutely useless. As the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate by its action has to-day made provision for acquiring the land immediately adjoining the present Naval Academy grounds, I concur with the Senator from Maine in charge of the bill that it would probably be well if this entire matter should go over until after that ground has been acquired. I think it will be found upon examination that this old hospital will probably never be of any use to the United States. It was built some twenty years ago under the impression that there was a necessity for it, but I believe later on it will be found to the interest of the Government to dispose of that building and probably sell it to the State of Maryland for some other purpose. Certainly it will not be used for the purposes of the Naval Academy, and in view of the action of the Senate to-day making provision for acquiring the ground immediately adjoining the Naval Academy, I think that we had better wait until after that land has been acquired and then make provision for the officers' quarters. Therefore I agree with the Senator from Maine that the wise course would be to strike out the provision and let the matter remain until next year.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator from New Hampshire will withdraw his amendment

Mr. CHANDLER. Let the vote first be taken on striking out.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire proposes to strike out and insert.
Mr. HALE. I have no objection to striking out.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the rejection of that proposition would not prevent a motion to strike out.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will make a brief statement and then I shall withdraw the amendment. I am entirely willing the case should take that disposition, but I do insist that some progress ought to be made at this session in providing additional quarters and some step taken forward. Now, I think the most important need of the Naval Academy is the acquisition of the adjoining land, the 9 acres which lie between the 50 acres of the Naval Academy and the 11 acres on one side of the Severn and the 75 acres on the other side of the Severn. I think that is the greatest need at this time of the Naval Academy, and if that result is to be reached under the clause which the committee have result is to be reached under the clause which the committee have recommended and which the Senate has adopted, if that is to be insisted upon and we are to get that land next year, I agree then that the question of providing the additional quarters, whether they shall be constructed within the present Academy limits or whether they shall be constructed upon the naval hospital grounds, may properly be deferred another year. Therefore I withdraw the amendment I offered, and move to strike out the paragraph.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire moves to amend the hill by striking out lines 22, 23, and 24 on page moves to amend the bill by striking out lines 22, 23, and 24, on page 32, as will be stated by the Secretary.

The Secretary. On page 32 it is proposed to strike out as follows:

For repairing naval hospital building at Naval Academy, to be used as offiers' quarters, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. I now move to strike out, on page 40, line 23, the following words:

Of the type and to be constructed according to plans and specifications to be furnished to the Navy Department by Hon, John R. Thomas, of Illinois, to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope that amendment will not be agreed to. I see no reason why the provision is not right as it is. As I understand, the gentleman referred to in the bill has actually prepared plans which are acceptable to the Navy Department and which are worthy to be the plans by which a ship or cruiser shall be built. I see no reason why those words should be stricken out. Unless there is something about it of which I am not aware, I hope they will remain in the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Did I understand the Senator to say that the Navy Department had recommended this?

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir. Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senator has the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy I should like him to read it.

Mr. CULLOM. I have in several papers here. Let me read:

Mr. CULICAL. I have in several papers acreed as well as well as the above description, which I think it would be desirable for this Department to construct. I do not intend to refer to the exact plan submitted, but to the general characteristics as worked out. Refer also to the Chief Constructor for consideration.

W. C. WHITNEY.

And I find in the RECORD the following:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 9, 1889.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith, in accordance with the request of the committee, a copy of the report of the officers appointed by me to examine the plans and drawings of the 3,000-ton vessel of war designed by Hon, John R. Thomas, which report has received the approval of the Department.

Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. H. A. Herbert,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs,
House of Representatives.

Then follows the report, as I suppose it is, of the board having the subject before them for investigation, reporting in favor of the building of the vessel.

While I am upon the floor I will take occasion to submit some other official documents—at least I suppose they are; they seem to be signed officially-on this same matter:

There is no doubt in my mind that a vessel designed to carry out the ideas of Hon, John R. Thomas, of the House Naval Committee, as expressed in his design this day submitted to the Department, is perfectly practicable, and she would prove a valuable acquisition to the naval service. I should be pleased to see such a vessel constructed.

AUGUST 6, 1888.

THEODORE D. WILSON, Chief Constructor United States Navy, Chief of Bureau.

I believe Mr. Wilson is the Chief of the Construction Bureau of the Navy Department. While I am about it I will put in another letter that seems to be written by him:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR, Washington, D. C., December 10, 1888.

To whom it may concern:

Hon. J. R. Thomas, member of the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives, has this morning shown to us an article in the New York World of December 8, charging him with appropriating the plans of one McCartee for a vessel of war. We have no hesitation in saying that this charge is without any foundation whatever, as the plans of Mr. Thomas were prepared under orders from the Secretary of the Navy, from rough sketches and personal suggestions made by him, and that no similar plans have ever been presented to this bureau by any person to our knowledge.

Wiedge.
T. D. WILSON,
Chief Constructor United States Navy, Chief of Bureau,
PHILIP HICHBORN,
Naval Constructor, United States Navy.

I suppose the actual draughting was perhaps done in the Navy Department, as I infer from this letter, and it is signed "T. D. Wilson, Chief Constructor United States Navy, Chief of Bureau; Philip Hichborn, Naval Constructor, United States Navy."

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. CULLOM. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOAR. Suppose before this work is done somebody should present to the Secretary of the Navy what he thought was a better.

present to the Secretary of the Navy what he thought was a better plan, better for specifications, doing better work, and at a cheaper price, making a better vessel, would not this bill as now drawn compel him to take this?

Mr. CULLOM. I suppose it would.

Mr. HOAR. Is that proper?

Mr. CULLOM. We can hardly afford to decline to do anything for fear something else better will happen and may be done hereafter,

Mr. HOAR. My honorable friend does not quite catch the point of my question. He will allow me to make it a little more clear. I am my question. He will allow me to make it a little more clear. I am not aware that in the history of the Government there can be found a single instance which would oblige the head of a Department having about him public work of this kind, vessels, arms, or anything of that kind, when he was perfectly satisfied that he was not getting the best thing for his money, to be required, having made his contract, to go on and take the worst thing merely by the bidding of the two Houses of Congress who are supposed to know nothing about it themselves. Congress, who are supposed to know nothing about it themselves

Mr. CULLOM. In answer to the Senator from Massachusetts I will say that the other branch of this Congress has passed this naval appropriation bill. It has incorporated in it a provision for building a vessel, a cruiser, according to certain plans which have been furnished. Now the question is whether the Senate will agree to the provision that is found in the bill, and if it does I take it for granted that the Government will proceed at once to the construction of the ship. So there is no delay. It is not a question of whether we shall build a ship two or five years hence, but the purpose is to proceed directly with the work. As my friend suggests, there is no detailed specific plan proposed, but it is according to the general plan that has been sketched or furnished by the gentleman named, and does not preclude the Secretary of the Navy from changing it, as I understand it generally, according to the necessities of the case.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask my honorable friend another question? Mr. CULLOM. Yes.

Mr. HOAR. Is it true that it is not the adoption by Congress of a plan which has been already approved, but it is according to plans and specifications to be furnished hereafter, so that if this gentleman changes his mind about something and gets up a new scheme, that scheme has got to be adopted whether or no?

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator will notice the last clause of the provision on the second line of page 41; it reads "to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy." If Mr. Thomas does not furnish such plans as the Secretary of the Navy is willing to approve, that is the end of So I do not think the Government is in a position where it is going to be injured by the adoption of this provision of the bill.

I desire to submit one or two other papers that I have in my possession while I have the floor:

COMMANDANT'S OFFICE, UNITED STATES NAVY-YARD, Washington, D. C., August 9, 1888.

Washington, D. C., August 9, 1888.

I have examined a sketch of a design by Hon. John R. Thomas, M. C., of a pneumatic dynamite cruising monitor.

I think this design practicable, and that a vessel constructed to embody the general features of Mr. Thomas's design (substituting gun-cotton for dynamite) would be a valuable addition to the fighting force of the Navy.

Such a vessel would not be purely experimental, as most of the features of Mr. Thomas's design have already been proved practicable.

He has m enaged to combine several important elements, and they present the features of an original design, the parts of which have already been found successful in practice.

R. W. MEADE, Captain United States, Navy, Commandant.

I present these papers to show that any impression which may prevail on the part of my distinguished friend from Massachusetts and other distinguished gentlemen from the far East that there is no one out in our prairie country who can invent a ship is a mistake, and that it turns out that we have talent in that direction as well as they have down on the New England coast,

Mr. HOAR. My honorable friend will allow me to contradict him.

Of course he does not wish to do me injustice.

Mr. CULLOM. Certainly not.

Mr. HOAR. I entertain no such notion. On the contrary, I think they can invent the most marvelous ships ever made.

Mr. CULLOM. I think we are starting in pretty well in that direction, but I think there is a disposition to strike out this provision in the bill simply because it happens to be that the name of a member of Congress is inserted in it. If there can be any modification of that provision of the bill which will preserve the substance of it and allow the ship to be built, so far as I am concerned I am not very particular, and I do not suppose that the inventor or the designer of the plan is particularly anxious that his name shall be connected with it, but he be-lieves, and a great many other people believe, and the Navy Department seems to believe pretty generally that this is a good thing and that the ship ought to be built by the Government, and I do not think the simple fact that his name is identified with it ought to prevent its being done.

Here is another communication which I desire to read:

To the chairman of the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives:

To the chairman of the Naval Committee of the House of Representatives:

Sie: I have examined in a somewhat hasty manner the design of pneumatic dynamite cruising monitor by Hon. John R. Thomas, and beg leave to express the belief that the general ideas embodied are essential to a vessel being kept afloat and in an effective cond tion at sea against the fire of rapid-firing guns of even the present calibers employed.

In my judgment, the construction of such a vessel will be a move in the right direction. For my ideas at greater length, and quite in accord with this construction, I refer to my paper in the April number of Congress, a monthly published in this city.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL AMMEN, Rear-Admiral, Retired.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 9, 1888.

Mr. CHANDLER. Who is that signed by?
Mr. CULLOM. Daniel Ammen. The Senator from New Hampshire will find that almost all the best naval officers we have in the service, including some who have retired, have unqualifiedly indorsed the construction of this vessel, and I think it ought to be built.

I have another communication which I will read:

Committee on Naval Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., August 7, 1888.

My DEAR SIE: I have carefully examined the drawings and plan of your new design for a vessel of war, and I must extend to you my most unqualified approval of this design. A vessel constructed upon such principles combines all the requisites of a first-class fighting vessel as well as a commerce destroyer. I think this class of vessels is what the Navy and country require. I hope the others who have carefully studied this matter and those in authority may see the value of such a vessel, and order the construction of said vessel at an early

I am, very respectfully and truly yours,

JAS. E. JOUETT, Rear-Admiral, United States Navy.

Now, Mr. President, I do not pretend to know anything about the merits of a cruising vessel or any other kind of a ship, but I do submit these papers in justification of this provision of the bill and of the action of the Committee on Appropriations on the part of the Senate which has kept it there, and I hope the Senate will allow it to remain.

I might take up the time of the Senate by having read the report submitted by the board which was convened, as I suppose, by the Secretary of the Navy, to examine the merits of this ship which is proposed to be built, but I presume that it has been read, perhaps, by Senators, as it has appeared in the RECORD, when the subject was under discussion by the other House, and I will not take up the time of the Senate or space in the RECORD by having it read again.

I only desire to say again that I hope the provision contained in the bill, or the substance of it, at least, will be left as it is and that the vessel may be built.

I have a communication also here from Mr. Wilson, the Chief of the Bureau of Construction, to this effect:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR, Washington, D. C., January 9, 1889.

My DEAR Sir: I inclose herewith for your personal information an itemized estimate of the cost of your armored cruising monitor. To make us safe the amount of $1,500,000 should be asked for.

Very truly yours,

T. D. WILSON.

Hon. J. R. THOMAS,

House of Representatives, Washington.

That is the case so far as I know it, and with it I leave the matter in the hands of the Senate to dispose of.

Mr. HAWLEY. It is not to be taken for granted, I am sorry to say, that any member of Congress has read the entire RECORD of a previous day. If there has been a report of this board, I wish the Senator to state who composed the board, and give a summary at least of their report.

Mr. CULLOM. I will read what appears here in the RECORD:

By order of the Secretary of the Navy a board was appointed, consisting of Commodore M. Sleard, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance; Commodore W. S. Schley, Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting; Commodore Theodore D. Wilson, Chief of the Bureau of Construction, and Commodore George W. Melville, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering.

I am reading now what seems to have been a statement of some member of the other House:

This board examined them carefully and exhaustively and they all united in a favorable report, recommending the building of a vessel according thereto. The finding of the board was approved by the Department, and the recommendations concurred in, as the following letter of the Secretary will show—

Which I read awhile ago. Then follows the report, as I suppose all of it, though I do not know whether it is all in this RECORD or not. I shall have that inserted in the RECORD if the Senator from Connecticut desires. I ask to have the report as it appears in the RECORD inserted without taking up the time of the Senate in reading it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the report referred to by the Senator from Illinois will be inserted in the RECORD.

The paper is as follows:

The paper is as follows.

The aim in the design of this vessel has been to combine, on a limited displacement, large powers of offense and defense; recognizing that the efficiency of an armored vessel intended for ocean or coast purposes is to be measured by the disposition and character of her armament, the ability to use it in all reasonable weather, the protection afforded by the armor, the rate of speed both going ahead and turning, her cruising capacity without recoaling, and her habitability.

ahead and turning, her cruising capacity without recoaling, and her habitability.

First. The battery has been disposed with a special reference to fighting ahead and of being able to do this in all kinds of fighting weather.

The character of the armament is as follows: Two 10-inch B. L. R. for long range, and capacity for throwing shell charged with high explosive compounds. These guns are mounted in a turret armored with 10-inch solid steel plates, the axis of the guns when level being 11 feet above the fighting load line, with a range of fire from direct shead to 65 degrees abaft the beam on either side, and by removing the deck-house increasing the range to a practically all-around fire. For close quarters she has a 15-inch Zalinski dynamite gun capable of throwing 800 pounds of high explosive compound, and two under-water bow torpedo-tubes, also a 6-inch rapid-firing B. L. R. located aft. The secondary battery consists of three 3-pounder rapid-firing and one 37mm, revolving gun.

Second. To give as great an armor protection as possible on a very limited displacement the armor has been disposed in the form of an arc of a circle, turning downwards at the sides to 4 feet below the fighting line; the armor on the crown is 3 inches in thickness, increasing to 5 inches at the sides. In order that the target presented to an enemy may be as small as possible, ballast tanks have been provided capable of holding enough water to lessen the cruising freeboard 3 feet, so that the hull target exposed, in still water, will be represented by a segment of a circle, using from zero at the water-line to 4 feet above at the center of the vessel. A novel feature connected with this armor is the method of supporting it, which is done by a system of longitudinal and transverse girders is inches deep. On the innerside of these girders is worked a water-tightskin serving the double purpose of, in the event of any portion of the deck armor being disologed, arresting any rush of water, and forming with the longitudinal support the the cruising freeboard to 7 feet 8 inches amidships and giving a comfortable working-deck. In order that these false works may not endanger the stability of the vessel in the case of their being riddled by a machine-gun fire in action, the sides are double, with a space of $\frac{0}{2}$ feet between them; this space is filled in with cellulose for the entire length of vessel.

In order that the vessel may be used as a ram the bow is specially formed and strengthened for this purpose, also large power (7,500 horse-power) acting through twin-screws, giving a rate of speed of 17 knots, and large rudder area actuated by powerful steam-steering gear has been provided. The radius of action is for this class of vessel enormously large, being upwards of 8,500 knots at 10 knots' speed. She will be able to keep the seas as a cruiser at this speed above thirty-live days without recoaling.

A temporary deck-house is worked as part of the false works, giving airy accommodations for the officers during peace times. For war accommodations have been provided below the armor-deck. Great care has been given to the ventilation of all living-spaces by means of powerful blowers drawing air from armored ducts, and natural ventilation through deck-lights, etc.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I beg leave to assure the distinguished Senator from Illinois that I have no objection to these plans being legislated upon the incoming Secretary of the Navy because they are from Illinois. If the prairies of his noble State have developed a designer of ships and he has prepared plans and specifications for the construction of this new monitor which shall commend themselves to the next Secretary of the Navy, I have not the slightest objection to their accentance by that Secretary. But I conceive it to be an anomaly, their acceptance by that Secretary. But I conceive it to be an anomaly, to be almost ridiculous in the history of legislation, for Congress to provide for a vessel of this size and importance and cost, an "armored steel cruising monitor, of not less than 3,000 tons displacement," to cost a million and a half of dollars, and then say that the type and the plans and specifications shall be furnished by an honorable member of the House of Representatives, a member of the Naval Committee of the House, about to go out of Congress. I say that is an anomaly in legislation.

If this ship is necessary for our naval defense, if it is necessary in view of the future contingencies of the Navy to be built for the public defense, where should we happen to be if Hon. John R. Thomas, of Illinois, should die before he could furnish the plans and specifications? Are we to have no armored cruising monitor for public defense?

Mr. DAWES. I want to inquire of the Senator as to the stress he lays upon the fact that, in addition to all the qualifications he has spoken of, he says that this gentleman is also about to leave Congress. Does he think that that would defeat the whole measure if he should go out of Congress, where he could not be to nurse it?

Mr. CHANDLER. I alluded to that fact in order that members might not suppose that the House committee and the Senate committee in reporting this amendment intended to legislate upon the Navy Department a member of Congress. It is to the credit of this legislation that Mr. THOMAS is soon no longer to be a member of Congress.

Mr. DAWES. I thought that ought to be a commendation.

Mr. CHANDLER. If Mr. THOMAS should be the next Secretary of the Navy, of course these words are unnecessary; for having designed this ship, having the plans and specifications ready to submit, it would be a mere form for him to go through the adoption of them. Now, Mr. President, the amendment which I propose does not say that this ship shall not be built. On the contrary, it leaves the operative words of the section in the bill:

To enable the President to further increase the naval establishment of the United States he is hereby authorized to have constructed by contract one armored steel cruising monitor, of not less than 3,000 tons displacement, at a cost not exceeding $1.500,000, exclusive of armament, and of any premium which may be paid for increased speed.

Then follow certain customary provisions to govern the construction of the vessel. I say if Mr. Thomas or anybody else can submit to the Secretary of the Navy a type and plans and specifications for the construction of this monitor for the public defense, which are better than the naval officers can design, which are better than any one else can design, they ought to be accepted; but I say that those plans and specifications, either already prepared or to be prepared by the Hon. John R. Thomas, of Illinois, ought not to be legislated upon the next Secretary of the Navy in this way.

Why, Mr. President, the present Secretary of the Navy has had given to him $28,000,000 to expend in strengthening and increasing the naval establishment, and there go over in this bill, as it came from the House of Representatives, to the new Secretary of the Navy one armored cruiser and another Vesuvius. The second section as it came from the House provided:

And the President is also further authorized to contract with the Pneumatic Dynamite Gun Company for the construction of one additional cruiser of the Vesuvius type.

That is the provision that Congress makes for new vessels to be put in process of construction by the next Secretary of the Navy, who is as likely to come from the State of Illinois as from any other State, and the discretion that is accorded to the next Secretary of the Navy after the present Secretary has had $28,000,000 of money for ships and their armament unfettered by any conditions or limitations whatever except such as were calculated to secure the best ships and the best guns—the provision for the next Secretary of the Navy is that John R. Thomas shall furnish him one ship and that the Pneumatic Dynamite Gun Company shall furnish another.

Mr. President, I have been uniformly during the last two years against this whole kind of legislation. I have uniformly opposed in the Committee on Naval Affairs any attempt to legislate any particular man's invention upon the Navy Department. I say it is wrong, fundamentally wrong. Inventors should not come to Congress, inventors should ally wrong. Inventors should not come to Congress, inventors should not dog the doors of the Committees on Naval Affairs and worry Congress and get up certificates commending them and their inventions as a man gets up petitions for appointment in a Cabinet when he does it [laughter] and secure legislation that tells the Secretary of the Navy to build his particular kind of a machine.

I say this whole system of legislation is vicious. I am willing to vote to give the Secretary of the Navy money to experiment with, all that he needs to experiment with the ideas of other people, but I am not willing that the committees of Congress or that the two Houses of Congress shall constitute themselves a designing committee and tell the Secretary of the Navy or the Secretary of War that he shall build any particular kind of gun invented by any particular man.

I lay that down as a general principle, and I desire to give notice that I shall oppose all attempts to force the executive officers of this Government who are charged with the duty of making these investigations and of reaching conclusions upon the work of the Government to adopt the particular ideas, or the particular types, or the particular plans or specifications which any inventor—I do not care who he is—may submit to them. I say the place for these gentlemen to go is to the Departments. It is for Congress to make liberal appropriations the Departments. It is for Congress to make liberal appropriations and to put the responsibility upon the heads of the Departments of determining what kind of patents and what kind of inventions and what kind of plans for the Government work shall be adopted.

Mr. Thomas is a lawyer. I suppose the Senator from Illinois does not claim that he has any skill or experience in the designing of ships.

Mr. Thomas is a lawyer and has been an eminent member of Congress.

and entirely qualified to be Secretary of the Navy; but Mr. THOMAS is not a designer of ships, and it is a broad farce—

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me to ask him a question there?

Mr. CHANDLER. Certainly.
Mr. GRAY. I ask him whether or not he is aware that one of the most ingenious and useful modifications of marine steam-engines now in use, I believe, by the Navy and by all the people who own and run ships, was made by a lawyer? Mr. Sickles, who invented and had patented a cut-off (which is now in universal use) to save the expenditure of steam and promote its use by expansion, was a lawyer. His attention had been directed to that subject by some accidental circumstance, and he developed the idea and made it very useful.

Mr. CHANDLER. I would ask the Senator whether Mr. Sickles, the inventor of the cut-off, did not become a designing engineer in early life? Many men famous in their professions have started in life as lawyers; there is no doubt about that. In the other case the Senator mentioned he did not give the name, so I am obliged to say I am not aware of the invention of the marine engine made by a lawyer.

Mr. GRAY. I asked the Senator as much for information, if he was not aware of it. I can not give the name now, but I think I shall be able to do it

Mr. CHANDLER. I am not arguing that my own profession, the law, is not capable of furnishing eminent men in other professions, and I do not say that a lawyer can not become a designer of naval vessels. I think that the law is a good profession from which to develop those men; but it remains to be seen whether the Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS has become such as yet.

Mr. President, I am not arguing that valuable ideas on this subject of naval construction, both of hulls and of the engines of ships, may of naval construction, both of hulls and of the engines of ships, may not proceed from non-professional men. I admit that they may. I meet the suggestion of the Senator from Delaware by saying that I have no doubt that non-professional men, that members of the Naval Committees of Congress, that other men, members of the Military Committees of the two Houses, Secretaries of the Navy, and Secretaries of War may have developed most excellent ideas on technical subjects, that they may have developed misses excellent ideas on technical subjects, that they may have conceived notions which, worked out in proper form, may have proved to be very valuable adjuncts to naval or military construction. I do not know but what Mr. Thomas has discovered a good idea, though I am informed that the idea of this ship that he has undertaken to develop is not new, but that the idea has been well known to naval officers for a long time.

Now, Mr. Thomas, who is a lawyer, a member of Congress, a member of the Naval Committee, has taken up a particular idea in reference to an armored dynamite cruiser. I think he contemplates—if I am wrong the Senator from Illinois will correct me—a plan for submerging the ship in action. Is it not so?

Mr. Thomas, who is a lawyer, a member of Congress, a member of the Naval Congress.

Mr. HAWLEY. Sinking it a few feet.

Mr. CHANDLER. A member of the Military Committee says I am correct

Mr. MANDERSON. He sinks it to within 3 feet of the surface.
Mr. CHANDLER. The Military Committee seem to know all about the ship, and I do not know but that they may go on designing vessels, and perhaps we had better put their names in this bill, so as to give them a chance.

But Mr. Thomas has taken up this idea, which is certainly not a new idea, of submerging a ship when she goes into action by letting water into some compartments, and upon that idea he has developed a certain plan of ship. Now, does the Senator from Illinois know how far Mr. Thomas has carried this plan himself? Does he know that Mr. Thomas ever put pencil to paper? Does he know that Mr. Thomas ever did anything except sit down with Capt. Robley D. Evans, or with some one of the highly educated and brilliant young assistant naval construct-ors that we have lately sent to the Naval College at Greenwich for education, and who have come back to this country to be ornaments to the service and to help us construct our new naval vessels? Has Mr. THOMAS done anything except talk with competent experts of this kind, and have they or have they not designed this ship for him so far as it has been already designed? If they have, then let us give them the benefit of these plans and not allow Mr. THOMAS or any other member of Congress to take the labors of these competent and skilled experts and advertise himself to the world as the inventor of an armored dynamite

Mr. CULLOM. I think the Senator from New Hampshire is going a little beyond the bounds of propriety in the premises. I do not undertake to say that Mr. Thomas invented this vessel, this cruiser, nor to say anything about it beyond what the papers show. So far as the record has been exhibited here it is all to the effect that Mr. Thomas is the inventor of this cruiser, and all this talk of the Senator from New Hampshire that who knows but some clerk in the Navy Department or some engineer somewhere else, or that Robley D. Evans or somebody, has done all this thing is a mere gratuity on his part without any sort of foundation whatever, and while I am not particular about the ques-

Mr. CHANDLER. I hope in the Senator's interruption of me he will draw it mild.

Mr. CULLOM. I shall draw it mild.

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not yield to the Senator to make a speech.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will keep himself within the record in talking about the gentleman whose name happens to be in

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois himself read in the hearing of the Senate a statement that these plans had been developed by officers of the Navy Department. The Senator himself shows upon his own case that Mr. Thomas is indebted to naval officers for the development of his plans, and when Mr. Thomas's name comes in here, to whom the Secretary of the Navy is to be tied down by strict law in the designing of an important Government vessel to cost a million and a half of dollars, and I venture to inquire how far Mr. THOMAS is competent to furnish these plans and specifications, and how far he will be obliged to depend upon skilled men in that branch of work, the Senator says that my suggestions are gratuitous. Well, if they are gratuitous, let the Senator tell us how far Mr. Thomas has gone and to what extent he personally has prepared these plans and specifications.

Mr. Thomas, of Illinois, whose name is in this bill as the person who is to furnish the only plans and specifications upon which this ship can be built

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire a question. He must be familiar with this class of subjects. What is the technical meaning of the word "specification" in legislation of this kind? Does it mean simply the description of what is to be done alone, or does it involve price as a part of it? We ought to settle that before we vote, if we can.

Mr. CHANDLER. Unquestionably it needs no exposition from me Mr. CHANDLER. Unquestionably it needs no exposition from me that this language means that the detailed drawings and specifications upon which this ship is to be built and the working drawings, a description of every part of the hull, a description of every piece of the machinery, a drawing of every single one of the plates of steel that go into the sides of this ship, shall be prepared and submitted to the Secretary of the Navy by Hon. John R. Thomas, of Illinois.

Mr. HOAR. To whom does that ordinarily belong in our habit of naval construction—the Department itself?

Mr. CHANDLER. Unquestionably the skilled officers of the De-

Mr. CHANDLER. Unquestionably the skilled officers of the Department—skilled engineers, skilled constructors, and skilled draughtsmen of the Department. And now, I say, when Mr. Thomas, who is only known to us as a lawyer and as a distinguished member of the House of Representatives, comes in here with his name in this bill, which sets him up as a designer who is to furnish not only a description of the type, but the detailed plans and specifications upon which this million and a half of dollars is to be expended, the burden of proof is upon the Senator from Illinois to show that Mr. Thomas has the technical capacity to do this; and it is not in him to say that it is a gratuitous suggestion in this discussion when I venture to doubt whether Mr. Thomas is able to do this, and venture to suggest, as I most certainly do, that Mr. Thomas is indebted for the technical work upon these plans and specifications to skilled officers of the Navy Department, who I wish to say, as I was about saying when the Senator interrupted me, if they do this work, are entitled to have the credit of interrupted me, if they do this work, are entitled to have the credit of it, and not to have it turned from them to accommodate any Congressman or ex-Congressman in this country.

Mr. President, I have said more than I intended to say when I rose, because I thought it was only necessary to call to the attention of the Senate the manifest impropriety of tying up the Secretary of the Navy in this way. To be sure, there has been added the provision that these plans must be approved by the Secretary of the Navy; but the papers which the Senator has already read show how the plans have been laid to besiege the next Secretary of the Navy; that he is to be met with this ship as a ship already appropriated to the credit of Mr. Thomas, and these naval officers, heads of bureaus, intimate friends perhaps of Mr. Thomas, considering his relations as a member of Congress and a member of the Naval Committee, have signed papers, and there is no estimate here yet: Naval Committee, have signed papers, and there is no estimate here yet; there is a long list of recommendations of this ship as being a ship which it would be a good plan for the Government to experiment upon.

Mr. HARRIS. I would like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire what would be the effect of the non-approval of the Secretary of the Navy of the plans and specifications submitted, if this language shall remain in the bill?

Mr. CHANDLER. Unquestionably the ship stops until the further authority of Congress, and that is the additional vice of this legislation. Not only is it vicious to put Mr. THOMAS into this bill, but if he is thus put in and does not furnish plans and specifications which the Secretary of the Navy may approve, the construction of the ship stops, while, on the other hand, as I began by saying, if Mr. THOMAS has plans which the Secretary of the Navy wants to use, he can adopt them, and if anybody else has better plans, those may be adopted.

But the Secretary of the Navy when he comes into the administration of his office in March will find himself with $28,000,000 of ships and guns designed by the present Secretary of the Navy, and himself with the poor privilege of contracting with the Pneumatic Dynamite Gun Company for one more Vesuvius and of receiving from Hon. John R. THOMAS plans and specifications for an armored cruiser. Do not let us make this restricted and pitiful provision for the next Secretary of the Navy

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I perhaps ought not to take any more time of the Senate in the consideration of this amendment, but I feel it my duty to say a few words more, and mainly because the honorable Senator from New Hampshire has seemed to make an effort to discredit and belittle the whole proposition as it is connected with the name of Sir, it is true that Mr. Thomas has been a member of the lower House of Congress for a good many years, and it is further true that he has during all that period of time, I believe, been a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and I am inclined to make the assertion that perhaps there is no man who has been upon that committee in the other branch of Congress who has given as close attention to the subject of naval affairs as has Mr. Thomas. The service that he has been engaged in there as a Representative from his district has led him to the investigation of the building of ships of war, and of whatever other kind the Government might see proper to provide for the construction of, and it has turned out that Mr. Thomas's information and study and investigation have resulted in his making a plan for a cruiser, and it turns out that the Navy Department of this Government, after appointing a board for the purpose, has adopted and approved the plans that are proposed here in this bill to be accepted.

Though there is no plan with detailed specifications proposed, the Department has approved the plan of the vessel he has invented. Now the Senator from New Hampshire comes here and apparently attempts to discredit the idea that a member of Congress should by any pos bility stumble upon anything that is of value to the people of this country, and he wants to count him out and says that the clerks whom he brought down perhaps from New Hampshire while he was Secretary of the Navy have made the discovery and that they ought to have the credit if anybody of the invention of this cruiser.

Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that I did not use the word "clerks."

I did not use the word "clerks."

Mr. CULLOM. Some subordinate persons in the Department.

Mr. HAWLEY. Officers.

Mr. CULLOM. Officers, or whatever they may be.

Mr. CHANDLER. I did not say "clerks."

Mr. CULLOM. I want to say right here in connection with this subject that the appropriations for the construction of the Navy are not made to glorify Secretaries of the Navy. They are made for the public good, for the public defense. The purpose of this provision is to get a good vessel, a good cruiser. It does not make any difference whether the Secretary of the Navy who is to come approves it or not, if it is the right sort of a vessel to be constructed.

I desire to say furthermore that there has been no electioneering busi-

I desire to say furthermore that there has been no electioneering business going on in connection with this. Mr. Thomas presented his plans, they were seen by these admirals, and commodores, and constructors, and secretaries, and they have approved them and say the design is a good one and that the vessel ought to be built.

The Senator says it is not like getting up petitions to be appointed Cabinet officers. I do not know whether the Senator, by that remark, meant to make a fling at this gentleman or not, but I do know that there used to be a time when petitions were gotten up for Cabinet offices and other positions, and sometimes the party getting them up failed to succeed

Mr. President, whether these words here naming Mr. Thomas ought to be there or not, I am sure I do not know, and I am not very particular about it so far as that is concerned. What I desire is that the ular about it so far as that is concerned. What I desire is that the vessel, the substantial plans of which have been provided or designed by Mr. Thomas, shall be built. You may take Mr. Thomas's name out if you want to, if it will be any satisfaction to my distinguished friend, the ex-Secretary of the Navy.

I believe I shall not take up the time of the Senate any further. Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I do not propose to discuss the proposi-tion whether a man from the interior can know anything about building a ship, or whether knowledge is confined to any particular locality or any particular class of men. I scarcely think it is necessary to discuss propositions of that character. I have had the pleasure, however, of knowing Mr. Thomas during the ten years I have been in the Senate, and coming from a State where the practical knowledge of the methods of construction of ships is general and where there is a great deal of seafaring knowledge, I have some degree of capacity to judge in regard to the capability of men to discover inventions and possess knowledge upon those subjects.

I think that Mr. Thomas is very well qualified to be an inventor and to have ideas worthy of consideration in regard to the methods of naval construction. That knowledge is not of necessity confined to those who have the greatest practical knowledge in reference to the details of construction, but also lies in the principles upon which naval architecture is based.

I think it eminently proper if a member of Congress shall discover some new method, or some method that is not new, but is new in its adaptation to the present needs of naval construction, that he should have the credit of being designated as the discoverer either of the idea or of the new adaptation.

Why should not a member of Congress have the reputation of any discovery he may make or any talent he may possess? Why shall Congress not adopt such discovery and by law require its adoption and use if it be meritorious? There can be no reason why it should not There may be other methods, but Congress should ascertain this fact as it ascertains others, before providing for its adoption.

I can see no greater reason why Mr. Thomas's name should be inserted in this appropriation than the name of any other discoverer or inventor, or discoverer of a new method of the application of an idea. I only wish to say that, so far as I am concerned, I think the provision in the bill is a very appropriate one, and that it ought to be adopted by the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I think it is not consistent with public policy to provide that a member of Congress, whatever his skill may be, shall furnish a plan of this description, and that the Secretary of the Navy shall build his ship. It is a mistake in judgment. I am perfectly willing that the Secretary of the Navy shall build a cruiser containing the essential qualities and characteristics of the one suggested by Mr. Thomas, but I oppose putting it in the bill in this form, because it practically binds the future Secretary of the Navy to accept a ship of this description from Mr. Thomas only.

The special attention attracted to this arose from the fact that a gentleman not connected with the profession of civil engineering, or engineering of any description, or ship-building, had devised something that has some merit in it. Gentlemen immediately proceed to say the Senator from Delaware, my distinguished friend, said, what we are perfectly well aware of—that a great many men have made good inventions who were entirely out of the line of the particular class of industry to which they supplied something. Now comes along a man who is out of this class of ship hailders, and he have been along a man who is out of this class of ship-builders; ergo, he has probably got up a good thing. But the odds are against him.

It is quite possible that a gentleman who has been interested, patriotically interested, in war steamers, say for the last eight or ten years, as a member of the Naval Committee, may make a good suggestion. It may be good; it may not be good. I do not say that the scheme is to be condemned because he has not been a professional man.

I have been looking to see what merit is in it. These obliging officers of the Navy are very willing to build a new cruiser with any sort of fighting power, having a speed of 17 knots. They have been quite willing to put in the numerous features Mr. Thomas proposes. They think it would be well to make the experiment. There is no statement, so far as we have heard, exhibiting the vessel with satisfactory particularity. We know nothing of this new ship save the very general observations and descriptions contained in an extract from a report read in the House of Representatives. Here is all I have been able to get from that report:

The character of the armament is as follows: Two 10-inch breech-loading rifles for long range, and capacity for throwing shell charged with high explosive com-

This is not new at all. It is expected that the new heavy rifles will soon be able to throw shells containing some violent explosive.

These guns are mounted in a turret armored with 10-inch solid steel plates.

That is rather light armor. There is nothing new in turret or plate. The axis of the guns when level being 11 feet above the fighting load line, with a range of fire from direct ahead to 65 degrees abaft the beam on either side, and by removing the deck-house increasing the range to a practically all-around fire.

Nothing new there.

For close quarters she has a 15-inch Zalinski dynamite gun capable of throwing 800 pounds of high explosive compound—

Nothing new there-

two under-water bow torpedo-tubes.

Nothing new there. She is to have a secondary battery of light rapidfire guns. That is put into all ships nowadays.

To give as great an armor protection as possible on a very limited displacement the armor has been disposed in the form of an arc of a circle turning downwards at the sides to 4 feet below the fighting line; the armor on the crown is 3 inches in thickness, increasing to 5 inches at the sides.

That is a frequent feature in new ships. It is simply a curved deck, a protective deck, below the ordinary apparent wooden deck-a turtleback, starting from 4 feet below the water on one side to 4 feet below on the other. Then there is supplied a light structure to support a working deck and give an artificial freeboard on the sides.

That is in many ships. It is nothing new at all. It is expected that shot striking the side of the ship and penetrating the light superstructure will glance from this turtle-back steel real deck that is underneath the apparent wooden deck. It is not as old as the hills, but it is as old as the beginning of steel fighting ships.

A novel feature connected with this armor is the method of supporting it, which is done by a system of longitudinal and transverse girders 18 inches deep. On the inner side of these girders is worked a water-tight skin, serving the double purpose of, in the event of any portion of the deck armor being dislodged, arresting any rush of water, and forming with the longitudinal support the upper flange of the ship's girder.

Longitudinal and transverse girders of considerable size and 18 inches deep make numerous water-tight compartments—an old idea. It is proposed to fill these spaces with "cellulose"—cork is generally taken-so that if a shot pierce a compartment there will not be room for much water; in a great many ships already.

In order that the vessel may be used as a ram the bow is specially formed and strengthened for this purpose, also large power (7,500 horse-power) acting through twin-screws, giving a rate of speed of 17 knots, and large rudder area actuated by powerful steam-steering gear has been provided.

Any vessel used as a ram, going 5, 8, 10, or 12 knots an hour against another ship, must be "specially formed and strengthened." That is obvious, and as old as the ancients.

There are first the turret and its two rifles. Then there is the Zalinski dynamite gun—that is the second feature; and the ram is a third; and the water-tight compartments, which is an old idea, you may call the fourth feature. Some of the water-tight compartments are to be filled with cellulose or the equivalent—cork. Call that the fifth. The ship is nothing but the combination of a ram and a turreted monitor, and the Vesuvius has not a solitary new idea in it. It is a combination such as can be made by any ambitious young man who says, "I will put all these things in one ship." It is deemed better by some to build a ram that is purely and simply a ram, or a dynamiter that is only that.

The problem of this vessel is purely mechanical—i. e., how shall we Ine problem of this vessel is purely mechanical—i. e., how shall we put these numerous features into one ship, and for the solution of that Mr. Thomas gots wisely enough to officers of the Navy Department and tells them, "Here, I want to put all these things together." It is painful to criticise this. Here is one of the best fellows in the country, a gallant soldier, a good friend, a comrade of many of us here. The vessel is only a compound of five or six common ideas.

Mr. CULLOM. How does the Senator happen to know so much about it? He seems to be very well posted about the construction of

Mr. HAWLEY. I know that a ship is hollow. It is an old joke that that is as much as some Secretaries know when they come in.
Mr. CULLOM. That is exactly what I thought. The speech of the Senator demonstrates that members of Congress know something about these matters as well as Secretaries of the Navy.

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes, I have spent months, I do not know but a year or two, all put together, on board ship, and I have been over some of the fine ship-building yards in this country. I presented an octavo volume of several hundred pages on ordnance and war-ships as a report of a select committee, but I have not yet undertaken to tell one of those old veterans how to build a ship. I believe I could make some good suggestions. I have made some that I thought were good, but the world did not seem to look at them just as I did.

Mr. CULLOM. I think, if the Senator will allow me, that if distinguished gentlemen like himself and others outside of the Navy would take some interest in this subject we should get a better Navy than we have now.

what, but I have not graduated. I can not devise a ship or make the plans and specifications

I think it against public policy to do this. I would not expect the officers of the Navy to make an impartial report upon a plan submitted to them by a member of Congress and of a Naval Committee. That is the truth of it.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not desire to take up the time of the Senate longer, but I ask the Senator from Maine who has charge of the bill if he will not allow this item to go over in the hope that we may by tomorrow morning agree upon some amendment that will be entirely satisfactory to all parties.

Mr. HALE. I was just going to make the motion that the Senate adjourn. It will be impossible to finish the bill to-night, and I make that motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Before submitting that motion, with the indulgence of the Senator from Maine, the Chair will lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives. Mr. HALE. Certainly.

MARY C. THOMPSON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3428) granting a pension to Mary C. Thompson, which was to strike out all after the word "service," in line 9, and to insert "at the rate of $12 per month."

Mr. SAWYER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was concurred in.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Maine to yield to me a moment

Mr. HALE. I can not yield, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 12, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, February 11, 1889.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W.

H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday was read and approved. EXPENDITURES FOR AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted to file reports on Saturday I submitted a report from the Committee on Agriculture, asking that the detailed statement which had been referred to that committee, enumerating the various expenditures for the Department of Agriculture, should be referred to the Committee on Printing. That seems to have been omitted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that under the order of the House the making of reports from committees alone was authorized, and that a request to change a reference would scarcely be in order under that consent.

Mr. MORGAN. It was not a change of reference, Mr. Speaker; it was simply a reference of the matter to the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. The order will be made.

DIRECT-TAX BILL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 139) to credit and pay to the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia all moneys collected under the direct tax levied by the act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, with House amendment disagreed to by the Senate.

Mr. CASWELL. I move that the House insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. This has reached a privileged stage, Mr. ROGERS. What is the bill? The SPEAKER. The direct-tax bill.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin? Mr. OATES. I object.
Mr. KERR. Let us have the amendments read.

The SPEAKER. They are the amendments of the House.

Mr. KERR. I withdraw the demand. The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from Alabama to object.

Mr. OATES. What are the amendments?
The SPEAKER. The House amendments to the direct-tax bill.

Mr. OATES. I believe there is but one amendment.

Mr. CASWELL. One relates to South Carolina and the other provides that the various offsets be credited.

Mr. OATES. I do not object to the request.

There being no objection, the motion of Mr. CASWELL was agreed to. COUNTING OF ELECTORAL VOTE.

The SPEAKER. The concurrent resolution adopted by the Senate and the House in relation to the count of the electoral votes on the day after to-morrow provides that two tellers shall be appointed on the part of the Senate and two on the part of the House, but it does not provide the manner in which these tellers shall be selected; and inasmuch as the forms are now being prepared it is important that the tellers should be appointed. The Chair is in doubt whether he has a right to appoint them under the terms of the resolution without the consent of the House. If there be no objection, the Chair will appoint as tellers on the part of the House two members of the Committee on the Election of President and Vice-President-the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ermentrout] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Baker]. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

RELIEF OF SOLDIERS OF LATE WAR AND WAR WITH MEXICO.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. Townshend, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. Steele as House conferees on the bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico.

J. W. PORTER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 4792) to pension J. W. Porter, with Senate amendment.

Mr. HERMANN. I ask that the House concur in the Senate amendment, inasmuch as it is very immaterial and intended to perfect the

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 10, after "Mexico," insert "this pension to date from January 29,

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon? The Chair hears none, and the Senate amendment is concurred in

Mr. ROGERS. What bill is that which has just been laid before the House?

The SPEAKER. It is a bill to pension J. W. Porter.

LOUISA ROGERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8549) granting a pension to Louisa Rogers, with Senate amendments.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask to have the amendments read. The amendments will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 5, after the word "company," insert "B," and in lines 5 and 6 strike out "76" and insert "134."

Mr. MORRILL. I move to concur in the Senate amendments.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the amendments of the Senate will be considered as agreed to. SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following Senate bills; which were severally read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

A bill (S. 3857) granting a pension to Mrs. Lydia E. Quaw;

A bill (S. 3588) granting a pension to Ellen Farr; A bill (S. 3634) granting a pension to Mrs. Nancy Smith; and A bill (S. 3744) granting a pension to Orrin F. Waller.

THOMAS LANNIGAN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2714) for the relief of Thomas Lannigan.

Mr. ROGERS. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered at this time. It involves only $100. It is a balance on the books of the Treasury standing to his credit.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Thomas Lannigan the sum of $100, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same being the amount standing to the credit of said Lannigan on the books of the Treasury of the United States, as shown by page 9, House of Representatives Executive Document No. 363, first session Forty-ninth Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill at this time? The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. The latter motion was agreed to.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER AT LEAVENWORTH, KANS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3663) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask unanimous consent to consider that bill. Mr. MORRILL. I ask unanimous consent to consider that bill. A similar bill has been reported from the House Committee on Commerce. This bill has passed the Senate. It was approved by the Secretary of War, and is a copy of the bill which passed at the last session. Therefore I ask to dispense with the reading of the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope the bill will be read.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is the usual bill authorizing the construction of a bridge

Mr. HOLMAN. · If the bill is in conformity with the usual precedents, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill at this time? The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. Mr. MORRILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the

The latter motion was agreed to.

WARREN HALL.

The SPEAKER. The bill S. 902 was laid before the House some two or three days ago, and was improperly referred to the Committee on Claims. If there be no objection, that committee will be discharged from the further consideration of the bill-

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. There was a similar bill passed by the House in the Forty-ninth Congress, and reported to this Congress, and I ask unanimous consent that the House pass that bill. It is for the relief of Warren Hall, and there is a similar bill on the House Cal-

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The Clerk read the title, as follows:

A bill (S. 902) for the relief of Warren Hall.

Mr. TAULBEE. I would like to know what the request is.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana requests that the bill be now considered.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. It has been reported from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. TAULBEE. At this Congress? Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. This This Congress.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Court of Claims is hereby given original jurisdiction to hear and adjudicate according to justice and right the case of Warren Hall, as originally tried and reported in the ninth Court of Claims Reports, page 170, and known as "Hall and Roach's case," notwithstanding the former trial; and the bar of limitation is hereby removed. And for this purpose the court shall hear and consider the new testimony and any other proper testimony which may be offered at the trial by the claimant or on the part of the defendant Government; and the testimony considered by the court in the original trial, so far as the same may be applicable to the new trial, shall also be available.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? Mr. PAYSON. Let us have an explanation of the bill. Until that can be done I reserve the right to object.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. This bill simply sends him to the Court of Claims.

Mr. KILGORE. I think we had better have the report read.

The SPEAKER. The report on the Senate bill is not here. report of the House committee is here, and will be read if there be no objection.

The report of the House committee was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3228) for the relief of Warren Hall, report as follows:

That they have carefully considered the same, and from the testimony offered they believe that great injustice has been done Hall in the trial of this case, and your committee report back the bill and recommend its passage.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. PAYSON. No information is gained from that. I should therefore like to have some explanation of it.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. I can explain. The SPEAKER. The Senate report is now here. The SPEAKER. The Senate r Mr. PAYSON. Let it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. PAYSON. Let it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 902) for the relief of Warren Hall, have considered the same, and respectfully report:

Warren Hall, the claimant, alleges that he is the son of a free woman, an Indian, and that he was born in the city of Alexandria; that when a youth he was kidnapped in New Orleans, where he had gone as a race-rider, and sold to a planter in Mississippi by the name of Roach, by whom he was treated until 1863 in some respects as a free man and in others as a slave. Hall further claims that during this period he was allowed to raise hogs and other stock, which he exchanged with Roach for cotton, and in this way he had accumulated some 75 or more bales of cotton. In the year 1863 sundry lots of cotton along the Mississippi were seized by United States troops, to be used in the fortifications at Memphis. This cotton was sold at a later date and the proceeds placed in the United States Treasury. In this cotton thus taken, used, and sold were the bales Hall claims, which he had received in exchange for his hogs, by contract with Roach, and of which he was the lawful owner.

Hall endeavored to assert his right of ownership by application to the Quartermaster-General and by suit in the Court of Claims and in the Supreme Court of the United States, but without success, the courts holding that his condition in fact was that of a slave, and that in consequence he was incapable of making contracts or of acquiring property.

It would seem to your committee that under these facts injustice is done to Hall by enforcing the harsh rule of slavery in his case. If the story of his birth be true he was by law free-born and his mother was a free woman, and her legal status would determine his. His servitude, therefore, was the result of force and not of law. He was till a free man, although unable to assert his freedom.

The bill under consideration is intended to refer the entire case to the Court of Claims, removing simply the bar

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Is there anything showing the amount that this claimant is proposing to sue for?

Mr. STEELE. Seventy-five bales of cotton.

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope there will be no objection to this bill. It is manifestly a just measure.

Mr. OATES. I would like to know whether this is a claim against the captured and abandoned property fund?

Mr. HOLMAN. It is.

Mr. OATES. Inasmuch as it has been decided that none of this fund shall be taken until it is all disposed of to whom it belongs, I shall object

Mr. HOLMAN. I hope, then, that the bill may be permitted to lie on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be retained.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN SOLDIERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a bill (H. R. 6106) for the relief of certain volunteer and regular soldiers of the late war and the war with Mexico.

Mr. STEELE. I ask unanimous consent that the House non-concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. This amendment was read several days ago, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] then asked unanimous consent that the House non-concur, but objection was made. The Chair understands that the objection is now withdrawn.

Mr. DUNN. I have no further objection.

The SPEAKER. If there be no further objection, the amendment of the Senate will be non-concurred in and the conference agreed to as requested by the Senate.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. PENINGTON, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence for two days, on account of important business.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. SENEY, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to print in the RECORD remarks on the bill to authorize the erection of post-office buildings.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 8) to restore Mrs. R. S. Horton upon the pension-roll; and

A bill (H. R. 2261) to increase the pension of Elijah W. Penny.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. OATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 1592) to continue the publication of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes, and that the bill be now considered in the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Hooker] has a request pending which comes over from last Saturday morning. Objection was made to the consideration of the bill which he proposed to call up, with the understanding that the matter should be pending. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Hop-Kins] made the objection. Does the gentleman now object?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I first want to know what the House will do as to allowing time for debate. If two hours be given for the consideration of this bill I will not object.

Mr. HOOKER. You want that time equally divided, do you not?
Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I do not know whether I do or not.
Mr. HOOKER. You certainly do not want more than half of the time?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. For myself I do not want any of it, but I want time enough given for you to show to members of this House that this is an honest claim. The Southern Claims Commission say it is a fraud.

Mr. HOOKER. How much time do you want?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I have said that I do not want any time myself, but I want the gentleman from Mississippi, and other members who are in favor of this bill, to take time enough to show that the claim is an honest one.

Mr. HOOKER. We show that by the judgment of the court. You can attack it if you like, and I will give you an hour.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I am not attacking the judgment of the court, and I am not attacking you [Mr. HOOKER]; but I desire you, or any other gentleman who favors this claim, to produce evidence to satisfy the House that it is an honest one.

Mr. HOOKER. The judgment is evidence enough on that point. Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I am not to be put down by suggestions that I am arraigning the Court of Claims, but I in-

Mr. HOOKER. Let us first agree about the time.
Mr. BLOUNT. I shall object if any time is to be consumed in debating this bill.

Mr. HOOKER. If the gentleman from Georgia will withhold his objection I will agree not to open my mouth during the debate.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. It may be that the claim will pass better if the gentleman does not speak.

Mr. HOOKER. Well, you go on and say what you have to say

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. I am not to be deterred by that sort of talk. I insist

Mr. PAYSON. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made, and the matter is not before the House. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the call of States and Territories.

Mr. CRISP. I rise to a question of privilege. I call up for consideration the contested-election case of Smalls vs. Elliott, from the State of South Carolina.

Mr. BLOUNT. I raise the question of consideration against that. I appeal to my colleague not to press that case at this time. the midst of the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill; we ought reasonably to get through with it during the day, and the bill ought to go to the Senate for consideration there, while the matter which my colleague proposes to call up pertains to the House alone. We are reaching a stage in the session where it is exceedingly impor-tant that the appropriation bills shall be gotten to the Senate as soon as possible, and I trust that my friend will not press his case, but will let us proceed and finish the matter that we have been considering.

Mr. HERMANN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know whether the regular order is not the call of the States and Territories.

The SPEAKER. It is, but the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] calls up a privileged matter relating to the election of a member of the House, which takes the place of the usual regular order.

Mr. CRISP. In response to my colleague [Mr. BLOUNT], I wish to state to the House that I have sought in every way to avoid antagonizing general appropriation bills with this election case. It has been some ten days since I have made an effort to call up this case. I had conferred with the gentlemen having charge of these bills, and hoped the bills would be out of the way last week. I find now that this appropriation bill is pending, and there is another ready. The general deficiency bill will come in to-day. So that the situation is just this: If this case is to be tried at all, it must antagonize something.

Mr. RANDALL. In regard to the general deficiency bill, I wish to ay it will come in immediately upon the disposition of the other bills. It is the omnium gatherum, and can not be brought in until a late stage of the session.

Mr. CRISP. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that the House ought to give a reasonable time to the consideration of this case. I am perfectly willing to make it as short as it can be made consistently with the proper discussion of the question; and I appeal to my friend [Mr. BLOUNT] discussion of the question; and I appear to my friend [Mr. BLOUNI] to allow us to dispose of this matter now.

Mr. BLOUNI. I wish to suggest to my friend that most of the appropriation bills have passed the House. After the pending bill has been disposed of, I believe there are two others—the Indian bill, which is a short one, and the deficiency bill, which generally passes during the closing hours of the session, with the view of gathering up whatever may appear to be necessary in the way of deficiency appropriations. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL], the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, says that he can see no reason why the deficiency bill should be placed in the way of this election case.

Mr. CRISP. I will state to my friend that the river and harbor bill is also pending, having been partially considered.

Mr. BLOUNT. Well, the river and harbor bill will have to be reached under a suspension of the rules.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to know, Mr. Speaker, whether this day is not set apart by the rules for business of the District of Columbia Committee?

The SPEAKER. It is, but the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] calls up a privileged matter affecting the right of a member to his seat.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Does that supersede the rule of the House?

Mr. REED. I trust the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISF] will persist in his demand that this election case shall be brought before the House at once and decided. It must be apparent to every member that this case has been delayed long enough. There is no trouble whatever in procuring proper attention for the appropriation bills; those bills will be passed, and passed in due time. The Senate already has a sufficiency of appropriation bills before it for its action; and we can bills will be passed, and passed in due time. The Senate already has a sufficiency of appropriation bills before it for its action; and we can very well pause now to attend to a matter which under the laws of the country is of the highest importance and of the highest privilege. I trust, therefore, that gentlemen on the other side will allow this business to go on without further obstruction. It seems to me we are tak-

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] has called up the report of the Committee on Elections in this case; and no question of consideration has been raised.

Mr. BLOUNT. I raised the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the gentleman to do anything more than make an appeal to his colleague [Mr. CRISP].

Mr. BLOUNT. I distinctly stated that I raised the question of con-

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration, then, is the question before the House; and it is not debatable. [Cries of "Regular

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. On Mondays, as I understand, the first business in order is the call of States for the introduction of bills. I desire to know what has become of that

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already stated once or twice that the election case is a matter of the highest privilege and takes pre-cedence over the usual regular order of the House. The Clerk will read the resolution reported by the Committee on Elections, after which the Chair will submit the question of consideration.

Mr. BLAND. I wish to ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] one question. I understand there are two election contests pending, and I desire to know whether it is intended to dispose of both of them. The gentlemen on the other side are urging the consideration of one case. I think there is equal reason why the other should be considered. If we are going to consider one, why not consider both?

Mr. CRISP. I am very frank to say it is my intention to press the other case also

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the resolutions reported by the Committee on Elections.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Robert Smalls was not elected a Representative to the Fiftieth Congress from the Seventh district of South Carolina.

Resolved, That William Elliott was duly elected a Representative to the Fiftieth Congress from the Seventh district of South Carolina, and is entitled to his

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House now proceed to the consideration of the resolutions just read?

The question having been put,
The SPEAKER said: The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for a division.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 106, noes 56.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. REED. I hope the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] will not take up an hour or a half an hour in this way. [Cries of "Regular order!"] Well, let them have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative-yeas 131, nays 89, not voting 102; as follows:

So the House determined to consider the election case.

On motion of Mr. CRISP, the reading of the names was dispensed

The following pairs were announced on all political questions until further notice:

Mr. HALL with Mr. BELDEN. Mr. Hogg with Mr. ARNOLD.

Mr. PIDCOCK with Mr. NUTTING. Mr. PENINGTON with Mr. GAINES.

Mr. PHELAN with Mr. BUTLER.

Mr. Fisher with Mr. Thomas H. B. Browne. Mr. Clements with Mr. Ryan.

Mr. MANSUE with Mr. WARNER.

Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. LYMAN.

Mr. MAHONEY with Mr. BUNNELL.

Mr. McShane with Mr. LAIRD.

Mr. SNYDER with Mr. BOWEN.

Mr. NEAL with Mr. HOUK.

Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana, with Mr. McCormick.

Mr. BARNES with Mr. HERMANN, on all political questions and on the contested-elected cases of Smalls vs. Elliott and Sullivan vs. Felton, until the 16th instant.

Mr. GREENMAN with Mr. SHERMAN, on the Smalls-Elliott election

Mr. BURNETT with Mr. DAVIS, on the election case of Smalls vs. Elliott.

Mr. BACON with Mr. CROUSE, on the pending election case.

Mr. CLARK with Mr. HUDD, on the election contest of Smalls vs. Elliott.

Mr. Cox with Mr. WILBER, on political questions, for this day.

Mr. SENEY with Mr. Goff, for to-day.

Mr. Glover with Mr. Boutelle, on this vote.
Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, with Mr. McComas, on this vote.
Mr. Rusk with Mr. Struble, on this vote.
Mr. Sowden with Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, on this vote. The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

JURORS OF SUPREME COURT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. CRISP. Before proceeding with the election case the gentleman from South Carolina representing the District Committee has a small matter which he says will not take up much time and which he desires to present for consideration. I have no objection to his doing so.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the District of Columbia being deprived of its day, there is one bill which passed the House the other evening, since when the same bill with one or two immaterial changes has been passed by the Senate, and I would like to ask consent to pass the Senate bill. The amendments are not material.

Mr. WHEELER. What is the bill?

Mr. HEMPHILL. It relates to the drawing of jurors in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Dockery in the chair). The title of the bill will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3640) to amend the laws relating to the selection and service of jurors in the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will state, sir, that this simply relates to the drawing of jurors in the supreme court of the District, and their length of service. It was passed by the House without objection the other night and went to the Senate. The Senate bill amends the House bill by providing that others than tax-payers may be jurors, and extends the service beyond a month where they are actually engaged in a trial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be read a third time; and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HEMPHILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, before proceeding to the discussion of the election contest I would ask that gentlemen having bills to introduce may be permitted to hand them in at the Clerk's desk.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I desired, Mr. Speaker, during the call of the States and Territories to offer a resolution which I would not like to introduce without having it read. As it will take but a brief time to read it, I ask unanimous consent that it be read.

Mr. CRISP. I can not yield for that purpose, because other gentlemen would have a right to the same privilege, and I want to proceed

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I desire that this resolution, being a matter of privilege, may be printed in the RECORD. Mr. ROGERS, Mr. MACDONALD, and others. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair must regard the demand for the regular order as equivalent to an objection.

TESTED ELECTION-SMALLS VS. ELLIOTT.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, then I call up the contested-election case and inquire of my friends representing the minority of the committee as to what time they would like to have for the discussion of this ques-

Mr. ROWELL. We will need at least five hours on this side; but before proceeding I want the resolutions presented by the minority of the committee to be considered as pending.

The SPEAKER pro tempere. The Chair is advised that they are pending.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Has the right to introduce bills been granted? The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understands that objection has been made.

Mr. ROGERS. I did not desire to object to the introduction of bills, but desired that the House should proceed at once with the elec-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will, then, again submit the request of the gentleman from Georgia that members having bills to introduce may be permitted to hand them in at the desk.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky objects.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a question of order. Do I understand that the gentleman from Kentucky objects to the introduction

The SPEAKER protempore. The gentleman so states.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I am unable to agree with my friend on the other side as to the duration of the debate in this case. tleman says that five hours on a side will be necessary. I think, and I speak, I believe, with a full knowledge of the case, giving only my own opinion, of course, that less time would be amply sufficient to discuss it. I give notice, therefore, that to-morrow at 2 o'clock I shall ask the House to sustain the demand for the previous question. I will say, however, in this connection that if it is the desire of gentlemen on either side that there should be a night session, by recess taken this evening from 5 o'clock until the usual hour for a night session, to continue the discussion I will not object.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask my colleague if when the vote is taken on this question it is the purpose of the committee to follow it with the other contested case?

Mr. CRISP. I will state, in response to my friend and colleague, that it is the intention of the committee to press the remaining case at as early a date as possible. It will probably be Thursday, however, before we reach it, because the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. O'NEALL], who made the report in that case, is at home, but will be telegraphed for at once, and I presume will be here to-morrow or the next day. It is our intention, however, to press it to a conclusion at once.

Mr. SPRINGER. I intended to give notice that I would call up the conference report on the Territorial bill this morning; but the House having decided to take up the election case, I will give notice that I will call up that case as soon as this case is disposed of—some time to-morrow.

Mr. REED (to Mr. CRISP). There is no agreement as to time. Mr. CRISP. I give notice that I shall ask the House to-morrow at 2 o'clock to sustain the demand for the previous question.

Mr. REED. That does not bind anybody.

Mr. CRISP. Not at all. It binds all men who then believe that there has been sufficient debate upon this case.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I wish to inquire whether my friend from Georgia desires to proceed to-night with the consideration of this case? Mr. CRISP. I do, if any gentleman desires to do so. I desire to do anything and everything I can to further a speedy trial of this case, at the same time allowing a reasonable time for debate.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Before the gentleman from Georgia proceeds

I would like to ask unanimous consent-objected to. Mr. BLAND. Let us have the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded, which cuts off all requests for unanimous consent.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, at the election in the Seventh district of South Carolina in 1886, William Elliott, Democrat, and Robert Smalls, Republican, were the opposing candidates before the people—made that the previous order will be demanded at 2 o'clock to-morrow, I desire to call attention if possible, and ask if the regular order can be

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the consideration of this contested election case. The gentleman from Georgia has the floor and can not be taken off by a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CRISP. The State board of canvassers canvassed the vote cast at that election and gave to Elliott 6,493 votes and to Smalls 5,961 votes, being a majority for the former of 532 votes. Within the time provided by law Smalls gave notice of contest. Elliott responded to this notice. Evidence was taken upon the contest, which is to be found in this volume of something over eight hundred printed pages. The Committee on Elections, after hearing counsel and a careful consideration of the evidence in the case, has presented two reports—a majority report and a minority report—and it now becomes my duty in presenting the case to call the attention of the House to the evidence and the law, the careful consideration of which has induced the majority of the committee to make the report that is now before the House

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Elections in considering this case have observed a rule which I think will commend itself to the common sense and to the judgment of every gentleman who is accustomed to the investigation and trial of causes in the courts. In considering questions of the admissibility of evidence we have applied the rules established in courts of justice. We have made ourselves, so far as we could, what I believe the Constitution of our country requires and demands that members of this House should make themselves in contested-election cases, judges; not partisans, but judges. I appreciate the fact that members of the House in cases of this character must rely very largely upon the information and the views of members of the Committee on Elections. I appreciate the fact that consistently with the discharge of the various duties of a member of Congress it is quite impossible that each member of this House should take this voluminous record, examine it as a court would examine it, and form an opinion on the merits of the case as a juror does when he sits upon the trial of a cause; the House must rely largely upon the committee, and therefore I ask its careful attention while I present the views of the majority on the various questions and points made in the case.

I shall not ask the House to apply any rule in this case that I do not believe should be applied and is applied in all the courts in all the States of the Union.

I object to and protest against that other so-called rule which is sometimes invoked in this House in the trial of election cases, that the House is bound by no rules of law, that the House is bound by no rules of evidence, but that because its decision is absolutely final and conclusive therefore it has a right to disregard all those rules of evidence the observance of which the experience of ages has demonstrated are absolutely essential to the protection of life and liberty and

I can not, sir, in the time which I shall occupy here refer to every point made in the case. In the report submitted I have endeavored to deal with all questions of importance. I shall now endeavor to touch briefly upon most of the points made, speaking at some length upon those great salient features of the case which in my judgment are conclusive of the rights of the parties to the contest.

The first point made by the contestant is that at a precinct known as Pocotaligo-an historic name, Mr. Speaker-there were more ballots in the box than there were names on the poll-list; that in drawing the names from the box the managers did not conform to the law, and that in counting the votes of the county in which the precinct is situated 143 votes were counted from this precinct; that they were counted Elliott 87 and Smalls 56, when in fact and in truth, the contestant claims, the ballots should have been counted 118 for Smalls and the remainder for Elliott. That is the contention of the contestant. It appears from the evidence that there were more ballots in the box at Pocotaligo than there were names upon the poll-list. By the law of South Carolina a voter deposits his own ballot in the box. The law declares that the box shall contain an opening only large enough for the admission of one ballot at a time.

Members of the House will see at once that it is impossible, using the ordinary ballot that is used throughout the country, to so arrange the ballot-box that a voter could not deposit more than one ballot if he desired so to do. The law of South Carolina provides that wherever there shall appear to be more ballots in the box than there are names on the poll-list all the ballots shall be put back into the box and shall be thoroughly mixed; that then the excess over the number of names on the poll-list shall be drawn from the box, and that the ballots which remain in the box shall be counted as the votes cast at the election. Now, gentlemen will observe that this rule, which is not peculiar to South Carolina but exists in some other States, may operate to the injury of either party or to the benefit of either party. There is nothing in it that necessarily gives to one party an advantage over the other.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a ques-

Mr. CRISP. I can not permit an interruption now.

Mr. SPOONER. I simply wanted to ask the gentleman to state how many more ballots there were in the box than there were names on the poll-list.

Mr. CRISP. I am coming to that,

Now, there were two witnesses examined as to what was the excess of ballots in the box. One of these witnesses is named Bampfield, a son-The other is named Devoe, who, I believe, in-law of the contestant, was a supervisor. Bampfield swore that the excess was 148. Devoe swore that the excess was 105.

Mr. SPOONER. How many names were on the poll-list?

Mr. CRISP. One hundred and forty-three. To show the House that there was nothing in this drawing out of which the contestant can complain, Devoe says that of the 105 drawn out and destroyed 47 were Smalls ballots. That would leave 58 Elliott ballots drawn out. It is clear, therefore, that no injury could result to Smalls from this process. Then, to show the House that at this precinct there was no failure on the part of the managers to discharge their duty, I call attention to the fact that this ballot-box, in accordance with the laws of South Carolina, was opened before the election began, and was found to contain no ballots; so that the only way in which the excess of ballots could have found their way into the box is either by the fraudulent and wrongful act of the managers, or that some voter or voters in depositing their ballots in the box put in more than one ballot. The law presumes that the managers, sworn officers, did their duty, and there is nothing in the evidence indicating that they did not.

Now, gentlemen say that all the managers at this precinct were Democrats. I believe that is true; I am not positive about it, but I believe it is true. That ought not to have been the case. And yet, Mr. Speaker, according to the testimony it was not an uncommon thing in that State in the day when the executive officers were Republican to find all the managers of election at any given precinct Republicans. That was wrong, just as this is wrong. But it does not follow that because these managers were all Democrats they necessarily violated their duty, or failed to do their duty; and there is no evidence in the record which intimates in any degree that they did fail to perform I have argued this on the merits, but there is another question higher and beyond this. There is no evidence in the record as to how the vote from Pocotaligo was counted by the county board of canvassers or the State board of canvassers.

Understand that. When a contestant undertakes to show that the vote of a particular precinct was wrongly counted, the first step, the primary move, so to speak, is to show by competent evidence how the vote was returned and counted at that precinct. I presume no gentleman will question that proposition. Now, in this case there is no evidence as to how the vote at Pocotaligo precinct was returned and counted. So far as the record shows there might have been 300 or 400 votes returned and counted from Pocotaligo as well as 143.

Now, there is in the record—for I want to be perfectly frank about this matter—there is in the record a paper which was offered in evidence before the justice taking the testimony, which was offered as a copy of the return of Pocotaligo precinct. That paper is not sworn by anybody to be a copy; it is not certified by anybody to be a copy; and there is no evidence of any living human being that it is a copy; nor, as my friend from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] suggests, is there any evidence that it ever reached the canvassing board. Under the law of South Carolina the secretary of state is the ultimate custodian of election returns. There is a county board of canvassers who canvass the votes; there is a State board of canvassers who canvass the votes. The Secretary of State is a member of that board; he is the ultimate custodian of these papers. The best evidence of what number of votes were counted at a particular precinct is a certified copy of the official return, which could easily be obtained from the secretary of state. In this case there has been no effort to do that as to this precinct.

Now, mark you, Mr. Speaker, this is not technical. This is a rule which prevails in every court, which prevails everywhere, in every tribunal that seeks to arrive at the truth. There is no evidence, I say, as to how this vote was counted. That being true, the whole case as to this precinct falls. Smalls examined one hundred and eighteen witnesses who swore that they voted for him. Suppose they did. It does not follow from the evidence in this case that their votes were not counted for him.

Now, gentlemen will find by reference to every treatise on the law of election—I have before me Paine and McCrary—that the rules of evidence as applied by the courts should be applied by the House in the trial of such cases; and there is no court in Christendom, and no lawyer on this floor will say that there is, that would consider a paper as a copy of an existing document without any evidence that it is a copy, without any certificate that it is a copy, and without any testimony tending in the least degree to show that it is a copy.

Smalls, the contestant, recognizing, I suppose, this fact—recognizing the fact that there was nothing in the conduct of the election managers at this precinct that at all indicated unfairness or injustice—with-drew before the State board of canvassers his protest against the counting of this precinct. If he withdrew his protest there, it may be fairly assumed that there is nothing in the case that would authorize or justify a finding in his favor thereon.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to Green Pond precinct. Mr. BURROWS. Will my friend allow me a question, because I want to understand his position on this matter?

want to understand his position on this matter?

Mr. CRISP. If it is only a question, I yield.

Mr. BURROWS. That is all. I see that on the published poll-list of the precinct of which the gentleman has just been speaking there are 143 names. One hundred and eighteen voters testify that they voted for Mr. Smalls, leaving only 25 for Mr. Elliott. Why do you count Mr. Elliott as receiving 87 votes?

Mr. CRISP. I have just stated that the paper which the gentleman sees there and calls a poll-list is not certified to be a poll-list; it is not sworn by anybody to be a poll-list. It is not the original—

Mr. BURROWS. Then your answer is that this poll-list is not certect?

My answer is that there is no evidence it is a polllist at all, and there is no evidence in the record showing how many votes were counted for Elliott or how many were counted for Smalls. The original poll-list is easily accessible. It is now and has always been in the office of the secretary of state of South Carolina, and the contestant in this case knew it. I say this, because in the case of other precincts appearing in this record he produced certified copies of the poll-lists when he wanted to assail them, so that it can not be claimed that he did not know or his lawyer did not know how to prove what vote was counted. The significant fact is this: that in other cases—not all, but in some other cases—when he desires to assail a precinct he produces a certified copy of the record from the office of the secretary of state, showing what the vote of the precinct was.

Mr. DALZELL. I suppose it was accessible to the contestee, was it

Mr. CRISP. I assume so. I assume the gentleman is a lawyer, and I assume when he goes into court to defend a case and the plaintiff fails to make out the case the gentleman from Pennsylvania does not put in testimony to aid or help or assist him in any way, but lets the case fall just where it is.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when the paper my friend from Michigan Mr. Burrows] refers to was tendered in evidence objection was made by the counsel for the contestee that it was not the original, not proved to be a copy, not certified as a copy, and not admissible as evidence. Thereby contestant was notified of the defect in the paper, and if it was a correct copy of the returns on file with the secretary of state he might still have gone and had it certified.

Green Pond is another precinct where there is no evidence as to how the vote was counted. Gentlemen will perceive all through this case, when they examine it, that the contestant and his counsel were fully acquainted with their rights and the rules which obtain in courts of justice as to admissibility of evidence. Sometimes they conformed to the rule, sometimes they did not; and, Mr. Speaker, where the rule is so plain, so well known, so easy to conform to, and its observance so sential, the House should not permit it to be disregarded.

At Green Pond there was no evidence as to how the return was counted. At that precinct after the voters got through voting, before the ballots were counted, there was a closing of the polls for two, or three, or four, or five minutes. The circumstances were these: The voting place was the back room of a store, and that back room was separated from the store by a partition, in which partition there was a door. The voter voted through a window in the back room. When the time for closing the polls arrived the managers closed the windows and took the box back into the store, where they did the counting. The count was public. No allegation of fraud was made, and no one objected to it.

Now it is claimed there are one hundred and thirty witnesses who testify they voted for Smalls. I might grant this, and say that inasmuch as there is no evidence as to how many votes were returned and counted for Smalls, this fact counts for nothing.

If members of the House had read the testimony of these one hundred and thirty witnesses, as I have done, they would appreciate, as they never before appreciated, the propriety and the justice of refus-ing to allow a man to say how he did vote after the election. Members on this floor, doubtless, have been sometimes deceived by voters in their own community as to how they voted. There is hardly a member on the floor who has not, at times, had a voter to declare that he had voted for him when such member was morally certain that such voter had not so voted.

That is true where the voter is of an intelligent class. Do you know the kind of evidence given in this case on this subject? I can not stop to read it all. I can not stop to read any great part of it. Here is the testimony of Matthew Edwards (colored), to be found on page 475 of the record:

the record:

Matthew Edwards (colored), a witness of legal age, produced by contestant upon due notice to contestee, deposes as follows in reference to questions propounded by counsel:

Q. What is your name, age, residence, occupation, and where were you on the 2d day of November last?

A. Matthew Edwards; about thirty, I reckon; live at Green Pond precinct; farmer; I was at Green Pond.

Q. Did you vote there for Congressman on the 2d day of November last? If so, state of your own free will for whom you voted.

A. Robert Smalls.

Q. From whom did you get your ticket?

A. Didn't have nary one; wouldn't give me no ticket.

Q. Then you did not vote?

A. No; no more than put my name down.

Q. What did you mean when you said you voted for Smalls?

A. Because I intended to vote for him.

That is one of this crowd of witnesses who testify they voted for

Here is another, Manigault, on page 494 of the record:

Q. Can you read and write?

A. No.
Q. Who told you that you voted for Smalls?
A. April Singleton.
Q. Do you know the solemnity of an oath?
A. No, sir; I don't.
Q. If you were to tell a lie would you stick to it?
A. No, I'm not going to try to tell any.
Q. What time did you get to the polls, and what time did you leave?
A. I got here in the morning a little after sunrise, and left between I and $.

Q. Were you present when the managers opened the polls?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Who was present besides yourself?
A. Black and white was here, but I don't know none.
CUFFY (his x mark) MANIGAULT.

Here is another who testifies he voted for Smalls, and he could read his own ticket, but the justice trying this case certifies the counsel handed the witness the name of Robert Smalls in print and he could not read it.

Here is Billy Mitchell, page 528 of the record, who testifies as follows:

Q. How do you know, then, that you voted for Robert Smalls?
A. By having read my ticket, and I can read Robert Smalls's name in print.
(The name of Robert Smalls in print shown him, and he said it was Elliott's

BILLY (his x mark) MITCHELL

That is a sample, Mr. Speaker, of this evidence. The minority ask you to presume that less than 130 votes were counted for Smalls, and claim that the evidence of these witnesses shows that 130 men voted for Smalls. I submit, sir, that even if there were proof that less than 130 votes were counted for Smalls, you could not on such testimony as this determine that sworn officers of the law had perjured themselves.

I come now to the Brick Episcopal Church. This was a new voting place. Under the law of South Carolina no man can vote who is not registered as a voter. No man can vote who does not present at the time he offers to vote his registration certificate. You understand this is a condition-precedent to his right to vote. He must have reg-You understand istered and must exhibit the certificate to the managers. The law further says that a man who changes his residence shall get a new certificate. This he can do without expense or without any great trouble; simply on request he gets it, stating where he lives. The law says the certificate shall state his voting place. All of the provisions of this law are made for wise and just purposes. They are made in the interest of fair and honest elections. Without them a registration law would amount to nothing.

The voter can himself easily tell his "local habitation and his name;" but it might be a very difficult matter to decide as to the legality of a vote if you did not know the residence of the voter. You would have to look for the man, not knowing who his neighbors were, and this might be troublesome. These provisions are made, therefore, in the interest of fair elections. They exist everywhere and should be ob-

This was a new polling place established in 1885, and the law required that certain voters living in Mount Pleasant precinct should vote at Brick Episcopal Church Federal poll. Now, sir, not a single registered voter, who prior to that law was authorized to vote at Mount Pleasant, went to the registrar and had his certificate so changed as to designate that he was to vote at Brick Episcopal Church.
Mr. ROWELL. Will my colleague allow a question?
Mr. CRISP. In a moment.

The law said that those living outside of the town of Mount Pleasant would vote at the new Brick Episcopal Church.

Mr. ROWELL. The question I want to ask is this: Do the certificates show that a man votes at one place for State and county officers and at another place for a member of Congress, or does it state the precinct in which he votes?

cinct in which he votes?

Mr. CRISP. The law of South Carolina says that when there are more voting places in a precinct than one, the certificate shall tell the poll at which the voter is to cast his vote. If there is but one voting place in a precinct, why, of course, it would not be necessary to provide that a man living in that precinct should vote at that place, because there is no other place for him to vote. But if there are two in a precinct, at one of which he may vote, and at the other of which he may not vote, you see at once the necessity and propriety of designating which is the voting place assigned to him. Now in this case there was not a request from one of these voters to be transferred by the registrar to the new polling place where the law said they would have registrar to the new polling place where the law said they would have to vote, and without such request the registrar could not make the change. You may say that it is a hardship upon them. Not at all.

The right of suffrage, Mr. Speaker, is not a natural right. It is a right that may be limited by the States, a right that has been limited by some of the States, and the courts everywhere have approved of all provisions of the law which look, not to the prevention of voting, but to the protection of the honest voter in his right to vote and the prevention of illegal votes-which look, in other words, to the purity of the ballot. The registrar states that not a single name was on his registrybook for the new polling place at Episcopal Church. Under these circumstances the board of State canvassers declined to count any votes polled there; and your committee believe that in so doing they were conforming to the law.

Mr. CHEADLE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question just here?

Mr. CRISP. I have but a very short time remaining, and I would prefer not to be interrupted, as I must hurry on.

There are two precincts, Adams Run and Fort Motte, at which this state of facts exists: The election was held and the returns made out, put into the box, the box properly sealed up and by one of the managers of the election carried to the county town and left in unauthorized hands. The box is there yet, so far as I know. In the other case the election is regular, so far as we have information, the returns were sealed up, the box was taken by one of the managers and put in unauthorized hands, and then deposited in some store under the counter and has disappeared. Mr. Speaker, all gentlemen understand the importance of protecting the ballot box from being tampered with, and the necessity for the rule which prescribes that it shall not go out of the possession of the managers, except to some person authorized by law to receive it.

Your committee were of the opinion when they examined into this question that there was no design on the part of either of these managers to violate or to evade the law. Your committee thought that if the true result in these two precincts could be ascertained we ought to count Now, at each of these precincts there were two Federal supervisors, a Democrat and a Republican. These two officers had kept a tally of the vote that was given to each candidate, wroteout a certificate of the result, and mutually signed it, this at the time of the counting of the Now, the Committee on Elections do not believe there was any intention on the part of these managers to defraud anybody; they were simply uninformed as to what their duties were. The boxes having been out of the hands of the legal custodians thereof, where they might be tampered with, could not be examined under the law; but as there was a representative of each of the two political parties present as supervisors of the election, and they had kept a tally-sheet of the voters, your committee felt that it was right and proper to count these votes.

Mr. ADAMS. Is that legal evidence?

Mr. CRISP. Wherever the original returns are lost, mislaid, or inaccessible, or wherever the managers of an election permit the ballotbox to pass from their hands into that of others not authorized by law to receive it, so that the presumption in its favor no longer exists, then think a court would permit secondary evidence, the best evidence hat was attainable going to show what the vote was. Your committhat was attainable going to show what the vote was. Your committee acted upon this idea; they took the best evidence attainable, and it was pretty good evidence. It was the evidence of the supervisors, the sworn officers who were there in the discharge of their duties, and who agreed as to what the vote was. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the committee committee the supervisors are the committee.

mittee counted these two returns, and they enter into the computation that goes to make up the vote of the respective parties in this case.

Now, perhaps the House, from something that was said the other day, was not informed of this. They were told of the loss and destruction of ballot-boxes, but they were not told that in this case the vidence folled to show a vidence folled to show a vidence of the contract of the same that the s evidence failed to show any improper motive on the part of the managers; and the votes were counted from those precincts exactly as contestant claimed they should be counted.

Mr. MORGAN. Were the managers themselves examined?

Mr. CRISP. I do not know whether they were or not.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. And this was to the advantage of Mr. Smalls. Mr. CRISP. The House understands that the counting of this vote was to the advantage of the contestant. He made the point that it ought to be counted, he had more votes there than Mr. Elliott, and the counting of these ballots gives him all that he claims in this regard.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. What do the certificates show that Mr. IIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. What do the certificates show that are signed by these two supervisors?

Mr. CRISP. They show the tallies, the number of votes cast for each candidate. We took that as evidence, we accepted that as the best we could get; and I did not know until the other day that there was any man in the House, on the committee, or in the country that objected to the course of the committee in this regard. Smalls did not object, because we have given him everything in the world he claims as to these precincts.

Mr. Speaker, another point made is, that there was a difficulty about registration in this district, and there is evidence in the record tending to show that some voters were put to considerable inconvenience in their efforts to be registered. That, Mr. Speaker, will occur in any country in the world. Under the law of South Carolina, however, there were ample remedies for every man who failed to get registration. There were ample opportunities afforded every man to get his registration; the law of that State sets apart a day in every month when a man can register at the country seat. It is made the duty of the registrar to go to each district of the county, that an opportunity may be given to register. All these things were done, and the registrar himself certifies, or rather testifies, that he never refused registration to any man who asked to be registered.

If any man is unjustly refused registration he has his remedy. There is a board at the county seat to which he can appeal from the decision of the registrar, and by the express terms of the law if a voter is unjustly refused registration he can appeal to the court. No effort of that sort was made. There is merely complaint that it was hard to register, and there is evidence in the record tending to show that certain men were inconvenienced and had to go several times to get registered, and then that they did not get registered; but there is nothing to show that there was any intentional wrong or anything to show that any voter, vigilant in his effort to obtain registration or to assert his own rights, failed to be registered. There is evidence tending to show that about twenty

Mr. ROWELL. Twenty-two.
Mr. CRISP. I accept the statement of my colleague on the committee; twenty-two failed to get registered; their evidence is not clear at all. They could not tell whether they applied in 1883, 1884, 1886, or what year; they do not allege that the registrar refused them registration. They only claim that the crowd was so great that the time elapsed before they could get in. The registrar swears he never refused to register any man who applied.

At the risk of being somewhat tedious and depending upon the kindness of my colleagues on the committee, I will have to take more than an hour to fully go through this case in opening it as I desire to do, because I want to cover it all.

A large part of the report of the minority in this case is taken literally from the brief of the contestant. On page 49 of that report you will find this language:

A careful analysis of the testimony cited will show conclusively the rejection by the managers of election, all of whom were Democrats, of 277 legally registered and qualified voters, without the shadow of cause, excuse, or justification. This occurred at Sumter precinct, in Sumter County. It is also shown beyond a doubt that each of these 277 voters were the party friends of and intended to vote for Smalls, the contestant. Having been rejected without legal—

The statement follows the brief of contestant except in this: The brief gives the page of the record containing the evidence relied upon to sustain the allegation. The minority report omits this reference, and perhaps, Mr. Speaker, it is well it does. The witnesses relied upon to sustain this claim of 277 illegally rejected votes do not sustain it. Here in the testimony of G. W. Murray:

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, any person or persons who having or not having certificates of registration were not allowed to vote?

A. I do.
Q. State about how many.
A. About 121.
Q. To what political party did they or the majority of them belong?
A. One hundred and twenty of them belonged to the Republican party, and one to the Democratic party.

Cross-examination:

Cross-examination:

Q. You have testified that 121 persons having or not having certificates of registration were not allowed to vote at Raftin Creek precinct. State how many of those had certificates and how many had none.

A. I did not keep an accurate list of the number that had certificates, but I can come up to about one-third of them that had certificates.

Q. Of those that had certificates do you know their contents?

A. I did know the contents of some of them at that time.

Q. Which of them, and what of their contents?

A. I can not tell now; could not tell my own unless I had it with me.

Q. If you can not tell the contents of these certificates, can you tell whether they were legally or illegally rejected from voting?

A. As to the contents chiefly I do not remember, but as to the legality of the number being refused to vote, some of the refused were illegal.

Q. Which of them?

A. I do not remember. I looked at a great many certificates on that day, but did not keep an itemized account.

Now, the minority of the committee do not stop at claiming "about 40," which this witness testifies to, but they add in their column of figures the whole 120 as illegally rejected votes. A man by the name of Kean swears as follows:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of a person or persons who had certificates of registration and were not allowed to vote?

A. I do know of my own knowledge.

Q. Will you state about the number?

A. I can not positively state the exact number, but they were about 60 voters had their certificates that were not allowed to vote.

Cross-examined:

Q. The 60 rejected voters you have alluded to, did you know the contents of all their certificates?

A. Of several of them I did.
Q. Of how many did you know?
A. I can not now state as to how many.
Q. If you do not now remember the contents of the 60 registration certificates whose were rejected from voting, then you can not tell of your own knowledge whether they were legally or illegally rejected.

A. I can not tell whether they were legally or illegally rejected.

And yet, Mr. Speaker, the minority of the Committee on Elections, although the witness upon whom they relied to establish the illegal rejection of these 60 voters can not tell whether they were legally or illegally rejected, can determine and can say to you that these votes were illegally rejected. In the record you will find also the testimony of S. J. Bradley:

Q. Do you know of any person or persons who, having certificates, were not allowed to vote?

A. I do.

Q. Name them.

A. Charles Wallace, Washington McCrea, Mark Thompson, Claiborn Coon, Nero Allison, Monday, Douglass, Wash Frierson; there are some others that had certificates and were rejected, but I can not recollect their names.

Cross-examined:

Q. Did you know the contents of the certificates of registration held by the Various parties named by you above?

A. Not all of them; some in part.
Q. What part?
A. They were rejected from voting because they moved their residence.

The minority count these 7 votes illegal. You will find also the testimony of B. L. Ramsey:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge any person or persons who having certificates and were not allowed to vote at that poll?

A. I took the names of about 30 and more that were not allowed to vote, and I know there were about 50, more or less, that I did not take their names.

You stated you were supervisor of election at Wedgefield precinct?

Q. Did you receive instructions from the chief supervisor of elections as to your duties A. I did.

Q. Did you make your report to the chief supervisor of elections after the election according to instructions?
A. I did.
Q. Did you include in that report the matter about what you testified here?
A. I did not.
Q. Were you not instructed to report all irregularities?
A. I was.

A. I was.
Q. But you did not do it?
A. I did not report, because the managers rejected these votes because some voters had changed their residence.

The witness did not know that these votes were illegally rejected. And yet the minority of the Committee on Elections know not merely that the thirty whom this witness says he saw were illegally rejected, but also that the whole eighty were illegally rejected, and they so report to the House. Mr. Speaker, if a contest is to be determined in this House upon a statement like that, predicated upon such evidence as I have quoted, then indeed is that "judgment" which we are constitutionally empowered to pass in an election contest a mockery and a sham. Two hundred and seventy-seven votes claimed to have been illegally rejected and the evidence does not show the rejection of a single one in such a way that a court of justice would find that the voter was illegally rejected.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is another precinct to which I wish to call attention, Gadsden. It appears from the evidence that no legal managers were there. It appears from the evidence that no return of any votes was made to the county canvassing board. It appears from the evidence that there was no regular ballot-box at that precinct. It appears from the evidence that the first k town by the board of county canvassers of any alleged election having taken place there was the time of the service of the notice of contest. It appears from the evidence that at about 10 o'clock on the day of the election, or later, there being no managers p esent, thre: unauthorized persons opened a pol there. They k pt no tally-sheet; they took no oath; they made no return. When the voting was over they sealed the box, and one of them took it and delivered it to the county chairman of the Republican executive committee. They did not tender it to the county canvassers; they did not tender it to the State canvassers; but they turned it over to the chairman of the Republican campaign committee. He kept it.

A MEMBER. How did he keep it?

Mr. CRISP. I guess he kept it right; you know how disinterested the chairman of a campaign committee is likely to be.

Now, the evidence as to what vote was polled there is the evidence of one man. He said he kept an account of the number of voters, not a list of the names, not a tally-list, not a return; but he claims to know how many voted and who they voted for. He says there were 451 votes cast, all for Smalls.

Now, the contestant when he came to make up his case before the Committee on Elections distinctly abandoned all claim for the counting of this precinct. You understand the law says that when the pleadings are made up and the evidence is in, the contestant shall file a brief of the points upon which he relies-the legal points and the questions Now, when the contestant came to make up his brief the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] has expired.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. STONE, of Missouri).

Mr. MAISH. I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended as long as he may require.

Mr. CRISP. I will try, Mr. Speaker, to extend the same courtesy to the other side. I find it requires longer than I thought it would to go over the evidence in this case.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAISH] asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] be extended so as to allow him to conclude his remarks. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRISP. I thank the House for its courtesy When the contestant came to make up his brief he distinctly announced:

I do not claim that Gadsden precinct should be counted for me; I concede that the election held at that place was improper and illegal.

And the first intimation that the majority of the Committee on Elections had that the contestant or the members of the minority of the committee made any contention in favor of the counting of Gadsden was when the minority report was printed and we received it from the document-room. The able counsel in the case states in his brief:

While slight deviation as to time is not material, yet when more than one-third of the time allowed for voting passes by and no poll is opened the devia-tion becomes serious, and will be presumed to have affected the result, so that the vote can not be ascertained with any degree of certainty, and contestant abandons his demand for counting in his favor the vote polled at Gadsden.

Mr. ROWELL. He said, because there was an hour before the polls were opened, he conceded that that simply unseated Mr. Elliott, but were opened, he conceded that that simply unscated Mr. Elliott, but if taken alone it would not seat Mr. Smalls.

Mr. CRISP. He distinctly says—I presume the gentleman will not question this—that he does not ask that this precinct shall be counted.

Mr. ROWELL. You recollect in committee he was immediately differed from when he stated that as to the law.

Mr. CRISP. I do not know about that. I am talking about the case as made. And, Mr. Speaker, to any fair-minded man, to any man who believes that the purpose and object and aim of the House of Representatives in deciding an election case should be an honest search after the truth, to any man who believes this to be the rule it is not extraordinary that the contestant, anxious as he was, to occupy a seat on this floor, should have said, "I do not ask you to count Gadsden precinct

Mark you, no authorized or sworn managers, no returns, no ballots returned, no notice to the county canvassing board-

Mr. LAIDLAW. Was it a legal polling place?

Mr. CRISP. Yes, sir. Mr. LAIDLAW. Why were not managers sent there?

Mr. CRISP. Managers were appointed, but did not serve.
Mr. LAIDLAW. Why did they not serve?
Mr. CRISP. That is a question the gentleman must determine for himself. I am dealing with the proven facts. And then we have the delivery of this box to the Republican campaign chairman; and it never got into the hands of the officers authorized by law to conduct and hold elections in South Carolina.

Why, Mr. Speaker, think of it; is there a State in this Union where ballots cast and returned in that way would be counted for a candidate by any court? Recognizing this, the contestant and his able counsel abandoned this precinct; but the minority of the Committee on Elections ask you to do what neither the party himself nor his counsel would ask you to do; they ask you to count this vote for Smalls and add it to that given to him by the county and State canvassers. I assume, sir, that you will not do any such thing.

Some gentlemen suggest that it is in the power of the House to do this. Why, Mr. Speaker, if gentlemen mean by that that the House has the arbitrary power to do it, I agree to the proposition; but if they mean that under any rule or system of laws in any State of this Union that kind of a return can be counted, then I deny it. I say that this House has as much moral right to make a return for itself from a county as it has to count a return such as this is, according to the evidence in the record.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have about covered the points made by the contestant in the case except as to one precinct. I desire to consider that with others to avoid repetition.

It is claimed by the minority that the Seventh district of South Carolina was sealed and set apart to the colored people, meaning thereby, I suppose, a colored man must necessarily vote for a colored man, meaning thereby that wherever there is a majority of colored people in any district a white man can not lawfully be elected therein. If they do not mean that, then I am unable to determine what they do mean.

Then they say that Smalls was nominated and elected by the majority of the people; that the claim of the contestee that there was great dissatisfaction among the colored people as to the nomination of Smalls, that there was great dissatisfaction among the colored people at being called upon to vote for a man of the character of Smalls, amounts to nothing, as this is a negro district and must send a negro to represent it That is a fair statement of their claim. Let us appeal to the record and see how it sustains them.

Perhaps right here I ought to say to the House that the Forty-ninth Congress passed an act which provided for the printing of testimony in contested-election cases. By the terms of that act it was made the duty of the Clerk of the House to determine what should be printed and what should not be printed, casting upon him to some extent at least the duty that had theretofore been confided to the Committee on Elections, of deciding what was and what was not evidence in the case

This new law in many respects works well, and in some it works The practical effect of it is neither party objects to the printing of anything, and therefore everything that comes up goes into the rec-But that does not make it part of the evidence in the case. Whenever a paper is tendered to a justice of the peace who is taking testimony in a contested-election case, and it is objected to by the counsel on the other side, it is the duty of the justice to send the paper up with the evidence. Under the new law when it comes up it is printed without a determination by anybody that the paper is or is not legal evidence in the case.

I propose now to say something as to such illegal evidence in this The minority of the committee, my good friends, gentlemen for whom I have high respect, have pursued a somewhat singular course in preparing their report. They begin by quoting a newspaper editorial. If any gentleman, lawyer or layman, is aware of any law by which an article in a newspaper, expressing the opinion of the editor thereof on a particular election case, is to be considered as evidence, this would be proper; but is there any such rule?

Gentlemen may on the floor of the House read an article from a newspaper. They may read what the editor says. The editor doubtless is a good man, but he is not a witness, he is not sworn in the case, and under no rule of law or evidence can his opinion, given in such manner, be so considered. The minority undertake to aid our associates on the floor to reach a fair and unbiased judgment by beginning with an editorial which arraigns the Democratic party of the State of South Carolina. In that way they broach a question of this importance. majority of your committee, Mr. Speaker, have done nothing of that sort. We have sought to try this case on the evidence, and on the evidence alone.

Let us see what it is. In the first place Smalls, the contestant, was once a State senator in South Carolina. When he was State senator he was chairman of the senate committee on printing. When he was so senator and so chairman of the committee on printing he was paid $5,000 to procure a favorable report on and the passage of a resolution providing for the payment of an account for printing against the State. He was indicted for that conduct; he was tried by a court of competent jurisdiction; a jury of the vicinage, half white and half black, passed upon his case. We have got here the evidence that went before that jury. The judge, I am told, was a Republican. The majority of the jury were Republicans. That jury found Smalls guilty. The testimony of Mr. Roan, who was, or had been, sheriff of that county, is in the record as to the complexion and politics of this jury:

Q. Do you know the jurors in the case of "The State vs. Robert Smalls?" A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know their politics at that time?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know their politics at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you state who the jurors were?
A. Yes. W. C. McGregor, a merchant of Columbia, S. C., a white man and a Democrat; John J. Fields was a juror, a white man, and his politics were doubtful; Willis Joiner, colored, was a Republican and a very active politician; J. W. Adkins, white, and he was a Democrat, I think; Edward Pollard, white, was a conservative, and took no active part in politics; Joe Taylor, colored, was a Republican at that time; Simon Jenkins, colored, he was a Republican, very active, in fact a rip-snorter; he was a member of the board of county commissioners in radical times; Thomas J. Gibson, white, never took an active part in politics; I believe him to have been a Democrat; Vince Thompson, colored, Republican; Robert Goodwyn, colored, Republican; William T. Martin, white, Democrat; Paul Sims, colored, Republican, william T. I think he was chairman of the Hopkins Turn-Out Republican Club. None of the white men on the jury took any active part in politics, or ever did, and do not now.

No charge can be made against the verdict of this jury on the idea that the jurors were prejudiced or biased against Smalls through partisan or other feelings or influences.

Mr. LAIDLAW. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. CRISP. Not now.

Mr. LAIDLAW. Did the governor of the State grant Smalls, without his request, an unconditional pardon?

Mr. CRISP. I am coming to that, if the gentleman will be patient.

A number of convicted men have been pardoned without their re-

Mr. LAIDLAW. But does the governor of a State usually grant a pardon without a request?

Mr. CRISP. If the gentleman will only be patient I will come to that branch of the subject. The gentleman seems to think that a man may be the greatest thief on the face of the earth, but simply because the executive of a State happens to give him an unconditional pardon it restores him to all his former status as a man of honor.

Mr. LAIDLAW. Particularly if he did not ask it.
Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, there can be no question of partisan persecution in this case, because the jury was one-half whites and onehalf blacks, and the colored men were active Republican politicians. But I produce the evidence that went before the jury, and appeal to you to take the evidence and come to a conclusion other than that Smalls was guilty if you can.

Here is the evidence:

Josephus Woodruff was then sworn for the State.

He testified that he had been clerk of the senate of the State of South Carolina from 1868 to this time; that he was a member of the Republican Printing Company, and that company did the public printing; that with his partner, A. O. Jones, he was deeply interested in the passage of the joint resolution to make appropriation for expense of printing ordered by the General Assembly during the regular sessions of 1870-'71 and 1871-'72.

Jones and witness made an agreement that Jones should consult the members of the house and ask them to support the measure, while witness should consult the senators.

consult the senators.

The following check was then handed to witness:

584. No. 17. COLUMBIA, S. C., January 19, 1873.

"South Carolina Bank and Trust Company, of Columbia, pay to cash or bearer, five thousand dollars.

"$5,000.

J. WOODRUFF."

Witness said he gave this check to the defendant, who was then chairman of the committee on printing, and it was given in accordance with the promise which witness had made to the defendant that if the joint resolution passed he would give the defendant $5,000.

The promise was made in witness's office in the state-house. The check was paid at the bank. Witness obtained it from the bank after its payment. The check was returned to the witness as the drawer of it at the end of the month, together with all the checks drawn during the month, as was then the custom of the bank. Witness gave this check to Smalls after the passage of the joint resolution. Can not remember the exact date without reference to his memorandum book.

Witness produced the memorandum book, written in phonographic characresolution. Can not remember the exact date without reference to his memorandum book.

Witness produced the memorandum book, written in phonographic characters, and after reference thereto, testified that he gave the check to the defendant on the 16th day of January, 1873. The check was dated a day or two ahead. Witness drew the check the 16th. It is dated the 19th. The 19th was Sunday. It is entered in the diary that witness gave defendant a check on that day for $5,000. Gave several other checks the same day—one to Ransier for $500, one to Holcombe for $250, one to Hollingshead for $100, one to Johnston for $500.

Witness paid the check to Smalls for his aid in securing the desired joint resolution. The defendant voted for it. His services were general through the whole passage of the joint resolution. Smalls was the chairman of the committee on printing. Witness expected a favorable report. The joint resolution went through the senate without a report, though it was reported on in the house. The defendant's services lasted until the close of the session. The payment was made in January, 1873, subsequent to the passage of the resolution. January 19th was Sunday; the dating of the check that day was a clerical error on witness's part. Witness did not have funds in the bank on the 16th, but he knew he would have them on the 19th; witness therefore dated the check ahead three days, and the 19th fell on Sunday.

Witness has been clerk of the senate from 1868 to the present time. He identified the printed journal of the senate for the regular session of 1872-773 as being a copy of the official journal of the said senate. Printed copies of entries of the journal are each day placed upon the desks of the members; are corrected in open senate, and are printed. There is no permanent journal except the printed journal.

Witness was also public printer while clerk of the senate. The defendant voted for the joint resolution.

The defendant waived cross-examination of the witness.

Mr. DAVIS. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. CRISP. Not now.

Mr. DAVIS. I want to know what was the date of the alleged offense; and is it not true that since then he has been several times elected to Congress?

Mr. CRISP. Oh! if the gentleman will only contain himself I will present the whole question so that the House may be able to determine for itself. The gentleman seems to assume that a man's offense is wiped out by the lapse of time.

Mr. DAVIS. That is not the point; but is it not a fact that he has been repeatedly in Congress since?

Mr. CRISP. I am coming to that.

Woodruff testifies that he gave Smalls a check for $5,000, when Smalls was chairman of the committee on printing of the senate, for getting a bill passed to pay his claim. The teller of the bank, L. N. Zealy, was then sworn and examined in behalf of the State.

He testified that he was assistant book-keeper for the South Carolina Bank

He testified that he was assistant book-keeper for the South Carolina Bank and Trust Company in 1873.
Shown books, which he identified as books of the South Carolina Bank and Trust Company.
The attorney-general handed witness the check above described, and asked witness to trace its course through the books of the said company.
The books were kept by witness, as book-keeper of bank, and the charge of $5,000 to Woodruff was made by him in the regular course of business.
The witness, on referring to the book, testified that the check was charged to Josephus Woodruff on the 18th day of January, 1873; amount, $5,000. The same day $5,000 is placed to the credit of Hon. Robert Smalls. No other check on that day is charged to Woodruff and no other credited to Smalls.
On the check is a memorandum showing the page—"584."
Page 584 is the page on the ledger which contains Josephus Woodruff's account with the bank. These figures were placed on the check by witness. Witness turned to page 584 of ledger. Besides the check of $5,000, there were two other checks paid on same day, one for $300 and one for $50.

Mr. Melton objected, the court overruled the objection, and Mr. Melton excepted.

Mr. Melton objected, the court overruled the objection, and Mr. Melton excepted.

Witness identified the checks, and said that they had on their backs the pages of the ledger in which they were entered.

Witness said it was the habit of the bank to require a deposit-slip from customers when a deposit was made. Witness produced a deposit-slip which he stated had been procured by him from the bank papers, which are now kept in a box at the state-house.

The deposit-slip is in the handwriting of F.S. Jacobs, who was cashier of the South Carolina Bank and Trust Company at that time. Jacobs has been out of the State since 1873.

South Caronna Bank and Trust company at that time. Sacous has been dead the State since 1873.

The attorney-general desired witness to read the deposit-slip. Mr. Melton objected to its being read or received in evidence. After argument the court overruled the objection, and the defendant excepted.

The said deposit-slip was then read, as follows, and shown to the jury:

S. C. BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, Columbia, S. C., January 18, 1873.

Deposited by Hon. Robert Smalls:
Gold	8
Currency	F 000
Check, W	5,000

Total

The "W." after the word "check" is in penell, and in handwriting of Jacobs, and was put there to indicate the person to whom it was charged.

Witness said the check is dated the 19th, and the deposit is entered the 18th of January, and from that ticket witness made the entry in the books. The 18th was Saturday. The 8th of February the defendant checked out the $5,000 from the bank. Could not have been drawn by any one else. The bank would not have honored the check of any other person. There was no other check of $5,000 deposited that day by any one.

The defendant waived cross-examining the witness.

Smalls did not make any explanation. He plead not guilty, but he did not undertake to explain the transaction. Certainly, had he been guiltless, this he could have done. How did Woodruff happen to give him a check for $5,000? How did he happen to deposit that check in the bank and draw out the money on it?

Mr. LAIDLAW. Have you a copy of the check?
Mr. CRISP. Yes, sir.
Mr. LAIDLAW. Read it.
Mr. CRISP. I say, how did it happen that he checked the money out? Why, there is no pretense anywhere—except in the minds of gentlemen who assume that a man, because he is of their political complexion, must be good—there is no pretense anywhere but that Smalls got this money for that service.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Let me ask the gentleman, if all he says is true, and if Smalls was rightfully convicted of the offense, inasmuch as he has been pardoned and restored to citizenship, is that any reason why his scat should be denied him if he has a majority of the votes cast?

Mr. CRISP. Oh wall the question of my good friend from Maine.

Mr. CRISP. Oh, well, the question of my good friend from Maine indicates very plainly either that he has not heard the line of my argument or that I have been most unfortunate in expressing myself. stated that the contestee alleged that Smalls had been convicted of this offense, and that such conviction operated to his hurt with the colored people.

Mr BUCHANAN. And they elected him afterwards.

Mr. CRISP. I am now proceeding to establish first the guilt of Smalls, and when I get through with that, then I propose to establish the other proposition. I do not propose to assume, as some gentlemen do on that side

Mr. DALZELL. What is the other proposition?

Mr. CRISP. That the conviction injured him with the colored people there.

Mr. DALZELL. Suppose it did, what relevancy has that to the pending question whether he got so many votes, or so many votes?

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman is—I will not say the gentleman is—but I suppose he is, like the rest of his side, ready to assume, as I said before, simply because there is a colored man who is a candidate, that notwithstanding his bad character he must necessarily get the votes of all the other colored men. I propose to show you that among the colored people there were many good men who rebelled against being dictated to by anybody and being required to vote for a man who had been convicted of a high crime under a legislative trust.

Mr. DALZELL. If the gentleman will allow me, I assume nothing of the kind. I assume that the gentleman's argument ought to proceed, as it has proceeded up to this time, upon the fairest and baldest of technicalities, and applying that rule, I ask what relevancy there is in this question to the right of the contestant to his seat?

Mr. CRISP. If the gentleman understands his interruptions to be in the courtesy of debate, he and I differ much in that regard.

Mr. DALZELL. I would like to know the relevancy of the argument, that is all.

Mr. CRISP. When the gentleman asks me a question right in the middle of a sentence, no matter how impatient he is for an answer, he must be content to wait until I at least complete the sentence; and if the object of his interruption is merely to express his opinion as to the merits of my argument, then I must beg leave to decline to yield to him at all.

My proposition is that the evidence shows Smalls to be guilty. Ido not think there can be any question about that. Now, for the benefit of these gentlemen who are so ready to rally to the defense of Smalls, who are, Mr. Speaker, by implication, at least, condemning the colored men in South Carolina who failed to vote for Smalls, I will call attention to some of the reasons given by respectable citizens of South Carolina—white men and colored men, Democrats and Republicans—why they did not vote for Robert Smalls. Our friends on the other side start with a theory and then they want to make the evidence square with their theory. Now, I will say to them, that as honest searchers after the truth, the best plan to pursue is to consider the evidence carefully and accept a conclusion in accordance with the evidence. If you would try that once, you would find that you would arrive at a more satisfactory conclusion to your own conscience—perhaps not always to your party.

Now, here is a case where the point is directly made that Smalls's guilt affected his popularity in the district; where the point is made that the evidence establishes the fact that any predilection that might have existed in the minds of many of the colored voters in that district in favor of Smalls on account of his color, is overcome by his course in Congress, by his conviction of bribery, and by the lawless methods adopted by him and his followers to overawe and browbeat the plain, common colored voters of the district. I do not know what evidence gentlemen on the other side will listen to. They seem to be, some of them at least, "joined to their idols." No amount of testimony, no matter how respectable the source, seems to make any impression upon them or to disturb their preconceived ideas.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. You are prejudging us, are you not?

Mr. CRISP. I do not include all of you. Just now I heard a side remark from that side. Some one said, "He was pardoned. Does not that dispose of it all?"

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. We think that is irrelevant.
Mr. CRISP. Perhaps you do. It is true a man who is pardoned can neither be tried again nor sent to the penitentiary; but I submit to honorable gentlemen that the fact that a man has been convicted of a penitentiary offense which involves moral turpitude is a circumstance that might affect his standing in the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens. That may be a shocking statement to you, but I believe [Laughter.]

Mr. GROUT. What was the date of his conviction?
Mr. CRISP. Look at the record; you can see. Smalls was pardoned. I do not know, nor is it material, whether he applied for a pardon or not. I do know that in very many cases men are pardoned whose guilt is not doubted.

Mr. LAIDLAW. Without their own request?
Mr. CRISP. There is nothing in that; nothing whatever. If I intended to go out into the realms of imagination and supposition, I might say that the governor who pardoned him recognized him as having been prior to that a leading man among his people. He was a bold, aggressive man, and he might have thought that it would bring an era of good feeling to pardon Smalls. This is mere supposition. The fact is that he pardoned him, but the fact must remain that in the minds of honorable and estimable men, no pardon could wipe from him the stain that is fixed by that verdict. Now, gentlemen—
Mr. CHEADLE. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. CRISP. Excuse me, please. Gentlemen say that after that he was commissioned to a high office by the Government. I suppose that somebody will refer to that, as they have a copy of the commission copied into the record; and this commission goes on like all such papers do-

Whereas, reposing special confidence and trust in you, you are hereby commissioned to the great office, etc., of captain of militia.

Now, it seems to me, that it is very plain how that happens. Under the law of South Carolina (I guess it is so in most of the States) a militia company can organize and elect their own officers. The election return is sent to the governor and he performs the perfunctory duty of sending out the commission, signing a blank which amounts to nothing more than that the individual has been elected by the lawful authority to fill that office. So much for that.

Well, now, gentlemen say that Smalls has been elected to Congress since his conviction. That is true.

But I will tell you what I claim, and I aver that the evidence in this case sustains. I claim that there has been a growing opposition to Smalls among his own people, in his own district, from the day he first came to Congress until now. If I were to go out of the record I might say that it culminated in his retiring from Congress, and not being renominated. There has been a growing opposition to him. These witnesses tell you why. Here is a witness by the name of Sawtelle. He comes from Maine. I do not count that anything against him. [Laughter.] He seems to be an honorable gentleman. There is nothing in the record that reflects upon him in any way, but the minority in their report assail him, as they do every witness whose testimony is not consistent with the theory with which they started into this case. They endeavor to brush a witness out of the way whenever they find that his evidence does not comport with their ideas of what the situation is down there.

Now, you know, Mr. Speaker, that is a very convenient way of disposing of a witness. When his testimony does not suit you or is not posing of a witness. When his testimony does not suit you or is not consistent with your ideas of what the case is you say he is a perjurer. This gentleman, Mr. Sawtelle, was the superintendent of the Beulo phosphate mine. He was born in the State of Maine and he has been eight years and six months in the State of South Carolina. He is a Republican in politics; he never voted a Democratic ticket in his life. His evidence is in the record. He says that he works from three hundred to five hundred hands; that at every election prior to this one those men were anxious to go and vote, and did so, all except a few, but that at this election, of the whole number, from three hundred to five hundred, only three, four, or five men went to vote. And he tells you the reason why they did not go. He says they were dissatisfied with Smalls; they did not want Smalls; they were not satisfied with the way he was nominated. Many of them thought that he was not a fit man to represent them.

fit man to represent them. Now my friends on the other side, you assume to be the natural guardians of the colored man, but I do hope, in the name of justice and truth, that you will not try to teach him that he has no right to bolt a nomination when a man is nominated who has been convicted of accepting a bribe in the Legislature. I hope you will not in-culcate that kind of an idea and seek to impress it upon the colored man. So far as I am concerned, it seems to me that those persons of that race, who, by reason of more general information than others possess, or by reason of any other circumstance, come to believe that such a man ought not to be supported, should be encouraged in that course. In encouraging them in that way, gentlemen, you are doing nothing to the real injury of your party. We should all try to encourage good morals and decency, and I protest against the idea that a colored man is untrue to his party or his race because he chooses to believe that a convict is not a proper person to send to Congress.

Mr. WEBER. Will my friend permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. CRISP. I will if it is right on this point.

Mr. WEBER. It is right on this point. Was Mr. Smalls the ca Was Mr. Smalls the candidate of the Republican party in 1888?

Mr. CRISP. No, sir.

Mr. WEBER. A Democrat was elected from that district in 1888,

Mr. CRISP. In this last election, yes. There was a Republican candidate, but it was not Smalls.

Mr. WEBER. Was the Republican candidate in this last election also a man who had been convicted of crime?

Mr. CRISP. I do not know, sir. I am endeavoring to try this case

Mr. WEBER. But you were trying to account for Smalls's alleged unpopularity by showing that he had been convicted of an offense.

Mr. CRISP. I am telling what this witness says. I am not a witness, and my friend from New York [Mr. Weber] is not a witness. Here is a man from Maine who is testifying. Now, certainly a man from Maine ought to be orthodox. [Laughter.] Maine has furnished a great many distinguished men to the Republican party. Our first Republican Vice-President came from Maine; a recent Republican candidate for the Presidency came from Maine. Maine has furnished a Speaker of this House, and it is not impossible may furnish the next Speaker of this House—I do not know. [Laughter.] At all events,

Mr. Speaker, it is nothing against this man that he comes from Maine. And he tells you that whereas at former elections the great body of his three hundred or five hundred hands were anxious to go to the polls and did go, only a very few of them voted at this election. And the reason he gives is because, first, they were dissatisfied with the manner of Smalls's nomination; secondly, that many of them were dissatisfied with Smalls's character.

Now, here is Thompson; he is a colored man who has been a leader of the Republicans since reconstruction. He was inspector of customs under the Republican collector and was turned out by his Democratic successor; he was county chairman in 1872; a member of the executive committee from 1872 to 1880; he was county chairman in this very election. He tells you he did not support Smalls because he was dissatisfied with the manner of his nomination; because Smalls was opposed to paying the freedmen the amount out of which they had been swindled by the failure of the Freedman's Bank; and because of his conviction for accepting a bribe. This man tells you that he is a representative Republican; and he says that many others took the same course that he did. I can not read all his testimony.

C. B. Smalls, another colored man, says:

The cause of the people being so much against General Smalls at that meeting was that a meeting prior to that one R. C. Browne, who was supporting W. J. Bowen, also a candidate for Congress, against General Smalls, called him, Smalls, a bribe-taker and convict felon.

Q. 8. Was Smalls present when R. C. Browne charged him with being a bribe-taker and convict felon?

A. He did not.

A. He was.

Q. 9. What did he say?

A. Smalls said, "By God, I have nothing more to live for; hear what he says.

I will kill him, and if I don't do it here, I will if he goes down on that train tonight."

Q. 10. Did he deny the charge?

A. He did not.

J. C. Mardenborough testifies. He is also a colored man, a graduate of Howard University, a lawyer; he was postmaster at Port Royal during Hayes's administration, and a most intelligent man. He testifies on page 605 as follows:

During the last campaign there was considerable opposition to Smalls in his own party, caused partly because they believed him unfit for Congress, and that he had been a member of Congress four or five times, and they do not hear of a single speech he has made or a single thing he has done for the people of the State or this district. But they opposed him principally because of his conviction for accepting a bribe. The people are becoming more enlightened, consequently more sensible. While many of the leaders of the Republican party assisted him in canvassing the district, some of them did not even mention his name in a speech, and did not even say that he was a candidate for office. Some, while they aided him in the canvass on election day, were entirely indifferent as to Smalls's election, and did nothing for him.

Now, there is a great deal more evidence of that sort. These men not only give you their opinion, but, like the man from Maine, they give you the substantive fact that whereas in prior elections the colored people generally have gone to the polls to vote for Republican candidates, at this election the majority of them staid at home. With such evidence at that, what becomes of the "colored majority" of which my friend speaks?

Now, Mr. Speaker, thanking the House for its indulgence thus far, I will refer to the last point in the case. I have already taken so much time that I feel some embarrassment in trespassing further upon the patience of the House. Mr. Speaker, this is a very voluminous record, and with the indulgence of the House I will proceed to the discussion of the last feature of the case; and that is the point made by the contestee against the contestant, the intimidation of colored voters of that district who desired to vote the Democratic ticket by the colored Republican politicians of the district.

I am aware of the fact that there are many people throughout this country, people unacquainted with the character of the colored men, who assume that they must always stand closely together in favor of the Republican party.

Now, I think I know something about them. I am perfectly free to say that the colored men who are active politicians are generally Republicans. But I will also say what may astonish many gentlemen on the other side of the House; that is, that the great mass of the colored people are not politicians. The great body of them, in fact, care nothing about politics, nothing whatever. When the right of suffrage was a new thing, of course there was a general desire on the part of the people of the colored race to exercise it. Now occasionally, when their assions or prejudices are aroused, they may be induced to come out to the polls to vote.

There is always an active body of politicians amongst them, but I say, Mr. Speaker, that the great mass of the colored people are not politicians in the sense that they keep up with the events transpiring in the country and come out at all elections and go to the polls for the purpose of voting. I can not go into the evidence as fully as I would like on this point without taking up another hour of the time of the House, and that I have promised not to do.

There have been a great many wrongful and violent acts committed by the Republican party in the State of South Carolina. I do not charge them all with the responsibility, but I do say, and the records of this House will demonstrate the truth of what I say, that when the Republicans had the ascendency in the Legislature and in the State, that amongst the office-holders were found some of the most unmitigated scoundrels ever foisted upon a noble and defenseless people. Their character and acts were not approved by the great masses of the Republican party. The people became restless and dissatisfied, taxation was high, discontent spread, and many of the colored people co-operated with the whites to get rid of the motley crew who were devastating the State.

Colored Democratic clubs were organized. That is a fact which it seems hard for some gentlemen to understand, and yet it is an undisputed fact that in this very district there were two colored Democratic clubs organized to vote for Elliott. Certain leading Republican politicians of that district thought, as our friends here seem to think, that the colored people politically were owned by the Republican party, and while they were granted freedom of body, freedom as to property, freewhile they were granten freedom of body, freedom as to property, freedom in the pursuit of happiness, yet when it came to voting they must vote with the Republican party. Those leaders in that district who so believed began a system of intimidation against the colored people who sought to exercise their right to vote as they pleased. I could read for hours the testimony of witnesses who establish this fact. I call your attention to the testimony of Mardenborough in the record. He was an intelligent man, he was hown in New York Citical and home. was an intelligent man; he was born in New York City, had been educated at Howard University, went down to South Carolina, was postmaster at Port Royal under the Hayes administration. He was an intelligent and educated man. You will find three pages of his testimony which go into detail and give the reasons why he did not support Smalls and the reason why others of his race did not support Smalls.

Are you, gentlemen, going to assume that a colored man like that is not honest when he says he and other colored men voted the Democratic ticket and gives the reason why; when he tells you the reason why he voted, and that many others would have voted the Democratic ticket but for fear of being whipped by other colored people?

There is no particle of evidence, or claim even, that any white man has attempted to intimidate or overawe any colored men in this district. There is no pretense any white Republican has done it. It is a case between colored Republicans and colored Democrats. The colored Republicans are in the majority and they overawe the minority, and in that way keep practically the colored people from voting as they want to vote.

Here is the testimony. I can not read it all. Many of the witnesses testify that the colored Republican leaders threatened in public speeches to drive from the island any colored men who voted the Democratic ticket. They invoked at the hands of the wives of colored Democrats such action as would result in driving them from their bed and board. They threatened them with expulsion from their churches. They threatened them with the treatment which Dr. White had received at the previous election.

I will show you how Dr. White was treated. Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Was he a Republican? Mr. CRISP. No.

Here is his testimony:

He is fifty-one years of age; attorney at law, trial justice; resides at Beaufort; in 1884 he was one of the managers of the Federal poll at Beaufort. When about to leave the polling place with the other managers after having canvassed the vote, was met by an infurated mob of colored persons, who violently assaulted him and threw him to the ground by kicks and blows. He got up and attempted to run up the steps of the building, pursued by the mob, who were crying out "Kill the damn Democrat:" finding the door locked, he ran down another flight of steps and appealed to Moses Frazier, constable, for protection. Frazier took him by the collar and got him into a lower room, followed by the crowd, threatening to kill him. Frazier had to bar the entrance by locking the door and standing at it to prevent the mob from getting in. The crowd then tried to get in at the windows. Witness's son and others finally came to his relief and he was taken home terribly bruised and bleeding, blood streaming from one side of his face down on his shoulder, and with a cut over his left eye. His wounds were dressed by a physician, and he carried his arm in a sling several weeks afterwards. The assaulting party was composed of men and women, the women armed with sticks of sugar-cane, and some of the men with sticks. Eleven persons were indicted and one of the parties put on trial, but there was a mistrial, the jury being mostly Republicans, and the Republican leaders espousing the cause of the accused. Among the witnesses for the defense were the contestant, Julius Washington, and T. J. Riddles, Republican State senator and representative. Here is his testimony:

There is testimony as to the feeling of colored Republicans in that county in regard to any colored man who expressed an intention to vote the Democratic ticket.

Here is the testimony of Chance Green. But the contestant claims that he is not to be believed. The minority of the committee have taken five or six of the pages out of contestant's brief, word for word, assailing this witness. In some matters this witness is discredited, in others he is sustained. Now, I shall eliminate him altogether from the case. I do not care to defend him, and I will leave him out of the case entirely and will not consider his testimony, and still I will ask you to decide this case in favor of the contestee on the testimony we shall submit.

Here is the testimony of Emanuel Haynes, who was threatened with a beating by some of the colored people because he testified in this

Before election the colored Democrats on Ladies' Island were treated shamefully by the Republicans. They were abused in public, and were threatened to be killed out because they were Democrats. Witness was threatened to be killed three or four times by Larry Green, cousin of Samuel Green, who fired off his pistol four times in witness's presence, and other times at his house repeatedly. At the polls the Democrats were told not to let 6 o'clock catch them there; and Larry Green fired off his pistol and said, "Look out, Democrats," Some Democrats have had to leave the island, and witness is constantly expecting trouble, and believes he will have to leave the island.

Witness gives the names of nine men, all colored, who promised to vote for contestee, but would not on account of threats. If the people had their free will contestee would have carried the poll.

All but five or six Democrats left the polls as soon as they voted.

Here is what Aaron Alston says:

Here is what Aaron Alston says:

Resided on Ladies' Island. Was a member of the Ladies' Island Democratic club, and was at the mass meeting at Beaufort. Describes pelting of the club with brickbats. During the campaign witness's life was threatened because he was a Democrat. He had charge of a Sabbath school, and was told that "No Democratic nigger shall teach our children." The school was broken up on this account. They threatened to kick the Democrats out of the church. There was a club of women organized to prevent Democrats out of the church. There was a club of women organized to prevent Democrats on the church. There was a club of women organized to prevent Democrats on the Democrats come in their houses. On election day James Green, brother of Samuel Green, tried to make a fuss with a Democrat named Devercaux, and witness had to drive Devercaux off in his buggy to prevent a row. They met a large crowd of women on the road at Samuel Green's house, armed with canes and sticks. Witness's horse was caught by the bridle and jerked about because he was driving a Democrat. Democrats were threatened during the day. Manymen who promised to vote the Democratic ticket were afraid to do so on account of threats, particularly of Samuel Green.

Here is the testimony of Pobert Houston:

Here is the testimony of Robert Houston:

Lives on Ladies' Island. Describes the disturbance of the meeting at Beaufort. Contestant and other Republican leaders said in their speeches that any man voting for contestee would have to leave Ladies' Island. Samuel Green told me I should not stay in the church. On election day there were a great many women on the road with sticks, threatening to mob the Democrats. Contestant told them in his speech to turn witness out of the church if he voted the Democratic ticket. Witness has been threatened with death, and had to stop digging phosphate rock because it kept him out at night. Republicans threatened to burn down the store of Tarquin Dilbert, a colored Democrat. Contestant collected $17 from the Ladies' Island church.

Here is the testimony of William Lockwood:

Lives on Ladies' Island. Attended a meeting held by Republicans on Ladies' Island day before the election; many women were there, all with sticks. They said they had them to kill Democratic dogs. Mr. Elliott was to speak on the island that day, and these women said he should not pass them. Contestant spoke at the meeting. Said that any woman married to a Democrat, she must kick him out of the house.

Here is the testimony of Tom Bonner:

Lives on Ladies' Island. During the campaign there were many threats by Republicans of killing and whipping Democrats. Jack Johnson, a prominent Republican and delegate to the convention, said the Republicans intended to carry the island or kill the last damn man on it. On election day the women behaved just like they intended to fight a battle, according to the clubs they had. They said they intended to kill out, whip out, and drive out the last man that voted the Democratic ticket. The Democrats left the polls early for fear of trouble of trouble

Here is the testimony of F. D. J. Lawrence:

Here is the testimony of F. D. J. Lawrence:

Resides at Beaufort; attorney at law; trial justice for Beaufort County; learned to read and write as a slave; was first sergeant Company E, Thirty-fourth United States Colored Troops; engaged in several battles; was wounded twice at the battle of Honey Hill; promoted quartermaster-ergeant; bonorably discharged from that regiment and enlisted in Fortieth United States Regulars; after leaving the Army taught school and studied law, and was admitted to the bar in South Carolina; have been a Democrat since 1876; attended several Republican meetings in Beaufort during last campaign; was cursed and ordered to leave, as no negro Democrat was allowed there; heard Thomas Reynolds, Republican State senator, tell the people to go to the polls armed, and to go knee-deep in blood, if necessary, to carry the election; heard Joseph Robinson, ex-representative, at another meeting, say "that the law allowed him to carry arms, and that he would go as far as any man to carry the county against the Democrats;" heard Robert Smalls, contestant, say in several public speeches in Beaufort "that any colored woman having a Democratte husband should put him out of the house," and that they could have his assistance in doing so.

Mr. Lawrence is a most intelligent colored man, formerly a slave, who enlisted in the cause of the Union, and shed his blood in defense of his country. This man is a Democrat. He says that the Democrats in that district, and particularly in Beaufort County, are not allowed to go up and express freely their choice at the polls; that it is danger-ous for them to do so. This man is a man of information and intelligence, a man of good character. He has demonstrated his character for bravery upon the battle-fields of the civil war. He is not afraid to express his views. But how many others, my friends, are afraid. How many colored people in that district are overawed by this state of Lawrence further says:

There is no such thing in Beaufort County as a free election and a fair count among the Republicans. I have been a Democrat in Charleston County for a number of years and voted unmolested; but I am told here in Beaufort County that this is a Republican county, and no nigger can vote here for the Democrats. I have a daughter, a young lady, who attends public school in the town of Beaufort, who has been abused more than once on account of her father being a Democrat. I had to stop her from the school until I saw the principal in reference to this matter. I complained to him by letter and have his reply; not only her, but my family, my wife, and myself have been ostracized in the church and socially, and felt the estrangement keenly, on account of my political views.

Q. What methods are usually resorted to by Republicans to keep colored men from voting the Democratic ticket?

A. They usually adopt a bulldozing system among the leaders, teaching them to abuse and make remarks and threats generally.

Q. Do tney carry this system into the churches?

A. Yes, into the churches and into the social circles. I am a member of the Baptist Church; my wife is a member of the Methodist Church. I have been abused from the Methodist pulpit by one Rev. Blakely on account of my politics and in consequence of this conduct I prevented my family from attending that church. From observation among the colored people from '76 down to the present I think they had their fear about voting the Democratic theke until after the election of General Hampton, but from the general benefit they received by the reduction of taxes under Democratic administration the better class of colored people are all Democrats, and would vote the Democratic ticket as a whole, except for the ostracism and threats from the Republican leaders. I have talked with them in regard to the exodus scheme, when Hampton was first elected, about going to Africa, saying to them it was all a scheme to make money by Republican leaders. A large number of them since that time are convinced, and told me that it was a bigger swindle than the Freedman's Bank, and are sorry that they sold their property and put their money in the "Azor." They say at the next Presidential election they will all vote the Democratic teker for President; that they see no difference, except that the Republican leaders taxed them, while under Democratic administration they have been free from taxation for campaign purposes. campaign purposes

Are you to denounce this man and men of like character as perjurers because his statement does not in every respect tally with your pre-conceived ideas as to the political situation in this district? Here is the testimony of Paris Sherman:

Resides on St. Helena Island; did not vote at the last election; went to the Congressional poll for the purpose of voting for Mr. Elliott for Congress; did not vote because there was such an uproar there; got him so frightened he did not stay; heard heap of threatening, and being old thought he had better get out of the way.

Here is the testimony of another colored man, A. B. Colonel, who says: Lives on St. Helena Island; served in the late war in Thirty-fourth Regiment Colored Troops, United States Army; during the last campaign Republicans of St. Helena Island made a great may threats against colored Democratis; that Republicans should club together and kill every one that voted the Democratic ticket; Cyrus Jenkins, Republican, threatened him; took up a stick at church and struck him two licks, because he advocated Colonel Elliott; the deacons threatened to turn Democrats out of the church; in consequence of these threats a great many were kept from voting Democratic ticket; thinks that the Democrats would have gotten about 300 votes at Brick Church.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on indefinitely. You will find much testimony all through this record showing intimidation of colored people who desired to vote the Democratic ticket. You will also find evidence all through it that the contestant, Smalls, did all he could to engender and spread the feeling that prompted this intimidation.

You find the preachers doing the same thing. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not know what gentlemen may think of the evidence that I have cited, but I say to them that so far as my observation extends that in no country where there is an election by the people can an elec-tion of this character be allowed to stand. Why, in Canada I can cite you to a case, and I will perhaps insert it in my remarks, where the court distinctly held that a member who was elected to Parliament was not entitled to retain his seat because the ministers of the Catholic Church from their pulpits fulminated against his opponent. court decided that the election ought not to stand; that the kind of election that the law contemplated was one where the voter could and did without any undue influence, without fear of bodily harm or harm to his character or reputation, go to the ballot-box and deposit his ballot for the candidate of his choice.

Beaufort County is the theater of most of this violence. Let me call your attention to a circumstance which will show you the feeling in that county against Smalls. That is the county in which he resides. By the records of this House, in 1876 in Beaufort County Smalls received 5,385 majority. In 1886, ten years later, by the records in this case, giving him the precinct that he claims ought to be counted for him, and giving to him every vote that he claims, he had a majority of 1,456. In the record his receivity has following the country of his records. of 1,456. In ten years his majority has fallen in the county of his residence from 5,385 to 1,456. Will gentlemen who undertake to speculate and the color of the idence from 5,385 to 1,456. Will gentiemen who undertake to speculate and theorize about this case explain that to me? There is not any evidence, there is no intimation that any white man sought to intimidate the colored men in this district. There is no intimation that in this county there was any manipulation of the vote. There is a claim of the rejection of one box, but even by giving him that box this falling off is not explained. How do you explain it? Come with me to the record and I will tell you how.

The people were dissatisfied with him. Every man in the district had knowledge of the fact that he had been convicted of bribery for his course while in the senate of South Carolina. He was opposed to the payment to the colored people of the amount of money that they had in the Freedman's Bank at the time of its failure. This is all in These things will tell you why his majority has fallen off.

Then look to the evidence of these intelligent colored men, graduates of universities, members of the bar, ex-Union soldiers, men who had shed their blood on the battle-field in defense of their convictions of right—these men tell you they were Democrats, and that they urged the people to vote the Democratic ticket, and had for many years. Indeed, one of these men says that the great body of the colored men would vote the Democratic ticket but for the intimidation by the leaders, who use the churches, the preachers, the professional politicians like this contestant, and others, to overawe the people. Through these in-strumentalities they arouse the prejudices and excite the passions of their followers to such an extent that all those who vote the Democratic ticket are in danger, and many who want to vote it are prevented from

This state of things can not be tolerated. The colored men are beginning to reason for themselves. The day has passed when the colored prople of this country will go up like senseless machines and record their vote as they are told to do by people who live a long way from them and who have no actual interest in them at all. The day is coming when they feel that they are identified with the people with whom they live; the people who, in every hour of trial, are their friends; the people to whom they always appeal in distress, and to whom they never appeal in vain. As they become more intelligent, as one of the witnesses expresses it, "they realize the impropriety of being represented by men like Smalls." They realize that they are entitled to a better representative, and while I thoroughly concede to any constituency the right to send such a man here, I do protest against this House interfering with the right of any constituency to defeat such men whenever they feel inclined to do it.

Mr. Speaker, the committee recommend the exclusion of certain polls in Beaufort County. As to every one of them we have shown you such threats, such intimidation, such violence as prevented a full, fair, and free expression of the will of the people. We have shown you that prior to the election the great work of intimidation was done. The minority of the committee cite certain evidence to show that on election day there was no violence. I have shown you that in many places there was violence on election day; but, Mr. Speaker, before election day there was violence. It is immaterial whether the violence was on election day or before it. The day of election might have been as peaceable as a cemetery, and yet it might have been that the people were overawed and afraid to go to the polls. Shall we be told that because on the very day of election there did not appear to be great violence, therefore no intimidation existed. I will show you in the record that this contestant himself cautioned the people against violence on election day, saying, in substance, "On the day of election you must not be violent, because if you do it will avoid the election." I have shown you that, coming right down to the very day of election, these threats were made in the churches and in public speeches, upon the highways, in the schools, and everywhere.

Therefore, sir, we recommend the exclusion of certain precincts. If in any case before a legislative body there exists the right to reject a poll for intimidation, my friends, you have here that case. Gentlemen may examine it and the more they examine it the more clearly that will appear. Let them examine it, not a detail here and a detail there, but the whole case. Take the whole case as you would if you were conscientiously trying it as a juror or a judge and I defy any fair-minded man to come to any other conclusion than that in Beaufort County, the home of the contestant, which was the banner Republican county of the State, there had been growing dissatisfaction from 1876 down to 1886, which resulted in keeping vast numbers of the people away from the polls who, if free to exercise their own will, would have gone to the polls and voted for contestee.

In 1876, in the case of Tillman against Smalls, you will find in this same county lawlessness, intimidation, violence, practiced by this same contestant. My God, Mr. Speaker, is this to go on forever? Are the people in that district in South Carolina who desire to freely cast their votes for the candidates of their choice—are they to be intimidated I hope not. I hope gentlemen will read the evidence, and if forever? they do, Mr. Speaker, I unhesitatingly say that I believe they will come to the conclusion which the majority of the committee have been compelled to arrive at, that the ends of truth, that the ends of justice, that the protection of the voter, and the purity of the ballot-box, alike demand a rejection of these polls in the county of Beaufort and the retention of the sitting member in his seat. [Prolonged applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Rowell was recognized.

CONTESTED ELECTION, SECOND DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I ask the gentleman from Illinois to yield tome to make a request of the House. I desire to offer a resolution which I ask to have printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Elections

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROWELL. I do, for the gentleman to make his request.
Mr. GROSVENOR. I desire to offer the resolution which I hold in my hand, and to request that it be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Elections. It relates to the contest of the seat of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Breckinbidge], and the disposition to be made of the resolution has been agreed upon.

There was no objection.

The resolution is as follows:

The resolution is as follows:

Whereas at the November election, A. D. 1888, for a member of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-first Congress, for the Second Congressional district of the State of Arkansas, held on the 6th day of November, A. D. 1888, Hon. CLIFTON R. BERCKINELDGE and Hon. John M. Clayton were candidates, respectively, for the office of Representative aforesaid, and each received a large number of votes; and such proceedings were had at said election and in and about canvassing the votes cast thereat, and making return of the same as that the said BEECKINELDGE was declared elected, and thereafter a certificate of such election was by the governor of said State duly issued to him, and the same was filed with the Clerk of this House, and that official has placed the name of said BEECKINELDGE upon the roll of members elected to the House of Representatives of the Fifty-first Congress, and without other and further action his name will be called upon the organization of said House, and he will vote at the said organization; and

Whereas said John M. Clayton claimed that the said CLIFTON R. BRECKINELDGE was not legally elected to said office, and did not receive a majority of the votes cast at said election, but that on the contrary he, the said John M. Clayton, did receive a great majority of the lawful votes cast at said election, was duly elected thereto, and was entitled to the certificate thereof; and said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notice that he, said Clayton did proceed according to law to file and serve notic ton, would contest the right of said BRECKINRIDGE to said seat in said House, and such proceedings were had upon said contest as that on the 29th day of January, A. D. 1889, said contest was duly pending and testimony was being taken by said Clayton to establish the allegations of his said notice of contest, and said Clayton, while at the town of Plummerville, in said district and State, lawfully engaged in taking testimony as aforesaid, and while personally supervising said work, was by some person or persons assassinated; and there is doubt as to the legal effect upon the contest aforesaid which the death of said Clayton willhave; and

Whereas there is no one legally authorized to proceed to complete the taking of the testimony in said contest, or to otherwise prepare said contest for hearing and proper decision, and there are questions arising upon and in relation to said contest difficult to determine: Therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of five members of this House, and who are now members of the Committee on Elections, and who are elected to the Fifty-first Congress, be appointed by the Speaker, and that such committee that proceed without delay to take testimony touching the issues joined in said contest and the notices and pleadings therein, and ascertain all the facts relating to said election and the said contest, and report the same to the House of Representatives the first day of the first session thereof, or as soon thereafter as the same may be completed and ready for submission; and said committee is, for the purposes of this resolution, authorized to send for persons and papers, to issue process under the hand of the chairman, or of any two members of said committee, for the arrest and production before said committee at any place of persons knowing, or believed to know, anything of or pertinent to said contest; and said committee may employ one or more stenographers and such other assistance as may be necessary, and the costs, fees, and expenses incident to such proceedings shall be paid ou

SOUTH CAROLINA CONTESTED ELECTION-SMALLS VS. ELLITOT.

Mr. ROWELL withholds his remarks for revision. [See Appendix.] The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DOCKERY). The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rowell] has occupied an hour and forty-two minutes.

Mr. CRISP. I do not know what may be the disposition of the House as to having an evening session for the consideration of this case. I wish to say that of course my announcement as to calling the previous question at 2 o'clock to-morrow is not to be understood as being now at all reflective of my intention. When I made that announcement I at an reflective of my intention. When I made that announcement I did not know it was going to take so long on my own part and on the part of my friend from Illinois to discuss the various questions involved in this case. I should like to have a vote as soon as consistent with a satisfactory debate. I wish to consult the feeling of the House as to an evening session.

Mr. ROWELL. I hope not. It will only give gentlemen an opportunity to speak to empty benches. In a case of this kind all ought to be present.

Mr. CRISP. Then I shall move to adjourn.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced the passage, with amendments, of the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes; that it requested a conference on the disagreeing votes, and had appointed Mr. VEST, Mr. EVARTS, and Mr. WILSON of Iowa as conferees on its part.

DIRECT TAX.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. CASWELL, Mr. SENEY, and Mr. OATES as conferees on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (S. 139) to credit and pay to the several States and Territories, and to the District of Columbia, moneys collected under the direct-tax act of Congress approved August 5, 1861.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

Mr. BLAIR. I present a petition in the form of a letter addressed to me, signed by Samuel Gompers, the president of the American Federation of Labor, stating that-

It affords me sincere pleasure to inform you that pursuant to a resolution of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor the bill you introduced in the United States Senate, No. 3670—

Which is a bill to organize bureaus of information relating to employment, occupations, wants, means of livelihood, and homes meets with our hearty approval and indorsement.

In my letter of January 4 I took occasion to express my opinion upon the merits of the bill in question, and I now officially indorse all I then said.

The expression of opinion in a former letter to which Mr. Gompers refers is as follows:

To me the bill referred to is probably the most comprehensive it has ever been my pleasure to read, and if enacted into law would be of the greatest benefit not only to the working people, but to every inhabitant of our country.

I move that the petition, with the accompanying paper, be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

A bill (H. R. 10791) granting a pension to Marinda Wakefield Reed; A bill (H. R. 10474) granting a pension to Dorcus Alford; A bill (H. R. 11586) for the relief of Stephen Williams;

A bill (H. R. 11993) granting a pension to Mary A. Long; and A bill (H. R. 10301) for the relief of Emily Cross.

ANIMAL INDUSTRY BUREAU REPORTS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back a Senate concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the year 1887. This concurrent resolution went to the House of Representatives and was there amended. I report it back from the Committee on Printing, suggesting its adoption with certain amendments which I send to the desk, and I ask that it may be now

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. A concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the year 1887.

Mr. MANDERSON. The report will show the proposed amend-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring therein), That there be printed 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the year 1837, of which 13,000 copies shall be for the use of the members of the Senate, 27,000 copies for the use of the members of the House of Representatives, and 10,000 copies for the use of the Commissioner of Agriculture, the illustrations to be executed under the supervision of the Public Printer in accordance with the directions of the Joint Committee on Printing, the work to be subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Agriculture.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments of the House will be stated.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, October 16, 1888.

Resolved. That the foregoing concurrent resolution of the Senate do pass with the following amendments:
On page 1, lines 1 and 2, strike out:
"Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring therein)."

"Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring the senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled."

On page I, line 13, after "Agriculture," insert:
"And that there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $27,330, or so much thereof as may be necessary for that purpose."

Change the concurrent resolution to a joint resolution, and give it the following title: "Joint resolution authorizing the printing of 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the year 1887."

The Senator from Nebraska, from

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska, from the Committee on Printing, recommends that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House of Representatives with an amendment which will now be stated.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

That the Senate agree to the first amendment of the House of Representa-

A joint resolution authorizing the printing of 50,000 copies of the fourth and fifth annual reports of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the years 1887 and 1888,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments proposed by the committee will be agreed to, if there be no objection; and the resolu-tion, having been changed to the form of a joint resolution, will be considered, read the first and second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole, and the proposed amendments agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. HARRY ADAMS.

Mr. HARRIS. I am instructed by the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11779) for the relief of J. Harry Adams, to report it favorably without amendment; and I will ask unanimous consent of the Senate to consider it at this time, with the declaration that if it takes two minutes I shall withdraw the request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? It will be read at length for information.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to J. Harry Adams, of Davidson County, Tennessee, the sum of $188.10, the said sum being the amount in full compensation for certain internal-revenue stamps bought and paid for by said J. Harry Adams, to be affixed to certain packages of spirits, which packages were destroyed by fire in a Government bonded warehouse before the stamps were affixed thereto.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORT OF COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Mr. MANDERSON. There came to the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the regular report of the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the year 1888. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report a concurrent resolution with reference to that matter, and ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 5,000 additional copies of the report of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1828, together with the usual necessary progress sketches and illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for the use of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to. BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. COKE introduced a bill (S. 3956) to amend section 2579 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. GIBSON introduced a bill (S. 3957) for the relief of Varina B.

Gaither; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3958) for the relief of Charles Carpenter, administrator of Celia A. Grove, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, introduced a bill (S. 3959) authorizing the settlement of the debt due the United States by the State of Arkansas; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO BILL.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. FAR-WELL] had previously asked for the consideration of a bill the title of which will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3112) for the relief of Phineas T. Richardson

Mr. HALE. I desire to go on with the business that was unfinished when the Senate adjourned yesterday.

Mr. FARWELL. This will not take two minutes.

Mr. HALE. I will not object if it gives rise to no debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length for information, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Phineas T. Richardson, the pay and emoluments of a second lieutenant from the 14th day of July, 1863, to the 27th day of September, 1863, less the amount paid him as commissary-sergeant between July 14 and July 29, 1863, the having been commissioned by the governor of Illinois as second lieutenant of Company I, Ninety-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and having in good faith served as such for the time mentioned, upon the order of his colonel.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

OLD SETTLERS OR WESTERN CHEROKEES.

Mr. DAWES. Now I ask the Senator from Maine to yield to me. Mr. HALE. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts if his bill will not lead to debate.

Mr. DAWES. I ask that the pending business may be informally laid aside while the Senate considers House bill 1407, Order of Business

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1407) to authorize the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render final judgment upon the claim of the Old Settler or Western Cherokee Indians.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES F. SWAIN.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask the Senate to take up House bill 6404. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. HALE. I yield if the bill occasions no debate.
Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Maine agrees to yield to me to call up the bill with the understanding that if it causes debate I shall not press it.

Mr. HALE.

Mr. HALE. I yield. Mr. SPOONER. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 2529, House bill 6404.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6404) for the relief of Charles F. Swain, master of bark Philena. It provides for the payment to Charles F. Swain, late master of the bark Philena, of New York, $8,000, for going with that bark after and rescuing shipwrecked seamen from an uninhabited island near Cape Horn, at the request of Gorham Parks, then United States consul at Rio de Janeiro, the same having been declared due Swain by recent findings of the Court of Claims.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT LOWELL MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. MANDERSON. I have asked the Senator from Maine to yield to me for a moment, and I understand that he agrees so to do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Nebraska? If not, the pending amendment to the naval appropriation bill will be reported.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask the Senator from Maine to yield to me for a moment while I ask consent to call up a bill which will lead to no debate. It is Order of Business 2240, House bill 3060. Mr. HALE. I will yield if it does not cause debate.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3069) granting right of way to the Pima Land and Water Company across Fort Lowell military reservation, in Arizona, and for other purposes.

Mr. PLATT. I am not going to object to this bill, principally because I do not know very much about it; but I want to say that I am opposed to the giving to any corporation or individual in the Territories the right of water for irrigating purposes. I think all that matter ought to be controlled by the Government; and the little attention which I have been able to pay to the matter of irrigation convinces me that unless we have some general system by which arid lands are to be irrigated and by which the Government, the Territory, or the State is to manage the disposition of the water, agriculture under irrigation will be a failure.

The history of irrigation in other countries, I think, fully demonstrates that. Wherever the water has been controlled by individuals and by corporations, there the persons who have engaged in agriculture by irrigation have done it without profit, the profit having all gone to the parties who controlled the water. I think that there is no question which more deserves the attention of Congress, and as to which there should be some general and comprehensive plan, than this system of irrigation.

I know nothing about this bill except from hearing it read, but, as it seems to me, it proposes to open a United States reservation to some private corporation that is engaged in controlling water for irrigation purposes in the Territory of Arizona. It may be all right, but I want to enter just this little disclaimer in case it should not be.

Mr. MANDERSON. I think I can relieve the objection of the Senator from Connecticut by stating to him that this is mainly to supply the city of Tucson, the capital of the Territory, with water. The bill is the usual provision for the purpose of supplying a town with water.

Mr. PLATT. And has no reference to irrigation purposes?

Mr. MANDERSON. And an incident of it will probably be for the purpose of irrigation. It is recommended by the Secretary of War and the General of the Army, and has received the unanimous report and recommendation of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. VEST. As I understand the status of existing legislation in regard to irrigating ditches in the Territories, there is a general law now upon the statute-book which authorizes the construction of these ditches across the public domain, but this is a military reservation and that law does not apply to it, and for that reason a special act in this instance is necessary.

I know nothing about this proposed bill—

Mr. MANDERSON. That general act will not permit any company to pass over the lands of a military reservation.

Mr. VEST. That is exactly what I stated.

Mr. MANDERSON. This is simply to give the right of way over a military reservation.

Mr. VEST. That is exactly what I stated, that the existing law does not apply to the case of a military reservation, and therefore a special act in this instance is necessary.

I know nothing about the parties, but as to what the Senator from Connecticut has said in regard to a general system by the Government I think, with all sort of respect to his opinion, that that is simply impossible. I think that Congress can never be induced to pass any legislation to put the whole subject of irrigation in the Territories under the control of the General Government.

We must rely in the very nature of things upon corporations, because any man acquainted with the Western country knows that the construction of these ditches is accompanied with great expense, so great that no individual and no five or eight or ten individuals could irrigate a large extent of country out of their own means. The men who are settled in the West are generally men with small means, who have gone there to make homes, and who settled under the homestead law where it was practicable, and they must rely upon capital, which expects a reasonable compensation for its investment, and unless these corporations are encouraged in irrigating the country it will not be

I make these statements from personal experience and observation. No general system will ever come in the life of the Senator from Connecticut or myself, and I take it that this bill simply proposes to do what is absolutely necessary in that country to enable capitalists to make investments for the purpose of irrigating a large extent of country, relying upon the payment made for the use of the water by individuals to give them a proper interest upon the investment.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President—

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the vote may be taken upon the bill, or else I shall be called upon to withdraw it.

Mr. STEWART. I ask simply to be allowed to say a word in explanation.

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not think I have the right if it is to lead to debate. My understanding with the Senator from Maine was that if there was to be debate, I should withdraw the bill, and I am bound in honor to do that.

Mr. STEWART. I ask leave to make a word of explanation. familiar with that locality, and the people of Tucson have been laboring under great difficulties in getting water for the purposes of the town, and for irrigating about there, in consequence of there being a military reservation on the stream right above them, and in this particular instance—I know nothing about the company—it seems to me very proper that they should have the right to cross that reservation.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate now take up the naval appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. CHANDLER, on page 40, line 23, to strike out the following words:

Of the type and to be constructed according to plans and specifications to be furnished to the Navy Department by Hon. John R. Thomas, of Illinois, to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] yesterday pointed out the peculiar conditions of this dynamite cruiser, and they were exhibited in the description contained in the paper inserted in the RECORD by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM], and the Senator from Connecticut showed that there was nothing new in the various features which the designer of this ship, said to be Mr. THOMAS, was endeavoring to bring together in one ship.

I desire this morning to call attention to the fact that there is no novelty in the idea of submerging a naval vessel when she goes into action. The statement submitted by the Senator from Illinois contains this description of that feature of Mr. Thomas's supposed plan:

In order that the target presented to an enemy may be as small as possible, ballast tanks have been provided capable of holding enough water to lessen the cruising freeboard 3 feet, so that the hull target exposed, in still water, will be represented by a segment of a circle, using from zero at the water-line to 4 feet above at the center of the vessel.

This has been a much-discussed idea in connection with naval vessels for many years. Whether or not it has ever been carried into sucsels for many years. Whether or not it has ever been carried into successful operation I do not know, but twenty-seven years ago an effort was made to incorporate that idea in what was known as the Stevens battery, and I read from a report to Secretary Welles, dated "Navy-yard, Brooklyn, December 24, 1861," signed by S. H. Stringham, president of the board; William Inman, commodore; Thomas A. Dornin, captain United States Navy; Alban C. Stimers, chief engineer United States Navy." I read from the sixth head of this report:

tain United States Navy; Alban C. Stimers, chief engineer United States Navy." I read from the sixth head of this report:

6. The project of settling the vessel down 2 feet beyond her deep-load draught when preparing her for action, by admitting water from the sea to different compartments of the vessel, and, after the battle is over, elevating her again to the normal draught by pumping the water out, is so remarkable a departure from all previous naval practice that the board has given the subject considerable attention in its various bearings upon practical operations.

First, with regard to the compartments within the vessel which are to receive this water. The statement of Mr. Stevens upon this point is that 213 tons are to be admitted into tanks below 2-feet line. Now, these tanks are neither more nor less than the spaces between the floor timbers of the ship, or, in other words, the bilge, a part of the vessel that every prudent commander keeps as free from water as possible; but, aside from this, it is well known that the bilge water, of steamers especially, is constantly liable to choke the pumps on account of the débris contained in it, so much so that in all good steam-ships several different pumps are arranged to pump from the bilge, not so much with the expectation that they will all be required at once, as that some of them may certainly be in good pumping order.

The statement of Mr. Stevens further is, that 350 tons are to be put into the interstices of the coal. This we regard as highly impracticable. To say nothing of the impossibility of getting coal from the bunkers while they are full of water, the difficulty of again pumping the water out, filled as it would be with small particles and dust of the coal, entirely precludes, in our opinion, the use of that part of the ship for such a purpose. Mr. Stevens proposes to use a kind of pump for this purpose which, it would appear, has worked very well for similar purposes in civil engineering. Its application to vessels of war, however, is novel, a

I am not aware whether this feature of submergence in time of action was carried out in the construction of the Stevens battery. I do not know, even, what has become of the Stevens battery. Perhaps the Senator from New Jersey now here [Mr. Blodgert], or certainly the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. McPHERSON] if he were present, could tell what has become of the Stevens battery. I am quite sure, however, that that battery has never been made a practical war-ship, and I am also confident that the plan of submergence never has resulted in the construction of any useful war-vessel.

Mr. THOMAS, whose plans and specifications the Senate is now called upon to legislate into this bill and to put him and them upon the Navy Department, has, it seems, undertaken to include this, not a novel idea, with the other ideas which have been detailed by the Senator from Connecticut into a war-ship; and it is not clear whether or not Mr. THOMAS has himself done anything whatever in the making of plans and specifications for this vessel, or that he has any skill or ability which would enable him to make plans and specifications of this It is possible that this morning the Senator from Illinois will be able to inform the Senate how much of the designing of this ship which has already been accomplished has been in fact done by Mr. Thomas himself and how much of it has been done by officers of the Navy Department.

As I understand-I desire the Senator to correct me if I am wrong-Mr. THOMAS merely enumerated certain ideas as desiderata in a ship, and naval officers now in the employment of the Government have made all the designs, and plans, and specifications which have hitherto been used; and I say now, as I said yesterday, that if that be so and Congress is to recognize in the act authorizing this new cruiser any person or persons as the originators of this cruiser, it should recognize the men who have taken these ideas and have designed the ship.

Every naval vessel is a compromise, every naval vessel is the bringing together of things which are desired for a naval vessel. When the number of tons displacement of a ship is given, the problem is within a ship of that displacement to put as heavy and as powerful machinery as can be placed there consistently with the other uses of the ship, to put in a ship as heavy ordnance as possible, and to leave, all the time, space for stores and for the officers and the crew. That is what the de signing of a ship is, and the merit in designing a ship is getting within a given displacement of the vessel as many of the things desired in a naval vessel as can possibly be included within it; and the men who do that thing are the ones who are entitled to the credit of the design of the ship, and who, if the ship proves a failure, are to be condemned for the failure, and who, if the ship proves to be a success, are to be congratulated upon the success.

So, if Congress desires to undertake in advance to declare the designer of this vessel, it is in my judgment failing to carry out its wishes when it undertakes to name Mr. Thomas, a member of the House of Representatives, and a member of the Naval Committee of that body, instead of naming those naval architects, those naval constructors, those naval draughtsmen who as a matter of fact are doing this thing.

But, Mr. President, I recur to my original proposition, that the whole attempt is all wrong; that in legislating for the Army or for the Navy, in providing guns, in providing ships, we ought to indicate generally what we wish, and to leave to the heads of the Departments the responsibility of dealing with inventors, to leave to them the responsibility of deciding between their conflicting claims, and to decide for themselves what sort of ships they will build, and upon what plans and specifications they shall be constructed.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I have listened to this debate with some interest. I am not very well informed about the type of ship that seems to have been invented by Mr. Thomas, of the House of Representatives; but I do not think that is a very material question for me to understand in voting upon the question of the amendment of this clause in the appropriation bill.

The House of Representatives, through their Naval Committee, have determined that a certain type of ship which seems to have been suggested, if not invented, by Mr. THOMAS, of the House of Representatives, would be the proper thing for us to adopt experimentally, to say the would be the proper thing for us to adopt experimentally, to say the least, in the building up of our Navy.

They have complimented that gentleman, for I think it is a very high compliment to him indeed, by putting his name in the bill as the author really of the type of ship about which the bill speaks. I do not suppose that Mr. Thomas has any pretensions at all to being a skillful ship-builder, or that he could of himself probably furnish the specifications and plans upon which this type of vessel shall be constructed. I presume he does not pretend to do anything of that kind: but he is the presume he does not pretend to do anything of that kind; but he is the suggester of the type of ship, and it is very proper indeed, I think, that the Congress of the United States should recognize a matter of that kind, coming from whatever source it may, whether from a member of Congress or some person outside of these bodies.

I suggest that we can get rid of the difficulty which has been commented upon by the Senator from New Hampshire by a little transposition of the language so as to leave the compliment in the bill that is bestowed by the House upon Mr. Thomas, for I think it would be an ungracious thing to strike it out, and let that apply to the type of the ship. I would amend in this way: After the word "type," in line 23, let the clause read:

Of the type furnished by Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS-

And then proceed-

and to be constructed according to plans and specifications to be furnished to the Navy Department, to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy.

It seems to me that that would cover the whole thing, for Mr. THOMAS'S invention in the matter is certainly nothing more than, as was suggested yesterday, perhaps a combination of well-known principles in a new form or type. Knowing Mr. THOMAS as I do, and knowing his great labor in the matter of trying to promote the reconstruction of our Navy, I dislike very much to strike out a compliment the House have bestowed upon him. I have no doubt that he deserves it. He deserves it in reference to the type of the ship.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will allow me, I have here a clause that has been drawn after some conference, which I will suggest to the Senator from Alabama before moving an amendment. I agree with him that the language he has proposed is much better than that in the bill. Instead of putting the name of John R. Thomas, which of course is unprecedented in legislation, this clause has been framed:

Of the type approved and recommended by the naval board in their report to the Secretary of the Navy, and by him referred to and approved in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, dated January 9, 1889.

That is one of the documents which have been read here in support of the clause, and identifies it, as the Senator from Alabama will remember, in the same way that we identify types by referring to the reports of naval boards, which are public records on file, and no names are given. For instance, in this very bill there is a provision for a naval structure in the nature of a ram which is identified as being of the type approved by the naval board in their report dated so and so. If that should be agreed upon, with the language further suggested by the Senator, to be built on plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department, I can see that all objection to the form would be taken away. Whatever Senators might feel about the type itself, I think everybody would be willing to leave that with the Department.

Mr. MORGAN. I admit that the form presented by the Senator from Maine is better than the one I suggest as a form of legislation. It is only because of the fact that Mr. Thomas's name was put in the bill in the other House that I thought it was a little disagreeable for the Senate to strike it out.

Mr. HALE. The Senator will see that we get at it in the customary The document referred to is a document the occasion of which was this vessel invented or designed by Mr. THOMAS, submitted to the Secretary of the Navy, by him submitted to this board, and approved by them, so that the identification is complete.

Mr. MORGAN. If that appears to be satisfactory to the Senator from Illinois I will not press my amendment, but will allow that to come in as the best form.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator, then, will withdraw his amendment I will move, after the word "type," in line 23, to strike out down to and including the word "Illinois," in line 2, on the next page, and insert what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator from Maine will be stated. The amendment proposed by the

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "type," in line 23, on page 40, it is proposed to strike out the words:

And to be constructed according to plans and specifications to be furnished to the Navy Department by Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS, of Illinois.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

Approved and recommended by a naval board in their report to the Secretary of the Navy, and by him referred to and approved in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, dated January 9, 1889, and to be constructed according to plans and specifications furnished by the Navy Department.

So as to read:

Of the type approved and recommended by a naval board in their report to the Secretary of the Navy, and by him referred to and approved in his letter to the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, dated January 9, 1889, and to be constructed according to plans and specifications furnished by the Navy Department to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President-

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator let this amendment be adopted, and then the whole clause will be open'? I take it he does not object to it.

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection to that course.

Let the amendment be acted upon. Mr. HALE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine [Mr. Halk], to amend the clause of the bill which the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] moves to strike out.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire to strike out the part of the bill as amended.

Mr. GORMAN. I notice in the debate yesterday that the Senator from New Hampshire, in criticising the provision as it came to us from the House of Representatives, designating the plans furnished by Mr. THOMAS, of the other House, inquired of the Senator from Illinois whether he knew "that Mr. Thomas ever did anything except sit down with Capt. Robley D. Evans, or with some one of the highly educated and brilliant young assistant naval constructors that we have lately sent to the Naval College," etc., intimating in that statement that Mr. Thomas's plans were practically prepared by the naval offi-cers. I feel authorized to say—indeed, I know from the gentleman whose name has been used in this connection, Captain Evans, one of the brightest officers in the Navy, who, I think, for the past three years at least, has beenrelied upon to a greater extent than, or to as great an extent as, any officer connected with the Navy in the construction of vessels-that he had never heard of the plans; he had no connection with conceiving this ship; he had no relation whatever to the preparation of the plans or the specifications; and he absolutely knew nothing about them until the complete drawings and draughts were presented by Mr. THOMAS to him for his criticism.

I know the Senator from New Hampshire would not do Mr. Thomas or these officers any injustice. Mr. Evans, while perfectly competent and capable, does not claim any credit for it. He denies any knowledge of the original conception or of the draught or plans of the vessel. I desired to make this statement in justice to both these gentlemen.

Mr. CULLOM. As the amendment has been adopted, which I consented to myself, I do not care to say more than a word in behalf of Mr. THOMAS, whose name has figured in the debate, not by his seeking, or by that of anybody in the Senate except as we found the clause in the bill coming from the House of Representatives.

I simply desire to say that I am informed by Mr. THOMAS himself that whatever work he has done has been simply in the interest of what he believed the public good. He has given a great deal of labor to this subject and to this particular plan of vessel. He has no par-ticular ambition to be identified with it in name specially, but simply believes that the cruiser he invented is a good one, and that it ought to be built in the interest of the Government.

I desire to say further that the plans and specifications furnished by him were approved by the board of naval officers convened by the Secretary of the Navy, and during the investigation of the plans by the board he saw nothing of the board and had nothing to say to them whatever. I wish to say further that I have a private letter in my pocket which has been written since the debate yesterday, from persons who had something to do with the clerical work, giving the entire credit to Mr. THOMAS for the invention from beginning to end.

With these remarks, as the amendment has been adopted, I do not care to take up the time of the Senate any longer. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLEE] to strike out the clause as amended.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PLATT. What is the result of the vote?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The result of the vote is that the clause remains in the bill with the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine.

I so understand. That is right. Mr. HALE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are the bill as in Committee of the Whole? Are there further amendments to

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to call the attention of the Senator having charge of this bill to what I think must have been an inadvertence in the framing of the provisions which follow the description of the ship. The bill goes on to provide what horse-power the contractor shall guaranty. It says:

The contractor shall guaranty that the collective horse-power developed by the engines of said vessel shall equal 7,500 indicated horse-power, and that said vessel when completed and tested for speed, under conditions to be prescribed by the Navy Department, shall exhibit a maximum speed of not less than 17 knots per hour; and the contract for said vessel shall contain a further provision that for every quarter of knot of speed so exhibited above said guaranty of 17 knots the contractor shall receive a premium, over and above the contract price, of $50,000, and for every quarter-knot that said vessel falls of reaching said guarantied speed there shall be deducted from the contract price the sum of $50,000.

I will state the effect of that. The conditions recently prescribed by the Navy Department for testing a new vessel have been that there shall be trials over the measured mile, which, as the Senator well knows, are very different from the trial of a ship for four or six hours. The ship is carefully prepared for the trial. Her furnaces are filled with coal, she is speeded up, and then suddenly run backwards and forwards once or twice over the measured mile, and that is taken as the speed of the vessel. No matter how much the ship may have been damaged, no matter if the ship burns out the tubes of her boilers when this extraordinary trial is taking place, still the speed over the measured mile is recorded and the contractor's ship is accepted. That is the way the trial of these ships is made.

is provided here that if this ship on the trial test exceeds the rate of 17 knots an hour, because there is no provision that the ship shall run an hour—if she exceeds 17 knots an hour by a quarter of a knot the contractor shall get $50,000, and if she exceeds it by another quarter knot the contractor shall get another $50,000. This ship is to have 7,500 indicated horse-power. I am informed that the speed which that 7,500 horse-power will give the ship will be from 18} to 19 That is the speed which on this model or this type of vessels 7,500 indicated horse-power ought to give; and if the speed is attained which the horse-power will give, instead of paying for this ship $1,-500,000 we shall pay $1,900,000. There will be an increase of $400,000 given to the contractor for this ship if she goes 19 knots instead of going 17 knots an hour.

I can not believe that that was really intended, and therefore I propose as a more satisfactory method of giving a premium for increased speed that the premium shall be given for increased horse-power. On page 41 I move to strike out lines 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19 down to the words "the material," beginning in line 13 with the word "every," and to insert the words:

Increased horse-power above 7,500 the contractor shall receive suitable premiums.

So as to give the premium for increased horse-power and not for increased speed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 41, line 13, after the word "for," it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the word "dollars," in line 19, in the following words:

Every quarter of knot of speed so exhibited above said guaranty of 17 knots the contractor shall receive a premium, over and above the contract price, of $50,000, and for every quarter knot that said vessel fails of reaching said guarantied speed there shall be deducted from the contract price the sum of $50,000.

And to insert:

Increased horse-power above 7,500 the contrator shall receive suitable premiums.

So as to read:

And the contract for said vessel shall contain a further provision that for increased horse-power above 7,500 the contractor shall receive suitable premiums,

Mr. HALE. I am glad the Senator has called attention to this, but there is a better way to get at it. There never could have been and never was any intention, I presume, that these great additional bounties for increased speed should apply to an old rate of speed that is practically abandoned. What was attempted and sought in the bill, I take it, was to put upon it the provisions we put in for fast vessels last year, which are as follows:

The contracts for the construction of said cruisers shall contain provisions to the effect that the contractor guaranties that when completed and tested for speed, under conditions prescribed by the Navy Department, the vessels shall each exhibit a maximum speed of at least 19 knots per hour; and for every quarter knot of speed so exhibited above said guaranty the contractor shall receive a premium over and above the contract price of $50,000.

We provide here for a ship that by construction of horse-power is to be one of the fastest in the service, is to be a 19-knot ship, and instead of the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire it is much better and simpler to adapt this to the legislation we have already applied to other ships of the Navy by striking out "seventeen," in line 12, and insert "nineteen." I will move that as a substitute for the Senator's amendment unless he accepts it. I think he will see that this is better.

Mr. CHANDLER. I still think it is better to give increased premium for horse-power rather than for increased speed; but if the Senator will move that amendment I shall withdraw mine.

Mr. HALE. Nobody would object to the amendment that I offer,

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire is withdrawn, and the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine will be stated.

The CHIEF CLEEK. On page 41, line 12, it is proposed to strike out "seventeen" and insert "nineteen" before the word "knots;" so as to read:

Not less than 19 knots per hour.

Mr. GORMAN. I inquire of the Senator from Maine whether that would not probably interfere with the construction of the vessel. It is of peculiar construction, as I understand, and the question is whether it would be possible for it to get a speed of 19 knots.

Mr. HALE. I take it there is no doubt about it. If any ship of this sort can produce 19 knots an hour, this one, with the horse-power that is put upon her and her size, can. We have proved repeatedly, and it is the subject of great congratulation to ourselves, that we have got away from the old rates of prescribed speed. I was interested the other day in reading the report of the Rodgers board, seven years ago, which was the foundation of all that has been done in the building up of the Navy.

The most that that board required and sought to accomplish then was the building of fast ships at 14 knots an hour. We soon went be-yond that and struck for higher speed. We got into the domain of the 17-knot vessels and provided for those. But so great was the skill and ingenuity of our constructors, and so complete was their work, that we went beyond that, and for the last two years we have provided that ships of this kind and this size and this horse-power shall obtain 19 knots, with premiums above that rate, and the contractors are now going for additional premiums on the 19-knot ships. The Vesuvius has already performed the wonder of an experimental or trial trip in which she made over 21 knots, which is more than 23 miles. We have beaten the world in reference to speed.

I have no doubt that the intention here was to apply the law that was embodied last year on fast vessels for premiums over and above 19 knots, and that is why I have suggested the amendment.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator is doubtless aware that the premiums given in the case of the Charleston, Yorktown, Bennington, Concord, Petrel, and Newark are premiums for increased horse-power, and not for increased speed. Nevertheless, if the Senator prefers to give the premium for increased speed I shall not make any objection.

I repeat for the benefit of the Senator from Maryland that I understand this ship is a 3 030 ton ship. That is the activated displace stand this ship is a 3,030-ton ship. That is the estimated displacement; and if that be so, a 7,500 indicated horse-power will give 19 knots in this method of trial over the measured mile if the ship is well built.

There can be no doubt about that. Mr. HALE.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator from Maine that it is desirable to get away from the ancient limitation of speed in the construction of these new vessels for our Navy, but as the matter of speed is the result of the plan of construction, and the developed horse-power of the engines and the various matters that go into veloped horse-power of the engines and the various matters that go into the construction of a ship are points upon which expert naval con-structors must inform us, I take it that it would be very rash by this arbitrary amendment, fixing 19 knots instead of 17 knots an hour, to interfere presumably with what has been attained by the committee in the other House after careful consultation with those who are informed and expert in naval construction. I do not think that it is competent for us here in the Senate, and away from the sources of information which are open to a committee who are perfecting a bill, to say arbitrarily that 19 knots an hour for a given type of vessel is the minimum speed to be fixed, because we may by that very fixing of an arbitrary rate of speed interfere entirely with the conception of the vessel that has been authorized to be built.

While I should like to see the highest maximum speed attainable provided for, I should hesitate to indorse the amendment of the Senator from Maine unless it is founded upon information he has from naval constructors or others who are expert in naval architecture.

Mr. HALE. Let me make a suggestion to the Senator. that he has made this point, because in the past he and I have worked together in one direction, particularly upon a ship of this kind being brought before the Navy, and grave objections having been urged against it I do not think the Senator would desire upon this question of premium to go back for this ship and make a basis of speed that in constructing vessels we have long ago abandoned. The 17-knot limit, beyond which the great premium of $50,000 for a quarter of a knot was offered, which is $200,000 additional premium for an additional knot, is abandoned, and has been for the last two years, by the Navy Department. The investigation that the Senate committee made led us to believe from the testimony of contractors, talking with them, that they could make 19 knots an hour. We said to them, "How will you demonstrate that you can make 19 knots an hour?" They said, "Put it into the bill"—and the Senate put it into the bill—"not only that we shall make 19 knots an hour, but give us a premium for over 19 knots an hour, and you may put on a provision that we shall forfeit if we do not reach it." The Senate committee on this investigation established that rate. The contractors were willing to run the risk of 19 knots an hour, and they are now building ships upon that rate and expect to get a premium.

That is the reason why the Senate committee do not desire to go back to the old rate of 17 knots an hour and give enormous premiums when that rate is exceeded. It would be an invidious discrimination on this particular ship, of the horse-power and size that other contractors are building, where they agree to furnish 19 knots an hour, with a premium for increase and a penalty for decrease—it would be, I think the Senator will see, almost an absurdity now, on this ship, to go back to 17 knots an hour and give the benefit of this immense in-creased premium to a ship of which only 17 knots are demanded, when we are doing the same thing with other contractors and demanding 19

That is the reason why I moved this amendment in the interest of the projectors of this ship and in the interest of fair dealing with other contractors, so that it may not be said this is a special thing with special It is our duty to see to it that it is subjected to the same conditions that other contractors are taking, and taking gladly. That is why I say to the Senator from Maryland, I suggested, when the Senator from New Hampshire moved his amendment, that this would be a provision that I thought everybody would agree to.

Mr. GRAY. I do not think my friend from Maine gets the exact point of my objection to his amendment. It is that we have appropriated in this part of the bill for the construction of a vessel of a particular type described and made certain by the words of the description contained in the previous part of the paragraph, in the construction of which we must presume that all the elements of naval architecture and the results to be obtained from a particular style of architecture have been considered by the Naval Committee of the other House.

If it is prudent to provide by law that a vessel according to particular plans and specifications (and that is what we do undertake to pro- Senator from Colorado will be read.

vide for) shall be built, it is dangerous, I think, to depart, without more knowledge than we have, from those plans and specifications in the matter of the speed to be attained; for that is just as much an element of the construction of the ship as her beam or her length or the peculiarities that may obtain in regard to submerging her deflective armor, armament, and so on. If the bill had been in this regard referred, as I think it ought to have been, to the Naval Committee of the Senate, where testimony could have been heard or information obtained from naval architects, then we might have talked about it intelligently; but I do not think, with all deference to the general knowledge of the Senator from Maine in regard to matters of this kind, that we are yet informed by what he says sufficiently to take a step like this, which seems to me to be one in the dark.

Mr. HALE. I do not look upon it as proceeding in the dark. I know nothing about this ship, of which I have good hopes, but I feel entirely confident that there is nothing in her construction that forbids her attaining the same speed which other ships of like size and like horse-power attain. Of over 3,000 tons, to be built after whatever model may be approved by the Navy Department as a fast ship, with certain peculiarities about her in time of battle which do not in any way whatever touch speed, she could get to the place where she is to do her fighting as fast as any other ship of her size and horse-power; and the size and horse-power provided in this ship, not only now with us but in other navies which are patterning after us, give a ship of 19 knots. I should have grave objections to building this ship at all if I thought she could make but 17 knots. That would be going back, when in every bill we have acted upon heretofore we have gone forward, and we have attained the highest developed speed in the world because we have gone forward.

We have done this thing before. It is not an interference with the House, that has investigated this any more than we have, because this whole subject-matter has been practically for a year before gentlemen who are interested in and familiar with naval affairs. This very project came before the conference committee last year and was struck off.

It was then discussed and the models and plans looked at.

To repeat, if we have to go back to a 17-knot ship, and only a 17knot ship, then I do not want to build her. That is an argument against the whole project. If we are to build a ship which is to cost as much as a 19-knot ship costs, with the immense premiums which we give (and $50,000 for every quarter of a knot is a great premium), we ought to have a ship which is just as good as the Charleston, the San Francisco, and other ships that are to be built upon the basis of 19 knots. That rate we have already established, and it will discredit this ship and discredit the scheme on which it is built with the Navy Department, with any Secretary of the Navy who may manage the Navy in the future, if it comes to him as a special pet that is given premiums for a speed between 17 knots and 19 knots, when the other ships that we are building have penalties for a speed between 17 knots and 19 knots. The special friends of this measure ought not to launch it upon a new administration of the Department with that distinction, giving to this ship premiums between 17 knots and 19 knots when they have ships that are being built which involve penalties if they do not get up to 19 knots.

For that reason I should insist (or my interest in this vessel would be lost) that she should make the same speed that other ships of like class make, 19 knots an hour, and then get the big premium over and above; but if we go back of that and make this a pet measure and give these enormous premiums for a rate of speed above that which has been long ago abandoned as the maximum rate the whole project is discred-

I know the Senate does not want to do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANDERSON in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment striking out "17" and inserting "19" before the word "knots" in line 12.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Maine to the word "seventeen" in line 15 of the same paragraph, and inquires whether that should not also be made "nine-

Mr. HALE. That should be made to conform.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment will be made if there be no objection.

Mr. HALE. On page 25, at the end of line 4, I move to add:

And for the purpose of utilizing accumulated naval supplies the transfer is authorized, after requisition upon the Paymaster-General of the Navy, of any supplies belonging to one bureau and available for the use of another, without reimbursement therefor by the bureau receiving the supplies so transferred: Provided, That supplies obtained for a specific object and still needed therefor, and supplies bought within the fiscal year in which the requisition is made, and provisions, clothing, and small stores, shall not be subject to transfer without charge under the terms of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. TELLER. I offer an amendment to come in on page 43, after line 16.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the

The SECRETARY. On page 43, after line 16, it is proposed to add:

The Secretary. On page 43, after line 16, it is proposed to add:

That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to contract with the Hurst Reinforce Cartridge and Arms Company, a corporation under the laws of the State of New Jersey, for the manufacture of three or more rapid-fire, rapid-twist, 1-pounder breech-loading rifled guns, and an equal number of the same type of 3-pounder guns, and an equal number of the same type of 5-pounder guns, and such amount of ammunition for each of said guns as the Secretary of the Navy may designate; said ammunition to consist of the Hurst reinforce cartridge: Provided, That said guns shall not exceed in weight and length guns using similar weight of projectile now in use; and said guns using said cartridges shall, in addition to the usual test required by the United States Government, propel a projectile with a penetrating force 20 per cent, greater, by actual experiment, than the best guns using similar weight of projectile now in use in the United States service: And provided further, That said guns shall not be paid for and no expense shall accrue to the Government until by actual experiment, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, it shall be shown that said guns with said cartridges are capable of producing a penetrating force 20 per cent, greater than any guns firing same weight of projectile now in use in the United States service.

That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to contract with said company for one hundred or more stands of high-power small-arms, using said cartridges, of such caliber as he may designate, and on the same terms as above set forth: Provided, That before any money shall be paid for said guns the said Hurst Reinforce Cartridge and Arms Company shall convey to the United States Government the right to manufacture and use the said cartridges for and with the said guns.

That the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to carry out the provisions of this act, and the Treasurer of the United States is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to pay out the same, or such part thereof as may be required, upon the orders of the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. TELLER. The amendment I have offered is a copy of a bill reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs favorably, which now stands on the Calendar. For the purpose of showing that there is some merit in this amendment, I present a letter from the Commissioner of Patents, with a statement of the assistant examiner in charge, showing the application and the issuing of patents, or the proceedings to get patents, on the part of Mr. Hurst, who has transferred his right to this company. I also desire to present a letter from the chief examiner of the Patent Office, which I ask may be inserted without being

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letters will be inserted in the RECORD without reading, if there be no objection.

The letters referred to are as follows:

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE, February 6, 1889.

SIR: With respect to the request of Hon. H. M. Teller for information as to any applications for letters-patent which may have been filed in this office by General H. P. Hurst, and in compliance with your direction to report thereon, I respectfully submit the following:

The records of this division show that the following patents have been granted to General Hurst, or to himself and joint inventor:

H. P. Hurst, occlerating cartridge, No. 372753, November 8, 1887.

H. P. Hurst, shell, No. 372753, November 8, 1887.

J. R. Hawley and H. P. Hurst, projectile, No. 389413, August 28, 1888.

H. P. Hurst, accelerating cartridge, No. 390232, October 2, 1888.

H. P. Hurst, projectile, No. 391367, October 16, 1888,

Applications filed by General Hurst are now pending before the office, the subject-matter of the invention and the condition of each case being as hereinafter stated:

Wire-wound gun. The claims are all rejected, either upon formal objections or for lack of patentable novelty, in view of the state of the art. The gun, however, possesses several patentable features, and the proper presentation of these in the claims will result in the grant of a patent.

Recoil-operated fire-arm. The specific mechanism is in the main novel, and may be protected by properly-drawn claims. Those now in the case stand rejected, either for formal objections or because their subject-matter is anticipated by the references cited.

I am of the opinion that the Hurst system of arms and ammunition possesses many features new in themselves and peculiar to it: but, like all systems, it has of necessity taken to itself and assimilated other features, old in the art and common to other systems of arms and ammunition.

Respectfully submitted.

L. W. MAXSON, First Assistant Examiner, in Charge Division 22,

Hon. BENTON J. HALL, Commissioner of Patents,

Washington, D. C., February 9, 1889,

Sir: In answer to your favor of the 8th instant, and with the consent of the Commissioner of Patents, I note the following:

I am not aware of any inventor, in this or another country, who has individually patented shells, projectiles, salots, fuses, accelerating artridges, breech-loading ordnance (large and small caliber), breech-loading small-arms and light ordnance operated by the recoil of the explosive charge, and ordnance constructed on the wire-wound principle.

While this is true, certain persons have secured patents relating to arms and ammunition extending over a wide field of invention.

Of these, perhaps the most prominent was B. B. Hotehkiss, a citizen of the United States, resident at the time of his death at Paris, France.

Examples illustrating the diversity of his inventive faculty, though including but a small portion of his United States patents, are as follows:

Wire-wound gun, No. 259936, January 2, 1883.

Breech-loading ordnance, No. 270589, January 16, 1883.

Breech-loading ordnance, No. 270589, January 23, 1883.

Breech-loading ordnance, No. 381697, April 24, 1888.

Machine gun, No. 211849, February 21, 1882.

Breech-loading fre-arm, No. 98889, February 15, 1870.

Magazine fire-arm, No. 184255, November 14, 1876.

Submarine and torpedo boat, No. 278708, June 5, 1883.

These two examples, taken from the records of the Patent Office, are perhaps the best Illustration of the application of the inventive faculty, by a single individual, to a wide range of devices pertaining to arms and ammunition.

LOUIS W. MAXSON, United States Patent Office.

Hon. H. M. TELLER, United States Senate.

Mr. TELLER. The principal merit, as I understand, of this gun consists in the character of the cartridge that is used as well as in the character of the gun itself. The gun which has been made and put in use is a small gun carrying a very small bullet. The purpose, of course, is to enlarge it and see if a larger gun can not be made to do what the small gun has done in a very great degree. small gun has done in a very great degree.

I have been furnished with a statement of the character of the cartridge, which is a little better perhaps than I can make it, and I desire

The Hurst cartridge has an inner steel tube containing a small charge of powder which starts the bullet. Outside and around this tube there is a much larger charge of powder which is not ignited until the bullet is well under way along the bore of the gun. The small charge starts the projectile without recoil to the gun, and when the big charge is ignited the bullet is moving rapidly, thus keeping down the gas pressure in the cartridge chamber without great strain on the gun, for when the bullet is moving there is a constantly increasing gas chamber provided for the explosion of the large charge, which gives greatly increased velocity to the moving bullet with little recoil of the gun. The Hurst cartridge applied to the new small-bore Springfield rife, could use twice the amount of powder, of either quick or slow burning, than is used in the single-charge system of cartridges of the Government model with less powder pressure in the chamber than is attained by any of the high-power small-arms at home or abroad.

I have a report from Lieutentant Berry, of the United States Navy, which I desire may be inserted in the RECORD, and I need not take the trouble to read it. He gives an account of this gun and of the various guns after which it is modeled that are in use in various parts of the country. I desire that it may go in the RECORD for the benefit of the committee, which I understand has been considering this matter in another connection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The matter referred to will be inserted in the RECORD without reading, if there be no objection.

The memorandum referred to is as follows:

ORDNANCE OFFICE, NAVY-YARD,
Washington City, February 7, 1889.

Dear Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, and in reply inclose the desired information with the exception of comparative power of the Hurst and foreign guns. This I may be able to forward you.

The data relating to the Hurst gun are from my official report; the other information is from foreign professional journals.

Very respectfully,

A. G. BERRY, Lieutenant, United States Navy.

Hon. H. M. TELLER, United States Senate.

France has adopted the Lebel rifle—caliber, 0".315; length of projectile, 1".22; weight, about 232 grains; weight of cartridge (loaded), 452 grains; kind of charge, smokeless powder, its nature entirely unknown; projectile, hardened lead in a nickel jacket; muzzle velocity, 2,034 feet; magazine holds eight cartridges and is similar to the Winchester in this country.

England has the "Improved Lee," an American gun—caliber, 0".315; charge, anknown; have had great difficulty in getting right kind of powder. The "improved" part of the rifle consists of slight changes about the magazine.

Austria has the Mannlicher—caliber, 0".315; charge, 62 grains; projectile, 1".42, and weighs 244 grains; muzzle velocity, 1,738 feet; weight of loaded cartridge, 447 grains; magazine something like the Lee and holds five cartridges.

Portugal has the Kropatscheck—caliber, '0'.315; charge, of loose Rottweil powder (German); weighs 66 grains; projectile, 247 grains, copper covered. Germany, Italy, Denmark, and the other nations are still experimenting with the small-bore guns, and the American Lee is thought well of.

I have seen it stated lately that both Germany and Italy had adopted the Lee with a caliber of .315.

In Europe the weight of the charge for the small-bore caliber is about one-fourth the weight of the projectile, and the latter is in all instances compound—that is, hardened lead in a steel, nickel, or copper jacket.

Hurst system (.32 caliber American measure, .308 foreign). Various weights of charge and projectile were used. Among them are the following:

With a charge of 240 grains of powder and a steel projectile of 131 grains, length 1".07, the penetration was 1".15 of iron at an angle of 80 degrees.

With 240 grains of powder and 131 grains steel projectile, length 1".07, it penetrated 1½" of iron plates and 3" oak.

With 245 grains of powder and 258 grains steel projectile, length 1".07, it penetrated 1½" of iron plates and 3" oak.

With 245 grains of powder and 258 grains steel projectile, length 1".07, it penetrated 1½" of iron plates and 3" oak.

With 245 grains of powder and 258 grains steel projectile, length 1".07, it penetrated 1½" of iron plates and 3" oak.

The Hurst cartridge is loaded with two charges, 30 grains in the inner tube and the remainder in the annular space about it. I do not think the gun could stand a single charge of 240 grains, nor would any man have willingly fired it from the shoulder more than once.

In this system the charge is in some cases heavier than the projectile and lighter in others. Equal weights would not be far from right.

By a crude method of comparing the recoil with that of the Springfield rifle it was found to be about the same in each. The gun was fired repeatedly from the shoulder, with heavy charges, though I never did it. With improved powder better results carrying out th

Mr. TELLER. I have also the following data, which I desire to submit in brief, as to the experiments made with this gun:

Shot No. 31: Steel projectile, caliber .32; length, 1.25 inches; weight, 150 grains; inside powder charge, 30 grains, Hazard's No. 3; outside charge, 210; target, five wrought-fron plates, four of which were three-sixteenths of an inch each thick, and one three-eighths of an inch hick, sandwiched in between pine boards, each I inch thick. Penetrated all the iron plates and pine boards. Total penetration, 14 inches of iron and 5 inches of pine.

Shot No. 33: Steel projectile; length, 2 inches; weight, 258 grains; inside powder charge, 35; outside charge, 210 grains. Penetrated 40 inches of pine, and bent and upset on contact with an iron plate behind the wooden target. Lieutenant Berry estimates this shot had sufficient power to penetrate 50 inches of pine.

Shot No. 34: Steel projectile. Length, 1.07 inches; weight, 131 grains. Penetrated 1.15 inches into hammered iron. Angle of impact, 80 degrees.
The powder used in this test was the ordinary powder, known as Hazard's No. 3, ducking, yet the penetration is the highest ever recorded for the caliber of gun and weight of bullet.
With an improved powder the velocity and penetration of the Hurst bullet will be correspondingly greater.

I find in the Naval Intelligencer of June, 1888, the following reference to this cartridge:

The "Hurst cartridge" tried in a small-bore rifle (.32 caliber) has given some remarkable results. Some experiments with this ammunition have recently been made at the Washington navy-yard. The rifle used is of special construction. The bore is rifled with six grooves, having a uniform twist of one turn in 6 inches. A bullet weighing 131 grains, fired from this gun with a charge of 240 grains (30 grains interior and 210 grains exterior charge) penetrated .96 inch in a wrought-iron plate at a range of 33 feet, and when recovered was found to be practically undeformed.

I have here on my table a piece of iron with a bullet in it. [Exhibiting.] I also have what I regard as considerably more expressive of the power of this gun, a specimen where the bullet struck the steel at an angle of about fifteen or sixteen degrees. [Exhibiting.] I do not suppose that I shall exaggerate if I say that in no weapon that has been tried has there been such a remarkable penetration. I understand that at least one Senator connected with the Military Committee fired this gun from his shoulder, and Lieutenant Berry shows that the recoil is about the same as that of the Springfield rifle, with very much larger penetration.

It will also be seen by an examination of the character of the projectile used that the projectile in this gun is very much less than that used in the Springfield rifle, while its penetration is more than double. The danger range of this gun is more than double that of the Springfield rifle can carry a bullet with deadly effect, it is said, a mile and a half, this gun can do the same 3 miles. In every respect the gun is superior to any gun in use, I believe, by this Government or any other government at this time.

The gun has been examined and commented upon by various persons of intelligence who have looked at it, and everywhere it has been pro-nounced a wonder. A little examination of the character of guns in use, comparing the work of this gun with that of those guns, will show that it is very superior in character.

We have never in this country been quick to appreciate the advantages which our people have had in their inventive faculty with reference to guns; and all the valuable inventions of this kind, I believe, without exception, have gone abroad. Mr. Hotchkiss, who everybody understands invented a very valuable gun, I think, importuned our Government year after year, year in and year out, to furnish him some means of developing and demonstrating the value of his gun.

INDEBTEDNESS OF PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado will please suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by title.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 3401) to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862; also to amend an act approved July 2, 1864, and also an act approved May 7, 1878, both in amendment of said first-mentioned act; and to provide for a settlement of claims growing out of the issue of bonds to aid in the construction of certain of said railroads, and to secure to the United States the payment of all indebtedness of certain of the companies therein mentioned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the resolution of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] to recommit the bill to the select committee with instructions.

Mr. GORMAN. I call the attention of the Senator from Maine to the unfinished business. The Senator, I take it, wants to go on with the appropriation bill.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the bill be informally laid aside. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine asks that the unfinished business be informally laid aside, that the Senate may proceed with the consideration of the naval appropriation bill. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. Teller.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I was saying that Mr. Hotchkiss importuned Congress from time to time to furnish him the means of developing his gun, asking the Government to take some interest in it. Finally he went abroad and sold his patents. I believe that that is the case with all the inventors of this country. The Hotchkiss gun has been made in this country, but it has been by foreign people, I understand, while the patents are held abroad. The same may be true also of the quick-firing gun invented by Mr. Hiram Maxim, of New York. It is said that after having vainly endeavored to get the Government of the United States to use his gun he has recently sold his patent in England for $850,000. I do not know whether that is the sum, but I think it can not be questioned that the invention has gone abroad. The foreign governments stand ready at all times to take all these inventions and to purchase the right to use them to our exclusion.

One of the great merits of this gun is that it may be used with any kind of powder. Great efforts have been made by governments within the last five or ten years to discover some powder that would accomplish what this reinforce cartridge seems to have done. Our own Departments of the Government, the War Department and the Navy Department, have concurred in stating that up to the present time no powder has been discovered, so far as known, of real value in that respect. When a satisfactory test has been made with powder, the Departments have found that when the parties attempted to apply it, it was a different grade. The English experience in this matter, I understand, is that powder which to-day will accomplish one thing, in thirty days will not accomplish the same result because of some chemical change that they have not yet been able to discover. So if we can get such a gun in which we can use the ordinary powder, the powder in every-day use, we shall have accomplished what has not yet been accomplished outside.

I know, of course, that there have been guns of something like a similar character; that is to say, there was a gun with chambers in which the powder was placed and as the bullets passed out they were ignited. It was not very successful, so far as I understand. This is entirely different, because the power is in the cartridge and there is no danger of the bursting of the gun in this method.

There are a great many advantages in this gun of which I am not myself sufficiently familiar to speak, but it seems to me we ought to adopt some system of encouraging this improvement. A little money used in this way will bring out a perfect gun, if this is not already perfect, and yet I do not know that it would seem hardly possible to make a better gun than this Hurst gun, from all accounts.

I understand that two Senators, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WALTHALL] and the Senators, the Senator Roll Mississippi [Mt. WALTHALL] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], who are members of the Committee on Military Affairs, were present when the result was obtained, which I have before me, when the penetration was ninety-six one-hundredths of an inch. I do not know whether they were present when the projectile was forced into this iron at an angle of fifteen or sixteen degrees very nearly an inch. That result is much more remarkable from an engineering point than the one I have just presented.

Mr. WALTHALL. I was present when this experiment was made, with the result as shown by the piece of iron I hold in my hand, the ball being buried in it about an inch. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, was also present. While we were there we saw a ball from one of these was also present. While we've there we's was a ball hom one of these cartridges shot through forty plank each an inch thick.

Mr. HALE. Were the plank lying together?

Mr. WALTHALL. Yes, sir; they were lying together with a very slight interval between them. Then the best improved army gun with the best cartridge was tried, and that gun sent the ball through only thirteen of those plank. The Senator from Connecticut, the chairman of the committee, and myself were both present when these two exeriments were made in the presence of some officer of the Navy who had the matter in charge.

Mr. TELLER. Lieutenant Berry.

Mr. HARRIS. Of what metal is to

Of what metal is the ball?

Mr. HARRIS. Of what metal is the ball.

Mr. WALTHALL. Steel.

Mr. TELLER. It is steel. Nearly all of them are now made of steel. The comparison between the projectile used in the Hurst gun and that used in the ordinary gun of the Army, the Springfield rifle, can be seen, and everybody can see the advantage, even if the capacity of the gun was the same, in carrying the small projectile instead of carrying the large one. But when, as I stated before, the danger range is more than double in the Hurst gun than that of the Springfield, it can be readily seen that the Springfield gun could be with propriety thrown into the ocean and a liberal sum could be paid for these guns if we ever should need to use them in war.

It is believed by those who have examined this matter that this same system may be applied to large guns. There can be no reason, I think, to suppose that it can not be; and the pressure being thus distributed through the gun, and not forced, as it will be with powder that gives the impetus all at once, a lighter gun can be used to reach the same result than can be used with the ordinary system. All that we ask now is that the Government shall take some interest in it; that the Government shall not do as they have done with other inventors, send them abroad to develop their invention and then have the invention bought and kept there, but that the Government shall try an experiment of this kind.

I want to say a word as to my connection with the matter. very little about these guns. I am not on the Military Committee nor on the Naval Committee, and my days for using guns have passed. I have not handled a gun in years, and I know very little about arms. I know that the inventor of this gun is a young American of respectable character from the State of Mississippi. He is unable himself, as I understand, to develop this gun. He has shown great inventive genius, and, I believe, has developed a gun of the greatest possible value, if we want guns at all, and it does seem to me that the committee ought to consent that a small sum such as is required in this amendment-for $100,000 is a small sum for an experiment of this kind-should be put in this bill. I know it will perhaps be said that the committee are considering it on another bill, but it seems to me this is the proper bill to put it on, and then it might also be put on another bill.

Mr. WALTHALL. I ask the Senator if the bill which corresponds to the amendment offered by him has not been favorably reported by the Naval Committee?

Mr. TELLER. Yes; but I understand that they were considering some encouragement of this kind to inventors on what is called the Army bill. I will say, as I stated when I opened, that this amendment is an exact copy of a bill that has been reported favorably by the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. WALTHALL. I was not here when the Senator commenced his remarks and did not hear him make that statement.

Mr. TELLER. The bill might be passed here, but at this late hour it can not be expected that it would pass the other House and become a law at this session.

Now, I want to say another word. This young man has also in consideration and has applications for patents for another invention concerning arms, which is equally valuable in my opinion, it being a sort of automatic, self-firing gun—that is to say, the recoil throws out the cartridge and puts another in. Guns of that kind have been invented and are successfully in operation, I understand, in foreign countries; but this is upon a different principle, and he is encouraged by the Patent Office to believe that this is a different system and that he may get a patent. If the Government would encourage him by buying some of these guns, other inventions of the same valuable character might be made by him. We spend millions for warfare every year; our mili-tary expenditures are great, and yet to-day we have not a gun that is fit for any soldier to carry. That is the universal opinion of every-body who has given any thought to this subject.

I do not suppose anybody will deny that the old cumbersome Springfield rifle has been superseded in all parts of the world, and that if we ever should have a war we should be simply ridiculous in undertaking to go to war with those old guns.

Now, is it not the proper policy for us, while at peace, to develop a gun that shall be equal to any gun that has been developed in the world? We certainly are able to do it. The Senator from Maine said a few moments ago that we had developed the fastest steam-ship in the world, and I have no doubt that we can maintain our supremacy in that line, and if anybody finds one that will go faster than that we will find somebody who will invent one that will go still faster. We ought to invent the best gun in the world. We have made the best steel that has been made in the world, as I was told recently by a naval officer that the plates we were now receiving were superior to any that had ever been made in Europe, positively superior.

He gave me the exact difference between the plates made in this He gave me the exact difference between the plates made in this country and the plates made in Europe. I do not remember it, but the grade was high. We made that steel because we created a demand for it, because we said to the steel-makers of this country, "Give us a good class of steel and we will buy it." When you say to the inventors of this country, "If you will invent a gun more deadly than any gun ever made, you will find your Government ready to buy it," they will invent that kind of a gun. Say to them, "If you invent, we will not let you struggle on in your poverty "—for all inventors are poor; rich men rarely or never invent anything, they do not have the incentive. The men who have made the valuable inventions of the world are men who half of the time wanted bread. When poor men make these inventions, if we say to them "We will pay no money, but you may jossiwho half of the time wanted bread. When poor men make these inventions, if we say to them "We will pay no money, but you may to sibly find a market in Europe for your guns," they have not the financial ability to sustain themselves while inventing. So it is not a gift, it is not a charity, but it is giving a proper stimulus to these people.

I trust the committee will not raise a question of technicality upon this amendment, but will let it become a part of this bill, as I think the result will be satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. PLUMB withholds his remarks for revision. [See Appendix.]
Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I am glad the Senator from Kansas has called the attention of the Senate and of the country generally to the condition that we are in to-day as to our naval strength as one of the powers of the world and as to some of the reasons and causes which have produced the present condition. I did, as he stated, say to him a few days ago, when we were talking together about the Navy, that in five years, I think I said, rather than ten, we should have the best navy in the world. That is true. We are to all intents and purposes out of the woods as to the question of a proper, suitable, strong naval establishment. The legislation and the acts of administration in the last seven years have settled that. The progress at first was slow, but the foundations were well laid under the administration of the Navy Department, then conducted by the Senator from New Hampshire on my right [Mr. CHANDLER], and from that day to this no session of Congress has passed that something has not been done in the work of building up the Navy.

Under the administration of Secretary Chandler, commencing in 1881-'82, the former plan, to which the Senator from Kansas has referred, of spending large sums of money in repairing old wooden ships, was abandoned. The then Secretary of the Nav , in season and, as I sometimes thought, out of season, urged and enforced that upon Congress, and at last (not without contest here, as Senators will remember, and in the other Chamber) it was adopted as the rule of the Department that under limitations as to amounts of repairs no more money should be spent upon old wooden vessels, and from that day when an old wooden vessel came in to her wharf and it was found that to repair her would take 25 or 30 per cent. more than her value, she was, as she ought to have been, condemned.

The next step that was taken, or a step that was simultaneous with that, was laying the foundation for the const uction of a new navy under modern methods to meet modern and present exigencies. Under the work of the Naval Advisory Board appointed by the then Secretary of the Navy, the present Senator from New Hampshire, this whole subject was thoroughly gone over, and in the Forty-eighth Congress the Naval Committee of the Senate spent days and weeks in investigating this whole subject, taking the testimony of naval experts as to the class of vessels that could be most fittingly built to usher in this new work of building the American Navy. As a result of that investigation and the reports of the Naval Advisory Board, and the suggestions of the Secretary of the Navy, the first modern ships were built, the Dolphin, the Boston, the Atlanta, and the Chicago. The work was entered upon then and there. When the present Administration came in it found that work with these ships going on, under process of construction, with provision made for more ships.

I do not need to refer to the constant strain, the protracted difficulty that was met during those years in furnishing to the then administration money with which to rebuild the Navy. The House of Representatives threw itself constantly in the way of every project, and it was only by the hardest effort that meager appropriations were secured for this purpose; but during that time here and in the minority in the other branch the Republican party became committed, as one of the things that it should see was carried out, to the task of rebuilding the American Navy; and since the present Administration came into power, as the Senator from Kansas has well said, the Republican Senate never has in any way departed from that policy.

Senators upon the other side who have been specially interested in this subject will bear me out in saying that at no time in the last four years has the majority in this Chamber sought to put any hindrance or impediment in the work that the Secretary of the Navy was honestly and ably carrying forward of building new and suitable ships for our I have the satisfaction of recalling that every bill which has provided for building up and increasing the American Navy has been reported here as an addition to bills sent over from the other House until the last year, and even then an increase was made here.

So the Secretary of the Navy has been endowed with this power to go on as he has been going on, by the act of the majority, or I will say of this body, for all participate here; and much of the success that has characterized the administration of the present Secretary of the Navy, to which I am glad to bear testimony, has been owing to the hearty holding up of his hands that he has received from the majority of this body, opposed to him in politics.

The Secretary of the Navy has been careful in his methods. As the Senator from Kansas has said, he has encouraged American inventors, American enterprise, developed American skill, and out of it has constructed some of the best ships that are to-day to be found upon the waters of the globe. It will be seen in the course of the next five years that some new Secretary of the Navy, if he brings to that Department the ability and the integrity that the Senator from New Hampshire brought to it when he took the Department in 1882, and that the present Secretary of the Navy brought to it when he took the Department in 1885, will largely get the credit of what has gone before.

The Senator from New Hampshire, while at the head of this Department, was only able to launch two or three new ships, and the present Secretary of the Navy, with all the appropriations of money that have been placed in his hands, and with due vigilance on his part and with earnest effort to make available those appropriations, has only been able to launch six or seven of the new ships; while his successor, assuming, as I have said, that he will bring proper qualifications to that office, during the next four years, if he shall so long hold the reins in the Navy Department, will be able to launch fifteen or twenty, and it may be twenty-five or thirty of the finest sailing and armed and equipped ships on the waters of the globe. The next four or five years are to be the fruition of all that has been done before. Then is to be seen the result of this growth, not only in skill on the part of the American people, but of action in Congress in accord with that public sentiment.

But I say, as I said when I began. I am out of the woods for one on this question of a naval establishment. We are going to have, in five or six years from now, the very best Navy in the world, not in number of ships equaling Great Britain and France, and possibly some of the other great powers, but we shall have no refuse in our Navy. That Navy will be like a clean-limbed, thoroughly-equipped wrestler, with no impediment, with nothing to hinder it, with no old and useless ships; and, thanks to the policy that has been pursued, none of those vast, unwieldy, and monstrous structures which have consumed millions upon millions of the money of other powers, and which to-day naval officers and men dare not go upon the waters in for fear of the dangers that lie inherently in the construction of these ships. We shall have none of these, but we shall have a few of the best armored ships in the world, with the best of modern gunnery placed upon them, manned by American sailors, who have never met their equal in the history of naval wars, and in addition to that, sailing cruisers of types ranging from eight to ten hundred tons up to forty-five hundred and five thousand tons that will dart over the waters of the earth and pene trate into remote regions at a speed that no other power can attain, and in numbers, if we go on as we have been going on in the last four years, we shall equal any navy in the world with the exception, as I have said, of France and England, and possibly one or two other European powers. Already we have, including those provided for in this bill, in process of construction or in readiness for the new Secretary to take up and contract for and build, thirty-six first-class vessels. These are all new, with the exception of the turreted monitors, which came to us as a legacy from the years immediately succeeding the war. With that exception there are thirty-one new first-class modern-built armed ships, with modern machinery.

Mr. STEWART. If the Senator will allow me, I should like to ask him in that connection if the Committee on Naval Affairs have arrived at the conclusion that the menitor is not about as good a construction, as well calculated for war, and as good as any other ship, and whether they have thought of abandoning that kind of vessel?

Mr. HALE. There has been no conclusion on the part of the Navy to abandon the monitor. The monitor pattern of ship has passed through a varied experience in the investigations and experiments of naval authorities all over the world, and it has not been abandened, and I presume, for one, it will not be in our day.

Mr. STEWART. I have been reading articles by Commander Brice in regard to the monitors, and he contends, it seems to me, with great force, that they are superior in design to any of the modern ships, that we could have a speed and a safety in that kind of vessel that can not be attained by the large armored ships constructed in England and elsewhere. He satisfied me at least, not being very familiar with the subject, that the monitor should retain a place permanently amongst firstclass war-vessels.

Mr. HALE. Our Navy, as I have said, embraces almost every class of modern ship that has been tried, proved, and not found wanting by

There is one feature of naval warfare, that particularly applicable to harbor defense, which we have not yet investigated or gone into to any great extent and the present bill, which is now on the eve of passing, provides for the construction of one ram for harbor defense. I for one have great faith in that kind of naval structure. It is not expensive, but when accompanied with proper machinery, proper motive power, it will, in my judgment, be one of the most dangerous of the naval structures to any enemy that approaches our coast. The bill provides or the building of one of these in order that we may see what the ingenuity and wit of the Navy Department, in conjunction with the skill of American contractors, can make in the way of a ram for harbor defense. If she proves a failure or not completely satisfactory, then no more need be built; but I expect in the years to come to call upon the Senate to give appropriations in that direction as they have been giving liberally in other directions; and I hope and believe, not only now but hereafter, every year to add to the strength of this establishment, not by great, extravagant, lavish appropriations, but by reasonable and liberal appropriations properly directed, so that at the end of half a dozen years we shall, as said by the Senator from Kansas, have the finest

MEMORANDUM.

The Vesuvius was designed in the spring of 1886, to embody for naval use the development of the pneumatic dynamite gun, which had then been successfully tested up to a caliber of 10½ inches. Several of the more progressive officers of the Navy became convinced that if a battery of dynamite guns or tubes could be mounted and successfully operated on a small cruiser or large torpedo-boat a new and most formidable suxiliary of maval warfare would be the result. It was by no means expected that this new engine of destruction would supersede any of the accepted types of war-ships, but rather that it would form a new type or class, having a utility of its own, either acting independently or in consort with other types. In short, the idea of the dynamite-gun vessel was that of a torpedo-boat, to project its torpedoes through the air instead of through the water. The chief desideratum in such a vessel was at the outset decided to be the greatest speed that could possibly be attained. As the primary office of the boat was to be that of harbor defense, it was agreed that a very large part of the weight-carrying capacity must be given up to machinery and armament, the matter of coal endurance being held as of minor importance in view of the fact that the normal zone of operations would always be in close proximity to the base of supply. Still it was deemed advisable that the vessel should have sufficient coal-capacity to cross the Atlantic or reach any of the Atlantic ports of South America at a moderate speed—that is, say, 10 or 12 knots an hour.

These desiderata having been determined, the matter was laid before the shipbuilding firm of Cramp & Sons, who were invited to design a vessel that should be capable of steaming 19 knots an hour and to carry a main battery of three 104-inch dynamite guns. Such a design was produced by Cramp & Sons, and after thorough examination by the proper committees of Congress the Secretary was authorized by the act approved August 6, 1886, to contrac

The primary cause of these modifications and enlargements in power and dimensions was the desire of the contractors, shared by the Department, to arm the vessel with the 15-inch guns, the original design not affording space or carrying capacity for them. And, incidentally, it was desired to increase the coal capacity. Of course the cost of the vessel being limited by act of Congress to $350,000, no additional compensation could be offered by the Department for these enlargements and improvements, which were in consequence wholly at the expense of the contractors.

The vessel having been completed under these conditions, she was put on trial to test her speed. Two unsuccessful trials were had over a measured course in a shallow part of the Delaware, when the officers composing the trial board advised the Department that deeper water would be required to give the vessel a fair chance in view of the extraordinary speed called for by the contract. Such a course having been carefully measured and marked by fixed buoys near the Delaware Breakwater, in 17 or 18 fathoms water, by the officers of the United States ship Despatch, a third trial was run developing the remarkable result of 21.646 knots per hour, in a mean of two runs over the course, with and against tide.

This result having been reported to the Department by the trial board, consisting of Lieutenants Cowles, Schroeder, and Fisk, and Passed Assistant Engineer Habighurst, United States Navy, the vessel was accepted, so far as speed was concerned, but held to await trial of her guns, which were not quite finished at the time of the speed trial.

The gun trials, by the terms of the contract, were in two parts: First, a trial for range, accuracy, and controllability of the propulsive force, which were to be determined by the performance of a gun of the same caliber and length as those mounted on the ship, which was in position at Fort Lafayette, New York Harbor; and, second, a trial for rapidity of fire on board, in which case, of course, the trial must be made with the guns and their firing mechanism in place on the vessel.

the trait must be made with the general the vessel.

The first of these trials was successfully made at Fort Lafayette on Saturday, the 26th ultimo. The contract requirement was that there should be at least 50 per cent, of hits out of a certain number of shots at a distance of 1 nantical mile, the target being a space marked by buoys 150 by 56 feet in dimensions, representing the mark presented by the average ironclad or cruising vessel. This trial resulted in an excess of performance over the contract requirement, five out of eight shots having been registered as effective under the terms of the contract, while two of the other three fell within the zone of calculated par-tial effect. No other trial remains to be made except that of rapidity of fire of the guns in position on board, which is merely a test of the efficiency on board ship of mechanism which has repeatedly functioned perfectly in mounts on shore,

Prior trials of the gun, such as the blowing up of the Silliman, a condemned schooner given to the contractors by the Government for that purpose last summer, have uniformly demonstrated the tremendous destructive power of the dynamite projectile when exploded under or in immediate proximity to a float-mer, have uniformly demonstrated the tremendous destructive power of the dynamite projectile when exploded under or in immediate proximity to a floating object.

The naval appropriation bill for the ensuing fiscal year as passed by the House of Representatives provides for the construction of one additional vessel of the Vesuvius type, contingent on the satisfactory performance of that vessel with her guns, under conditions as nearly as may be approximating those of actual warfare. Guarded in this manner, and with the final decision left to the experts of the Navy, it seems that Congress can incur no risk in increasing the number of additional vessels of that type thus contingently provided for.

If entirely successful in the trials of her battery afloat, as stipulated in the House provision, there can be no doubt that the Vesuvius type will prove a most formidable factor in the national scheme of coast and harbor defense, as well as an important adjunct to offensive operations away from our shores, should it unfortunately become necessary to undertake them.

The limit of cost of the additional vessels is fixed at the sum of $450,000, which is about one-ninth the cost of the large armored ship authorized by Congress at its last session—that is to say, nine vessels of the Vesuvius type can be built as proposed and made ready for service at a cost not exceeding that of one 7,500 or 8,000 ton ironclad, including armament, and in considerably less time.

It will be noted that the provision of the House calls for two 15-inch dynamite guns instead of the three carried by the Vesuvius. This is because naval officers of experience are of the opinion that, in view of the confined space in which these guns are to be worked, quite as effective fire can be delivered from two, with plenty of room in which to operate them, as from three operated in an insufficient space or in a space not large enough to give men the most complete opportunity to work. Besides, it is proposed to give the new Vesuvius a coal capacity sufficient coal capacity sufficient for fifteen days' steaming at 10 knots an hour, or a total guaranty of 21 knots speed, which is 1 knot more than the requirement of the Vesuvius, though sixty-five one-hundrediths of a knot less than that vessel accomplished.

Here were also than the steam of the term of the term

In conclusion, it is proper to say that, for purposes of comparison, wherefrom to draw a fair conclusion as to relative efficiency, the Vesuvius should be considered as a sea-going torpedo-vessel of large size; and her warlike power, as such, should be measured by the distance or "range" at which her torpedoes, thrown through the air, are surely effective, as compared with the effective zones of the torpedo-vessels of other powers, whose missiles are projected through the water. It has been demonstrated that the aerial torpedoes of the Vesuvius can be thrown with absolutely certain effect one and a half nautical miles; that their aim at that range is as sure as that of a rified cannon of the most modern construction, and that their explosion, either upon striking the object itself or falling in the water near it, is also inevitable. Her full-calibered shell contains, as is well known, 500 pounds of dynamite, nitro-gelatine, or any other of the high or binitric explosives, which can not be projected from any powder-burning gun.

is well known, 500 pounds of dynamite, nitro-gelatine, or any other of the high or binitric explosives, which can not be projected from any powder-burning gun.

All the torpedo-vessels of other powers are designed upon the basis of the auto-mobile or locomotive torpedo, which must be launched into the water from the bow or side of the vessel and then left to make the best of its way to the object of attack, without any further luman or intelligent guidance, being subject from the moment of its launch to all the conditions of navigation in a seaway on its own hook; in scafaring phrase, a "derelict," to all intents and purposes. Exhaustive experiments have been made by all the great powers with all sorts of locomotive water-torpedoes, and enormous sums have been expended in constructing fast and powerful boats to carry and launch them; and yet the utmost surely-effective striking range that has been attained with an auto-mobile or locomotive torpedo is 600 feet, and that in the still water of the harbor of Fiume.

Viewing the Vesuvius as a torpedo-vessel purely, therefore, it is fair to say that, as comparedwith other torpedo-vessels armed with locomotive torpedoes, her effective zone is to theirs as 9,000 feet is to 600 feet; whereas her torpedo carries 500 pounds of the highest explosives as against 130 pounds carried by the largest type of Whitehead locomotive torpedo.

Regarding the Vesuvius as a torpedo-vessel, it is fair to compare her qualities and performances with those of vessels of similar class or rate possessed by other powers. There are, of what may be termed "sea-going torpedo-vessels," only six in existence with which she should be compared, as follows:

The Iljin, of 600 tons; the Tripoli, of 800 tons; the Destructor, of 468 tons; though the latter is almost too small for such rating.

The following table will show the relative qualities and performances of these vessels:

ilshed by Spanish Government.
†Estimated; not yet tried.

These vessels, aside from the Vesuvius, are all calculated to use the locomotive torpedo, launched over the bow or sides from short tubes, with which they are equipped, as follows:

Iljin: 7 tubes, Whitehead torpedoes. Also light secondary battery.

Tripoli: 5 tubes, Whitehead torpedoes. Also light secondary battery.

Destructor: 5 tubes, Whitehead torpedoes. Also light secondary battery. One 4-inch breech-loading rifle.

Sharpshooter: 4 tubes, Whitehead torpedoes. Strong secondary battery. One 4-inch breech-loading rifle.

Rattlesnake: 4 tubes, Whitehead torpedoes. Strong secondary battery. One 4-inch breech-loading rifle.

Bombe: 2 tubes, 10 torpedoes; also one 4-inch breech-loading rifle.

From these tables, compiled from official documents in the office of naval intelligence, it appears that the Vesuvius has exceeded all the others in speed, so far as officially reported trials are concerned, the reported speed of the Destructor, namely, 22.63 knots, having been so stated by her builder, Mr. Byles, of Clydebank, in a paper read recently before the British Institute of Naval Architects; but no report has been published by the Spanish Government or on its authority. It is not intended by this remark to reflect on Mr. Byles, but, in comparing public vessels with one another, it is necessary to have a standard of fact, and that is by common consent taken to be the official reports of trials conducted regularly by naval officers.

With regard to the relative effective power of these vessels, as compared with the Vesuvius, it is necessary to revert to the comparison heretofore made between the effective zones of locomotive and aerial torpedoes, respectively.

All of the European torpedo-vessels being armed with locomotive torpedoes, it follows that their effective zones must be limited by the sure striking range of those missiles, which has been demonstrated to be about 600 feet in still water. What they would do in a heavy sea is still entirely a matter o

Thin—Number of torpedoes, 28; weight of each, maximum, 180 pounds of ex-losive; effective range, 600 feet; rapidity, estimated, once in six minutes for each tube.

Tripoli—Number of torpedoes, 20 (other conditions as above).

Destructor—Number of torpedoes, 15 (other conditions as above).

Sharpshooter—Number of torpedoes, 20 (other conditions as above).

Rattlesnake—Number of torpedoes, 16 (other conditions as above).

Bombe—Number of torpedoes, 10 (other conditions as above).

That is, the Vesuvius carries a total of 7,500 pounds of high explosives in fifteen torpedoes, which she can throw effectively a mile and a half at the rate of three in two minutes.

Assuming that the locomotive torpedoes of the other vessels carry the maximum charges (though as a matter of fact 90 pounds of gun-cotton is the largest charge yet launched in a Whitehead torpedo), the "weight of metal" of the European boats would be as follows:

Ilin, total, 5,000 pounds of explosive; Tripoll, 3,000 pounds; Destructor, 2,700 pounds; Sharpshooter, 3,600 pounds; Rattlesnake, 2,880 pounds; Bombe, 1,800 pounds—the effective range of all being the same, namely, about 600 feet in smooth water.

pounds—the effective range of all being the same, namely, about 600 feet in smooth water.

In secondary battery, the European boats carry from 3-pounder to 36-pounder rapid-fire guns; the Vesuvius 3-pounders and 6-pounders for repelling small torpedo-boats.

As to the time required to build duplicates of the Vesuvius, at least five of them could be delivered to the Government in one year from the award of contract for their construction.

Italy has five of Tripoli class; England eleven of Sharpshooter and four of Rattlesnake classes; and France ten of Bombe class. The Destructor and Iljin have not as yet been duplicated.

The Vesuvius has a greater coal capacity and sea-going endurance than any of the European boats except the Tripoli, which has about the same.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, it is very gratifying to hear Senators who have given attention to the progress of the Navy speak so encouragingly of the outlook in that direction. It strikes me, however, that it would be well, having built some very fine ships, to arm them. I do not think anybody has professed any great admiration for the guns we have at present, or that any one insists that there has been any special progress made in that direction recently. What I am particularly desired for their reschall not only have good ships but they are challed any special progress. larly desirous of is that we shall not only have good ships, but that we shall have them properly armed.

I noticed what the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Plumb] said about the Springfield rifle and about the indorsement of General Sheridan and other officers. The Springfield rifle was a good rifle at one time; it is a good rifle now in some respects; that is, it is a gun easily kept in repair, but it is not a gun fit for modern warfare, and it will never be used, if there should be a war, unless it may be used for the few months which it will be necessary to consume in constructing others. If we had notice that we were to have a war in a year from now, that style of gun would be abandoned. I do not suppose there is an Army officer in the service who does not think he can get a better gun somewhere.

I also noticed what the Senator said about filling up the Departments with experimental machines and crude efforts on the part of inventors. There is a good deal in that, I have no doubt. This, however, is not a crude effort; this is an accomplished fact. This gun has been proved to be on a small scale a remarkable gun. These people want to see whether their theory is correct that it will prove equally good upon a large scale; and, if so, it will be of incalculable value to us as a weapon

Now, let us see what these people are willing to do. They say in this amendment—for it is put in with their approval:

That said guns shall not be paid for and no expense shall accrue to the Government until by actual experiment, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, it shall be shown that said guns with said cartridges are capable of producing a penetrating force 20 per cent, greater than any guns firing same weight of projectile now in use in the United States service.

Twenty per cent. advance on the present gun makes every one of these guns worth four times what any other gun is worth; and if you can buy a gun for $100,000 and there is another that has 20 per cent. greater power, the $100,000 gun is not worth having or getting. Everybody knows that. It is like the ship that sails 18 knots an hour. If some-body has got a ship that can go 2 knots faster, then the 18-knot ship becomes of little value; it can not run away and it can not maneuver, and so it is of but little account.

Mr. President, I have been led to say what I have said with the hope, ultimately at least, that it will attract the attention of this committee in such a way that inventors may have some encouragement.

I ask permission to insert as part of my remarks a letter from the secretary of this company in reference to their matters, which I omitted when I first addressed the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The paper will be inserted if there be no objection.

The paper is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 5, 1889.

Washington, D. C., February 5, 1889.

Six: The Hurst system of arms and amunition embraces projectiles, shells, accelerating cartridge, accelerating cartridge using compressed powder, compound accelerating cartridge, breech-loading ordnance field guns, breech-loading ordnance rapid-fire light guns; breech-loading ordnance light or heavy guns; breech-loading recoil small-arm, the mechanism of which is adapted to naval guns of 1 to 3 pounder caliber; wire-wound guns, large or small; and Hurst is a joint inventor of a base-burning time-fuse in combination with a detachable sabot for armor-piercing shells. Experiments will be necessary to determine the size of the heavy guns which the last-mentioned breech-block will accommodate.

We believe this list embraces a wider scope than that of any inventor except, possibly, B. B. Hotchkiss and the English Nordenfelt.

The Commissioner of Patents will doubtless verify this list, and Lieut. A. G. Berry, who conducted the official tests at the Washington navy-yard will testify to the utility of the reinforce cartridge.

We desire a full investigation and challenge any one to produce guns of more power than ours. These inventions are purely military in character, and we desire to give our own Government the first opportunity to acquire them.

I am, sir, very respectfully yours,

J. W. HOLCOMBE, Secretary Hurst Cartridge Company.

Hon, H. M. TELLER, United States Senate.

Mr. HALE. The amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado is, I think, clearly subject to a point of order, but I believe there is merit in the Hurst gun. It is being investigated and has been investigated by another section of the Appropriations Committee with a view to some provision being offered upon another appropriation bill, and it already comes under the great powers that were given by Congress last year to this new board in the Army, and a half million dollars was ap-propriated for just such purposes. Even with that I do not feel compelled to insist upon the point of order, provided that instead of legislating in terms this particular gun upon the Navy Department (something which has never been done by Congress) a provision can be incorporated something like this:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to test and, if found satisfactory, to pur-

Then follows the type of gun described in the amendment of the Senator from Colorado—three or more rapid-fire, rapid-twist, 1-pounder breech-loading rifled guns, and an equal number of the same type of 3-pounder guns, and an equal number of the same type of 32-pounder guns, as the Secretary of the Navy may designate, and for such purpose the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated.

If the Senator will withdraw his amendment I will offer that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado withdraw his amendment?

Mr. TELLER. I will withdraw my amendment if that amendment can be adopted.

The PRÉSIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is withdrawn, and the Senator from Maine proposes to amend as follows.

Mr. HALE. I propose to substitute for the amendment:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to test, and, if found satisfactory, to purchase three or more rapid-fire, rapid-twist, 1-pounder breech-loading rifled guns, and an equal number of the same type of 3-pounder guns, and an equal number of the same type of 32-pounder guns, as the Secretary of the Navy may designate, and for such purpose the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator send the amendment to the desk to be read?

Mr. HALE. I offer what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT protempore. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. After line 16, on page 43, it is proposed to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to test, and, if found satisfactory, to purchase three or more rapid-fire, rapid-twist, 1-pounder breech-loading rifled guns, and an equal number of the same type of 3-pounder guns, and an equal number of the same type of 32-pounder guns, as the Secretary of the Navy may designate, and for such purpose the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the question presented by this amendment, and the only one which has any merit in it, it seems to me, is whether or not Congress shall exercise its own judgment and discretion or hold itself bound by the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, when an American citizen, who has presented evidence that he has discovered a useful invention in the manufacture of arms, whether or not Congress shall say "We will not exercise our own judgment in regard to this matter and the evidence on which it is presented, and we will refer it to the consideration of some other authority, some bureau, some Secretary."

If the evidence is sufficient that this gentleman has discovered a most useful invention, one that is practicable, why shall not Congress say that "We will encourage the development of this discovery and test the manufacture of these arms?" I can see no reason why Congress shall say "We are not competent," or "That there is some instrumentality that can decide this question better than ourselves." What greater capacity has the Secretary of the Navy to decide whether or not this invention is a useful one? Congress says to him, "You may test this," and we provide the instrumentality to do it, "and if it conforms, as the amendment says, to the requirements and the practical necessities of the case, then you may go on and have it manufactured."

It seems to me that that is a very proper form and a very proper recommendation of the merit of an American inventor. The policy of encouraging useful inventions is one fixed not only in wise legislation, but in our organic law itself. How shall we give this encouragement? By the reward of the inventor. It does not matter in what form that

The amendment presented by the Senator from Colorado upon reasonable evidence states the fact that this citizen has discovered a useful invention going beyond anything else known at the present time in this species of arm. Why not accept that and provide for the ascertainment in some practical form of that fact? That is all that the amendment

I have before me-and that was the chief object I had in rising-a letter, which I think it is proper should be placed in the RECORD, from a gentleman who has been considerably discussed for the last few days on this floor in connection with the amendment for the construction of a peculiar form of vessel designed by Mr. THOMAS. He writes to me as follows:

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES, Washington, February 12, 1889.

DEAR SIR: I am greatly indebted to you for your kind and courteous remarks, relative to the war-vessel designed by me, in yesterday's discussion.

I did design the vessel from beginning to end, and that, too, without the assistance of naval officers other than occasional suggestions by Commodore Wilson and Constructor Hichborn as to some minor details, Mr. Chandler and Mr. Hawley to the contrary notwithstanding.

My only ambition in this matter has been to secure to the Government a first-class vessel of war, combining the offensive powers of the best type of cruiser with the defensive powers of the monitor and a sea endurance enabling the vessel to keep the sea for the greatest possible time without recoaling. All these requisites have been met in the vessel designed by me, and to say that it is the combination of old ideas is not stating the case fairly.

When Sir Isaac Newton felt the force of the falling apple, the force was not new. When Watt observed the power of steam in lifting the tea-kettle lid, the power was not new. It was the formulation and subjecting these powers to the uses of man which were new.

Because Noah built the ark, Webb the clipper ships, and Ericsson the Monitor, shall it be said that all other vessels are but copies? There has never been presented to the Navy Department of this country, nor built by another country, a vessel of the type and combining the offensive and defensive powers and speed that mine does. And all this has been found by the four highest officers of the Navy Department having to do with the building of war vessels.

Because a man lives distant from the sea, does it follow that he may not become proficient in naval matters after ten years of conscientious study and investigation?

Farragut was a Tennesseean, and a mountaineer at that, and yet, by application and the sea to the land.

vestigation?

Farragut was a Tennesseean, and a mountaineer at that, and yet, by application and industry, he became the first naval officer of the land.

I have taken an interest in having this vessel built by the Government, and can any honest, honorable man say the ambition is not a laudable one?

Pardon this long letter. Again thanking you, I am,

Sincerely, yours,

JOHN R. THOMAS.

Hon, WILKINSON CALL, United States Senator.

I have thought it proper, in justice to Mr. THOMAS, whom I have long known as a conscientious and painstaking and accurate investigator into these subjects, that these facts as stated by him should be placed in the RECORD.

I do not propose to discuss this question any further. I do not think it is the proper time to discuss whether the present Secretary of the Navy is entitled to the credit of the present progress of our naval affairs and their favorable condition, or whether he is entitled to only half the credit, and whether his predecessor commenced this system and is entitled to the credit of it, or whether the Secretary shares it with the Naval Committee of the Senate and his predecessor.

The fact is, in the general public opinion of this country the present Secretary of the Navy is regarded as a man of eminent ability and as having contributed greatly to the present favorable condition of our naval affairs. He is the first Secretary under whom we have had any assurance that in the future we shall be provided with a navy representing the dignity and power of this country. That is sufficient honor for him. It is in the line of that broad and liberal policy which he has favored and which he has brought to a successful issue, whoever may have been the author of it, that this amendment should be adopted and that encouragement should be given to American inventors in arms as well as in every other branch of science by such reasonable aid as it may be in the power of Congress to give. In this case an inventor without means has devoted himself to this special branch of invention and has presented an arm superior, in the judgment of competent officers, to anything that can now be found. It has been subjected to criticism. He asks of Congress only such amount of money, to be expended by the proper officer of the Government, as will enable that fact to be tested, evidence being presented that, in the common judgment of those who are competent to consider the matter, the invention which he has discovered is superior to anything now existing.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to amend the amendment, just before the appropriation, by inserting these words:

Said test to be made with the cartridge known as the reinforced cartridge.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to that. Let it come in just before the last clause, which is the appropriating part of my amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be stated from the desk.

The Chief Clerk read the words proposed to be inserted, as follows: Said test to be made with the cartridge known as the reinforced cartridge.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1874) to change the eastern and northern judicial districts of Texas, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. Culberson, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Ezra B. Tay-LOR managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:
A bill (H. R. 11604) to amend an act approved March 3, 1885, to authorize the construction of bridges across the Cumberland and Canev

Fork Rivers, in Tennessee;

A bill (S. 259) granting the title of the United States in certain lands to the county of Randolph and State of Illinois on certain conditions;

A bill (S. 1198) for the relief of William H. Robertson and Edward

L. Hedden, late collectors of customs for the district of the city of New York

A bill (S. 1459) granting a pension to Florence Courtney Cochnower; A bill (S. 2305) to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the Executive Departments;

A bill (S. 2315) granting the right of way to the Yankton and Missouri Valley Railway Company through the Yankton Indian reserva-tion, in Dakota;

A bill (S. 2530) granting a pension to Robert Kelly; A bill (S. 2547) to increase the pension of Mrs. Matilda Wilkins Emory

Emory;
A bill (S. 2924) to increase the pension of Sterne H. Fowle;
A bill (S. 2992) to accept and ratify the agreement submitted by the Shoshones, Bannocks, and Sheepeaters of the Fort Hall and Lemhi reservations, in Idaho, May 14, 1880, and for other purposes;
A bill (S. 3335) granting a pension to Thompson D. Hatfield;
A bill (S. 3435) granting a pension to J. D. Haworth;
A bill (S. 3435) granting a pension to Edwin W. Warner;
A bill (S. 3734) to authorize the construction of a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at La Crosse, Wis.;
A bill (S. 3795) granting to the Big Horn Southern Railroad Company a right of way across the Fort Custer military reservation, Montana;

tana:

A bill (S. 3800) directing a survey of a road from the Aqueduct Bridge to Mount Vernon, and making an appropriation therefor;
A bill (S. 3819) granting a pension to Esther Smith;
A bill (S. 3858) in relation to dead and fallen timber on Indian lands;

A bill (S. 3897) to establish a life-saving station on the Atlantic coast at or near the mouth of St. George River, Maine.

REPRINTING OF BILLS.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask an order for the reprinting of the educational bill as it passed the Senate, and also Senate bill 3356, the copies of both of which are exhausted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That Senate bill 3356 be reprinted, also the educational bill as it passed

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and it will be so ordered.

RIGHTS IN BEHRING SEA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed: To the Senale:

I herewith transmit, in reply to the resolution of the Senate of the 2d ultimo, a report from the Secretary of State, with the accompanying documents, in relation to the seal fisheries in Behring Sea.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 12, 1889.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The PRESIDENT protempore. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumes consideration of the unfinished business, being Senate bill No. 3401, concerning the Pacific railroads. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] to recommit the bill with instructions.

Mr. EVARTS. I ask that that order of business may be laid aside informally that I may call up Order of Business on the Calendar No.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a resolution, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. Order of Business 2645, a resolution reported by Mr. EVARTS directing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to revise the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress, etc.

Mr. COKE. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas objects.

Mr. SHERMAN. To enable the Senator from New York to proceed, move that the pending order be laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator moves to proceed to consider? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of the resolution whose title has just been reported by the Secretary. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. HARRIS. This question not being debatable, I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to submit a statement that will not exceed five minutes, perhaps not three.

Mr. SHERMAN. There is no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senator from New York and the Senate to the fact that there are only eighteen working days to the end of the Fiftieth Congress.

Thirteen out of the fourteen general appropriation bills remain un-disposed of, and their present status is as follows:

The sundry civil, the agricultural, and the Army appropriation bills are now before the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

The naval appropriation bill passed the Senate with amendments a few moments since.

The Post-Office and river and harbor bills are pending in the House of Representatives.

The legislative, the pension, and the fortification bills have passed the Senate with amendments and gone back to the House.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill is now in conference. On the diplomatic appropriation bill the conference report has just been agreed to. The Military Academy bill has been sent to the President.

The Indian appropriation bill and the deficiency appropriation bill have not yet been reported to the House of Representatives

If these appropriation bills are not passed an extra session of Congress is inevitable, or the wheels of the Government must stop.

Only six of these bills have been considered and reported by the Senate Committee on Appropriations, and only one of the six, the legislative bill, ranks amongst the important appropriation bills.

If these bills are to have the careful consideration that a proper regard for economy demands, there is very little, if indeed there is any, time to devote to the consideration of other questions.

But, Mr. President, in addition to these appropriation bills the tariff bill may, and probably will return to us demanding at least a portion of our time for its further consideration; and in addition to these we have upon the Senate Calendar about three hundred bills which have been considered and favorably reported by Senate committees, many of which are of public importance, and all of them important to a greater or less number of citizens.

Now, in this condition of the public business, and in the expiring hours of the Congress, we are asked by this motion to turn from the consideration of appropriation bills absolutely necessary to the support of the Government; to turn from our Calendar of hundreds of other bills favorably reported by Senate committees, in order that we may consider a resolution not legislative in its character, and the consideration of which can have no other effect, as every Senator knows, than to launch a fruitless sectional debate which will, if entered upon, consume the greater part of the remaining hours of this Congress.

The plain, practical question which addresses itself to every Senator is, shall we take the time necessary to the proper consideration of appropriation bills and other bills upon our Calendar favorably reported, in order to give the opportunity to Senators on either side of the Chamber to ventilate their views on sectional questions, the inevitable effect of which must be to further alienate section against section and intensify any bitterness which may now unfortunately exist between sec-

Mr. President, if sectional debate must come, this is not the time for it. We have not time now within the life of this Congress to perform the various duties that the public interests demand at our hands. us devote the remaining hours of this Congress to the legislative duties of this Congress, and if we can not abandon our sectional controversies forever let us at least postpone them until the beginning of the next Congress

For these reasons I appeal to the Senator from New York not to press his motion, but if he will not agree to this, then I appeal to the Senate to vote it down. For if this debate is launched upon the Senate at this time none of us can even guess as to how much time will be consumed in it; but it is safe to say that if States are arraigned and criticised the Senators representing them will demand and take, and be fully justified in taking, whatever time may be necessary to their vindication; and instead of devoting the few remaining days of this Congress to the consideration of appropriation bills which must be passed, and other measures of public importance which have been considered and favorably reported by Senate committees, the time will be worse than wasted in sectional criminations and recriminations which can benefit no section, no State, no community, but the inevitable tendency of which must be to alienate and embitter section against section, and State against State. Such debate is, in my opinion, fraught with evil and only evil.

I again appeal, Mr. President, to the Senator from New York not to press this question at this time. Why press the question at this the most inopportune time, when it will probably provoke debate which may defeat the passage of appropriation bills and other legislation of importance?

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to be allowed to speak five minutes in reply to the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, such a request as that made by the Senator from New York I do not remember ever to have heard denied under similar circumstances. He has after long investigation reported a resolution, which I hope will receive a very large majority in the Senate when it is passed—a resolution temperate and moderate in its terms. He rises to address the Senate. When before have we refused to one of our fellow-Senators the right to speak upon a question that he considered of vital importance and to which he had given great consideration, especially under the circumstances which are now presented? I may say that an objection to the consideration of this resolution, or even the calling of the yeas and nays or a division of the Senate upon its consideration, is unusual, and it seems to me ought to

Now, what is the state of the public business? I never have known before a short session where the appropriation bills were so well advanced at this period as they are now. I can appeal to the Committee on Appropriations to sustain me in that statement. Most of those bills are out of the way. The business that is now the special order before the Senate is necessarily postponed by the absence of one of the Senators who has charge of the bill on a mission which we can not any of us avoid-a mission of death; and, therefore, as a matter of course, it takes precedence of any motion in the Senate.

The Senate now practically has nothing but the general Calendar before it, and the Senator from New York proposes to call up a resolution, temperate in character, which the Senator from Tennessee says involves a sectional controversy. This is all the reply I need to make.

It seems to me that the Senate ought, by unanimous consent, to allow the Senator from New York to proceed. The debate will probably not take such a wide range as Senators suppose. If it does, it is within the power of the Senate, and, unless Senators on the other side of the Chamber proceed with it and find matter in the remarks of the Senator from New York that they wish to answer, they need not carry the debate any further, nor need it interfere with the public business. On the other hand, the importance of this subject outweighs any question involving money now on our Calendar.

The fact that some time or other, and that is not far from this day, there must be some mode of electing members of Congress free from the disputes and contentions and controversies of the past, every Senator must appreciate. It may involve, and it does involve, questions of difficulty; but, certainly, with the known character of the Senator from New York, his known conservatism, I look to him to throw some light upon this question which we all acknowledge to be difficult; and if his remarks are met and replied to in the same temper and tone in which I know he will address the Senate from his known character and from his known opinions, there need be no excitement, no sectional controversy, and no fierce debate on this very harmless resolution.

I hope, therefore, without a division, the resolution will be allowed to come up and that the Senator from New York may be permitted to proceed and present his remarks, and then I hope we shall be able to take a final vote on the resolution.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senate extend to me the same courtesy that has been extended to other Senators?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the Senator from Alabama proceeding.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the motion proposed by the Senator from New York is not even intended to prepare business for the present session of Congress. The motion is to instruct the Committee on Privileges and Elections to prepare business for the coming session of Congress, now postponed so far as we know until next December. There can, therefore, be no particular necessity or urgency for entering upon a debate of the character or kind that is involved in this resolution at this time. It is purely a gratuitous attempt on the part of politicians in this body to launch upon the Senate at this moment of time a dangerous, exciting, and unnecessary question. It can not be otherwise than met in a proper spirit, I trust, but with firmness, with courage, with determination on the part of those Senators who will feel, when the Senator from New York has yielded the floor upon this resolution, that it is their duty to make every necessary statement, explanation, and argument upon the Constitution and upon the facts which may be found necessary to present the great Southern section of the United States in the proper light in the estimation of the American people.

Enormous amounts of capital are going to the South from the North, great numbers of population are swelling our lists in that section of the Union. Prosperity, peace, quietness, the administration of the law, economy in public administration, all prevail in that section of the country, and I venture to say that there has not been in the history of the American Union since the year 1800 a period of time when there was more devotion to industrial pursuits, and with greater profit and advantage, than there is now in the Southern States All this must be broken in upon and disturbed and repressed for the sake of enabling a coterie of politicians, who desire now to foment difficulties with a view of opening a door to the incoming administration to prosecute this subject with political vigor and earnestness and determination, and the country must stand by and see its prosperity checked, its interests all prostrated for the sake of enabling the political leaders of the Republican party in the United States to bring this question to the front at this inauspicious and dangerous time.

The Union Pacific and the Central Pacific Railroad bills are now up for consideration before the Senate. Everybody knows that the Government of the United States has at peril now in what is the regular order of business of this Senate, at least $113,000,000, if not more, of money endangered by a complication of affairs which needs to be relieved against by legislation. Year after year this matter has been brought before the attention of the Senate of the United States and So much of agitation has accompathe House of Representatives. nied it, and the Judiciary Committee in their divisions had become so settled against each other in their respective opinions, that it was found necessary on their own motion to discharge that committee from the consideration of this great question and send it to a select committee of the Senate

The regular Railroad Committee in the other House have made a report of a bill. The select committee of the Senate, composed of Democrats and Republicans, have also agreed upon the same bill in iden-So this great question is now ready for settlement. Without that settlement these railroads are very much imperiled in their One of them has some twenty lines of communication established by its own efforts since the railroad was first chartered by the Government of the United States, covering an immense area of territory, accommodating vast numbers of people and a great amount of business. These railroads come to us with strong and earnest protestations that unless we shall relieve them by legislation, by resolving upon a settlement which will be acceptable to them and to the people of the United States, as we can do now, their business must be very much hampered and the danger to the United States of these roads going into bankruptcy and of our being compelled to lose a large amount, if not all the money involved in this, is certainly very great.

That bill is to be interrupted here because the honorable Senator from New York wants to make a maiden speech in this body upon politics. For God's sake when will the Senator from New York make his maiden speech? Who has not heard him in the United States? Who does not know his views and opinions? He has made a report here which embodies all the facts and doubtless all the views that he expected to make from the beginning about this matter. Now it must be elaborated with a speech, in which I dare say that, with all the conservatism of the Senator, he will not be able to deal with the subject in such a mild and gentle way as not to provoke the necessity on the part of Senators from the South of rising to vindicate their people and their States. We are in a position here which we consider to be one of self-defense, and we expect to use the arts and rely upon the rights of self-defense in this debate.

I respectfully notify the Senate that if this debate is to be entered upon you might as well now provide to have your incoming administration call its extra session of Congress, for we will not stand here with our mouths muzzled when accusations are made against our people and against our States, and deny to ourselves the simple right of an earnest, honest, faithful, courageous self-defense.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT protempore. Is there objection to the Senator from New Hampshire proceeding? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama says that this is an inauspicious moment for taking up a subject of this kind. I wonder what more appropriate moment could be selected that one at which the process has been compared in control of the process has been compared in control of the control of th one at which the process has been commenced in certain States of this Union of killing contestants to seats in the House of Representatives. Shall we wait, Mr. President, until they are all killed and the appropriation bills passed, and then take up this question, which the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Sherman] well says is of more importance than any other which is before the Senate?

Why, Senators can hardly have read the statement of the killing of Mr. Clayton, which I propose to read as part of my remarks. I find it in the Washington Post of February 5, headed "The Killing of Clayton."

THE KILLING OF CLAYTON—JOINT STATEMENT OF HIS BROTHERS—THEY REFER TO ALLEGED POLITICAL CONDITIONS IN ARKANSAS, WHICH THEY SAY RESULTED IN THE ASSASSINATION AT PLUMMERVILLE—THEIR STORY IN DETAIL.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., February 4.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., February 4.

General Powell Clayton and Judge Clayton, brothers of Hon. John M. Clayton, who was assassinated on the night of January 29, have furnished the following statement to the public:

"That the public may understand the circumstances leading up to and culminating in the assassination of our brother, John M. Clayton, we desire over our own signatures to make the following statement of fact:

"All agree that this was a political assassination. It will be, therefore, necessary for us to refer to the political conditions and circumstances surrounding it. We do this in no partisan spirit, but only that justice may be done to the memory of our brother, and that a knowledge of the facts which led to his assassination may induce the people of this State to correct the evils from which this and other great crimes have sprung, and that, however sad the circumstances may be to us, his martyrdom may result in good to the people of this and other States. Although since the commencement of the last political canvass for State officers in Arkansas many political crimes have been committed in different parts of the State, in this statement, however, we will confine ourselves to the limits of Conway County, within which Plummerville, the scene of this murder, is situated, and only to these circumstances which, in our opinion, led to the commission of the crime.

"Prior to the September election and during the canvass a political club was organized at Morrillton, the county seat of Conway County, with one Stowers, fresh from Mississippi, at its head. This club soon after resolved itself into a militia company, and about two weeks before the election, at a time of profound peace in the county, Hon. Simon P. Hughes, then governor, not only supplied it with State arms, but furnished it with a full supply of ammunition. This was the beginning of the troubles in Conway County. From this time until the develor of election Sto when, with his harmed partieuns, almost duly; neared at the area of Morrillion. "POWELL CLAYTON."

"W. H. H. CLAYTON."

Thus goes out, Mr. President, one contest of one Democratic seat in the House of Representatives. I will detain the Senate longer only to show how another contest has disappeared. The candidate for governor against John P. Eagle, the governor of Arkansas, believing that he had been lawfully elected, undertook to contest the election of governor, and this same paper from which I have read the statement of Powell Clayton and W. H. H. Clayton shows how Mr. Norwood, who claims to be lawfully elected governor of Arkansas, has reached the conclusion that it will not be safe for him. in view of the Clayton assassingsion that it will not be safe for him, in view of the Clayton assassination, to make that contest.

GUBERNATORIAL CONTEST WITHDRAWN.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., February 4.

The dispatch containing the Clayton statement is also headed Little Rock, Ark., February 4.

The Legislature having refused to permit C. M. Norwood, late Union Labor and Republican candidate for governor, to contest Governor Eagle's election unless both parties gave bonds for all costs, so as to avoid expense to the State, Norwood to-day by petition withdrew his notice of contest, thus ending the

As well he might. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] says that this is an inopportune moment to enter upon this inquiry. I wish the Senator from Tennessee would inform the Senate and the country when he thinks it will be an opportune moment to investigate these questions of suffrage and human life.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the Senator from Arkansas proceeding? The Chair hears none.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I think that there is no other Senator perhaps upon this floor save and except the Senator from New Hampshire who would have taken advantage of the unanimous consent to present the question as to whether we should enter into these matters which are not before the Senate to make the bitter partisan statement that has fallen from his lips. The Senator from Tennessee made a very conservative statement as to why he thought it ought not now to be considered. He was followed in the same strain by the Senator from Ohio and also by the Senator from Alabama. I had not expected to meet the accusations that have now been brought forward until the matter was presented to the Senate, if it was to be presented at the present session, when they could be answered in due form and without taking advantage of unanimous consent to make remarks upon the mere question as to whether it should or should not be considered.

In regard to the killing of Mr. John M. Clayton I can say here, as I said in the capitol at Little Rock, it was a cowardly murder, an assassination without an excuse and without palliation. No man in Arkansas has sought to excuse it, no man in Arkansas has indorsed it, directly or indirectly; and when the Senator from New Hampshire undertakes to make the Senate of the United States believe that the people of Arkansas are responsible for that murder, or that they have not done everything within their power to hunt the assassin and bring him to justice, he shows himself willing to put forth a misrepresentation to the people of the United States.

It is well known to the Senator from New Hampshire that immediately upon the killing of John M. Clayton the governor of the State offered a reward of a thousand dollars, which was the largest reward that our laws authorized him to offer. It is also no doubt known to him that immediately thereafter the Legislature passed a bill, and it has become a law, authorizing the governor to increase that reward to $5,000. In addition to that, public meetings were held at Little Rock, at Fort Smith, at Pine Bluff, at Morrillton, in the county of Conway, where Plummerville is located, at Fayetteville, at my own town of Bentonville, and many other towns throughout the State, condemning and denouncing this murder, and raising money by private subscription as a reward to hunt down the assassin. In addition to that, every Democratic paper in the State has denounced it, without a single, solitary exception, and the officers of the law are seeking by all lawful means to-day to ascertain who the assassin was.

The Senator made a statement made by Governor Clayton and William H. H. Clayton, full of partisan bitterness, misrepresentation, and misstatements of fact, which have been denied by the governor of the State and denied and known not to be true by citizens of the State of Arkansas. That letter, however, my colleague or myself at a later period will reply to in detail; but I simply want to state this evening that, so far as the insinuation or intimation that the assassination is approved by any part of the people of Arkansas is concerned, it is not warranted by the facts, and every single act that has been taken there by any part of the citizens shows that it is not true.

I knew Mr. Clayton intimately. I have known him since 1873. In October last I canvassed the second district when he was a candidate for Congress for ten days in opposition to min. The and I make sumptime that entire district. We traveled in the same buggy, stump throughout that entire district. We traveled in the same buggy, slept in the same houses, and upon one occasion in the same bed. at all times during that entire canvass were treated by the entire population with complete respect. Mr. Clayton was a bold and fearless Republican, and advocated his views upon the stump. At no time was there ever one particle of bitterness either between him and me or between any citizen and Mr. Clayton. Major BRECKINRIDGE then for a period of eight or ten days continued that canvass. They lived in the same town; they were personal friends; they associated upon terms of equality socially, and every other way. There was no bitterness against John M. Clayton in that district in any way whatever.

It is true that he was assassinated and foully assassinated, as has been stated, on the night of the 29th of January, and there is an intimation in the statement put forth by Powell Clayton and William H. H. Clayton that Major BRECKINRIDGE could in some way have prevented the sassination. Mr. President, that is a slander and a foul slander on one of the purest, most upright, and honorable gentlemen who live within any State in this Union. There is no purer man than BRECK-He is a man of the highest honor and the highest integrity, and any statement that goes forth to the effect that it was in his power to have prevented this assassination is a false statement.

Major BRECKINRIDGE was honestly and fairly elected to a seat in the Congress of the United States. I am entirely familiar with every county and every voting precinct within the Second Congressional district, and outside of the one precinct of Plummerville there is not one particle of evidence that can be produced to show that there was any fraud of any character or description. It is true that some lawless parties did steal the ballot-box at Plummerville. It is a fact and can not be denied, and Major BRECKINRIDGE has never denied it. ernor Clayton, in his statement, says that it contained 572 votes for John M. Clayton and 125 votes for Breckingidge. Admit that it contained every vote he states it did and precisely as he claims, yet according to his own admission CLIFTON R. BRECKINRIDGE was honestly elected a member of the Fifty-first Congress by 399 majority.

Can anything be more absolutely unjust than to say that because he took the certificate, knowing that he was honestly elected, he in any way could have restrained or anticipated that some lawless assassin would take the life of John M. Clayton? Do Senators remember what indignation went up from many Republican papers throughout this Union when Garfield was shot down by an assassin upon the streets of Washington, and some Republican papers asserted that it could in some way have been prevented by the lamented ex-President Arthur? Was any blame to be attached to him because he was the next man in succession? Certainly not, Mr. President; and no man ever made such a charge except one who was full of bitter party malignity and was willing to resort to any means in his power to accomplish his own ends.

So it may be said in regard to Major BRECKINRIDGE. Having been honestly and fairly elected, holding the certificate as he had a right to hold it, because some one slew, without justification and without excuse, the man who was making the contest, can there be any reason for making an attack or an insinuation upon him?

These are the facts in regard to that matter, and because Colonel Clayton was assassinated as men have been assassinated in all the States of this Union, is that any reason why a bitter and malignant attack should be made upon the entire people of the State of Arkansas, who have done all that was in their power and who stand to-day united as one man in trying to ascertain and hunt down the assassin?

Mr. President, another assassination occurred in Arkansas in the days of reconstruction, when Powell Clayton, the man who signed that statement—not the deceased man—because John M. Clayton, the man who was killed, was a gentleman and a fair man in politics and in every other way—I say that when Powell Clayton had his foot upon the necks of the people of the State of Arkansas, General Tom C. Hindman, a man who was a member of Congress before the war, who had just retired after having made a gallant canvass on behalf of John M. Hank, the Democratic nominee, was shot down at the dark hour of night through his window in the presence of his own family and his own children. Governor Clayton at that time had control of the entire State government of Arkansas, backed by the Federal troops in Washington, and yet that assassin was never known, never arrested, never punished, and it is stated by some of the newspapers in my State—I do not know whether it is true or not-that no reward was offered or no effort made to arrest him.

My colleague and I stand here to-day to denounce in terms as bitter as we are capable of commanding the assassination of John M. Clayton. It has been denounced by our governor, by the Legislature, and by men in all parts of the State. Every effort is being made and has been made to raise money to hunt him down. I regret that his brother should have put forth a proclamation so unjust to those people. Governor Powell Clayton, upon the day of the burial of his brother, when many thousands of people had turned out to do honor to his memory and to attend his funeral, Democrats too, doubtless touched by the universal sympathy shown for him and his family by the universal effort to hunt down the assassin, is reported to have said to a reporter of Pine Bluff that he was incapable of undertaking to make political capital out of the blood of his murdered brother. I regret that when he made this statement, read by the Senator from New Hampshire, at a subsequent time he did not word it so as to avoid the charge of what he said he was incapable of making.

There may be some excuse for him, Mr. President. It may be that, smarting under the pain caused by the assassination of his brother, something might be excused for him and William H. H. Clayton in having made statements that were not justified by the facts; but there can be no excuse for those who know nothing of the facts, who are willing to use the body of John M. Clayton as a stepping-stone to their own political preferment by exciting the passions and prejudices of the people of the North against the entire Southern community.

This is all that I desire to say at present. As I said, before the de-bate is concluded we shall show that the charges made by Mr. Clayton have been denied and refuted by the governor of our own State and by the facts as they existed, and that they are not true as stated either in their details or in the inferences that may be drawn from them.

The Senator from Ohio moves that The PRESIDENT pro tempore. the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution the title of which has been read at the desk

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the Senator from New York proceeding?

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Texas objected.

Mr. COKE. Not to speaking.
Mr. HARRIS. Oh, upon the question of proceeding, of course not.
Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the vote will be taken on the question of taking up the resolution first.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent to be permitted to speak at present, the question not being debatable. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. EVARTS. So far as I could understand, the parliamentary situation in which I was placed was that everybody else was to have the privilege of speaking, but many gentlemen were to concur that I should not have an opportunity to speak on the merits. I ask that the resolution may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read

The Chief Clerk read the following resolution, reported by Mr. EVARTS from the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 4th instant:

Resolved. That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be directed carefully to revise the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress, with a view of providing for a more complete protection of the exercise of the elective franchise, and for the punishment of offenses against it, and to report to the next legislative session of the Senate by bill or otherwise.

Mr. EVARTS. Is there any one on either side of this Chamber who is opposed to the adoption of that resolution?

Mr. MORGAN. I am.
Mr. EVARTS. Not on account of the merits of the resolution, for it touches nothing but a deliberate examination by the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the existing legislation affecting the conduct of elections of members of Congress, with the purpose of ascertaining what improvements can be made in protection of the suffrage and in punishment of those who violate it. On what principle is it that any Senator can oppose a resolution of that kind on the merits of the resolution itself?

This is said to be an inopportune time for a consideration of that resolution. Why is it not the most opportune time? It is to give an opportunity for deliberation during the long interval between the 4th of March and the first Monday of December, and for a presentation then, as remote from election excitements as possible, for the consideration on both sides of this Chamber and at the other end of the Capitol of this great public question, a pur question of legislation, a question of legislation in the highest interests, and on a subject as remote as possible from any heats and excitements between the sections

Is it true that no matter which touches the welfare of this country in respect of elections can ever be entertained, ever be debated, without its being an occasion of heats and dissension, not on the merits, but on the prefixed opinions, prejudices, and attitudes of parts of this country? If that be so, then it must be admitted that so great is the antagonism between the two sections of the country that nothing but a truce between them can ever keep the peace in Congress or among the

The method that I had proposed and that the committee's report has proposed for treating this question was to open to the Senate the actual facts of the particular occurrences in Washington County, Texas, after the most ample and liberal opportunity of spreading on the record the opposing views, sentiments, recollections, views as to facts, from all the people of that neighborhood who had a say to say on the subject. I have no proposition to present as the basis of the action in the adoption or the rejection of the resolution but what falls within the compass of the facts shown in the testimony. Whatever difference there may be as to the aspect in which these views have presented themselves or will present themselves to opposing views and opposing disputants, there are within the covers of this report all the facts upon which we are to decide whether it is wise, useful, and beneficial to adopt the resolution; and if gentlemen are to liberate themselves from this precise point of consideration it is upon their own choice, and not under any duty for the discussion of this matter bearing upon the adoption of the resolution.

I agree that the Senator from Tennessee is right in presenting those circumstances of the public business which may make it undesirable that an undue use of time should be spent upon any subject of debate; but when he goes further and gives the considerations which he thinks should preclude this debate now from the inflammations and excitements, the criminations and recriminations, and the disturbance of the peace of this country, I submit to him that he goes too far, because it it is not opportune now upon those considerations when can it be opportune? We are as far from the election as it is possible to be. We are looking back upon the occurrences after time and reflection have reduced to the most moderate exhibition the irritations, vexations, and We therefore have a naked proposition of parliamentary wisdom in adopting the resolution, and the limits of debate are upon the most careful scrutiny of the facts enabling us to say what relation that has to the question of the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. President, I have not expected to be accused of undue desire for parliamentary declamation. My maiden political speech, it seems, is to be made on this subject. To my mind it is a subject that ought, by common consent on each side of this Chamber, to be regarded as a matter as far removed as possible from a purely political debate. It is a debate in which every degree of intelligence and, if you please, every degree of patriotic fervor should be shed upon this matter, but it is as far removed as possible from the mere divisions of political interests.

I therefore must hope that, without being overawed by the threat of the consumption of time and the prolixity of debate, to which I shall contribute nothing, we may not be deterred from taking up an important resolution and proceeding to its adoption by the Senate.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent to be heard, the proposition not being debatable.

Mr. HOAR. I must object to further debate until the resolution is taken up. Three Senators have spoken on each sice, so the matter has been fairly stated.

The PRESIDENT protempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Ohio that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution which has been read.

So the motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution is before the Senate,

The Chief Clerk read the resolution reported by Mr. EVARTS, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, February 4, 1889, as fol-

Resolved. That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be directed carefully to revise the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress with a view of providing for a more complete protection of the exercise of the elective franchise and for the punishment of offenses against it, and to report to the next legislative session of the Senate by bill or otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to make a suggesstion to the Senator from New York who reports this resolution, in order to economize the few remaining days of this Congress and avoid drifting into an irritating sectional debate, which is inevitable, in my opinion, if this discussion proceeds. I venture to express the opinion that if the Senator from New York and other Senators upon that side of the Chamber will consent to the passage of this resolution without debate, there will be no serious objection to its passage made upon this side of the Chamber. I simply desire to submit that suggestion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on agreeing to the resolution?

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, I should be very glad to keep the debate within bounds, but I think it is right to the Senate that the committee reporting the resolution should be permitted to lay before the Senate the occurrence upon which they have placed it, and in that point of view it does not seem to me quite proper that we should be asked to refrain from the presentation of this matter. It will be wholly optional with other Senators how far they may think it necessary to reply. For myself I shall not deem it a part that I nowam to execute in this matter beyond laying before the Senate, so that all will appreciate it, I think (because all may not have read the report, certainly all have not read the testimony), what the real basis of inquiry and what the true limits of consideration are. Therefore I think I must ask the indulgence of the Senate.

Mr. PUGH. Will the Senator yield to me to make the statement that the Democratic members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections wholly dissent from the views and conclusions contained in the report of the majority of the committee? Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator from New York does not wish to proceed this evening, as the hour has nearly arrived at which we usually adjourn, I will submit a motion to adjourn; but I leave it entirely to his own good will.

Mr. EVARTS. I would prefer to go on so that I could complete within a reasonable hour to-morrow the observations I am to make.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Qhio to move an adjournment.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator from New York assents, I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. PALMER. I ask the Senator from Ohio to withhold his motion for a moment until I may have a bill passed for which there is urgent necessity and which will provoke no discussion.

Mr. MORGAN. I object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 13, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

SOUTH CAROLINA CONTESTED ELECTION-SMALLS VS. ELLIOTT.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Elections I united with the majority in their report in the case of Smalls against Elliott. In a discussion of this case I shall endeavor to confine myself to the record. Much has been said entirely outside of the record, and which does not bear at all upon the case. At the threshold of my remarks I desire to refer to the violent attacks which have been made by the gentleman representing the minority, or by the gentleman who united in the minority report and who spoke on yesterday—I refer to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rowell]—upon the election laws of South Carolina. I imagine, sir, from the vigorous style in which that distinguished gentleman attacked those election laws, that he was not aware that he was introducing a boomerang, or something that would shoot backwards as well as forwards. He attacked the election laws upon the ground, first, that there is no provision made for the opening of the polls where the regular managers do not attend, and proceeded to criticise the Democratic party in connection with such laws. I desire to say to you, sir, and to the House, that the prevailing laws of South Carolina, so far as these refer to the managers of elections and to the conduct of elections at the polls, are precisely the laws which were given to the State of South Carolina by the Republican party.

The Republican party enacted the laws which provide for the appointment of managers to conduct the elections, but made no provision whatever for the opening of the polls where the managers did not attend. These laws stand to-day as the Republican party gave them to the State of South Carolina in the heyday of their power. They were passed by the Republicans in 1870 and were incorporated in the codification of the statutes prepared by the Hon. David T. Corbin, an eminent lawyer, who was the Republican United States district attorney, was voted for by the Republicans in 1876 for United States Senator, and contested unsuccessfully for Senator Butler's seat. This codification of the statutes was adopted in 1872 by a Republican Legislature. It contains no provision for the opening of the polls where the managers fail to appear at the polls to conduct the election.

Now, sir, upon the other point made by the gentleman as to the registration of voters. Under the military government of South Carolina registration was required. Then when the constitutional convention met it incorporated in the constitution, known as the reconstructed constitution, a provision requiring the Legislature to enact registration laws. The Republican Legislature enacted registration laws and they stood for some time; but the Republicans, finding that these laws did not suit their purposes, repealed them, and there was no registration law for some time after that in the State of South Carolina. During this time when there were no registration laws the greatest frauds were perpetrated. The Democratic party finally passed the registration laws which exist now. I stand here to declare that these laws are fair, and that they are laws similar to the registration laws in all the other States of this Union that have registration laws. The registration books are open on the first Monday of twenty months out of every twenty-four months. The first Monday in August, September, October, and November, the four months preceding a general election— they have elections in South Carolina only once in every two years, unless there be a special election—the registration books are open and every man has a right to go and register if he is qualified to register.

If the voter is refused registration by the registrar, or supervisor of registration as he is called, he has the right of appeal; first, to a board of registration—I do not know what the particular title of the board is, but I think it is the board of registration—he has the right to appeal to that board, and if that board rejects his claim to registration, he has another right to appeal to the court. Every opportunity is given to a citizen to register and to qualify himself to vote in the State of South Carolina.

So much for this, Mr. Speaker.

Now, sir, I propose to come down to a discussion of the points made by the distinguished gentlemen who united in the minority report. They specify, sir, as one of a series of frauds which they allege was put on foot to defeat Smalls the fact that with but few exceptions all the State officers of election were Democrats.

There are, sir, in this district, unless I have made a mistake, four entire counties and twenty-eight townships in four other counties, and these embrace very many precincts, and only thirteen or fourteen of these precincts are even attacked for any alleged frauds or improper conduct.

Now, if the appointment of Democratic officers only was part of a system inaugurated to carry the election by fraud, why was it that with everything in their own hands the scheme was only carried out at these few precincts? Why was the majority returned for Elliott so meager? Why was it that so few men out of many who had, it is alleged, entered into a conspiracy to defraud the voters should go forward in their fraudulent undertaking?

Will it be said that it was because the hearts of many failed them, and that they withdrew from the work for which they had been selected and upon which they agreed to enter? Men who are bold enough to agree to go forward in an enterprise of that kind are not the men generally to recede or to part company with those of their comrades who incur the risks and dangers incident to it. They are usually men of desperation and nerve, and possess at least the characteristics of reckless law-breakers and violators of law, and of fidelity to their associates.

But this sweeping charge is met by the testimony in this case with a refutation so strong that it sinks beneath the flood-tide of truth into an abyss so bottomiess that no plummet could ever sound its depths.

Preconcerted, prearranged system of fraud! Ha! men whose characters, as shown by the evidence, are as pure as any in the land, as high as that of any gentleman who united in the minority report; men against whose purity and uprightness not even any blinded and soul-cankered partisan of the contestant ever dared in his lingo to assail, are arraigned before the country as malefactors and criminals.

Not only are they arraigned, but the judicial officers of the State of South Carolina who appointed them are arraigned as the very inaugurators of a wholesale system of reeking fraud and desperate violation of law and conscience.

Mr. Speaker, I must say, with all due deference to the distinguished gentlemen who make this charge, that I have never before seen emanating from minds learned in the law and trained to regard above price a fair name, and to hold more sacred than riches a spotless character, and to elevate in public esteem the judiciary, such a baseless and unjustifiable charge, and I meet it with a direct, positive, and emphatic denial.

Now comes the charge that the Seventh Congressional district of South Carolina "was created for the express purpose of consolidating the bulk of the colored vote of the State in one district," and then to capture the district, and that three lines of fraudulent action were determined upon and successfully carried out.

So far as the reference to the manner in which the district was formed is concerned, I need say but little. The purpose may have been, and probably was, to throw the bulk of the colored vote into one district. If so, what of it? Was there anything fraudulent in that? If what is termed "gerrymandering" be fraudulent, then the Republican party of this country has been guilty of the most stupendous frauds that ever blockened the history of any party and all its loader in that ever blackened the history of any party, and all its leaders in every State where it has had control are steeped in fraud from crown to toe.

How many States in this Union are to-day held by that party in Congressional and legislative representation because of "gerrymandering?" How many gentlemen on the other side of this Chamber come from "fixed-up" or "gerrymandered" districts? Why is it there are but "fixed-up" or "gerrymandered" districts? Why is it there are but two Democratic Representatives out of a representation of seven on this floor from the State of New Jersey, when that State has gone Democratic in every national election for years? Why is it that the great State of New York is represented by nineteen Republicans and only fifteen Democrats in this Congress, when she has gone Democratic in every election for nearly twenty years?

Why is it that the little State of Connecticut will have a delegation equally divided in the next Congress when she has stood in contest after contest as firm as a rock in Democratic faith?

These questions are easily answered. It has been by reason of the arrangement of Congressional and legislative districts years ago by the Republican party in the days of its ascendency, and which has enabled it to perpetuate its power in the legislative branches of this Govern-

I claim for the Democrats of South Carolina the same rights exercised by the Republicans in New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut. If the action of the Legislature of South Carolina be wrong, then let her accusers come from some other party than the party which has this hour five out of six Senators and twenty-five out of forty-five Representatives from these three Democratic States, all the result of the "gerrymandering" process of Republican Legislatures. So much for this reference in the minority report.

The gentlemen lay down as two of the three lines they allege were devised to capture the district a systematic and studied effort to deny to colored voters the right to register and to change their registration certificates, and to reject registered voters at the polls.

Now, sir, let us see upon what testimony the minority report basse its charge that colored voters were denied the right to register and to change their certificates.

The gentlemen rely upon the testimony of about 13 colored voters to prove that colored men were denied the right to register. Eight of them were from Concord precinct, four from Sumter, and one from Statesburgh. Ten of them from their own lips show that when they applied to register the crowds were large, each man pushing and jostling those around him, and the registrar registering rapidly and working faithfully. The other three applied to be registered when the books were not open under the law for general registration, but only for those who had just become of age, and they not falling in that class were properly denied.

After searching the district the contestant was able to find out of the thousands of colored voters just ten voters who had not been able to register because they applied when the numbers registering were so great that the registrars could not reach them. If they had registered them, of course there would have been ten others who would have been cut out. He found three who complained that the registrars would not register them because it was not registration day for any in their class. He found only these little, insignificant, frivolous things at three precincts, and upon them an attempt is made to build a mountain of fraud.

Oh! what "snappers-up of unconsidered trifles!"

What else did the contestant find upon which the minority have feasted their souls? He found nine men at four precincts who thought they were improperly denied the right to vote by the judges. Upon cross-examination in every instance it was shown that they had either changed their residence, parish, ward, precinct, or county and had no transfer, or did not live at the places named it their certificates.

Three men, by the names of Smith, Lowry, and Turney, testified that at three precincts, one of them being at each, a number of voters with certificates were not allowed to vote. Only one of them pretended to know why they were not allowed to vote, and he said the managers said their names were not on the registration books; the very best reason for the refusal of the judges to allow them to vote.

I will not insult the intelligence of this House by asking whether that testimony proves anything or is worth the paper upon which it is

This constitutes the foundation upon which the gentlemen stand to prove two of the lines adopted, according to their allegation, to capture the "Black district" by frand, and I leave the House in reason and conscience to determine its strength. If such stuff can be made to carry with it any weight in passing upon the question of the high privilege of a member of this Congress, then indeed can many gentlemen who are now enjoying the serenity of uncontested seats on this floor thank their stars their seats were not contested.

I come now to the last of "the three lines" selected "to capture the Black district," as charged by the gentlemen of the minority-the rejection of polls.

They attack the action of the canvassing boards in rejecting the votes cast at Brick Church, Brick Episcopal Church, Sandy Island, Cedar Creek, Grier's, Santee, and Gadsden. The majority agree with the minority that the votes cast at Cedar Creek and Grier's should have been counted, but they deny that the canvassing boards were guilty of fraud or that the rejection was with the intention to defraud.

At Cedar Creek only one of the officers was sworn, and for that reason the board rejected the poll. The vote there was Smalls 18, Elliott

This is counted.

At Grier's there were irregularities of a dangerous character, and while the majority entertain doubt as to whether the vote at this precinct should be counted, they give the benefit of the doubt to the contestant, and count 65 votes for him and 4 for Elliott at this box.

The majority say in regard to Sandy Island:

This precinct is not included in the notice of contest, and hence the evidence referring to it should not be considered. It is well settled that a contestant can not make any points in his contest which are not in his notice of contest, citing McCrary on Elections, section 343.

But I assume that it was hardly necessary to cite McCrary or any other authority upon this point. The principle that evidence must be confined to the allegations is so fundamental that even a horn-book lawyer knows and understands it, and I am surprised that any notice should have been taken of this precinct by the gentlemen who united in the minority report.

We come now to the consideration of the precincts known as Brick Church, Brick Episcopal Church, Santee, and Gadsden, and will consider them in the order named.

The Brick Church (St. Helena Island) poll was rejected because not only of irregularities, but because of the disorder, riotous conduct, threats, and bulldozing of Smalls and his friends and supporters, who virtually took possession of the polls, and for days before the election and on the day of election inaugurated a reign of terror on the island.

I know, Mr. Speaker, this statement will be contested by the distinguished gentlemen of the minority; but if any reliance can be placed in human testimony the preponderance of evidence is so overwhelmingly in favor of the action of the board as to bring conviction.

I repeat that a perfect reign of terror was inaugurated by Smalls and his supporters on the island of St. Helena and Ladies' Island and in Beaufort during the canvass of 1886. No man can take the evidence and read it, it seems to me, without being impressed with the fact that the election at these points that year was but a travesty upon the elective franchise, and that "the free ballot" in the South, for which our Republican friends have been so clamorous, was trampled under the merciless feet of the man whom they are seeking to seat on this floor and his wild and inflamed partisans.

In order that this testimony may be presented to this House I have gathered it together in a condensed shape and will read it:

J. G. Cole (Record, 542); lives on Ladies' Island; born in Woburn, Mass.; graduated at Hartford, class 1862; went to South Carolina May, 1863; was Government superintendent of abandoned plantations; has lived on Ladies' Island twenty-one years. Since Hampton was elected governor in 1876 there has been a strong tendency on part of colored voters to vote the Democratic ticket. A general system of threats, in-timidation, and bulldozing has been inaugurated to check this tendency and prevent colored men from voting the Democratic ticket.

At the election in 1886 this system was very successful, and on the day of the election colored Democrats were denounced as "Democratic dogs and bob-tail dogs," and threats were made "to kill them" and "drive them from the island" if they voted the Democratic ticket. A club of women was organized to beat all who so voted, who were present around and about the polls on election day, and in consequence of all this large numbers were frightened into voting the Republican ticket or deterred from voting the Democratic ticket. Smalls, the contestant, was the ring-leader and principal instigator of this system. Emanuel Haynes (Record, 547); lives on Ladies' Island. a Democratic club of colored women organized, and he heard Republicans inciting and advising colored boys "to chunk them," and saw Aaron Allston (Record, 551); lives on Ladies' Island. He was a member of a church, preparing for the ministry, and he was told by some of his church brethren that if he voted the Democratic ticket he ought to be shot, and he should not preach in the church; that he ought to be run off the island, and his life was threatened. He was the manager of a Sabbath school, and some of the children were taken away from the school because their parents were not willing that they should be taught by a "Democratic negro." The women had a club to keep the men from voting the Democratic ticket, and they were present at the polls on election with canes and sticks and threatening to use them on all colored Democrats.

Robert Houston (Record, 553); lives on Ladies' Island:

Smalls said in his speech if I voted the Democratic ticket my wife must drive me out of the house, they must turn me out of the church; and told his followers tell all colored men if they voted the Democratic ticket they would have to leave the island. On the day of the election the women were on hand with sticks, and said they were going to mob every man who voted the Democratic Tarquin Small (Record, 555); lives on Ladies' Island. Threats were made against colored men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket, to drive the last one off the island, no matter whether he owned land or not, and women and boys were advised to lash them. He said if Elliott came over to the island "he would wish to God" he had never seen it. He says "We were called Elliott bob-tailed dogs" and he himself was pelted by a lot of boys. He is a cousin of the contestant.

William Lockwood (Record, 557); li es on Ladies' Island. On day before the election there was a political meeting on the island. women were out in large numbers, all armen with sticks, and said they had the sticks to kill | emocratic dogs with. Smalls spoke at this meeting, and said that any woman that was married to a Democratic man the woman must kick him out of the house, and if any man's daughter was married to a Democratic dog he must kick them out too. and on election day everything should be peaceable, and after the poll was closed they could do as they chose. The excitement and feeling against those who were supposed to vote the Democratic ticket was strong and they were in great danger.

Tom Bonner (Record, 558); lives on Ladies' Island. He heard a prominent Republican, a delegate to the convention which nominated the contestant, say "that they intended to carry the island if they had to kill every damn man on it." On day of election crowds of women were on hand with clubs, and switches threatening to white out bill were on hand with clubs and switches threatening to whip out, kill out, and drive out men who voted the Democratic ticket, and that they would lie in wait for them. He left about 3 or 4 o'clock in the evening "because it appeared that there was going to be a mob fight or killing out," and that the colored men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket were kept in a continuous state of fear and alarm and generally left the polls before sundown.

Henry Holly (Record, 560); lives on Ladies' Island. Women were about with clubs, sticks, and switches, and said they were going to whip any one who voted the Democratic ticket. When he returned from the polls in the evening he went out of his way rather than pass a crowd of women for fear of being attacked by them.

Felix C. Bonner (Record, 562). Attended a Democratic mass meeting at Beaufort some days before the election of 1886 as a member of a Democratic club. After the meeting the club on its march was followed by a crowd of boys, young men and women, whooping and hallooing, "Look at the Democratic negroes, we will get you to-night before you leave this town." Was at the polls on Ladies' Island on day of election; the women were going around with club, threatening and saying, "We will kill you Democratic negroes to-night." One day after the election he was attacked by a crowd of five or six and barely scaped serious injury, the crowd using these words: "We intend to kill every Democratic negro that fools around here; if they do vote the Democratic ticket they shan't own it round here."

F. D. J. Lawrence (Record, 567); lives in Beaufort; born and raised there; is an attorney-at-law and a trial justice for Beaufort County; learned to read and write as a slave; at the breaking out of the war joined the Federal Army and held the position of first sergeant, Company E, Thirty-fourth United States Colored Volunteers; was engaged in several battles; was shot twice in the battle of Honey Hill; was promoted to quartermaster-sergeant; was honorably discharged and afterwards enlisted in Fortieth Regiment, United States Regulars, and is drawing a pension as a wounded soldier. He says:

I heard Mr. Robert Smalls, the contestant, say on more than one occasion in a public speech in Beaufort, among other things he said, that any colored woman that had a Democratic husband, she should put him out of the house, and not allow him to come in there by any means, and could have his assistance, and in consequence of this speech I know of several cases where husband and wife have been separated. There is no such thing in Beaufort County as a free election and a fair count among the Republicans. I have been a Democrat in Charleston County for a number of years, and voted unmolested; but I am told, here in Beaufort County, that this is a Republican county, and no nigger can yote here for the Democrats. I have a daughter, a young lady, who attends public school in the town of Beaufort, who has been abused more than once on account of her father being a Democrat. I had to stop her from the school until I saw the principal in reference to this matter. I complained to him by letter and have his reply; not only her but my family, my wife, and myself have been ostracized in the church and socially, and felt the estrangement keenly, on account of my political views. ostranzed in the cutred and socially, and left the estrangement keenly, on account of my political views.

Q. What methods are usually resorted to by Republicans to keep colored men from voting the Democratic ticket?

A. They usually adopt a bulldozing system among the leaders, teaching them to abuse and make remarks and threats generally.

Q. Do they carry this system into the churches?

A. Yes, into the churches and into the social circles. I am a member of the Baptist Church; my wife is a member of the Methodist Church. I have been abused from the Methodist pulpit by one Rev. Blakely on account of my politics, and in consequence of this conduct I prevented my family from attending that church. From observation among the colored people from 76 down to the present I think they had their fear about voting the Democratic ticket until after the election of General Hampton, but from the general benefit they received by the reduction of taxes under Democratic administration the better class of colored people are all Democrats, and would vote the Democratic ticket as a whole except for the ostracism and threats from the Republican leaders. I have talked with them in regard to the exodus scheme, when Hampton was first elected, about going to Africa, saying to them that it was all a scheme to make money by Republican leaders. A large number of them since that time are convinced, and told me it was a bigger swindle than the Freedman's Bank, and are sorry that they sold their property and put their money in the "Azor." They say at the next Presidential election they will all vote the Democratic ticket for President; that they see no difference except that the Republican leaders taxed them, while under Democratic administration they have been free from taxation for campaign purposes.

Q. Then, from your observation and knowledge of political campaigns in Beaufort County, were the colored people free to vote as they pleased?

A. No.

Q. Was the pressure brought to bear by the Republicans of such a character as to deter colored men from voting the Democratic ticket?

A. Most assuredly; a colored man could not vote the Democratic ticket unless he did it secretly.

Q. Had it not been for the intimidation practiced by the Republicans would there not have been a very much larger colored vote polled for Mr. Elliott at the last election?

A. I think so.

George Rivers (Record, 575); lives on St. Helena Island; fifty-four years of age:

Q. How long have you lived on St. Helena Island?
A. Well, about twenty years.
Q. Do you own property on St. Helena; land I mean?
A. Yes; about 25 acres.
Q. Were you at the Federal poll, held on St. Helena Island, at the last election held for Congressman?
A. Yes; I was.
Q. Was the election carried on quietly and orderly at that poll?
A No sir; not that day.

A. Yes; I was.
Q. Was the election carried on quietly and orderly at that poll?
A. No, sir; not that day.
Q. What was the behavior of the Republicans on that day at the polls?
A. There was a big excitement on that day from the Republican leaders.
Q. Were there any women there that day?
A. Yes, sir; there were women there with clubs and sticks. In that time Mr. Gantt, a leader of the Republicans, and a crowd of men, said to Mr. Fripp, "It wasn't right nor lawful to have two Democratic constables; "in that time a crowd of men rushed up to take them out of the house, and caused the polls to close about fifteen minutes, or a little over.
Q. Were there any threats or abuse of Democrats by Republicans at the polls that day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did they threaten to do with colored Democrats, or men who should vote the Democratic ticket?
A. They threatened; they were not fitted or capable to stay on the island; they ought to be driven off.
Q. Did they say anything about Dr. White having been beaten in Beaufort the election before?
A. Yes, sir; "That's what ought to be done to these Democrat rascals on this island, and we are going to do it, too;" that is what they said.
Q. Did the crowd of women you speak of, with clubs and sticks, remain there all day?
A. Yes, sir; they remained there all day pretty much, with their threats and abuse.
Q. Do you know whether or not there was any row or disturbance at that poll during the day?

Q. Do you know whether or not there was any row or disturbance at that poll during the day?

Q. Do you own any land on St. Helena?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you a Democrat or a Republican in the last political campaign?
A. I was a Democrat.
Q. Did you belong to any Democratic club?
Yes sir.

Yes, sir. What office did you hold, if any, in your club?

Secretary.
Who was the president of your club?
George Rivers.

How many members did you have in your club during the last campaign?

AQAQAQAQ

Q. How many members did you have in your club during the last campaign?
A. Fifty.
Q. Were you at the Federal poll on St. Helena Island at the last election?
Was the election at that poll quiet and orderly or not?
A. Yes, I was there; the election was not quiet and orderly.
Q. Were there any disturbances?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By whom were they made—Democrats or Republicans?
A. Republicans; Hastings Gantt.
Q. Was the poll closed at any time during that day in consequence of disturbances?

ances?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did the Republicans behave at and around the polls on that day toward the Democrats?
A. They made a great threatening.
Q. Was the conduct of the Republicans on that day such as to intimidate and make the Democrats afraid?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were there or not a large crowd of women at and about the Federal poll during the day of election?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did they have anything in their hands?
A. A great many had clubs.
Q. Were they Democratic or Republican women?
A. Republican.
Q. Now, you stated that the Republicans made great threatening at the polls; was that threatening done only by men or by men and women?
A. By men and women.
Q. In consequence of the threats and behavior of the Republicans about the poll, were or not the Democrats very timid about voting?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it or not a fact that only the boldest men among the Democrats dared to vote at that poll?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In consequence of the conduct of the Republicans at the poll, was there or not great fear among the Democrats that there would be a riot and injury done to themselves?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that the poll had to be closed during the day on account of the disturbances. How many times do you know of its having been closed during

A. Three times,
Q. Now, before the day of election and during the political campaign were there or not many threats made by the Republicans on St. Helena Island against men who should vote the Democratic ticket?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Had it not been for the threats and abuse of the Republicans would there or not have been a very large vote at that poll for Mr. Elliott?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was not the whole vote on St. Helena Island at the last election much smaller than in previous elections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there or not a great many voters kept from voting on account of the threats and abuses of the Republicans?

(Objected to on the ground that the answer could be nothing more than the witness's opinion.)

A. Yes, sir.

Chance Green (Record, 584):

Q. Give your name, age, and residence.
A. Chance Green; am forty-seven years old; and live on St. Helena Island, Beaufort County.
Q. Are you a colored or a white man?
A. Colored.
Q. Were you at the Federal poll on St. Helena Island at the last election?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the election at that poll peaceable and orderly or not?
A. No, sir.
Q. Tell us how it was.
A. On the 2d day of November, in the morning at 7 o'clock, I went to the poll to issue tickets, and as quick as I get up to the poll there were twenty men standing, saying to me, "Morning, Green; are you going to issue tickets to-day?" I said, "I am going to issue Democratic tickets are you going to issue;" I said, "I am going to issue Democratic tickets to-day;" they said, "Give us your tickets, because we have got to vote these tickets quick and get home; we promised to vote the Democratic ticket;" and I issued the tickets to them, and the first man that went up to the poll was Jonas Howard. He had a Democratic ticket, and he went up on the platform, and a great crowd of mans come up and tell him to come off the platform. "If you don't come off there we will kill him." Jonas Howard said, "Let me alone, I vote for who I choose," and the same time when he said so, as quick as he speak the word, they took him down and tear up the tickets and tear his coat. And I gave him another ticket, and I told him to go and poll it, and I followed him to see if they would touch him again, and after I got up there he took the ticket from me and I went with him, and myself couldn't go up, for the threats they made on me and him. I told him (Jonas) to wait awhile, and I leave him in the road standing up. I went off a piece about a task; in the road I saw six men with clubs go up to him and order him home from the poll; they told him to go home from the poll; they told him to go home from the poll if he intends to vote for the Democratic ticket, and I can in the road standing up. I went off a piece about a task; in the road I saw six men with went home.

2. He didn't vote that day, then?

A. No, sir.
Q. Were these men who interfered with Jonas Howard Democrats or Republicans?

licans?

A. Republicans.
Q. Why did those men to whom you issued tickets say that they would have to vote quickly and get home or get away?

A. Because they feared the Republican men would threaten them, to kill them and abuse them. They promised that they would do that, and would turn them out of the church. After Howard went off I said to the crowd of Republican men there, "Why don't you let a man vote the way he likes? When I was a Republican I let a man vote to his own mind." They hallooed to me from the crowd of them, "You need not say anything; you have been leading us twelve years, and you are going to lead the Democratic party now on the island, we are instructed by our leading mans now that any colored man that vote Democratic now must be killed on the island, or run him off the island."

B. C. Chisolm (Record, 595); lived on St. Helena Island; had lived there from birth. His church threatened to turn him out as a committee man, and he was told if he voted for Elliott he must not come into their prayer-house any more.

His pastor told him if he voted the Democratic ticket he deserved to be turned out of church. He did not vote.

He says the Republican men and women on the island were down on the Democrats and would say wherever a Democrat appeared, "Here comes a Democrat dog with long tail. They no better than a dog."

Roland White (Record, 612); lived on St. Helena Island. He testi-fies as to threats, intimidation, and violence upon the part of the colored Republicans.

James Jenkins (Record, 614); lived on St. Helena Island; lived there all his life:

Q. You hold any position in any of the churches on St. Helena Island?
A. An officer of the First Baptist Church at Scottsville.
Q. During the last political campaign were any threats made against colored men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket?
A. Yes, sir. When I went that morning to the Federal poll the people said that if they find out I vote the Democratic ticket they will kill me with a whipping; and the officer of my church said if he find out I vote the Democ cratic ticket be will turn me out of my deaconship and turn me out of church besides, and told me that the poorest kind of man vote the Democratic ticket. I tell him, "I never vote the Democratic ticket yet, but this time, for the way they done Sheppard, I'll vote the Democratic ticket." I went to a meeting one night before the election. Abram Scott was chairman, and before I got to the door—about 100 feet off—I saw the lamp put out and heard, "Kill him! kill him!" so I turned back and whistled and then Abram Scott and David Simmons came up and we went back on the creek side. We could not take the road at all.

at all.

Q. Why could you not come out in the road?
A. Because women with hoes were out there, and we were afraid of being killed; so we had to take the creek side.
Q. Why did the people gather there against you?
A. They called us Democrats.
Q. Did they make those threats common about on the island?
A. Yes. No longer than this morning I went to my cousin's house, where I always get a horse when I go to Beaufort, but his wife said, "Don't give him a horse; he is a Democrat, and he is going to see a gang of Democrats."

W. H. Parelson (Paccal 616).

W. H. Bartless (Record, 616):

Q. Give your name, age, residence, and occupation.

A. W. H. Bartless; forty-four years old; live in Beaufort, Beaufort County; am a lumber manufacturer by occupation.

Q. State in what part of the town your residence is located.

A. At Green's Ferry.

Q. On the 22d day of October last, the day of the Democratic mass-meeting in the town of Beaufort, did you witness any disturbance ator near Green's Ferry? If so, state what it was, and give the circumstances.

A. I was over at the saw-mill, near the ferry, at work. I heard a great noise up the street, yelling and whooping, the street that leads to the ferry, so much so that I left my work and went out to the fence to see what the matter was. I saw two or three colored men running from a crowd of half-grown boys and women who were throwing brickbats at them. One man was bleeding from a wound in the head; the air was full of bricks; some fell in my mill yard, and some struck my kitchen across the street. Upon inquiry I found that the men who were being brick-batted were members of the Ladies' Island Colored Democratic Club. I spoke to the crowd; caused them to stop brick-batting, and telephoned for the town marshal, who I believe made one or two arrests. He did not commit any one, but turned them loose again. The men went down to the ferry and seemed to be very much intimidated. They went across the ferry some time in the afternoon. I saw a hack go down there with one or two men in it; I think it was Doc Day's hack; thinking there might be further violence, I went down to the ferry; did not see any further violence offered, but heard a good deal of loud talking; was not near enough to hear what was said.

Q. During the day, and before this occurrence of which you speak, had you heard any threats made upon the streets of Beaufort?

A. Yes; I heard a good many threats; I heard them say "Wait until night and we will fix them;" don't know as I can name any particular one, but think Doc Day's was one.

And we will a titled, and the body of the

A. Peter Green.
Q. Who has the ferry to which you have alluded?
A. Peter Green.
Q. Do you know whether he is related to Sammy Green or not?
A. Ibelieve he is a brother of his; a few days before the election I was down at the ferry where the boats were landing; one of the boats had just pushed off; Sammy Green was in that boat, and remarked to an old colored man that came up, that "No Democrat could go in that boat," meaning a colored Democrat.

crat.

Q. Was the old man intending to go over that ferry?

A. That was my impression; they had some words, and I heard the old man say that he intended to vote for Elliott and that Sammy Green could not run the whole island; he, the old man, was not intimidated; he was a plucky old

Q. From what you saw and heard on the day of the meeting referred to, and at other times in the town of Beaufort, would you or not say that it required a great deal of pluck and boldness in a colored man to vote the Democratic ticket?

A. Yes; it required the highest order of courage.

Paris Thurman (Record, 619); lived on St. Helena Island. He went to the election for purpose of voting. Went away without voting. He saw such an uproar and heard so much threatening, being old thought it better to get out of the way. He intended to vote for Elliott.

A. B. Colonel (Record, 619); lived on St. Helena Island. During the war was a soldier in Thirty-fourth Regiment Colored Troops, United States Army. He testifies to threats and the character of them, as follows:

follows:

Q. What kind of threats did they make?

A. They made threats like this, that every man that voted for the Democrat party, they ought to club together and kill every one out; that they ought to meet and kill me in particular. I can call the man's name who told me this; his name is Joseph Jenkins; then I asked him, "Why do you want me to die more particular than you?" and he said, "You Democrat niggers are just selling your wives and children to the rebels." I said to him, "If I am a Democrat, tell me how I voted," and he could not tell. This I said to him after the election; the first part of my answer is what he said to me was before the election. Before the election Cyrus Jenkins threatened me in the same manner; took up a stick at the church and hit me two licks because I advocated Colonel Elliott.

Q. Do you know whether they made threate context the Tenesteened.

Eliott.

Q. Do you know whether they made threats against the Democrats in common all over the island?

A. Yes; just in the same manner as I have stated; some said they, the Democrats, should be feathered and burnt, and some said they ought to be turned out of the church; the deacons of the church said so; they had a meeting on it.

Q. What about the women?

A. A good deal of them talked in the same manner; they wanted to be crosser than the men; my wife herself was cross with me.

Q. On the day of the election did you go to the Congressional poll?

A. Yes; I went there to vote late in the evening.

Q. Were many women about the polls?

A. Yes; a great many women, to both of the polls.

Q. Was the threatening and abuse carried on on the island by the Republicans such as to keep colored men from voting for Colonel Elliott?

A. Yes; it was.

Q. If it had not been for such threats would not a great many more votes have been polled for Mr. Elliott?

A. Yes; about 300 votes I think he would have got if it had not been for those threats.

Q. Since the election what is the condition of things?
A. Carrying on most the same way, right now.
Q. Are you a white or a colored man?
A. Colored man.

Boston Williams (Record, 617); lived on St. Helena Island:

Q. Did you attend any of the Republican meetings on St. Helena during the last campaign?

A. Yes; one of them.
Q. Did you hear Robert Smalls speak at that meeting?
A. Yes; I got there at the time he was about half through.
Q. What, if anything, did he say about colored men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket?
A. He said it was not right, and he wished an earthquake would swallow the last one who did it; that's all I heard.
Q. Did he say anything to the women?
A. Not as I heard.
Q. Before the election was there much threstening against the colored Democrats on the island?
A. Yes; the women were doing more than the men.
Q. What kind of threats did they make?
A. Theyasked us what we meant by holding the Democratic club, and I said for myself that I meant to vote it, and they said to me that if I vote it that I will have to find another home to go to, not on St. Helena; and one of the women came up and said that we men were joking, and I said "Not me;" and she said "We will see at the day of election."
Q. Did you go to the Federal poll to vote on the day of election?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were any threats made against you that day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know whether or not people were prevented from voting that day on account of the threats?
A. I was to Mr. McDonald's, and I came out and met a young man who was in the same lodge, and he asked me had I voted? I told him no. He said, "Do you mean to vote for Colonel Elliott?" I told him, "Yes; this time I'm going to vote for him." And he said to me that "I better mind how I pass among those women, and using the question about voting for Elliott, because they will hurt you, I believe," Then I asked him, "Have anny of them been after you?" And he said, "No, not after me in particular," but he believed it by what he seen done to another fellow there; that was his reason for telling me to be mindful. And in the mean time, while we were talking, some women came along from Nichols's, and said to me, "To-day is the day to throw away all foolishness," and I said, "That I don Jack Freeman (Record, 625); lived on St. Helena Island; intended to vote for Elliott, but did not. He testified that he met Smalls in Beaufort, and Smalls said to men standing around him, "You boys ought to tie him [Freeman] and lick him." He further testifies that on the day before the election he was taken down by force from a platform, from which he was issuing Elliott tickets, by fifty or sixty men.

J. C. Mardenborough (Record, 603); lived at Port Royal, Beaufort County; was born in New York City; graduated from Howard University, Washington; studied law in New York City; was admitted to practice in supreme court of that city and afterwards in the State of South Carolina. Been a resident of Beaufort County since 1877; was appointed postmaster by President Hayes in 1880, and held that tion until he resigned in 1885. He was first introduced as a witness by the contestant, and his credibility is therefore vouched for.

His testimony is too lengthy; I can not read it. I refer the House to it. It will well pay for a careful perusal, as showing the most shameful system of intimidation and bulldozing by Smalls and his fol-

March Aiken (Record, 294); lived on St. Helena Island. This man was introduced as a witness by the contestant and proved to be an un-fortunate witness for him, for he testified that Democrats were threatened and were told that they should not be allowed on the island, and many that were to vote the Democratic ticket did not vote it.

Dr. T. G. White (Record, 600); lives at Beaufort. He testifies that in 1884 he was one of the managers of the Federal poll in the town of Beaufort, and that night, after having canvassed the vote, as he emerged from the polling place he encountered a mob of infuriated colored per-from the polling place he encountered a mob of infuriated colored persons, who violently assaulted him, prostrating him upon the ground by kicks and buffets, breaking the bone of one arm, lacerating his face, and cutting him over the eye. The assaulting party were men and women—women armed with sugar-canes and the men with sticks.

Washington Y. Fripp (Record, 602); lives near St. Helena. He testifies that during the canvass of 1886 he attended a political meeting, and while speaking cries were raised, "Pull him down," "Don't want to hear from him," and that thereupon a large-sized black bottle was thrown at him, which broke to atoms against the side of the house. He also testifies that many threats and violent speeches were made; that there were a great many rumors on the island that colored men who voted the Democratic ticket would be badly beaten.

E. W. Tripp (Record, 626); lived on St. Helena Island. He was the regularly appointed manager of that precinct, and testifies that during the day there was much disturbance, which necessitated the closing of the polls three different times; that about 2 o'clock he went out of the polling-room and met a man in a crowd of about fifteen or twenty, who said to them, "This is the Democrat who would not let me vote without showing my ticket" (meaning his registration certificate).
"Come, let us mob him." But he attempted no violence. That since the election, driving along the road, he met two carts; that he gave part of the road and the driver of one of the carts did the same, when the man in the cart behind said, "What do you give that damn Democrat the road for? You must not give a Democrat the road. Let him get along the best way he can." This man owns 722 acres of land on this island and is a white man.

Here are thirty-one witnesses, all colored but two. One of them the superintendent of abandoned plantations after the war, one a postmaster under the administrations of Presidents Hayes and Arthur, and two of them honorably discharged soldiers of the Union Army, one of them a wounded veteran and a pensioner.

Each testifies in direct terms to a state of affairs that should bring the blush to the cheek of any man who believes in the great boon of a free ballot and that every citizen, white or colored, should be permitted to go forth in the broad sunlight of our institutions and deposit his ballot without let or hindrance, without fear or intimidation.

At these precincts and throughout their surroundings it required almost reckless courage and desperate nerve to meet and face not only the male partisans of the contestant, but the inflamed and enraged women who were there in his interest, blocking the roadways, filling the streets, and lying in wait, armed with their sticks and bludgeons to use them on Democrats. The law makes no such requirement of If the condition was such as to reasonably affect a man of ordinary temperament, that was sufficient. The law does not require a voter to go forward through a mob, or to take the chances of a beating or even any great humiliation before the poll can be set aside for in-

Men may meet without flinching an army of men with banners and glistening bayonets and display only the courage of men, but show me the man who will face a mob of women with their eyes bloodshot with rage and their passions heated to a red heat by fanatic appeals, armed with only sticks and bludgeons! To fall before the one is glory, to go down before the other is ignominy.

Sir, it is frequently well for us in measuring the courage of others under trying circumstances to place ourselves in their situation. can only test our own strength when the emergency arises. Men out of danger's reach are ofttimes as courageous as the king of the forest, who, when confronted with it, are only as valiant as the mouse.

The colored men at these precincts who were desirous of voting the Democratic ticket, and refrained from voting it and went home, exhibited that prudence which even strong and most courageous men would have done; they knew well the temper of the people who were dominating the polls; they knew how these people had been advised by the contestant and his leaders; they knew how the few who with recklessness had voted for Elliott had been kicked and cuffed, threatened and abused.

Sir, violence, intimidation, and bulldozing held high carnival during that canvass in the boundaries of these precincts, and should they be counted this Congress will grant a license which will render every election in similar sections in the South in the future only a farce and make the ballot-box only the depository of the will of the colored mob.

But while this open and direct violence did its work well, there were other acts and other agencies resorted to which, though of a different character, were as potential and powerful. The sanctity of these Democratic colored men's homes was invaded and their marital relations were interrupted. Their wives were urged to leave them, and in some instances they did. Their church relations were disturbed and they were threatened with expulsion, and in some instances were expelled. Social ostracism and society banishment went out as the inexorable decree, and they were sneered at and buffeted and hounded as though they had been beasts rather than human beings.

All these things were in the direct line of the teachings of the contestant, who, by precept and example, advised and encouraged them. On the stump and off of it, everywhere and on all occasions, he was the brand kindling the fires of conjugal infelicity, church disturbance, and society trouble.

His inflammatory language was such always, on the stump and elsewhere, as to render it unfit for utterance on this floor or anywhere within gunshot of decent ears, and stamps him as a man too foul of mouth to associate with even his delnded followers, and only a fit companion for the denizens of the slums of the lowest and most depraved.

In his crusade upon the rights of his people and upon the ballot, upon the happiness of homes and the peace of the sanctuaries of God, he seems to have found willing and effective allies among the leaders of the flocks, and whose mission it was to preach Christ and Him crucified, peace and good-will among brethren, and these political preachers were as active as any in promoting discord and disturbance and furthering the cause of the contestant during the canvass and since, even to the taking up of collections in the churches to aid him in this contest

But I have said enough in this connection, and will pass on to other points. I can not entertain a doubt this House will sustain the majority of the committee in their action in excluding this precinct-Brick Church, or St. Helena Island.

I shall now speak of the precinct known as Brick Episcopal Church. This precinct was rejected by both the county and State boards, and their action has been sustained by the majority of the committee, and I say rightfully sustained. It was a new voting place, and there was no registration book for it; at least it was blank. The supervisor of registration for the county of Berkeley, in which this precinct was located, after it was created opened a book of registration, but no one applied to be registered or to be transferred, and of course no voter was registered or transferred. The supervisor did his duty, but the voters failed to avail themselves of their privilege. It is said they were registered at another point. Suppose they were. The law says no voter shall vote at any precinct but the one at which he is registered. The men who in spite of the law went through the form of voting at this point were doing a perfectly futile thing.

There was not a legal vote cast, and this box can not be counted unless this House ignores utterly the law of the State of South Carolina and regulates the manner and mode of conducting her elections and prescribes the qualifications of voters for her. That this House has the right to invade a sovereign State and make laws to govern her people in the matter of the qualification of her voters so long as the fif-teenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States is not violated no member on this floor will pretend to assert. Then, sir, the law of South Carolina standing as the supreme law in this case and declaring that the votes cast at the Brick Episcopal Church precinct were illegal, this House will not, can not make them legal; will not, can not count them.

Upon this point I cite an authority which I suppose will be recognized on this floor, Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, and I propose to put that authority against the judgment of the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL]. Upon this point Judge Cooley says:

And where the law requires such registry and forbids the reception of votes from any persons not registered, an election in a township where such registry has never been made will be void, and can not be sustained by making proof that none in fact but duly qualified electors have voted.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] insisted on yesterday, as the House will remember, that there was proof in this case that none but duly qualified voters had cast their votes at this poll, and that therefore their votes ought to be counted.

Judge Cooley says that they can not be counted even though the evidence may show that the electors were duly qualified. But in fact no such voters could be properly described as duly qualified, because one of the things required under the law to qualify them as voters was

Judge Cooley, continuing, says:

It is no answer to say that such a rule may enable the registry officers, by neglecting their duty, to disfranchise the electors altogether; the remedy of the electors is by proceedings to compel the performance of the duty, and the statute, being imperative and mandatory, can not be disregarded.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question at that point?
Mr. O'FERRALL. Certainly.
Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. I want to understand the point which the gentleman makes. Do you contend that where there are two voting places in the same precinct it is the duty of the voter to see that he is

Mr. O'FERRALL. In reply to the gentleman I will say that there is no law of South Carolina requiring two voting places in any one pre-

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. That dodges the question. My question is, if there are two voting places in any one precinct must the voter see that he is registered twice, or has he done his duty when he has registered once?

Mr. O'FERRALL. No, sir; he need not register twice. One registration is sufficient, but he must vote at the poll where he is registered. He can not vote at the other.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. One question further. If the authorities make two voting places in one precinct, one for State officers and the other for Congressmen, 6 miles from the first, how is the voter to vote unless the authorities of each polling-place have a copy of the registration?

Mr. O'FERRALL. Mr. Speaker, under the laws of South Carolina there is a registration-book for each place; there is a registration-book at the precinct for the election of State officers and also at the precinct for the election of Congressmen. Now, the facts in regard to this pre-cinct, as I understand them, are simply these: That until a short time before this election there was a precinct at which voters cast their votes who lived in the Seventh Congressional district and also voters who lived in the First Congressional district. That is, all the voters who lived in a little town called Mount Pleasant voted in Mount Pleasant, which was in the First district, and the voters of the Seventh district who lived in the country outside of Mount Pleasant also voted in that

But the Legislature of South Carolina, in order to facilitate voting and to give a better opportunity for the voters living in the country than they had theretofore enjoyed, made a new precinct out in the country, 6 miles from Mount Pleasant, in the Seventh Congressional district—the precinct known as the Brick Episcopal Church. That was done in order that the voters should not have to travel 6 miles to vote, as they had been doing theretofore. These are the facts about that But Judge Cooley says distinctly that where the law requires registration, as in this case, and required it at the precinct, the fact that proof may be offered that the men who cast their votes there were qualified—I suppose he means qualified in every other respect except that they were not registered—that such proof makes no difference and that those votes can not be counted.

The minority report ad-Now comes the precinct known as Santee. mits that the election here was conducted by only one manager, when the law requires three, but says that as there is no impeachment of the fairness or charge of irregularity it should be counted, and that the action of the board and of the majority of the committee in rejecting it

The law of South Carolina requires three managers, and provides that when they meet they shall organize themselves into a board and elect one of their number chairman, and that when the polls are closed they, the managers, shall count the ballots and sign the returns. "Organize themselves into a board and elect one of their number chairman" is the language of the statute. This is a sine qua non-an indispensable condition to the holding of an election.

There was no board organized; there was no chairman selected; the managers were never there to organize the board or elect a chairman. One man could not constitute a board, for the word implies more than

A single, solitary colored man arrogated to himself the power to conduct the election, and he proceeded to organize himself into a board, that is, to make three men out of himself; and thus divided up into three men, these three imaginary men elected him chairman, and the election proceeded.

Sir, I lay down the proposition that never in the history of legal jurisprudence has the action of less than a majority of a board been held to be legal unless authorized specially in the act creating the board. This in itself vitiated this poll, and I might stop right here so far as it is concerned.

But in addition to this, the evidence shows that the poll was in open air, under a tree, no space railed off, and every one allowed to vote, whether a legal voter or not, and that at least 59 illegal votes were cast; how many more no one knows.

If this poll should be counted we might as well wipe from every statute-book the law regulating the conduct of elections and tear down every safeguard which wisdom and experience have thrown around the ballot-box. If the gentlemen of the minority can whistle down the winds the facts developed in regard to this precinct, then, sir, the sooner we are brought face to face with the direful consequences which will ensue the better, for the sooner will we find the necessity of arousing ourselves to meet the dangers which threaten our institutions.

The next precinct in order in the report of the minority is Gadsden. I was surprised to find that this precinct was one of the number which the distinguished gentlemen of the minority insist upon counting for

In the argument of this case the able counsel for the contestant abandoned any demand for counting it. He says in his brief, on page

While slight deviation as to time is not material, yet when more than one-third of the time allowed for voting passes by and no poll is opened the devia-tion becomes serious, and will be presumed to have affected the result, so that the vote can not be ascertained with any degree of certainty, and contestant abandons his demand for counting in his favor the vote polled at Gadsden.

Here, sir, is a verdict rendered against the contestant as to this precinct by the contestant himself and his able and zealous counsel, yet we find our friends of the minority insisting in spite of this abandonment upon counting this poll.

I ask with all due deference are our friends simply partisans and not judges? Are those who sit in judgment more zealous in behalf of the contestant than the attorney who is employed to prosecute? Can their action, in the language of Burke, be "the cold neutrality of an impartial judge?" I submit these questions for the candid answers of candid

But, Mr. Speaker, as the gentlemen insist in the teeth of the withdrawal of the claim of the contestant to count this vote by the contestant and his counsel, let us look at the facts.

Managers were regularly appointed but did not attend, and about 10 o'clock the Republican precinct chairman appointed three managers and the voting commenced. There was no registration book present; two of these so-called managers swear that there were 431 votes cast for Smalls and none for Elliott, and the other one swears that there were something over 500 for Smalls and one hundred and eighty odd for Elliott, more or less, and upon this evidence our friends propose to count 431 votes for Smalls and none for Elliott. These witnesses were introduced by the contestant himself. Not a manager was present, not an oath was administered to the three men appointed by the Republican precinct chairman by any one authorized to administer an oath, no registration book present, no space railed off, not a compliance with a solitary requirement of the election laws, and the polls opened at 10 o'clock when they should have been opened at 7 o'clock under the law.

Now, sir, let us see why the managers did not attend; let us see why they did not open the polls. Why was it? It was because they were afraid to act as managers; because they were afraid of personal violence on account of the desperate character of the colored Republican leaders and their followers at this point. In 1884 a serious disturbance occurred, and at an election a short time before the managers had to telegraph to Columbia for help to quell a disturbance. It has been difficult to get men to act as managers on account of the notoriously disorderly and dangerous state of affairs there at elections.

If the contestant suffered by the failure of the managers to open this poll he and his followers are responsible and the result of his teaching is coming home to plague him. I know of no law, moral or statute, which requires men to endanger life or limb in opening and conducting a poll surrounded by law-breakers and law-defiers; and standing here in my place and pos essing, I trust, a reasonable amount of moral and physical courage, I justify these managers in their refusal to open and conduct this poll.

But according to the weight of testimony Elliott was injured and not Smalls by their refusal, for the Democratic vote here was estimated at 300-200 whites and 100 colored-and the Republican vote at 230.

This brings me to the next points in issue between the majority and I refer to the charge made by the minority of ballot-box stuffing at Pocotaligo, Providence, and Green Pond.

The minority allege that at Pocotaligo the poll-list showed 143 votes cast. The majority deny that there is any such evidence. paper filed purporting to be a poll-list, but it has no authentication, oes not pretend to be a certified copy, and is worthless as evidence.

The minority say that when the box was opened an excess of 105 ballots was found, and that 105 Smalls ballots were thereupon drawn from the box; the majority assert that one of the two witnesses introduced by contestant (Deveaux), a Republican supervisor, who was present when the drawing took place, swears that of the 105 ballots drawn out only 49 of them were Smalls ballots, so that 56 Elliott ballots must have been drawn to make 105. (See Record, page 2!5.)

The gentlemen, in preparing their report, copy in full the testimony of one Bampfield, the son-in-law of Smalls, and roll it as a sweet morsel under their tongues, but are as silent as the tomb as to the testimony of Deveaux, the colored Republican supervisor and supporter of Smalls, and a man who could read and write, who contradicted in direct terms this swift son-in-law witnes

After thus enjoying this sweet morsel and charging that the box was stuffed, they triumphantly inquire, "How was it done? Who had charge of it?" And they proceed to declare that "three Democratic managers, a Democratic clerk, and two Democratic constables" had it in charge. I reply that Deveaux, the Republican supervisor, swore that he in spected the box, opened it, and turned it upside down when the polls were opened, and it was clear of any ballots; so, unless the contestant's own witness swore falsely, the ballots were put in during the day while the ballots were being cast and before the polls closed, and while the box was under his eye and guarded by him.

I ask, in turn, who put these excessive ballots in the box? Under the law no hand could deposit a ballot in the box but the hand of the voter, and I infer that under the vigilant eye of this Republican supervisor no other hand deposited a ballot.

The inference must then be drawn that many of the voters voted double ballots. Who were these voters? Were they Democrats or Redouble ballots. Who were these voters, publicans, or both? Who will say?

But, Mr. Speaker, there is no evidence as to what the returns were from this precinct. There is no certified copy which could easily have been procured. There is a paper pretending to set out the returns, but it is a paper which does not assume to be an original paper nor a certified copy. Of course that is not evidence, and as a copy of the returns could have been had in due and legal form we must infer it would not have sustained the pretensions of the contestant, else he would have procured it. With this statement of the facts in connection with this precinct I shall pass on.

I hardly think it is necessary to detain the House in referring to the position taken in regard to the precinct known as Providence.

There was an excess of ballots in this box; all were put back, mixed, a boy called and he drew out the excess, and the remainder was counted; that is all there is in it. A man by the name of Mahoney tells a cockand-bull story about the laying aside, first, the Elliott ballots and then the Smalls ballots, then placing the ballots for Elliott in the box and the Smalls ballots on top of them and then drawing from the box only Smalls ballots. It is only necessary to read this testimony to see its falsity. But there is no evidence what return was made from this precinct; therefore it is a waste of time to further consider it.

Next in order is Green Pond precinct.

There is no legal evidence what vote was counted from this precinct.

No certified or even uncertified copy of the returns is in evidence. According to no rule of evidence can any man say what the returns were. I can not give the House any better idea of the evidence in regard to this precinct than by reading from the report of the majority, page 5:

this precinct than by reading from the report of the majority, page 5:

Contestant charges that 195 votes were polled at this precinct, of which the county board of canvassers credited to Elliott 160 votes and to Smalls 35 votes; charges fraud upon the managers of election because eight or ten minutes clapsed between the closing of the polls and the beginning of the count, during which the public could not see the ballot-box, and charges that 130 witnesses swear they voted for Smalls. There is no legal evidence of what vote was counted by the canvassers from this precinct. Neither the returns or any certified or uncertified copy thereof appears in the record. These returns were easily accessible. The irregularity complained of was this: The polling-place was the back room of a store; in the partition which separated this room from the store was a door which was open during the day. When the polls closed the managers went into the store, where there was a counter, and proceeded publicly to count the vote. No charge or intimation of fraud or impropriety was made at the time, and the evidence now relied on to establish fraud is that of 130 witnesses, who, it is claimed, each testify that he voted for Smalls. Nearly all of these witnesses are very ignorant; can neither read nor write. They do say they voted for Smalls but when cross-examined many say they could not know for what office Smalls was running, and the cross-examination shows that some of them did not vote but only thought they had.

Now, we are brought to consider briefly the precinct designated as

Now, we are brought to consider briefly the precinct designated as Lake City, which the minority claim was not in the Seventh district, and yet votes were cast there for Elliott and counted for him.

Again I read from the majority report, page 9, where the facts are so succinctly stated that no one can fail to understand them and in my opinion to hold that the votes cast at this precinct should be Contestant claims that this precinct is in the Sixth Congressional district, and that the vote cost there for Elliott should be deducted from the count. There is absolutely no evidence in the record to sustain this claim. The precinct is what is called a "Line precinct," and ballots were there received in separate boxes both for the candidates in the Sixth and Seventh districts.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have swung around the circle with the distinguished gentlemen until I am brought face to face with what they have grouped together under what they term "miscellaneous frauds."

Sir, when I came to these I was more impressed than ever with the weakness of their cause, yet reminded of the lines of Goldsmith:

In arguing, too, the parson own'd his skill; For, e'en though vanquishd, he could argue still.

But I give the gentlemen credit for their prudence in not claiming any benefit from these alleged miscellaneous frauds, for they discovered it would be a two-edged sword.

I have now endeavored to answer seriatim every position taken by my learned Republican colleagues on the Committee on Elections. It has been my purpose to treat them with that courtesy which should characterize every member on this floor, and I trust I have succeeded.

I have referred to all the points embraced in the minority report. have endeavored to confine myself strictly to the record. I have not in any respect, so far as I now remember, gone out of it. In the time yet allowed me I propose to address myself to some of the general features of this case.

This district, Mr. Speaker, is what is understood as a "colored district." This fact itself accounts for this contest. Whenever a Congres sional election takes place in this country, our Republican brethren look, not at the political complexion of the voters, but at the complexion of their skin. They take the census; and if they find that in any particular Congressional district in the South there is a majority of colored voters, they inquire no further, but proceed at once to count that district as a Republican district. And if an investigation should show that that district has gone Democratic and that but for the bulldozing and proscription and intimidation of the colored Republican leaders and their followers the Democratic majority would have been much larger, they sneer at the idea and denounce it as false. Colored men by the hundreds or even by the thousands may swear to it, as well as white men; but a solitary denial on the part of a single Republican leader will offset all; and he will stand in their estimation as the one just man in the multitude.

Why is it thus? Is it by reason of some law under which every colored man must be a Republican? Is it by reason of some decree, human or divine, under which every colored voter must vote the Republican ticket? If there be such a law or decree it has been reserved for the eyes of our Republican brethren and has not been thrown open to the gaze of the whole people of this country. When under the thir-teenth amendment of the Constitution slavery was abolished, and under the fourteenth the colored man was made a citizen, and under the fifteenth he was clothed with the right of suffrage, was this done upon the condition that he should be forever bound to vote the Republican ticket or swear allegiance to the Republican party? No, sir; he became a freeman in body and mind. He was not relieved of the bondage of slavery to put on the yoke of party servitude. He passed not from one master to be driven by another. He laid aside the shackles not to put a ring in his nose. When freedom flashed upon him it was the freedom of an American citizen, carrying with it every right under the law guarantied to the highest and most exalted under the Constitution of this country.

Has he been abridged of this right? Yes, in every Congressional district in the South where the colored voters predominate. How? By a system of violence, intimidation, and proscription; and this case furnishes a remarkable instance of it. By whom has he been abridged of his freedom? By the colored Republican leaders and their followers, supported and sustained by the Republican leaders of the nation. In the Seventh Congressional district of South Carolina the evidence in this case shows as clearly as if it were recorded in Holy Writ that in the election of 1886 there was a strong tendency and desire on the part of a very large percentage of the colored voters of that district to vote for Colonel Elliott, but that they were prevented from exercising freely their right of suffrage by the contestant and his followers-abridged in their freedom, abridged in their right to vote as they saw proper and as their conscience dictated.

I have already referred to the reign of terror which existed on St. Helena Island, Ladies' Island, and in Beaufort, before that election, on the day of the election and which continued after the election. But the tale would not be half told if I were to stop with that. In every neighborhood, in every section, in every nook and corner of that Congressional district this spirit of violence, intimidation, proscription, and exclusion ran wild and could hardly be surpassed in its madness by the madness of the jungles of Africa, and was only held in check at all by the fear of legal punishment.

But the question is no doubt presenting itself in the minds of some of our Republican brethren, why should these colored men have desired so earnestly to vote the Democratic ticket? I might respond by asking, why should they have a desire to vote the Republican ticket? The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] on yesterday said that the colored men of South Caroline were earnest Republicans because they knew how their freedom came about; how the shackles were stricken from their limbs, and why they were no longer sold in the markets as chattels.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCreary in the chair). The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I would like a few moments longer.

Mr. ROWELL. Mr. Speaker, I think now is the proper time to attempt a proper proper time to attempt a proper proper time to a stempt a proper tempt an agreement as to some limit to this debate, and I therefore renew my proposition that the debate extend for five hours on each side exclusive of the time already occupied. We have already occupied one hour and forty-two minutes on this side, and the gentleman from Georgia on yesterday occupied two hours and ten minutes; and one hour has been occupied by the gentleman from Virginia this morning. believe that if that arrangement can be entered into the suggestion I have made will meet the approval of the members of the committee on this side of the House, except that it may be possible, if either the contestant or the contestee desires to ask the attention of the House, additional time will be asked for that purpose.

Mr. CRISP. I hardly think, Mr. Speaker, that it is possible to do this, for if we agree to five hours on each side certainly the contestant or the contestee should have time out of that and not expect additional

Mr. ROWELL. All right; I submit the proposition that we make it five hours on either side.

Mr. CRISP. That is, exclusive of the time already occupied?
Mr. ROWELL. Yes, sir.
Mr. CRISP. I think that will be satisfactory.
Mr. LODGE. Excuse me; if that is to be the case—that is, if this is to be inclusive of the time already occupied-I do not see how we can ve the contestant an hour out of it, because there are three members of the committee who will want an hour each, and hence I think his time should be separate.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It seems to me that four hours on a side is a sufficient time to discuss this case. The ground has been pretty thoroughly gone over already, and the facts have been presented and the argument drawn. Now, there is another contested-election case behind this, and if this case drags itself over into Thurdsay or Friday and occupies that day the chances will be against the hearing of the other case at this session. Every day on this case diminishes the chance of hearing the other case, and we are desirous of reaching that also. I think four hours are ample.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. The records in this case show that the committee passed on this question in last June, and the report was never filed by the majority of the committee until the 7th of December. It is pretty late here now to talk about limiting the time of de-bate to a few brief hours when the case is brought before the House for consideration. It is no time to attempt to curtail the rights of the members of the committee who desire to be heard.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I am inclined myself to accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois, which is that the debate on this question be limited to five hours on a side exclusive of the time already

Mr. LODGE. I object to that.
Mr. CRISP. Then I shall be compelled to give notice that I will call the previous question and ask the House to sustain the demand at five minutes before 5 o'clock this evening, and gentlemen must take the consequences

Mr. LODGE. Then I will tell the gentleman that he will have to find a quorum to do it.

Mr. CRISP. When the representative of the minority of the committee agrees to the proposition which is acceptable to the representative of the majority of the committee, it would seem that it ought to be reasonably satisfactory to the other members of the committee

Mr. LODGE. No; but give us an hour more if the contestant wants time.

Mr. CRISP. Five hours on a side certainly ought to be ample.
Mr. LODGE. As one of the minority of the committee I am perfectly willing to agree to any reasonable arrangement; but I think that the three members of the minority who desire to speak are entitled each to his hour, especially as each has agreed to give some time to other members, and whatever time is to be allowed to the contestant ought not to be taken out of our time. If four hours are given to either side exclusive of what has been already used I have no objection. That will give us three hours to the committee and one hour for the contestant. I think it will save time to make an arrangement of this character now rather than have a struggle over it and a refusal by the House to order the previous question by refusing a quorum, which can be easily done.

Mr. CRISP. It always saves time to make a reasonable arrangement, and it always consumes time for an unreasonable proposition to be made, as in this case, where there has been an agreement between the representatives of the minority and the majority of the committee; and I ask the House to give its consent to ratify that agree-

Mr. REED. It must be perfectly apparent to the gentleman from Georgia that his original idea of the length of time necessary to discuss this question has been subject to much modification. Instead of taking an hour himself he found it necessary to occupy two hours and ten ing an hour himself he found it necessary to occupy two hours and ten minutes to discuss the case, and the gentleman who followed him required an hour and forty minutes. The gentleman on the side of the chairman of the committee, who has already spoken an hour, has not got through with his statement of the case and asks additional time. This clearly shows to the House that it is a case which requires a good deal of discussion. The time asked by the gentleman from Massachusetts seems to be reasonable and necessary to enable the members of the committee who are prepared to speak on the question to submit their remarks, and also to allow the contestant his time, such as has their remarks, and also to allow the contestant his time, such as has been customary in these proceedings. I submit, therefore, to the gentleman from Georgia that it would be a submit therefore, to the gentleman from Georgia that it would be a submit the submit th tleman from Georgia that it ought to be apparent to him and to other members of the House that the case is of such a character that the proposition of the gentleman from Massachusetts is reasonableness itself.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I will say in reply to the gentleman from Maine that I do not see why the suggestion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] should be considered any more reasonable than the suggestion of the representative of the minority, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL].

Mr. REED. Simply because this is a question that has got to be decided by the view of the members of the House.

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman represents the minority.

Mr. ROWELL. My impression is that the gentleman from Maine

Mr. ROWELL. My impression is that the gentleman from Maine will not disagree with me on this point. It is an important matter My first proposition was to give five hours—giving the contestant and the contestee time out of that. I now ask for five hours. It gives the contestee time out of that. I now ask for five hours. It gives eighteen minutes to the contestant, one hour to the contestee, and three hours to the members of the committee. My proposition was to give the contestant extra time, that to come out of the time, which would allow the contestant eighteen minutes, and I thought that he would probably not want any more; and hence I made the compromise to confine it to five hours. That is, that five hours should be used by the House and the additional time by the contestant and the contestee, if the House should grant them the time. Then there will be eighteen minutes' time for the contestant, besides giving three hours to the members on the committee.

Mr. REED (to Mr. ROWELL). In what does that differ from the original proposition of the gentleman from Massachusetts, except to the extent of forty minutes which have been granted to you person-

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the gentleman will permit me, I will state that I have just asked the contestant, and he says that he will ask the House for an hour; and it seems to me that it ought to be accorded

Mr. REED. I think this proposition is reasonable, and I think that the gentleman from Georgia will look at it in that way, in the light of what has already occurred.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. As to its reasonableness, it ought to be considered in connection with the business of the House, the shortness of the time remaining of this session, and the fact that the appropriation bills have not been passed.

Mr. McCOMAS. This is a matter of higher privilege than the business the gentleman speaks of.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It is a matter of higher importance that we should vote; but it is not a matter of higher importance that we should talk it over and over again.

Mr. CRISP. I wish to say that I am entirely willing to do anything that will bring us to a vote upon this question. I will agree, or, rather, I will ask unanimous consent, then, that the time be limited to six hours on a side, and that the House wills it this evening until 6 o'clock. That is not unreasonable.

Mr. LODGE. Six o'clock this evening. Mr. REED. I have no objection to that.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I would like to ask whether you count the time occupied by the gentleman from Illinois on Saturday last?

Mr. KELLEY. The vote to be taken in the morning?

Mr. CRISP. If the arrangement I ask for be made no vote will be taken to-day. We would only be using so much of the time remaining, which would not allow of a vote to-day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Georgia state his proposition again? The Chair did not hear it.

Mr. CRISP. I ask unanimous consent that after six hours of debate on each side, inclusive of that already had, the previous question would be ordered upon the election case, the understanding being that to-day we will continue to debate—not vote—until 6 o'clock.

Mr. LODGE. I only want to ask the gentleman from Georgia whether it is the purpose to continue the case to-morrow, or will it go over until Thursday on account of the electoral count?

Mr. CRISP. It will be my purpose to go on with the case to-mor-I presume the electoral count will not occupy more than an hour or an hour and a half; and we can get a vote and have it disposed of.
Mr. REED. That is all right.
Mr. CRISP. That is inclusive of the time to be used by the contestant and the contestee and everybody.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is it the request of the gentleman that general debate shall close at 6 o'clock?

Mr. CRISP. It is simply that the House remain in session until 6 o'clock for debate.

The SPEAKER protempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MAISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask to be recognized, and desire to yield so much of the time accorded to me as will enable the gentleman

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania? The Chair hears none.

Mr. O'FERRALL. Mr. Speaker, when my time expired I was saying that the principal question in the minds of our Republican brethren was doubtless why there should have been such an earnest desire on the part of many colored men in the State of South Carolina to vote the Democratic ticket in the election of 1886.

I might respond, why should they desire to vote the Republican ticket? Should they desire to vote the Republican ticket, as suggested by the gentleman from Illinois, because the Republican party gave them their freedom? Certainly not; because the intelligent ones among them—and their number is becoming greater and greater as time advances—know that such is not the fact. Many of them have arrived at such a stage of advancement that they can read and learn for them-

They can read the speech of Mr. Lincoln, made at Charlestown, Ill.,

September 18, 1858, in which he said:

I am not now nor ever have been in favor of bringing about in any way the special and political equality of the white and black races; I am not nor ever have been in favor of making voters or jurors of negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with white people; and I will say in addition to this that there is a physical difference between the white and black races which, I believe, will forever forbid the two races living together on any social or political equality. And inasmuch as they can not so live, while they remain there must be the position of superior or inferior, and I, as much as any other man, am in favor of having the superior position assigned to the white race.

This seems to have been a direct declaration in favor of Anglo-Saxon supremacy.

They can read the letter of President Lincoln to Senator Gilmer, in December, 1860, after his election, in which he said:

I have no thought of recommending the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia.

They can read his inaugural address on the 4th day of March, 1861, in which he declared in the face of the listening multitude:

I have no purpose directly or indirectly to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I have no inclination to do so. Those who nominated me did so with full knowledge that I had made this and many similar declarations, and had never recanted them. * * * (See American Politics, book 1, page 121.)

They can read his message to Congress March 2, 1862, in which he recommended-

The co-operation of the United States with any State which might adopt gradual abolishment of slavery, giving to such State pecuniary aid to be used by such State in its discretion to compensate for the inconvenience, public and private, produced by such change.—American Politics, book 1, page 136.

They can read that on the 9th day of May, 1862, by an order of General David Hunter, commanding the Department of the South, the slaves in Georgia, Florida, and South Carolina were declared free; but this order was annulled by the proclamation of President Lincoln ten days later.

They can read his address to the Representatives and Senators of the border slaveholding States, who were present at the Executive Man-sion July 12, 1862, by special invitation from him, in which he weged upon them gradual emancipation and the colonization of the colored people in South America (American Politics, book 1, page 137)

They can follow this up and read his public telegraphic dispatch dated August 22, 1862, addressed to Horace Greeley, in response to a letter from that gentleman, in which he gave utterance to his views as follows:

follows:

If there be those who would not save the Union unless they at the same time could save slavery, I do not agree with them. If there be those who would not save the Union unless they could at the same time destroy slavery, I do not agree with them. My paramount object is to save the Union, and not either to save or destroy slavery.

If I could save the Union without freeing any slaves I would do it; if I could save it by freeing some and leaving others alone I would do that.

What I do about slavery and the colored race I do because I believe it helps to save the Union; and what I forbear, I forbear because I do not believe it would help to save the Union. I shall do less whenever I shall believe what I am doing hurts the cause, and I shall do more whenever I believe doing more will help the cause.

They can follow this up and read that in his message of September 22, 1862, he simply proposed to emancipate

All persons held as slaves within any State or designated part of a State the people whereof shall be in rebellion against the United States, by the 1st of January, 1863, if such sections were not in good faith represented in Congress.—American Politics, book 1, page 141.

They then can read the actual emancipation proclamation of January 1, 1863, in which he only emancipated in the States in rebellion and left slavery still in existence in the States not in rebellion. (Ameriand left slavery still inexistence in the content and can Politics, book 1, page 143.)

Mr. KERR. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'FERRALL. I will yield for a question by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] if he will not consume too much of my time.

Mr. KERR. I want to ask the gentleman if he does not know and the content of the cont

President Lincoln wrote to Lieutenant-Governor Hahn, of Louisiana, insisting that the colored men of that State should be allowed to vote, and giving as a reason for it "that in some time in the future it would aid to keep the jewel of liberty in the family of freedom." [Laughter and applause.

Mr. O'FERRALL. That is the first time that I ever heard of any poetry coming from Mr. Lincoln. [Laughter.] I reply to the gentle-man that I do not know whether Mr. Lincoln wrote any such letter or not. I am not acquainted with the private correspondence of the gentleman to whom the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Kerr] refers, but I say that if Mr. Lincoln did write any such letter as that it is inconsistent with his declarations which are recorded in history and which I have just cited.

Mr. KERR. Well, he did write it.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I can not yield any further. I know perfectly well that when the gentleman gets started his tongue is like a racehorse; it runs the faster the less weight it carries. [Laughter.]

Now. Mr. Speaker, these intelligent colored men have learned for themselves that when the Republican party came into power in 1861 it did not favor interference with slavery in the States where it existed. They have learned that the great Republican President—and when I say "the great Republican President" I use that expression in its full significance—they have learned that the great Republican President was emphatic in his opposition to it. They have learned, further, that as the war progressed, in order to secure the support of the border slaveholding States, he proposed gradual emancipation and colonization, with remuneration for the slaves; that it was only upon the re-jection of that proposition that he issued his conditional proclamation of emancipation, and that upon the failure of that attempt to bring the seceded States back to the Union, he issued his actual emancipation proclamation. They have learned all these things. They have learned, too, that as the war progressed it was the Union party in the North, composed of Democrats and Republicans united, that preserved the Union, and that out of the t preservation their freedom was born.

So they have learned that they owe no allegiance to the Republican party, and there is no particular reason for them to vote the Republican ticket. Many colored men whose testimony is given in this record state in language better than I can use the reasons which induced them to vote or desire to vote the Democratic ticket in South Carolina. They say that since the election of 1876 the fears which they had previously entertained as to bad treatment in case the Democrats came into power have been removed; that they have been fairly treated since that time that their taxes are lower than they were before; that their publicschool system is better; that they are not assessed now, as they used to be under Republican rule, for campaign purposes. For these reasons large numbers of the colored voters of the South desire to vote the Democratic ticket. And are they not strong and potential reasons?

Why should they desire to return to Republican rule under which their taxes were increased, their public-school system broken down, and by which they were condemned to bear all the ills under which they suffered up to 1876, when South Carolina was raised up from the slough of corruption and the slimy rule of carpet-bagism by the pure and incorruptible Hampton, whose word was his oath and whose pledge was his bond? Upon reading these things to which I have referred light has come into their minds, and with light has come the power to break through the environments of blind passion and unreasonable prejudice, and, like white men, to formulate their opinions with intelligence and look with clear vision to their best interests. Mr. Spea er, in the Southern States these intelligent colored men have been reading and learning and teaching and gradually tearing out of their hearts the idol which they had set up in their days of ignorance.

In every election from 1876 up they have had every reason to vote the Democratic ticket. In the election of 1886 they had peculiar reasons—still stronger reasons, perhaps, than they had ever had. They had as the candidate of the Democratic party a man whose character, as shown by the evidence in this case, is as pure as the snow which gives a wintry cap to the Northern mountains and as clear as their crystal streams; a man whose nature is all kindness and whose hand is ever open to the calls of charity; a man who has freely given of his substance for the benefit of these colored people, and whose fine ability has ever been exerted without fee or reward in their defense and in the vindication of their rights. Contrast him with the candidate of the Republican party. Who was he and what was he? A convicted and sentenced felon—convicted and sentenced, too, for taking a bribe of $5,000 for his vote as a member of the State senate of South Carolina; convicted by a jury composed of a majority of Republicans and half of them colored men, and the verdict of that jury sustained by a Republican judge-Judge Townsend.

But these gentlemen say that he has been pardoned-pardoned, too, they say, by a Democratic governor; and pardoned, he says, pending an appeal. He was pardoned, sir—pardoned by a Democratic governor. Whether he was pardoned pending an appeal or not I do not know, nor do I care. He accepted that pardon and thereby admitted his guilt. If he was an innocent man why did he not do as a consciously innocent man would have done-spurn the proffered pardon, prosecute his appeal and not accept the pardon before that appeal had been heard? But, sir, did that pardon cleanse him and make him a reputable citizen? Hardly, I imagine. It restored him to his legal rights, but it did not wipe from him the stain which a jury of his countrymen had placed upon him—that verdict sustained by a Republican judge, and that verdict, as I am told, sustained, too, by the court of appeals of South Carolina.

I say, Mr. Speaker, that no man can take the testimony in this case and read it without bias or prejudice and fail to come to any other conclusion than that the contestant in this case is so covered with corruption and besmirched from head to foot that if any one were seeking for a man covered all over and besmirched all over, he would say upon meeting Smalls, as Nathan said to David, "Thou art the man."

Then, sir, with such a man as Smalls presented by the Republican party as its candidate for Congress, and such a man as William Elliott presented by the Democrats as his opponent, how much greater was the reason for the intelligent and virtuous colored men of that Congressional district to vote for Colonel Elliott or remain at home. Is it not a wonder, sir, that Smalls received as large a vote as he did; and can it be accounted for upon any other ground than that he and his wild and maddened followers coerced a great number of the colored men into voting for him or not voting for Colonel Elliott?

Now, Mr. Speaker, I shall not detain the House much longer, as my extended time has nearly expired. In conclusion, I want to say that so long as I have the honor of occupying a seat on this floor, as long as my voice shall be loud enough to be heard above a whisper, as long as God en-dows me with the courage to stand by the right, I shall demand that the colored men of the South as well as the colored men of the North shall not be abridged in their right to vote as their conscience may dictate, and that no man shall be recognized on this floor who comes, as the contestant in this case comes, as the ring-leader and crowned king of bulldozers and intimidators of his own race in his Congressional district and throughout South Carolina wherever his influence can

ach. [Applause.]
As a Southern Representative, sir, I demand that the colored man shall have the same rights in the South as he has in the North, and that he shall be permitted to go to the polls and in the full sunlight of the institutions of this land deposit his ballot without fear or intimidation. As a Southern Representative I shall stand here and with all the power of mind and strength of will that Omnipotence has given me I shall resist every attempt, either openly or covertly, directly or indirectly, to deprive him of the right of suffrage and thereby settle the problem known as the negro problem (which seems now to be disturbing the serenity of some of our Republican brethren, particularly the distinguished Senator from the State of Kansas, Senator Ingalls, who recently made a visit to the Southern States) by wresting from his hands the ballot, denying him the right of representation, or colonizing his race in South America or elsewhere. The South is peculiarly his home. It is adapted to him in climate and in products. If it were not so he would be still a slave. If he could have been made profitable in the frigid and icy regions of New England the virtue and humanity which so long slumbered there would have continued to slumber and he would have been still retained as a chattel.

Only a few days ago I came across some relics of the olden time. In a Beston newspaper, of which Green & Russell were the printers, published in 1768, I find this advertisement:

TO BE SOLD.

A likely negro man, about twenty-two years of age; he has been used to husbandry and waiting on a gentleman; can have a good recommendation, and is sold for no fault. Inquire of Green & Russell.

I do not know but what he may have been waiting on some people of the same blood of those upon the other side of the House who are now so denunciatory of the Southern people for being slaveholders. I am not, however, disposed to condemn the Massachusetts people of that day as slaveholders, for I remember Abraham was a slaveholder, Abraham with whom the covenant was made for the salvation of the world. I remember that all the patriarchs were slaveholders, and therefore I am disinclined to condemn the people who lived in Massachusetts at that time for being slaveholders. [Laughter.]

WORCESTER, June 14, 1768.

Ran away from his master, Robert Barber, of Worcester, June 14, 1768. gro man named Mark, of middling stature, about thirty-five years of age, very much pock-broken, and can read and write; he carried away with him two blue coats, one lined and bound with red, the other not lined, a pair of green plush breeches, a pair of trousers, and an old beaver hat.

A very good description of him, and the advertiser is very anxious to get him back. But the advertisement goes on:

Whoever shall take up said runaway and convey him to his said master shall receive $6 reward and all necessary charges paid.

ROBERT BARBER. On Thursday next, 30th instant, at 3 o'clock afternoon, will be sold by public vendue, at the auction-room in Queen street, a variety of goods, among which are Irish linens, calicoes, etc.; also, a negro girl, thirteen years old,

J. RUSSELL, Auctioneer.

This negro girl, thirteen years old, was a chattel, and was billed and sold like goods, and is put down together with linen and calico. Again:

AT PRIVATE SALE.

Two pipes of sterling madeira; a negro man, forty years of age; a boy of fourteen, and two girls about twelve years of age; a second-hand chaise and harness, etc.

These are the relics of olden times when slavery prevailed in Massa

Mr. DAVIS. Does the gentleman say that occurred in the State of Massachusetts? It was a colony in 1768. Slavery never existed for a moment in the State of Massachusetts. By a decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts it was declared that it never existed there by

w. [Applause.]
Mr. O'FERRALL. I agree there was some sort of change when they passed from the condition of colonists into that of citizens of the State of Massachusetts; but, sir, the people who created the State of Massachusetts were the same people who lived in the colony of Massachusetts. [Applause.] I want to say this: I know as well as my friend from Massachusetts it was held by the supreme court of that State that the constitution of 1780, if I remember the date correctly, abolished slavery.

Mr. DAVIS. Precisely.

Mr. O'FERRALL. But does he not agree, as suggested by a gen-

Mr. O'FERRALL. But does no not agree, as suggested by a gentleman near me, that slavery must have existed to have been abolished? [Laughter and appliause on the Democratic side.]

It is also a historical fact that Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New York passed gradual emancipation proclamations, but not one of them proposed to emancipate the colored man at once. In those States also it is a historical fact that but few negroes were real their freedom. They were sold to planters in the South and ever got their freedom. They were sold to planters in the South, and when their owners had put the money which they received for them into their pockets, like the Pharisees of old, they thanked God that they were not like their brothers of the South, slaveholders and traffickers in human flesh and blood. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side. 7

These are very unpleasant things for me to call up. It is not a pleasure for me to say a disagreeable thing. I am sorry I have disturbed the equilibrium of any of my friends over there by recalling these facts. They seem to be tender-footed on this question. I meant no harm, but simply desired to give a part of the history of the country.

Mr. Speaker, we want the colored man amongst us. We are his true friends. He knows us, and we know him. All we ask is that he be let alone, and wicked and malicious and designing men may seek other fields for their nefarious work. Then a new South in fact will dawn, bearing upon its wings the choicest blessings which Heaven bestows upon its most favored climes. Then our mountains will yield up their treasures, our grain fields wave with their rich harvests, our cotton vales whiten with their opening bolls, our waterfalls hum with machinery, our forests echo with the woodman's ax, and our hills and valleys light the heavens with the fires of their forges, rolling-mills, and furnaces. I beg the honorable Representatives of this great American Republic-a country the marvel of all and the equal of any-not to impede this dawning, but let it come; let it come in all its brightness and fullness and glory, for it will add to the heritage of all and shed its blessings upon a common country, a common heirship, and a common sople. [Applause,]
I thank the House for the extension of my time and for the attention which I have had.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, the very full, complete, and exhaustive statement of the testimony in this case by my distinguished friend and colleague upon the committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Row-ELL], on yesterday, relieves me from any necessity of wearying either the House or myself by doing more than simply calling attention to some of the prominent facts of the case; and I desire at the outset of this discussion by me to call the attention of the House to some of the conditions existing in this Seventh district of South Carolina at the time of the election out of which this contest arose.

I desire first, Mr. Speaker, to call attention to the conformation of the district itself. It is manifest that when the Democratic Legislature of the State of South Carolina undertook the work of apportioning the State into Congressional districts they found it absolutely impossible to apportion the State so as to avoid making at least one district overwhelmingly Republican; and as it had to be certainly Republican, they, inspired by the wisdom of the children of this world, de-termined to put as many Republicans into that district as possible, and at the same time eliminate from it as many Democrats as they could. They therefore, in drawing the boundaries of the Seventh Congressional district and its adjacent district, the First South Carolina, ran a sinuous, zigzag, tortuous line, as you will observe by glancing at the map which I now hold in my hand. [Exhibiting.]

It will be seen, Mr. Speaker, from this map that the districts in question are both "fearfully and wonderfully made." I challenge the production of their equal in any territorial apportionment which has been made since the morning stars sang together. [Laughter.] This map, you will observe, is divided into two colors, red and blue, and the blue district is the Seventh Congressional district, from which this contest arose, while the red shows the First district. You will observe, also, arose, while the red shows the First district. that in making the apportionment of these districts, in order to put into the Seventh district as much as possible of the territory which was densely populated by colored Republicans, and eliminating therefrom any spot where the white Democrats resided, they not only divided counties, but they divided townships and precincts and villages, and then divided and separated these districts themselves.

You will see that the First district runs right across and through the Seventh and up for 35 miles along the coast like the tail of a giganitic catamount rampant running across the back of the Seventh district, [Laughter.] The Constitution provides and requires that these districts shall be made of contiguous territory; but, sir, the Constitution is but as water in the presence of Democratic necessity. How is the Seventh district composed of contiguous territory, unless it be by the water in the harbor, and if that is a water tie which binds these severed portions of the Seventh district together? And if that portion of it belongs to the Seventh district, where is the continuity of the First district? It is surely divided into two separate parts which do not touch, or vice versa, the Seventh district is cut in two.

Mr. Speaker, is there a doubt in the mind of anybody that there was "method in the madness" of this arrangement? Why this long, narrow strip of the First district, running down and through and across and up behind the Seventh district? Why run the narrow strip along the coast this 30 miles but for the purpose, as I said in the beginning, of putting in the First district every Democrat in that region? Does any body believe, is there a man in this presence who believes, that if the Legislature of the State of South Carolina had the slightest idea that there could be a Democrat elected in the Seventh district there would have been such an apportionment? I thrust this apportionment in the face of the gentlemen on the other side of the House, and from it I challenge a denial that they dedicated the Seventh district to the colored Republicans therein.

Again, as another feature of the case, I call your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the election laws of the State of South Carolina, by which the Democratic governor of that State appoints three commissioners of elections for every county, who in turn appoint three managers of elections for each voting precinct, who appoint a clerk, etc.

The voters of the respective precincts have absolutely no voice in the selection of the officers of their elections, nor is there any provision for any representation of more than one political party on any of the boards.

The county managers so appointed are also a board of canvassers to inspect. count, and return the votes to the State board. In other words, the entire election machinery, the registration, the opening of the polls, the receiving of the votes, and decision of all questions as to the right to vote, the counting of the votes, and return are all in the hands of the Democracy.

Again, under this law there must be eight different tickets and as many different ballot-boxes, namely, one for governor and lieutenant-governor, one for the other State officers, one for circuit solicitor, one for State senator, one for member of the house of representatives, one for county officers, one for Representative in Congress, and one for Presidential electors; the opening in the top of each ballot-box being only wide enough to admit one ticket at a time. The space where the ballotboxes are placed for voting is to be railed off at each side as the judges deem proper, with one place for entrance and one place for exit.

The tickets must all be of the same color, size, and shape, without any mark of difference, and each voter is required to enter the voting space alone and himself put the tickets into the proper boxes without the privilege of speaking to any one except the Democratic managers.

If he can not read and puts his ticket in the wrong box it is not to be counted. What chance, sir, has the illiterate Republican there? What friend is there to designate to him which box is the one where he shall deposit his ballot? He has no friend to advise; none of whom he may inquire. He is by law prevented from speaking to anybody, and the Democratic judges are not bound to respond if he asks for information, or if they do, they are not forbidden to answer in any other way than to mislead him, while the illiterate Democrat may expect and receive the assistance of his party friends there present.

I submit, sir, that I have always understood the object of the election laws was not only to protect the ballot-box from the invasion of illegal votes, but to protect the legal and qualified voter in the exercise of the right of suffrage. But manifestly the election laws there are made to accomplish a different purpose. They are made expressly to prevent the exercise of the dearest right of an American freeman, a right given to him by the Constitution of his country and guarantied to him by the law. I submit that it is an educational test from which all the redeeming features of that somewhat odious test have been eliminated, that it is an unfair and unjust and partisan educational

But I desire to call the attention of the House especially to the fact that in the face of all these things; in the face of possession by his op-ponent of all the election machinery; in the face of the testimony here showing unjust interference with the rights of registration, that men were refused the right of registration, and refused a certificate of registration where they were clearly entitled thereto; that in spite of all the frauds, miscounts, and outrages to which attention has been called, and to which I shall still further call your attention; in spite of all these things, yet, sir, of the votes actually cast in this district, as returned by the election managers, the contestant received more than 1,200 majority; and of those whose votes were received by these Democratic managers as votes cast by legal voters, and that the Democratic managers counted and certified to as legal, true, and correct, this contestant has more than 800 majority.

I want that fact to haunt this House and haunt the gentlemen upon the other side until they have disposed of this case. I want them to remember hereafter that it is necessary to throw out whole precincts and to cast aside ballots that were certified to by their own Democratic managers to prevent this district from being represented by a man of its choice, and prevent this contestant from occupying this seat to which he was elected, and to enable a man to sit on the other side who was never elected, thereby enabling him to participate during these two years in the proceedings of this House, and to take a part in legislation which is for the entire country and which the whole country is bound to obey, as well in Obia as in South Carolina.

to obey, as well in Ohio as in South Carolina.

Again, I desire to call attention to the fact that this district has a colored Republican majority of more than 25,000. With so large an adverse majority the contestee in this case seems to feel called upon to offer an excuse for the strange announcement that there was a majority of votes in favor of himself instead of the Republican candidate; and I call attention to the excuses which are made as the ground for this strange result. The contestee says that Smalls was unpopular. That argument was made yesterday and to-day; it is said that he had been convicted of an offense against the laws of South Carolina and therefore the people repudiated him. Now, sir, I do not desire to discuss the merits of that prosecution; I know nothing about it, or what the testimony for the prosecution or the defense was; but I do know that the record shows that he was convicted. I know further that, pending an appeal to the Supreme Court, the Democratic governor of that State put his foot upon this prosecution and stamped it out; I know that since that prosecution terminated in 1877 and prior to this election in 1886 the voters of that district have three times elected Mr. Smalls to Congress by overwhelming majorities

Why, sir, in 1884, the last election before this, when these transactions out of which this prosecution grew were that much fresher in the minds of his neighbors, they gave him about 4,000 majority in this district. Is it not the thinnest and baldest pretense to come here now and say that this prosecution, which is nine years old, and after he had been three times elected to this House, rose up and became the frightful raw-head and bloody-bones which drove men away from the support of their neighbor? Is it anything more than a mere pretense now made for the purposes of this case? Sir, he was not unpopular. The overwhelming weight of the testimony in this case shows that he was popular, and there was every reason why the Republicans in his district should have supported him as they did. He was their neighbor. He was a colored Republican. He was identified with five-sixths of the voters of that district by reason of partisan affiliation and political principles in race, in color, and in class. He was the last member of his color left in this House. That being the case, it was but natural that every member of his race and color should rally round him, and

Although there was a generous emulation for the nomination, and other men contested the place with him, he was nominated upon the first ballot by more than three-fourths of the votes of the delegates, and after the nomination the Republican ranks closed up solidly, and from that time on marched in solid column, touching elbows, as they supposed, to certain victory. Again, it is said that some of these colored men became wearied of the Republican, and had concluded to vote the Democratic ticket. It would be an incredible thing that they should, and I stand here and say, and I challenge an investigation of the testimony to show that there were many of these cases. The testimony overwhelmingly in this case contradicts any such proposition, and shows that while there was an occasional instance of a colored man voting the Democratic ticket, they were only occasional and rare, and the great body of the Republican party stood solidly together supporting Mr. Smalls.

Mr. Elliott's next claim is that, although there were not a sufficient number of colored men voting for him to elect him, there were many who wished to do so, but who were frightened, and therefore did not And it is upon this claim of intimidation, this claim that the poor colored Republicans in South Carolina intimidated and bulldozed South Carolina Democrats, that this election is set aside and this contestant deprived of his seat. A statement of the proposition is enough to excite a smile in any citizen outside of this Hall, and there is not in the testimony a particle of evidence that will verify any such ridiculous conclusion.

What is the testimony as to the question of intimidation and what does the testimony amount to when you sift it down? Simply that a few colored preachers who were representatives of their race in this district had for years—not particularly during this campaign, but for years—been calling the attention of the people of their color to the outrages to which they, as a people, had been subjected, to the bull-whip-ping, to the torch-burning, to the assassinations that had been going on against them, and have given their views in rather a positive man-ner as to what respect should be shown by black men to other black men who would thus turn recreant to their race and join with those who have been hounding them out of their rights. That is all there is of this matter of intimidation when you sift it down.

Some preachers were alleged to have advised violence, but when the preachers are called upon the stand they all deny the language attributed to them, and in this denial they are all supported by those who heard them. Some old women, too, talked as if they would be unheard them. Some old women, too, talked as if they would be un-willing to accept as a son-in-law a colored man who was a Democrat; and who blames them for that? [Laughter.] That is all that this talk about intimidation amounts to. True, a few fellows came forward and testified to actual attempts at intimidation. The leader of them is Chance Green, who goes the full length of attempting to testify to actual intimidation. But this Chance Green so contradicts himself and is so manifestly a perjured scoundrel that my honest, frank friend, the chairman of the committee [Mr. Crisp], proposes to leave him out. I should think he would be glad to do so, and yet when you omit Chance Green from this portion of the case you have dropped out the Chance Green from this portion of the case you have dropped out the crown jewel of the list.

The intimidation testimony in this case, with Chance Green's testimony eliminated, is like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out. It is upon him that the case depends. For fourteen or fifteen wearisome pages of this record he drags his perjured trail upward and downward, backward and forward, contradicting himself with every other breath and being contradicted by everybody whom he meets. He would have you believe that there was actual intimidation at the polls at the Episcopal Church precinct. He says he was there; that he put down the names of 416 colored men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket, who were hungering and thirsting for the privilege of voting the Democratic ticket; where souls panted for it as the hart pants for the water-brook, but they—that is, these 416—were afraid to vote the Democratic ticket lest they should be bulldozed. Now, in fact, there were but 528 voters in the whole precinct, and he would have us believe that these 416 Democrats were frightened, terrified, by the remaining 112, who were Republicans. [Laughter.] What cowards their consciences must have made them!

But when he comes to name some one upon whom this intimidation was actually practiced he breaks down entirely. The only man he can name is Jonas Howard. Green says that this man Howard was pulled down and his clothes were torn off his back, a Democratic ticket taken from him, and Howard driven from the polls in terror; but Howard himself, when put upon the stand, testifies that no such thing occurred, that he was not knocked down, that his clothes were not torn off, that he was not subjected to any violence, and that he was not prevented from voting the Democratic ticket, because he never intended to vote it [laughter]; that he went there intending to vote for Smalls, but that his vote was rejected by the Democratic officers of election because he was not properly registered, and in this statement he is supported by all the other witnesses except Green.

This Chance Green, the vilest "chance" I ever met, was undoubtedly testifying in the hope of reward, and his hope was not disappointed, for we find that soon after he had done this work he is found in the employ of this Administration, borne upon the rolls of the Treasury Department, upon the theory, no doubt, that "public office is a public trust." [Laughter on the Republican side.] A few others follow in his wake in their testimony, but they amount to little, and when sifted down they pan out about upon the same average. This talk about in-timidation as a justification of the disfranchisement of this district is one of the thinnest pretenses that I ever met, thinner and weaker that the election.

the soup alleged to have been made of the shadow of a pigeon that had starved to death. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, starting out with the proposition that more than 800 of the votes accepted and counted and certified by the Democratic managers were improperly counted, I wish to call attention to other votes which ought to have been allowed and which would have swelled the majority of the contestant immensely. And first, in the Brick Chuch precinct it is conceded there were 503 legal votes cast by legally qualified voters for Mr. Smalls and 45 for Mr. Elliott, giving Smalls a majority of 458, or more than enough to overbalance the majority which the committee find in favor of Elliott, because they find only 323. I say the acceptance of this precinct alone would overcome the majority given by the committee for the contestee and would leave contestant 135 majority.

And why was this precinct thrown out by the canvassers? Upon two grounds. They say that three times during the day the managers of election stopped receiving tickets for a few minutes; twice because the voters were not observing the rule which requires them to come in singly, and the third time because the outsiders—not those present in the room where the polls were held and the election was carried on, but those outside the house—were indulging in loud talking and laughing, and thus interfering with the work of the clerks. There is no pretense that there was any violence there, nor is there any pretense that a man was prevented from voting there who desired to vote. There was nothing of that kind, but simply what I have stated, and for such reasons this precinct is to be thrown out and these 505 voters, far more than enough to elect Smalls, are to be denied the privilege of having their votes counted. The other objection is that two of the Democratic managers of election refused to serve. Well, the third Democratic manager filled their places, swore in two others, and proceeded to hold

It was a quiet, orderly, and fair election. None but legal votes were received and counted. There was no pretense of anything wrong there except that two of the men whose duty was to open the polls refused to do their duty and stood by and declined to serve; and for that reason these voters, who were in no way in default, are to be denied the right to have their votes counted. What a simple method for thwarting the will of the people and for destroying the right of suffrage! Well might the bull-whip be laid aside, the revolver allowed to rust, and the torch expire for the simpler remedy now provided for defeating the will of the people—not to open the polls! I insist, of course, that these 503 votes for Smalls, which were all cast by legally qualified voters and honestly counted and returned, should now be allowed to voters and honestly counted and returned, should now be allowed to Mr. Smalls.

In Pocotaligo box precinctall the managers were Democratic. were 143 men voted, and although no one had access to the box but the managers, yet when they took the tickets out of the box there were found to be more than 100, probably 148 tickets too many in the box. Nobody knows how they got in there. My friend from Georgia says there is no testimony how those tickets got there. That is true; for nobody knew how they got there except the Democratic managers, who were the only ones permitted to be present; and they carefully avoided telling; and the contestee carefully avoided inviting

The tickets were all returned to the box and a Democratic manager then drew tickets out of the box until there were but 143 remaining. These were then counted and reported as showing Elliott 87 and Smalls 56; Elliott's majority 31, and yet 118 men of the 143 who voted and whose names appear on the poll-books kept by the Democratic managers as having voted there on that day come forward and testify that they voted for Smalls. It also appears that of the remaining 25 of the 143 who voted 5 were not legal voters, so that this return should be Smalls 118, Elliott 20; Smalls's majority 98.

In Fort Motte precinct, Orangeburgh County, all the managers were Democratic, and all agree that the election was regular, orderly, and fair. None but legal votes received, which were honestly counted and the returns made out in the proper form. The box was duly locked and sealed up and taken by one of the Democratic managers to be delivered to the board of county canvassers. He gave it to another Democrat, who took it (the box) to the president of the board of canvassers, who would not receive it. The box was then taken by the first Democrat and deposited in the office of the probate judge.

The vote in this precinct is admitted to be, for Smalls, 239, for Elliott, 58; but was rejected by the canvassers. The box was produced before the notary in this case and was being opened in his presence when it was forcibly taken by some of the friends of the contestee and has not been seen since. These votes duly cast and counted for Smalls should now be allowed to him.

In Adams Run precinct, in Colleton County, the managers were all Democrats. The election is admitted to have been regular and fair in all respects. The votes were honestly counted, showing that Smalls in all respects. The votes were nonestry counted, showing that had received 117 and Elliott 37 votes. The returns were regularly made out, the box sealed and taken by one of the Democratic managers, but has not been heard of since. This precinct was rejected by agers, but has not been heard of since. This the canvassers. It surely should be allowed.

In Green Pond precinct the managers were all Democrats, the voting place the back room of a store, the voting done through a window, which, after the polls were closed, was shut and the ballot-box left for awhile alone with the Democratic managers. When the box was afterwards brought into the front room and the tickets counted the result was, for Elliott, 160; for Smalls, 35; and yet 134 men, who swear that they then and there voted and whose names are upon the poll-books kept by the Democratic officers as having voted there on that day, testify that they voted for Smalls, showing that the count should be, for Smalls, 134; for Elliott, 61; majority for Smalls, 73, instead of 125 for Elliott, as allowed by the canvassers

The question, what became of the 134 votes for Smalls which were put into the box? none but the Democratic managers can answer, and

In the Brick Episcopal Church precinct the managers, as usual, were all Democrats. The election was conceded to have been fair, orderly, all Democrats. The election was conceded to have been fair, orderly, and regular, and the count honestly made, showing 267 votes for Smalls and 3 for Elliott.

It appears that in this precinct there is a little village named Mount Pleasant, in which live some white Democrats, and the Legislature, in order to place them outside of the "black Seventh," divided the precinct by running the line of the First district so as to include Mount Pleasant, the county seat of Berkeley County. The Democratic supervisor made out the registration list of both these precincts, they being the same township, in one book, and delivered it to Mr. Robert J. Kirk, the Democratic chairman of the county board of canvassers, who is a citizen and voter in the First district. Mr. Kirk retained the list for the Brick Episcopal Church precinct, where there were two candidates and 270 votes cast, and returned the one for Mount Pleasant, where there was but one candidate and but 61 votes cast, all for Mr. DIBBLE, the Democratic candidate in the First district, who had no opposition.

Now, the House will remember that this precinct was rejected be-cause there was no registration book returned by the Democratic officer whose duty it was to return such a book; and it will also be remem-bered that the voters had done all that they could to qualify themselves; they had registered; they held registration certificates, which they presented to the managers, and were allowed to vote.

At the meeting of the county board of canvassers Mr. Kirk promptly voted to reject the 270 votes cast at the Brick Episcopal Church precinct because the registration list, which he had himself detained, had not been returned, and the vote of this precinct was accordingly thrown Clearly these 270 votes, lawfully cast and counted, should now be allowed.

In Biggin's Church precinct the evidence shows there are about 350 or 400 Republican voters and 12 Democrats.

On the election day the Republicans were at the polls desiring to vote, but the Democratic managers refused to open the polls or hold any election. The Republicans complained and entreated, but I suppose met the usual response of, "What are you going to do about it?" And that was all there was about it. No votes were cast or counted.

In Gadsden precinct the Democratic managers on the day of election refused to serve. The supervisors swore others in and the election pro-All testify that the election was quiet and fairly and honestly conducted; that none but legal voters were permitted to vote; that the votes were honestly counted and returned, showing 451 majority in that precinct for Smalls. This vote was rejected by the canvassers because the regularly appointed managers did not serve. In other words, these votes were rejected by these Democratic supervisors because the Democratic managers refused to perform the duties of their office, taking advantage of their own work and their own wrong. should be allowed.

In Grahamville precinct the managers were all Democrats. It is in evidence that during the voting one of the managers frequently used his pencil to push the tickets down into the box, and there is no attempt to account for the presence of marked or torn tickets in any other way. When the votes were taken out of the box the managers claimed there were 49 marked and torn tickets with Smalls's name on 48 of them and Elliott's on 1. That one was of course a mistake. The managers rejected these 49 tickets and promptly and prudently burned them, thus destroying the evidence they might have afforded us upon the question of their being marked or torn. That they were marked and torn by the pencil of this Democratic manager there can be but little doubt.

In Providence Box precinct the managers were all Democrats. were 119 votes polled, but when the tickets were taken out of the box there were found to be 199 of them. How the extra 80 tickets got into the box neither the managers nor any one else try to explain. agreed that all the tickets should be returned into the box and the surplus 80 drawn out. Now, in taking the tickets out the Democratic managers laid all those upon which Smalls's name appeared in one pile and the Elliott tickets in another. When he returned them into the box he promptly put all of the Elliott tickets in first and then put the Smalls tickets on top, and after brushing his hand over the pile drew out 80 or the top tickets, which were of course for Smalls; when the remaining 119 tickets were counted the result was announced to be for Elliott 119, for Smalls none.

This was so bald-faced that even one of the Democratic managers objected, and would not sign the returns, but the canvassers counted it without hesitation; and the majority of the Committee on Elections have followed in their footsteps.

In Sandy Island precinct two of the Democratic managers refused to serve on election day, so the other manager, with the supervisor and clerk, opened the polls. The election is admitted to have been conducted fairly and honestly. None but legal voters were permitted to vote. The count and return showed that Smalls had received 33 votes and Elliott none. This vote was rejected because of the refusal of the managers to serve.

In Cedar Creek precinct the election was in all respects fair, honest, and regular, except that one of the Democratic managers would not serve on election day. At this precinct Elliott received 4 votes and Smalls 18. The canvassers threw out this precinct because one manager refused to act.

The case of Grier's precinct is singular. The election was in all respects fairly and honestly conducted, and in all respects regular, except that one Democratic manager refused to serve. His place was filled by another. No votes but those of legal voters were received, and of these Smalls received 65 and Elliott 4. The return was duly made out, but the vote was thrown out by the canvassers.

In Santee district two of the Democratic managers, although present at the polls most of the day, refused to serve as managers. The supervisors called others and opened the polls. The votes honestly and legally cast, counted, and returned were 212 for Smalls and 5 for Elliott. This precinct was thrown out for the same reason as the last two.

In the Lake City precinct, in Williamsburgh County, the returns show 101 votes for Elliott and none for Smalls, and these were allowed to Elliott by the canvassers, although neither the village nor the township in which the election was held was in the Seventh district. They were both in the Sixth district, in which Mr. DARGAN was the Democratic candidate, and had no opposition, and of course did not need the votes.

In Muddy Creek precinct the supervisor of the election testifies, and his statement is not contradicted by any one, that the place where the election was held was not in the Seventh, but was in the Sixth district. That they had two boxes for Congressional election, one for the Sixth and one for the Seventh district. That in the ballot-box for the Seventh district there were 9 votes for Elliott and 1 for Smalls. That in the box for the Sixth district there were 83 votes for Mr. DARGAN and none for any one else; but the managers gave to Elliott in the Seventh all the votes which had been cast for DARGAN in the Sixth, and returned the vote 91 for Elliott and 1 for Smalls and none for DARGAN, and the canvassers so counted and allowed the vote. Mr. DARGAN did not need the votes; he had no opposition.

It is alleged there is no evidence that these votes were counted by the canvassers. But it is in evidence that they were counted by the managers and returned to the canvassers; and I am justified, I think, in inferring, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the canvassers did not avail themselves of this opportunity to act in favor of the right.

Now, I shall not occupy any more of the time of this House in calling attention to these frauds, these miscounts, these outrages upon the ballot-box, for surely there can be no doubt in any impartial mind that the contestant was elected by an overwhelming majority. Yet I regret, sir, that I can not entertain a confident expectation that this House will honor itself or do justice to this contestant or to this district by seating the man who was elected; for, sir, the dominant side of this House has profited too long and too much, I fear, to permit them to take a new departure now.

I do not propose to discuss the merits of slavery, nor to go back into an examination of our history in colonial times, as my distinguished friend from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL], for the purposes of Virginia or somewhere else, has, but as he has invited attention to the Southern condition, I wish to say it is unquestionable that the methods and practices which have been narrated in this testimony are among the least offensive and odious of those by which that portion of the Republic, naturally most strongly Republican, has been added to the Democratic "solid South." This claim which was made yesterday and repeated to-day, that colored men are now voting the Democratic ticket in the South, and therefore the South has become solid, is scarcely made outside of this Hall; and I do not believe it will mislead anybody inside.

Sir, the solidity of that portion of the country has been accomplished by a gigantic and successful conspiracy against the Constitution, against the dearest rights of the citizen, and against the laws of the land. In that region this is not ordinarily denied; it is admitted and justified. Why, sir, even the liberal leader of the so-called "New South" announces that "the enfranchisement of the black man condemns the South to solidity as naturally as that self-defense is the first law of nature." This is repeated and approved also by the Louisville Courier-Journal, if I am not mistaken in my recollection.

nature." This is repeated and approved also by the Louisville Courier-Journal, if I am not mistaken in my recollection.

A distinguished member of this House, in a widely-reported and hitherto uncontradicted interview, has stated that the "solid South" could only be broken by eliminating the negro from politics. A leading religious paper, representing the largest religious denomination in the South, instead of claiming that the two races are now amicably voting the same ticket, announces that this contest between them must go on until one is driven to the wall. And in his recent message the governor of South Carolina states that the South can accept no conditions which are not based on white supremacy.

Why, sir, so thoroughly has that become a part of the system of that region—so thoroughly are the people there satisfied with it, that they regard any objection to it as an assault upon their institutions; and therefore when the most illustrious of the living soldiers of this Republic dared recently to express the opinion that the negro must be permitted to vote and his vote counted, or the ultimate result might be violence and bloodshed, he is responded to in the following manner by one of the leading newspapers of that region:

For this wretch whose soul is the essence of a demon, whose record is the history of a fiend, I am glad there is a hell. It requires the nerve of a Christian martyr to wish this awful beast to escape the doom of an endless hell. I thank God there is a Hell—

With a big H.

Sir, it is incredible that many colored men should vote the Democratic ticket, for although they may not be intelligent citizens they do know that from the first the Republican party has been and now still is the colored man's friend, and the Democratic party his for the colored man's friend, and the Democratic party his foe.

They know that during the years in which the Democratic party controlled the country all the influence and power of the party were given to the work of preserving and strengthening the right of white men to own, buy, and sell colored men and their wives and children. That for this purpose the Democratic party enacted infamous laws, violated solemn compacts, waged a bloody war against a sister republic, formed a Supreme Court which declared that in this land of the free colored men had no rights, and finally inaugurated the great rebellion, filling the land for years with war and desolation in an effort to establish a government under which forever all colored men should be slaves.

And these colored men further know that if they are now free men, invested with the peerless rights of American citizens, it is because the Republican party gave all this to them, and that it is because of this that their white neighbors still hate the Republican party and continue to vote the Democratic ticket.

Sir, the same reasons, traditions, and prejudices which cause the old slaveholder and Confederate to remain a Democrat unite with greater force to keep the colored man a Republican. But, sir, if it be necessary to prove that these men do not vote the Democratic ticket, I call attention to some election statistics—some figures—furnished by Democratic election judges and managers, which show that the negro either does not vote at all or that his vote is not counted. For instance, in the seven Congressional districts of South Carolina there are, as shown by the last census, 118,889 colored voters. Yet at the Congressional election in that State in 1886 there were in the whole State polled only 39,077 votes, a number only equal to one-third of the colored vote alone, saying nothing of the 80,000 white voters.

In Georgia there were by the last census 143,471 colored voters, but at the Congressional election in 1886 there were only 27,520 votes cast, equal only to three-fourths of the number cast in the single district in Ohio which I have the honor to represent, and less than equal to one-fifth of the colored voters in Georgia.

In Mississippi there are 130,276 colored voters, but at the same Congressional election there were cast in the entire State but 43,348 votes, equal to about one-third the number of colored voters.

Again, in the First Congressional district of Alabama the total number of votes cast at the 1886 Congressional election was 4,220, not equal in number to the one-third of the colored voters in the district, they numbering 14,889.

In the Second district in that State there are 13,812 colored voters, while the total vote cast in the district at the election in 1886 was 5,659. In the Third district of Ala ama there are 17,477 colored voters, and the total number of votes cast at the election in 1886 in this district was 4,666, or a little more than one-fourth the number of colored voters.

In the Sixth district of that State there are 12,297 colored voters, while the total vote cast at the last election was 6,333, or in amount equal to about half the colored vote. In the Fourth district of Louisiana there 18,375 colored voters, but the total vote cast at that Congressional election in that district was 5,747, a number less than equal to one-third of the colored voters. And the total number of votes cast in the Fifth and Sixth Congressional districts in that State at the Congressional election in 1886 is not equal to one-half of the number of the colored voters in those districts.

Without pursuing these statistics further I call attention to the fact that in most of these districts the Republican vote has entirely disappeared. We search in vain for any trace of it in the election returns. In other words, in that portion of the country which is most densely populated by colored voters, and therefore naturally most strongly Republican, the Republican vote has vanished; this vote, as I have already shown, has not gone to the Democratic party, but has wholly disappeared; or if the Republican voters have voted at all, their votes have not been counted in the returns.

We are sometimes told that the colored men in this portion of our country have voluntarily quit voting; that they do not desire to vote.

Now it may be true that they have quit voting, but I do not and can not believe that they have no desire to vote.

That these colored men, who with reason so bitterly remember the degradation of their condition when in slavery, and who now are com-pelled so often to smart under humiliations received from the whites, should spurn the elevating and equalizing privileges of American citizenship—that they should forget or refuse to go to the ballot-box, the one place where they are the peers of the proudest and greatest of white men, and there exercise the highest privilege given to free men, is simply incredible. History, reason, and observation are all against such a conclusion; for they all prove that always has a newly enfranchised class more highly prized the right of suffrage than those who have long enjoyed it.

No, sir: if the colored men there do not vote it is simply because the shotgun, bull-whip, and torch have taught them the peril of voting as they desire, or because tissue ballots and false counts and returns have proven to them the hollow mockery of their going through the form of voting; and in either case they have found the Constitution to be practically nullified and the fundamental law of the Republic set aside; in either case we are teaching a great mass of our citizens to distrust our institutions as false pretenses.

Mr. SPINOLA. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. COOPER. I will if it does not come out of my time.
Mr. SPINOLA. I will yield to the gentleman a portion of my time.
Mr. COOPER. Very well, then; I will yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SPINOLA. Then why does not the gentleman from Ohio, and why do not his Republican associates on the other side of the House, come forward and recommend one of these colored men for a position in the Cabinet of President Harrison?

Mr. COOPER. I am willing to recommend any man on account of fitness and qualification, but I am not willing to recommend any American citizen, no matter what may be his color, simply on account his color. [Applause.] Mr. SPINOLA. You do not answer my question. of his color.

platform. [Applause on the Republican side.]

It has been said that the governor of the State of South Carolina, where this contest arose, has said that the supreme question of the hour is the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race, and upon this he throws down On the other side, we demand the supremacy of the Constitution and the laws, and the rights of all men under them, while they ask for the supremacy of the white race at the sacrifice of everything else; and while on that issue that portion of the country may be solid, it will find, and ought to find, the residue of the Republic, North, East and West, will be solid in the defense of the Constitution, the laws, the rights of the people, and the government by the majority; solid for the Constitution and against a doctrine dangerous to all portions of the Republic; for, sir, it needs no inspiration or gift of prophecy to enable me to say to gentlemen of the solid South, if you continue these practices they will ultimately turn again and rend you. They sear all respect for our institutions and dry up the fountains of patriotism

Well may the leading paper in that region cry out in alarm, as it recently did-

That these practices are demoralizing to the people, and that it must lower the younger men in particular in their own eyes to see the spirit of our institutions violated at every election, and it appals thinking men to know and see the present and the rising generation of white men in the South are taught in practice that Republican institutions are a failure and that elections are to be carried, not by the honest vote of a fair majority, but by campaigning, which begins with rank intimidation and ends in subterfuge and evasion. The white people suffer more by the trickery and malfeasance by which they secure victory than the colored people suffer by defeat.

And is this not true, and does it not afford good reason for alarm? Is it not demoralizing indeed for the young to hear in the forum, on the stump, and on all public occasions the glorification of the great Republic as the land where all men are equal—hear our Constitution eulogized because under it the majority of the people govern and the will of the people as expressed without molestation or fear at the ballotbox is supreme in the land, when they are in practice taught that all this is but hollow mockery; that in fact the minority should and does govern, and that a great portion of the citizens should not and are not permitted to yate as they does a permitted to vote as they desire?

This is certainly a condition of affairs which should be corrected at the earliest practicable moment; and I appeal to my friends on the opposite side, as they are now about to take their final and everlasting departure from power, to soften the memory of their former misdeeds in this behalf by now, even at this late hour, improving the opportunity of repudiating and rebuking these violations of the Constitution and the dearest rights of the people.

Gentlemen, you may thus mellow the light upon the evening of your day of power and verify what was said of one of England's great states—the Democratic officers of election swear that there was not a woman men, "No part of your official life became you so well as your leaving on the ground, except a few who were running a huckster stand across it." If you will march out to the music of the protection of all men in their constitutional rights I will gladly stand with uncovered head while your procession passes by. [Applause.]

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 12571) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and for prior years, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that it had agreed to the amendment of the House to the concurrent resolution of the Senate authorizing the printing of 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for the year 1887, with an amendment in which concurrence was requested.

Also, that the Senate had passed a concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of 5,000 additional copies of the report of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year 1888.

Also, that the Senate agreed to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 3428) granting a pension to Mary C. Thompson.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 3060) granting the right of way to the Pima Land and Water Company across the Fort Lowell military reservation in Arizona, and for other purposes;
A bill (H. R. 6404) for the relief of Charles F. Swain, master of the bark Philena:

A bill (H. R. 1407) to authorize the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render final judgment upon the claim of the Old Settler or Western Cherokee Indians

A bill (H. R. 3112) for the relief of Phineas T. Richardson; and A bill (H. R. 11779) for the relief of Harry Adams.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE, SMALLS VS. ELLIOTT.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I shall be glad to be notified when I have consumed twenty-five minutes of the time allotted to me.

I can hardly hope, sir, to add anything to the argument in this case after the very exhaustive and thorough speeches made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rowell] on yesterday and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Cooper] to-day, my colleagues on the Committee on Elections. They have traversed the ground as to the main facts in the case, and I shall merely call the attention of the House to one of the main points involved in it, and, then, perhaps, answer somewhat briefly the speech made by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], and attempt to answer partly the speech made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL], a speech that was made for the benefit of his constituents and the galleries, and not addressed to this case.

I have always made it a rule in my practice when I have one strong point in a case to rest my case upon that; and as we have one point in this case that gentlemen can not get away from, a point which is unanswerable by them, I propose to call the attention of the Democratic side of the House to that point and make it the main basis of my argument in support of the claim of the contestant. The majority of the committee have made up their report, and in making it they claim that Mr. Elliott, the sitting member, has 323 majority. The returning board gives Mr. Elliott over 500 majority; but the Democratic majority of the Committee on Elections in their wisdom and in some sense of justice cut that majority down to 323, and by doing that they did Robert Smalls a great injustice as to the facts in the case, which I will show you.

Mr. Smalls, however, by that arrangement has but 323 majority to overcome, and if he can do that in any one of the controverted precincts it is all that is required to establish his claim to the seat. In the county of Beaufort and at the Brick Church precinct in that county, according to the returns as made up, Robert Smalls had a majority of 500 votes; that is to say, he received 545 votes there, and Mr. Elliott 45, leaving him a clear majority of 500. If, then, that vote at the Brick Church honestly belongs to Robert Smalls, according to the findings of the Democratic majority of this committee, he is elected by 272 majority.

Now, then, to the facts of the case.

The Democratic majority of this committee seek to throw out that vote, because they say it was controlled by "intimidation." Mr. Speaker, I call upon the other side of this House to examine this evidence, and I challenge every Democratic member from the Committee on Elections to show me the evidence of intimidation that is to overcome the sworn testimony of every officer who held the election-two Democratic managers and one Republican-all three swearing that it was a fair and impartial election. I know your witness, Chance Green, swears that there was intimidation, but I know that two Democratic election officers, appointed by the governor of South Carolina, swear that is not true. I know that Chance Green swears that the colored women were present in numbers and intimidated the voters, but I know the Democratic officers of election swear that there was not a woman the street, and that they never approached the polls. I know that every single man that your witness, Chance Green, swears was intimidated has taken the witness stand and swears that Chance Green committed willful and deliberate perjury, every one of them.

Now, let me call upon the members on the other side of this House, and ask if you are going to set an example because one colored man swears there was intimidation; are you going to override the oath of the two Democratic officials appointed by the governor of South Carolina to conduct that election, and for what purpose? For the purpose of keeping in his seat Colonel Elliott, of South Carolina, and keeping Robert Smalls out, because that is all it amounts to and that is all there is in the argument. Why, Mr. Speaker, it has come to a pretty pass, and I could not help but think about it when I heard the eloquent gentleman from Virginia making his speech. Twenty-eight years ago that gentleman and his associates told the people of the South that they could go up North and whip a half dozen Yankees apiece before breakfast. [Laughter.] No trouble about that. But now they are holding up their hands in holy horror, and praying Almighty God to protect them from the intimidation of a few negro women in the South. [Laughter.]

I could not help but think further, when the eloquent gentleman from Virginia was making his speech and attempting to convince the colored men in the galleries that Abraham Lincoln was not their friend—when he said that Abraham Lincoln did not want to abolish slavery then, when Abraham Lincoln said "he would save this Government without it, but if he could not he would abolish it"-I could not help think this: That at that very time, when my eloquent friend from Virginia was contending that Abraham Lincoln did not mean what he said, he went into rebellion because he insisted that Abraham Lincoln was a liar. Now, then, when twenty-eight years ago this gentleman could not take Abraham Lincoln at what he said he ought not to bring his name in here for the benefit of the galleries or for a Congressional speech over in Virginia.

Now, my friend from Georgia, an eloquent man, and a gentleman whom I esteem, made, as I consider it, yesterday a very ingenious and elaborate and a very effective speech from his standpoint; but he ignored the main facts and attempted, as we often do in trying a case before a country jury, to lead the jury away from the main points in the In order to do that my learned friend said that the smallness of Mr. Smalls's vote arose from the fact that he was a very unpopular man, and therefore the voters of his district refused to vote for him-that he had been convicted of a crime. Even Mr. Elliott, the sitting member, says in his notice of contest the Republicans gave him their support be cause Smalls had been convicted of a crime. He uses this language:

This gave me the support of a large number of voters of his own political party, and this support was further augmented by the fact that although a general election was pending in the State of South Carolina there was no contest between the political parties, and the issue in this district became one between individuals.

Following up that, the learned gentleman from Georgia says that they refused to vote for Smalls because he was an unpopular man. They refused to vote for him because they did not believe that he was an honest man and they voted for Colonel Elliott because he was an honest man; in the language of the gentleman from Virginia, because his hand and purse had been open to the poor. Now, I want to call your attention to page 167 in the record. I commend that page to the careful consideration of my friend from Georgia, and see whether or not it does not answer every argument of my friend from Georgia made against the unpopularity of Mr. Smalls.

The First district of that State is represented by a very talented gentleman, a courteous gentleman. That is the long red strip there on that map that runs in and cuts Smalls's district in two. The gentle-man that now represents that district got 3,515 votes. The honorable man that now represents that district got 3,515 votes. The honorable gentleman who represents the Second district got 5,212 votes. The gentleman who represents the Third district got 4,402 votes; the gentleman who represents the Fifth district got 4,470; and my gentlemanly and personal friend who sits before me [Mr. Hemphill], who represents the Sixth district, got 4,411 votes. And now take the vote of Robert Smalls. After the returning board of South Carolina had robbed him of every vote that they had the conscience to take away from him he still had left 5,961 votes-more votes than any other candidate for Congress got in South Carolina. Now, if Mr. Smalls was so very unpopular, what a pitiable condition the other six members must be in in the great State of South Carolina! [Loud laughter.]

Now, the gentleman from Georgia said, "Why, he is so unpopular that he only got a thousand majority in his own county." In looking over this list I take the county of Beaufort and find that Robert Smalls got more votes in the county of Beaufort after they took 545 away from him by highway robbery than any member of Congress from South Carolina got in any county in his district. Not a very unpopular man at home! Because if you add 500 votes that they robbed Mr. Smalls of to the sixteen hundred and odd votes, he got more votes in his own counties! Mr. Smalls gets, according to the returns, 1,654 votes in one county, after they had robbed him of 545. [Laughter.] If Brother Smalls is so very unpopular, I might repeat, what a pitiable condition the gentleman from Georgia must be in at home. [Laughter.]

Now, that has nothing to do with the main facts in this case. I only referred to it to show that the gentleman from Georgia is endeavoring to divert the minds of gentlemen on the other side of the House from the main facts in this case. This, I say, has simply nothing to do with the main facts in this case; but when the gentleman traveled outside of the record and attempted to bring in matters that should influence the mind of no juror, and no man who sits to try a case, under his oath, according to the law and the evidence, if the answer should come back so that it does not suit them exactly, they must take it in good

Now take the votes conceded to Smalls by the majority of the committee, and you take the 500 votes that he is entitled to at the Brick Church, where both the Democratic judges of election swear it was a peaceable and quiet election; where fifty witnesses swear there was no trouble; where every man sworn by Smalls's side swears that the men who testified upon the other side testified falsely. The election officers decided the question that it was a fair election, and then when you take the concession made by the Democratic majority of this committee and add the 500 votes that they have robbed him of by means of the State returning board you put Robert Smalls in his seat.

Now let me appeal to gentlemen upon the other side—I know there are honest men on the Democratic side of this House who will not permit themselves, for party purposes, to be prejudiced against a man who wears a black skin—I appeal to those gentlemen and I remind them that there is a judgment day coming. There is a time coming when that there is a judgment day coming. There is a time coming when this precedent, if you make it now, will rise to stare you in the face and confound you. If you are going to throw out a precinct with 500 majority for Robert Smalls because—conceding the fact for a moment a few women told their husbands that if they did not vote for Smalls they would not live with them (for that is the amount of it), if you do that you are treading upon dangerous ground. There will be no more firing of cannon to notify the negroes that you are going to have "a fair election" if that rule is to be applied and established by this

You are setting up a rule by which you must expect to have your own cases decided in the future. There will be no more telling men that they had better not stand at the polls to take the names of voters that put their ballots in the box, as was done in a certain district in Alabama. There will be no more such intimidation as that passed over by a national Congress if you establish this rule. Ah! but, says the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], the intimidation need not be at the polls; it may be done beforehand. Establish that rule, and there will be no more night riders going through the country telling the negroes they had better not come to the election next day. man who holds a seat from a district of that kind will be ousted by a Republican Congress for fraud and intimidation; because let me serve notice on you gentlemen now that we are here to stay until the principle is established in this country that every man, white and black, can cast an honest vote and have it fairly counted. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CRISP (sotto voce). The gentleman from Indiana is not going to stay himself.

Mr. MILLIKEN. But some of the rest of us are going to stay here

Mr. CRISP. He said "we."

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. No; I do not expect to be here. Laughter.] I know something myself of what a gerrymander means. I took a district with a thousand votes against me; I had no trouble to overcome the first 900, but the last 100 I lacked 40 votes of overcoming.

[Laughter.]

Now, then, I appeal to you gentlemen who have not examined the evidence to take the findings of your Democratic committee as to every vote except the Brick Church in Beaufort County, and then take up that evidence and tell me upon your honor whether there is enough proof there to overcome the sworn testimony of three judges appointed by the governor and sworn to discharge their duties. When you have passed upon that question, if you find with the minority of the com-mittee, then you have got to find Robert Smalls is entitled to his seat upon this floor.

I was a little surprised at the argument made by the honorable gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] and the honorable gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL], who argued so elaborately here to prove that the majority of the negroes in the South are Democrats. I am prepared for almost any kind of revelation in a contested-election case, but I never expected to hear honorable gentlemen trying to make the people of this country believe that a majority of the negroes of the South were Democrats. If that be true, why have your registration laws fixed as they are? Why, in the language of a distinguished South Carolinian, is it necessary to have two ballot-boxes and to make the poor ignorant negro pick out his ticket and pick out the right kind of a ticket and get it in the right kind of a how although he can not read. county than the honorable gentleman who represents the Third district of Georgia got in his whole Congressional district. [Laughter.]

Now, then, will any man say that the honorable gentleman who represents the Third district of Georgia is not a popular man, a perfect gentleman, the soul of honor, and still he only gets 1,700 votes in six

Why is that necessary to have two ballot-boxes and to make the poor ignorant negro pick out his ticket and pick out the right kind of a ticket and get it in the right kind of a box, although he can not read?

Why is that necessary if the majority of the negroes are Democrats?

But the gentleman closed up with a smile which seemed to say, "Boys, that's better than shooting them."

Gentlemen, you will never make the negro believe that the majority of the negroes at the South are Democrats; you will never make the white men believe it; you will never make the country believe it. But these gentlemen have paid a tribute to two negro Union soldiers because they testified against Smalls. Has it come to this that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. O'FERRALL] hold that a man is to be believed any more because he wore the Union blue than if he wore the Confederate gray? No, sir. But they talk this way for a purpose. Why did not those gentlemen tell you at the same time that Robert Smalls himself was a Union soldier? Why did not they tell you that the "crime" they are oppressing and persecuting him for was taking a vessel out of the Confederate service, running the blockade, and carrying her into the Union lines?

Talk about you gentlemen being the negro's friend. You men who make these speeches to-day and attempt to make the black man believe that you are the friends of the negro are the men who lashed their backs to unwilling and unpaid toil. You are the men who took their children and tore them from their mothers' breasts and placed them upon the auction block and sold them into bondage.

You are the men who separated their families and sold them, and when the Republican party said you could go no further in your in-humanity to man, then you rebelled and tried to break down this Government in order to perpetuate human slavery. And now you come back, with a smile upon your countenance, and tell the negro that you have always been his friend! [Applause on the Republican side.] Ah, the black man, though he may be ignorant, can detect and uncover such hypocrisy even though it be practiced upon the floor of the American Congress.

Mr. McCOMAS. Mr. Speaker, a contest like this against Elliott, the white sitting member, by Smalls, a colored man, for a seat to which Smalls was elected in a district with 32,000 colored voters and but 7,000 white voters, would be impossible twenty years hence.

Others in this debate have discussed the series of frauds by election officers and canvassers, all Democrats; the systematic denial of registra-tion or transfer of colored voters; the bold rejection of colored voters when registered; the illegal throwing out by the Democratic canvassers of several thousand votes actually cast for Smalls and solidly cast in a dozen black precincts rejected on a dozen trivial pretexts; the preconcerted plan or willful neglect of Democratic election officers who failed to qualify or refused to serve, and thus disfranchised thousands of voters ready to vote for Smalls. I will not discuss the theft of ballot-boxes, the stuffing of ballot-boxes, or the long catalogue of frauds, crimes, and perjuries whereby a black majority of 25,000 was disfranchised. This House is expected to connive at the disfranchisement of this black district of South Carolina. The sitting member will retain the seat to which Smalls, the colored man, was elected.

After eighteen years of negro suffrage this case of Smalls against Elliott is only a striking case of usurpation of power. The like has often occurred since 1876. What was called an uprising against carpetbag rule, bribery, and robbery has ended in the abridgment of the civil and political rights of the colored people of the South. Therefore, all the years since 1876 whip and goad us to a better settlement.

After two decades of negro suffrage the white Democratic representatives in Congress from the Black belt declare that the blacks are to be They revive the old cry that civil and political rights mean social equality. Twenty years of negro suffrage have at least shown that this is a fool cry. For two decades the blacks by law, if not in fact, have had impersonal civil rights without change to the personal social relations of the whites.

All the apologists for such crimes as abound in this case of Smalls rs. Elliott insist that they are necessary to keep up the white rule in the South, because intelligence, character, and property have the right

Intelligence and character rightly weigh most in government, but is this Asiatic domination of the whites over the blacks without their consent the best expression of white intelligence and character? There is no moral right of class rule among men, of the white man to rule the black man without his consent. This Republic and this Chamber attest that the right to rule is the consent of the ruled and is in the majority by the consent of all.

Intelligence, character, and property in the white States mean majority rule, but in the black States they mean minority rule. In the white States labor is more powerful than property, in the black States property dominates labor. There has been, I admit, sympathy in the white States with the intelligent whites of the South in their control of the police, health, judicial, and taxing powers in municipal and county governments. In the name of intelligence, character, and property, but by the show of force or the practice of fraud, the Southern Democrats have for years practically excluded the black majority from co-ordinate power.

With white rule secure in the black States, it is painful to consider how little political discussion has advanced. When the war and reconstruction had ended, when all the sections of our common country successively discussed specie resumption, questions of currency, civil service, administrative reform or the tariff, at each recurring election the intelligence, character, and property in the Black belt have confined the flower of its youth to discussing afresh the old question of negro servility and annually resolving by the election that this is a white man's Government. This race problem is difficult to solve, but after twenty-five repetitions this annual resolve of white supremacy and black servility is fatuous. This is no solution. Fifty years hence according to Senators Pugh and Morgan, the South will, for the seventyfifth time, declare that this is a white man's Government.

The blacks do not emigrate, and with a fecundity superior to the whites, have increased in some States until they exceed in numbers the white population.

Will the gentleman yield to me? Mr. OATES.

Mr. McCOMAS. I have no time to yield.

Mr. OATES. I merely wish to ask the gentleman a question. Do understand the gentleman to say there would be eight States controlled by black men?

Mr. McCOMAS. I have said there were three States where the black population exceeded in numbers the white population.

Mr. OATES. I ask the gentleman what was his statement. asserted there were eight States controlled by a majority of black people, I deny it.

Mr. McCOMAS. I say there are at least seven States, wherein within fifteen years there will probably be a majority of black people. In Louisiana, South Carolina, and Mississippi each the blacks by the last census greatly exceed the whites now.

Mr. OATES. I ask the gentleman if he knows how many more white voters there were according to the census of 1880 in the eleven States which composed the late Confederacy than there were of colored voters?

Mr. McCOMAS. I have the figures here and if I had more time would have given them in detail. But it is true, as I have stated, that in some of the Southern States the black population exceeds the white population now, and that the black voters nearly equal in number the white voters in the gentleman's own State of Alabama.

Mr. OATES. I will say that in Alabama the census of 1880 showed a white majority of 62,000, and it also showed a majority of white voters of 23,000.

Mr. McCOMAS. I have the figures as given by the census of 1880 and will give them in my remarks as printed, showing the increase of population, and they will not sustain the gentleman from Alabama in the statement which he has made as to the relative numbers of the white and black voting population in the State of Alabama and in other States of the South. In the course of years they stay there, not emigrating, and these black people multiply rapidly. I appeal to thoughtful gentlemen like my friend to consider this proposition.

Mr. OATES. I have been a student of this problem perhaps to as great an extent as the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. McCOMAS. But the gentleman must consider that while the white population grows slowly the colored population is rapidly multiplying. In three of the States South the black voters are more in number than the white voters.

Mr. OATES. Why, take it in the State of Louisiana; the census there shows a majority of 800 white voters. These are facts—Mr. McCOMAS. I can not yield; I have not the time.

Mr. OATES. But I suppose the gentleman wants to be correct.
Mr. McCOMAS. I will put in a tabulated statement from the census concerning all of these points.

Surely Bourbonism after a quarter of a century has made no progress with the negro problem, has been a failure and a curse to the South. The young men of the South have outgrown their beliefs of yesterday; they will next discard the leaders of yesterday. The ghosts of negro equality and the white man's party already begin, like the ghosts in Hamlet, to scent the morning air in the new South.

We can not go backward; we can not stay where we are. man as a slave drove the North and West to a war for his freedom. day the North and West are driven to insist on the exercise of his fran-The irrepressible conflict in behalf of the slave then chise as a citizen. is the irrepressible conflict in behalf of the present and future status of the black citizen now. The organized labor of the North, West, and border is averse to a growing competition with a race of increasing ignorant pauper laborers, and realizes more clearly that whatever keeps down the black labor of the South can not elevate the white labor which practically rules the white States.

The manufactures and industries of the white States will not long tolerate the counting of the blacks in representation whereby one favored white free-trade vote in South Carolina avails as much as five less favored white protection votes in Kansas. The tide of race prejudice thus spreads beyond the borders of the black States. Its waves reach this Capitol. One white man in the black States on this floor equals five white men in the North in representative power. Its influence during the four years past has controlled the Executive and this Hall of Representatives. The triumph of white rule does not end with local white government. The Southern white Democracy counts the black man effectively in forty votes in the electoral college and forty Representatives on this floor. By the supremacy of the white Democracy in the black States the nation is unduly controlled by the white minority, and the less intelligent white minority, in our country.

Of the twenty millions in the South six millions are illiterates by the last census. In the Black belt 25 per cent. of the native white and 78 per cent. of the colored people are illiterates; 45 per cent. in these eight States can not read the name on their ballots. States with 49 per cent. of illiterate voters represent 76 per cent. of the majority of the electoral college and of this House of Representatives.

Mr. HERBERT. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption?

Mr. McCOMAS. I can not yield for an interruption. I have but a few moments.

Mr. HERBERT. I have the correct figures as to the population of Alabama, to which State the gentleman has referred.

Mr. McCOMAS. I have them here in my hand, a table of them, which I will insert with my remarks.

Mr. HERBERT. Here is the Compendium of the Census, showing the figures in detail. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. McCOMAS. I have the figures here.

Mr. HERBERT. I would like the gentleman to quote the figures, then, to which he has referred.

Mr. McCOMAS. The gentleman can read as much as he pleases to read in his own time. I have the table here showing the number of whites and blacks in his State and in every district of his State, and I have here in his own district a table showing that according to the census there are 1,200 more_blacks than whites in his own Congressional

Mr. HERBERT. That is entirely a mistake. There are 888 majority of white voters.

Mr. McCOMAS. This shows a preponderance of 1,200 blacks.

Mr. TARSNEY. And you assume that every one of them is a Republican because he is black?

Mr. McCOMAS. I will put these figures in my remarks. In Alabama's Second Congressional district, Mr. HERBERT received 5,659 votes, and this district by the census has 29,275 of voting age, and in all 67,815 whites and 69,060 blacks by the census.

Mr. HERBERT. Let me insert a part of this table from the cen-

Are too common in one quarter of the country and give omen of danger from lawless violence, the free use of money in elections, arising from the vast growth of recent wealth in other quarters, presents equal cause for anxiety.

If the Government of the United States has within its constitutional domain no authority to provide against these evils, if the very source of power may be poisoned by corruption or controlled by violence and outrage, without legal restraint, then, indeed, is the country in danger, and its best powers, its highest purposes, the hopes which it inspires, the love which enshrines it, are at the mercy of the combinations of those who respect no right but brute force on the one hand, and unprincipled corruptionists on the other.

And in the same case the Supreme Court say (pages 657-662):

And in the same case the Supreme Court say (pages 657-662):

If this Government is anything more than a mere aggregation of delegated agents of other States and governments, each of which is superior to the General Government, it must have the power to protect the elections on which its existence depends from violence and corruption.

If it has not this power it is left helpless before the two great natural and historical enemies of all republics, open violence and insidious corruption.

Congress has been slow to exercise the powers expressly conferred upon it in relation to elections by the fourth section of the first article of the Constitution.

tion.

This section declares that—

"The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be preserribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may, at any time, make or alter such regulations, except as to the place of choosing Senators."

It was not until 1842 that Congress took any action under the power here conferred, when, conceiving that the system of electing all the members of the House of Representatives from a State by general ticket, as it was called that is, every elector voting for as many names as the State was entitled to represent in that House, worked injustice to other States which did not adopt that system, and gave an undue preponderance of power to the political party which had a majority of votes in the State, however small, enacted that each member should be elected by a separate district composed of contiguous territory. (5 Stats., 491.)

And to remedy more than one evil arising from the election of members of Congress occurring at different times in the different States, Congress, by the act of February 2, 1872, thirty years later, required all the elections for such members to be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November in 1876, and on the same day of every second year thereafter.

Will it be denied that it is in the power of that body to provide laws for the proper conduct them and make return of the result? And especially to provide, in an election held under its own authority, for security of life and limb to the voter while in the exercise of this function? Can it be doubted that Congress can by law protect the act of voting, the place where it is done, and the man who votes from personal violence or intimidation and the election itself from corruption and fraud?

These questions answer themselves; and it is only because these in definitions and the corruption and fraud?

These questions answer themselves; and it is only because the Congress of the United States, through long habit and long years of forbearance has, in def-erence and respect to the States, refrained from the exercise of these powers, that they are now doubted.

The awakening of the moral sense of this country to the necessity or an honest ballot and honest count and an honest return of the elections is favorable to a national effort which will include the North and South, include bribery and intimidation alike. Bribery, whether by Republicans or Democrats, is bribery. Intimidation, whether of employés in Northern factories or of black peasants in Southern cottonfields, is intimidation. Fraud in the election and return of members of this House reaches from the remotest State up to the Speaker's gavel in this Hall of Representatives.

Let us here, representing the North and the South, legislate without crimination and recrimination to prevent bribery, intimidation, and fraud, by a Federal statute controlling and supervising Federal elec-Let us unite in a war upon both bribery and intimidation.

Congress has power to punish frauds perpetrated in an attempt to prevent a fair election for members of Congress, and can not Congress, with due respect for the rights of the States in the machinery of election, with due heed to the admonitions of the Supreme Court, and without prejudice to election and registration laws in the different States in State elections, so far make and alter regulations as to the manner of electing Representatives in Congress as to make them uniformly free from bribery, intimidation, and fraud?

The modern devices to prevent bribery which are now engaging the attention of every parliamentary body in the world are devices which would equally prevent intimidation. Bribery and intimidation alike can best be prevented by every form of secrecy; for instance, a space of 100 feet square near the ballot-box, a separate booth wherein the elector may be alone to receive or mark his ballot, the uniformity of ballots to be furnished by the Government, the purging of the conscience of the Representative-elect, all these help to repress intimidation and bribery alike. If these and other expedients should be applied by act of Congress to elections for members of Congress in Indiana, Connecticut, and New Jersey, as well as in Louisiana, South Carolina, and Mississippi, and if the whole election machinery for Representatives in Congress start from the fountain-head of Federal supervision, as our fathers provided, it may secure honest elections, and the base of the colossal statue of our Republic may no longer be undermined on the North side or the South side.

I believe that in this time of peace, with the publicattention now drawn to bribery and intimidation alike, when the purity of the election is not a sectional question, this long-drawn dormant power in the Constitution should be applied and the Congress should now by law make and alter the regulations of the States, North and South, by general Federal law, to prevent bribery and intimidation alike, and to secure an honest count and return of the election of Representatives in Congress.

Election laws are not self-executing. Honest officers are essential. What good reason is there why the President should not appoint State election canvassers of opposite politics, citizens residing in each State, and also Congressional resident canvassers in each Congressional district? Why may not the United States circuit and district courts be trusted to appoint subordinate Congressional boards, with their clerks men of opposite politics, who after the most approved methods of electoral reform, with devices to prevent fraud, intimidation, and bribery, may select the registrars, judges, and clerks of election, provide for inspectors, supervisors, and challengers, and the canvassing of the returns of the Congressional elections? May we not repose the power of approval of minor election officers at Congressional elections in the hands of the Federal judges, who, holding life offices, have no tempta-tion to place the machinery in the hands of corruptionists or violent question. The evils of bribery and intimidation at national elections are worthy of temperate discussion.

I do not here and now consider the grave question of local control in the black States nor suggest a remedy for the suppression of colored votes in municipal, county, and State government. The forces of civilization, the influence of religion, and the sense of justice in man-kind will, in the great chain of eternal order, bring a to-morrow for the black people of the South, and new leaders in the South will see the value of its labor wedded to capital and wisely transform a servile peasantry into useful citizens.

I see that throughout the new South to-day between the crude ore and the liquid metal stand black forms, the giant labor force destined to transmute the hidden mineral wealth of the South into minted gold. Before they exult in the power of organized numbers in leagues, unions, and secret orders, which have charms for their race, give them the spelling-book. As a republic can not forever boycott a whole race, let us educate it for citizenship. The common school will not make all blacks good citizens, but it will help alleviate "the roosting curse" of race antagonism. Enfranchisement by the nation was a half measure. To abolish illiteracy among citizens is the other half measure too long delayed. The blacks do not emigrate. They multiply rapidly. They will soon outnumber the whites in seven States of the South.

You gentlemen of the Black belt see the steam rising and you sit on the safety-valve. Peaceful repression may soon be followed by an explosion. Common-school education is a debt the South owes the blacks. It is a debt with two hundred and fifty years' interest. While the States struggle to pay the debt the nation should by the Blair bill pay While the

When all the native whites of the South and 90 per cent. of the blacks of the South can read and write, the remedy of Federal election laws thus supplemented by national aided schools will decrease race prejudice and increase immigration. The blackest sections will longest resist the light and the law. In Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Alabama, the districts once conceded to the blacks are now represented by white Democratic Representatives, advocates of the white

From the Fourth district of Alabama, with 27,189 whites and 110,365 blacks; from the Third district of Mississippi, with 25,374 whites and 104,271 blacks; from the Second district of North Carolina, with 68,753 whites and 115,441 blacks; and from the Seventh district of South Carolina, containing about 35,000 whites and 160,000 blacks, come Bourbon Democratic Representatives.

If the elections be fair, the Democratic party has become the black man's party, and the mass of the blacks believe in the supremacy of their white neighbors as the white man's party. The tables I hold in my hands show with remarkable uniformity that wherever the percentage of black vote is greatest the Representative on this floor is a Democrat.

By these census tables half of the districts of Alabama are black districts, represented here by white Democrats; six out of ten districts in Georgia are black districts, represented here by white Democrats; five out of six districts in Louisiana are black districts, represented here by white Democrats; six out of seven districts in Mississippi are black districts, represented here by white Democrats. The distinguished chairman of the Committee on Elections [Mr. CRISP] represents a district which had 63,419 whites and 89,132 blacks, and of a total vote of 31,602 he bears a commission here of 1,700 electors, and all for CRISP. I concede his ability, but deny that his experience fits him to judge contested elections.

The census, compared with the election returns from the Congressional districts of Tennessee for the members of this House, beautifully illustrates my position that in this House Democrats represent the blackest sections and the Republicans the whitest sections of the South. The whiter the vote the larger the Republican majority. Of the South. The whiter the vote the larger the Republican majority. Of the States once cursed with human slavery, West Virginia, the whitest region, has just become Republican. Old Virginia, with an enormous influx of white immigration, is with increasing whiteness fast becoming a Republican State. Missouri and Maryland, the next whitest slave States, are advancing to Republicanism. In Maryland where the percentage of black vote is greatest, in the First Congressional district, my Democratic colleague, Mr. Gibson, represents 55,149 blacks and 96,870 whites. I, a Republican, represent 21,397 blacks and 142,591 whites, according to the last census, while my Democratic colleague, Mr. Comp-TON, represents all the counties in Maryland wherein the black population outnumbers the white.

After two decades this is a startling result. The centers of white population in the South have accepted negro suffrage in good faith.

In the Black belt black suffrage has failed and white Democracy is supreme. In the whiter portions of the South and border the Republican party prevails, and the black man votes and is counted.

The progressive white people of the Virginias, Maryland, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Missouri look to the Republican party to continue the protective tariff, to take off the internal taxes on agriculture, and to grant national aid to the illiterates in separate schools for whites and blacks.

As in the early days of the last war the border States, with a loyal sentiment dominant in the white sections, turned the tide in favor of the Union, so the border States to-day, where the white sections are the Republican strongholds, may once more turn the scale in favor of constitutional laws to afford the nation pure Congressional elections, free alike from bribery and intimidation. [Applause.]

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to occupy the time of this House for a brief period in considering the question to be voted upon to-morrow or next day. This district, it is claimed by gentlemen upon the other side of the House, was, by the Legislature of South Carolina, set apart and consecrated to the Republican party because it was certified as containing a great number of colored voters than other districts in that State and Idea. tricts in that State. It is an assumption of the Republican members here that they have a proprietary interest in the votes of the colored voters at the South. It was coupled in the speech of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] with something in the nature of an admission that the colored voters everywhere throughout the whole country, in the North as well as in the South, vote solidly the Republican While I am not prepared to accept that admission as true, I am ready just now to make a remark or two upon the effect of the

It is an admission that the Republican party elected its President at the recent election by virtue of the negro vote of this country. It is an admission that the great State of Ohio would be Democratic if it were not for the negro voters therein; that the great State of New York would cast its electoral vote for Grover Cleveland if it were not for the negro votes therein; that the State of Indiana and other States which I might name would all be Democratic if it were not for the ascendency given the Republicans by the negro voters who hold the balance of power in these States. And in this connection I have a suggestion to make to our friends upon the other side who are so solicitous that that element should be properly recognized and represented in the government of this country. I have not ventured up to this time, upon any occasion, to indulge in cabinet-making, but as the admission is made by gentlemen on the other side that the Republican party owes its coming ascendency to the negro vote in the North, I suggest that here is a proper opportunity for you gentleman to recognize that vote. I suggest that gentlemen on the other side of this Chamber unite in recommending to President Harrison, Robert Smalls for a position in his Cabinet. [Laughter.]
Mr. GALLINGER. We might do worse than that.
Mr. OUTHWAITE. I know you might do worse than that. He might perhaps find a congenial spirit there.

Mr. GALLINGER. We might take the gentleman from Ohio.
Mr. OUTHWAITE. Which one? The map presented here of the district that is under discussion has been remarked upon as an illustration of the unfairness of the districting in the State of South Carolina. If gentlemen will observe, the county of Charleston is represented on that map. It is within the pink line which runs along the seaboard, and joins cornering with the other pink portion of the map. The two blue portions also corner in Charleston Bay. Why, gentlemen of the House, we have had such things before. Yea, we have had even worse things. When the Republicans had control of the State they made a district which was separated in parts by whole counties.

The county of Richland was thus separated from the rest of the district, of which it composed a part, by the counties of Fairfield and Lex-

There is scarcely a State in the North in which the same abuse has not been perpetrated by the Republican party. A few years ago we had in the State of Ohio what was called the Shoestring district, no county of it lying side by side with any other, the district stretching across the State, the counties just joining at the corners or by small portions. I am informed that one of the ablest representatives upon portions. I am informed that one of the ablest representatives upon this floor from the State of Iowa represents a district which stretches nearly across the State, and which was made on purpose that he might have a sure and safe district. These districts, however, and this question of districting, have very little to do, it seems to me, with the real question before this House. On page 71 of the report of the Committee on Elections, in that portion of the report which is called the minority report, gentlemen will find a recapitulation of the vote at the different precincts.

different precincts.

On page 36 of the report is found a similar recapitulation by a majority of the committee. Both the majority and the minority start from a given point of agreement, as it were, that point being the number of votes assigned to each candidate by the final canvassing board. I wish to take up these precincts and deal with them separately and to give hastily the reasons that have actuated me in the course that I take with regard to this election contest. When I first heard the argument of counsel, when the facts were first presented to me in the body of the committee, it was a question with me whether or not there had been a fair election in this district. I therefore took up each one of the precincts in its order, went through its history carefully, and applied, to the best of my ability, my knowledge of the law to the evidence in reference to such precinct, to see where it would lead me, without regard to the result. If I had time, and it would take about as much time as the chairman occupied in his opening speech, I should like to go over the whole of these precincts and take them up separately as I did for my own satisfaction, and present them to the House, but I have not time. I will therefore content myself with going over this table, which is found on page 71. which is found on page 71.

Voters refused registration, intending to vote for Robert Smalls, 22.

I say to this House that in each case the judgment of the canvassing board that rejected these voters seems to me to be fair and just, with the exception of four. In only four cases did it occur to me that their ruling was arbitrary and senseless and ought to be overruled. But that is a small number, and I have not dwelt upon it. I might be willing to admit that the whole of the 22 should be counted; yet it would not change the result; it would simply reduce the majority

I shall pass over for the present the next two precincts and come to Sandy Island precinct, Georgetown County.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. May I ask the gentleman a question? Supposing registration were improperly disallowed, do you hold that the votes should be counted for the candidate for whom the parties say they would have cast their votes?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I hold that if the vote was rejected improp-

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. But if they were not registered and therefore could not properly apply to vote?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Registration is a prerequisite to voting in this

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Very well. Now, if the registration was even improperly refused, do you hold that the votes ought to be allowed?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I said that I might be willing to count those; the number is so small that it makes no difference in the general result. I have not said anything about the law. I have said that as a matter of equity or fairness I might be willing to have them counted.

Mr. OATES. If a person entitled to registration is improperly refused registration, can he not compel the registering officer to allow him to register?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. He can. I take next Sandy Island precinct, Georgetown County; but that is disposed of in a very few words. There was no notice of this precinct in the notice of the contestant, or rather if it was mentioned at one time it was agreed that that subject should not be considered. Why should the minority of the committee consider and report upon it here and claim the number of votes from that precinct when it was agreed, at a time when the contestee might otherwise have desired to take testimony upon the subject, that it should not be considered?

As to Cedar Creek precinct, Georgetown County, and as to Grier precinct, Georgetown County, and as to Adams Run precinct, Colleton County, and Fort Motte precinct, Orangeburgh County, the majority of the committee have agreed that they should be counted. Two of them were rejected, the ballot-boxes having been spirited away, one apparently, and the other having been carelessly sent up and refused to be received because it came in the hands of an unauthorized person. All four of these precincts, when under consideration by the county canvassers, were rejected upon the motion of the Republican member of that county board, he taking the view of the law which was finally taken by the superior canvassing board.

It might be well to say just here of this law, attacked so vigorously and criticised so severely, that I understand it is a remnant of Republican rule in South Carolina; that most of this law was enacted by the Republican party when they had the ascendency there. If the Democracy in subsequent years had changed it, you would have heard throughout the North—perhaps not in the South, but throughout the North—the declaration that the Democrats of South Carolina were destroying the declaration that the Democrats of South Carolina were destroying one of the fruits of the war, were destroying the valuable registration and election law which the Republicans had granted to that State.

There are two other precincts that come now under our observation—Gadsden precinct and Santee precinct. These precincts were those at which regularly authorized managers did not appear or did not participate in holding the elections. It is claimed that this absence of the managers or this failure of the managers to appear and conduct the election was the result of a conspiracy.

There is no evidence to sustain any such proposition. On the contrary, it is shown in the evidence that the contestee himself made vigorous efforts to have managers appointed, to have elections conducted at every precinct throughout that district; that he took unusual in-terest in this matter; that he visited the officials and insisted upon their making proper preparation to hold the election, and that the officer to whom was assigned the duty of providing for these precincts went to extraordinary effort in order to have managers at Gadsden precinct, even offered persons money if they would go down and attend to holding the election there—offered the inducement of extra pay to men if they would act as managers. Gentlemen across the aisle sneer at the idea that two of the men refused because of their business and yet appeared at the State polls afterwards during the day. These gentlemen did not testify that they declined because they were too busy; they did not testify that they declined because it would take them they did not testify that they declined because it would take them away from their business; but they declined for the reason that if they were officers in that particular district they might be ostracized and their business interfered with because of that fact, or that they might be brought into trouble or distress, and perhaps be assaulted because of their action. They had in their minds the case of Dr. White at a preceding election, who, as the testimony shows, for no reason in the world except that he acted as a manager, was assaulted and brutally beaten, and came within a very little of losing his life.

While on this subject I may mention that one of the officers at this election-one who served at Brick Church, Beaufort County-when he made his appearance in public was threatened with being mobbed. A man who had been present at the election and had attempted to put his ticket in without showing his registration certificate, said:

There is the man who made me show my registration certificate; let us kill

And other gentlemen testified the stores of Democrats had been threatened to be burned.

In Santee the alleged election was held out in the fields; begun two or three hours after the time when the law provided it should be begun; conducted by no sworn officer; conducted by men without authority of law and unsworn; conducted in such a manner that twenty-five men voted who were not registered at all and thirty-four who were illegal voters. The returns from this precinct were not certified to in the proper way. In some other respects this election was performed without the usual safeguards; the election law of South Carolina has some safeguards which are necessary there, which are being adopted in other communities, as in the State of Ohio. A portion of space shall be railed off before the polls, in which the voter shall have an oppor-tunity to be entirely by himself before he casts his ballot; in which the voter shall have the opportunity if he chooses to change the ballot which has been forced upon him as he goes to the voting-place and put in another; in which the voter may have time to reflect, to consider; in which the voter shall be free of every manner of intimidation or

Nothing of this kind was established at either of these precincts— no such space railed off. This election held out in an open field, as if men gather at a base-ball game, and said what the vote should be, and sent some note of it down to the county canvassers, could not surely be valid under the law.

The precincts of Pocotaligo and Green Pond and Providence, in the ballot-boxes of which there was found to be a surplus of ballots, and which surplus was disposed of in strict conformity to the law, come next.

Gentlemen on the other side of the House say the managers were all Democrats. The people who were in the room in one instance were There was no exclusion when the counting came on, for the son-in-law of Mr. Smalls was there when the surplus was discovered. As was said by the chairman of the committee, each voter is required to deposit his own ballot.

There is no evidence which tends to show in the slightest way that any officer of the election had anything to do with putting in the surplus ballots. The surplus ballots could not have been put in by the officers without all conspiring to do so, and the probability is the surplus ballots were not put in by the officers. You who claim the contrary would have to assume that every one of these election officers stood there violating their oaths, committing perjury, and rendering themselves liable to civil actions and criminal punishments.

There does not seem to have been any corrupting influence in the air in favor of the contestee as against the contestant. There is not a syllable of testimony in all this record which points to him in the remotest way as being guilty of bribery, fraud, or corruption, directly or indirectly. Not a syllable of testimony points to him as anywhere seeking his election in any other way than by the full and fair vote of the citizens of that district.

What is the record as to the contestant? Before I get through I will show by the evidence the manner in which he obtained his nomination, which was by fraud and bribery, and the manner in which he brought out and used every evil means to secure his own election.

But now to consider further these three precincts. When the contestant makes up his case he has not brought in the returns which were sent up to the canvassing officers. Nor does he bring in the report of the action of the canvassing officers. The contestant in other cases, where he seemed to have some ground to stand upon, brought into the record the returns certified and properly, and not only the returns certified properly, but the action of the county canvassers, the resolutions which they passed, the disposition which they made of the vote of the precinct, showing whether the vote of that precinct was counted or not, and if counted, for whom.

Now I say to gentlemen on the other side, members of this Committee on Elections, can you point to any testimony which shows whether these precincts were counted for or against the contestant? Can you point to any evidence that shows they are not included in the count as made up?

I have been unable, sir, to find any testimony whatever that would show whether the total votes of the two or three districts were included in the vote as made up, or whether they were rejected, and I do not believe that any such testimony exists in the record. I think, therefore, it is asking a very great deal of this House that it shall assume they were not counted, and therefore add to the votes of the contestant, as claimed by gentlemen upon the other side, such portion as the contestant assumes he ought to have and such votes as he assumes the contestee might have.

I have now disposed of all the precincts except two, Brick Church, in Beaufort County, and Brick Episcopal Church, in Berkeley County. I will take the latter first. This is the precinct in which the gentleman said that Mount Pleasant was situated, and that, therefore, a copy of the registration of that precinct should have been sent to Brick Episcopal Church, Berkeley County. Now the facts are that the people in Mount Pleasant do not vote at Brick Church for Congressman. Mount Pleasant is a precinct composed of the town of Mount Pleasant and some territory adjacent to it for Congressional and State purposes-for State purposes a greater area than for the other.

Mr. ROWELL. Let me ask my colleague, does not every man who votes at Brick Church for Federal officers vote at the Mount Pleasant precinct for State officers?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That is true, and I have not said anything to the contrary. But every man who votes at Mount Pleasant for State officers does not vote there for Congressman.

Mr. ROWELL. Some of DARGAN's vote was from there.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. No; you are mistaken about that; those who lived within the town vote in the town for State officers as well, but those who live out of the town go to the Brick Church to vote for Congressman and Federal officers.

This, Mr. Speaker, I say, was a new precinct created by law recently for Federal election purpos

Will the gentleman permit me to ask him aques-Mr. CHEADLE.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Certainly.

Mr. CHEADLE. Do you believe that the voters who voted at Brick Episcopal Church ought to be excluded because they did not have a duplicate register?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I believe they ought to be excluded, not because they had not a duplicate register, but because they had no certificates. There were no registration books there.

Mr. CHEADLE. But is it not true that at Mount Pleasant they voted for State officers and at Brick Church for Congressman?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. They voted at Mount Pleasant as they were entitled to vote, being registered in that precinct, for State officers, but the new precinct being created, the law of South Carolina did not provide or does not provide for a copy of the voters' register being sent to

Mr. CHEADLE. Does the law provide that where a man is to vote at one precinct for State officers but at another for Federal officers that he must have duplicate registration papers?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It provides that when a new precinct has been opened or erected by law the registered voter must himself appear and request to have his name put upon the registration list for that pre-

Mr. ROWELL. Was there a new precinct established, or a new voting district created, of a part of the Mount Pleasant precinct for the Congressional election?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. That was a new precinct for the Federal elec-

Mr. ROWELL. Is there any possibility under the law of South Carolina to create a precinct for Federal elections?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Well, that is just what was done, and was done by the law of South Carolina, as I understand it.

Mr. ROWELL. Not by the law.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Yes, by the law. I will not stop to read the law, but the requirements were as I have stated.

In this case at Brick Church, as I have said, those who desired to over were not registered. Gentlemen may complain of the registration law. It was bequeathed by the Republican party when they were in power in the State. That kind of a population is a population that can easily evade election laws. I do not assume that they are any better or worse than people generally; I do not assume that they are more likely to "repeat" than other people; but I do say that a rigid registration law was necessary to prevent the possibility of their resection without detection. peating without detection.

I do not complain of the makers of such laws. Registration and location of voters prevent fraud.

It is almost impossible for any one seeing a large number of these men together to recognize any one of that number next day should he meet him. That is the simple fact, without any disrespect for the people; a fact with which everybody who has had any experience will

Now, as to the vote at the Brick Church, in Beaufort County. Gentlemen have said here upon the floor that the managers of the election had testified that was a fair and quiet election and that there was no intimidation at that election. I take issue right there with the gentlemen who make that statement. I say that the testimony shows that the conduct of the election was so interfered with that it was necessary to suspend the election two or three times during the day. This is the election precinct in which a voter quarreled with the managers for refusing to permit him to vote without presenting his registration certificate; this is the precinct at which one of the managers was compelled to go out and quiet the crowd so as to enable the election to proceed; this is the precinct at which gathered a mob of women, brought there by the appeals of the contestant, for the purpose of whipping any colored man who voted for the Democratic nominee; this is the precinct in the immediate vicinity of which a club was organized, a Democratic colored club. At Ladies' Island there was a colored club, and at St. Helena Island there was another club of Democratic colored The minority of the committee sneeringly allude to three men being chased by women. The contestant, describing the same event in his speech, said:

I saw forty men from Ladies' Island marching in a Democratic club, and I was ashamed of them. But they were brick-batted, so that they had to get down and cross the ferry at night-time.

This is the precinct in which men's houses were shot at because they were Democrats. This is the precinct in which a reign of terror prevailed to such an extent as would have justified the casting out of the vote, if it had been cast for Mr. Elliott, for similar bulldozing upon his side.

I will give you some of the testimony as to that particular precinct, but before I do that I want to present to this House Mr. Smalls, the contestant, as he appeared to his own people. I will not go into a discussion of the question as to whether he was guilty of bribery or not. I am not going to dwell upon that for an instant. When the gentleman from Illinois says that he was convicted upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, I simply say that the cashier of the bank at which this $5,000 check was deposited appeared in court and testified, and with his book there showed that Mr. Smalls did deposit the $5,000 about the date that this accomplice testified he had received it, and that a memorandum had been made in that bank-book that it was to be charged to the account of Woodruff, the briber. The possession of the $5,000 by Smalls at that time has never been accounted for in any other Why has he not at least attempted to do so?

The House will please bear in mind that it is claimed that because this is a large negro district, therefore it is a large Smalls district. wish to show that his glory had departed even among his own kith and kin and fellow-citizens. I will not read much of the testimony, but the testimony goes to show distinctly that there was a bitter contest in his own party against him. There were others there who felt that they ought to come here. There were some who felt that Mr. Smalls ought no longer to come here, because of his position on the Freedman's Bank matter, and because for other reasons pertaining to his course they were dissatisfied. But the great objection which they had to him was that he was a convicted felon. "Oh, but," say gentlemen advocating his case, "he had been elected to Congress two or three times after that event;" as if an election to Congress washed the sins away from all.

The people down there had not had this subject brought to their attention. It had not been discussed before them. This was the first time that it was brought before them, and it was brought before them not by white Democrats, because if it had been brought to their attention only by white Democrats it might not have been accepted by them; they would not have been so likely to consider it; but it was brought to their attention by many of the colored leaders; by men managing party affairs; by men who were determined to defeat this man and who had the confidence of the people. They brought it to the attention of the people quite frequently.

Let us see how he received his nomination. If he received his nomination by force, or by fraud, or by bulldozing, it will go to show why it was-for that question was asked by gentlemen on the other sidewhy it was that 25,000 negroes did not vote for him. Take the whole vote that he claims to have in the district, and still it is short about 25,000 negro voters. This fact may be worth considering by those gentlemen upon the other side who so frequently repeat that members upon this side of the House from the South appear here with such a small number of votes. The negroes are not, unless specially interested in the election, in the habit of turning out at the polls.

But as to the manner of his nomination. A gentleman testifies who is described as a Republican from the State of Maine, down there managing some works in which he has several hundred men in his employ. He says that he was at one of the primary meetings in which this man Smalls was seeking his nomination, which ended in a quarrel-

And after I had left, not before, after a large portion of the colored people had left, then these (Smalls's) delegates were elected.

Mr. ROWELL. "After I had left I heard"-is that good evidence?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Wait and I will show what was done before he left:

W. H. Thompson, a colored man, who has been a leading Republican since the "reconstruction" period; who was inspector of customs under the Republican collector and turned out by his Democratic successor; who was Republican county chairman of Charleston County in 1872; member of the State executive committee from 1878 to 1880; Republican county chairman for Berkeley County from 1884 to 1886, and Republican Congressional county chairman for the last campaign, testifies (pages 630-655), among other things, as follows:

"Q. 12. Did you support the Republican nominee for Congress during that

"A. I did not.
"Q. 13. Will you state the reasons why you did not?
"A. Because I believed that the so-called Republican nominee was improperly nominated.
"Q. 13. In what way was he improperly nominated? And please state fully all the considerations which operated upon you and induced you to withhold your support from him.

your support from him.

"A. Because the delegates that were seated in Congressional convention from Berkeley County were not entitled to their seats. A majority of the Republicans of the district were opposed to Smalls when he came home from Washington,

When he came home he said to me, 'I understand that you are going to oppose me.' My answer to him was, 'It will depend upon what you will do to cause me to come out actively in opposition to you.' He then struck nis right-hand pocket and said, 'A fat dog can always beat a lean one.' This statement was made in the presence of a dozen or more of the precinct chairmen, who were then opposed to him. The first meeting we had to elect delegates to county convention after that declaration was at St. Andrew's, at which place a precinct chairman was to be elected to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the former one. I presided at the meeting for the election of delegate to the county Congressional convention at the suggestion of General Smalls, as Congressional county chairman, he claiming that Ostendorff had no juisdiction. When the delegates were elected (and they were all elected against him), then he infuriated the people, and demanded and told them to demand that Ostendorff go back on the stand and order an election for another precinct chairman. Ostendorff resued, stating that he had already declared one precinct chairman elected. Upon that General Smalls said, 'By God, kill him, and don't let him leave this ground until he does call this meeting to order.' Ostendorff said, 'I had better go back to save myself from bodily harm,' and upon that he did call the meeting to order, and the people that remained there voted for another precinct chairman."

That was the way Mr. Smalls began his canvass in that campaign.

That was the way Mr. Smalls began his canvass in that campaign. Another man named Smalls testifies on that subject in about the same way, showing that Mr. Smalls was not the choice of his own people, and there is other testimony which corroborates that proposition.

Q. Did you or did you not hear any speeches by Republicans on the day that that meeting was held?
A. I did.
Q. What did you hear; did you or did you not hear any charge made against Smalls by Republicans?
A. I did; I heard him charged as a bribe-taker and a convicted felon.
Q. Was Smalls present?
A. He was.
Q. Who made the charge?
A. A man named Research

Was Smalls present:

He was.

Who made the charge?

A man named Brown,

Was Brown a white or a colored man?

He was a colored man.

Did or did not Smalls say anything in regard to the charge; and if so, that?

A. He said that no man could say that and live ten minutes.

Q. What became of Brown after that?

A. After he came down from the stand he came to my carriage and staid there is balance of the day.

Q. Did or did not Brown give any reason for coming to you?

Objected to.) A. He said he did not know what Smalls's bullies might do.

William H. Thompson says that Smalls was charged with dereliction of duty and with being absolutely unfit to represent his people in Congress; also that he was charged with being "a convicted felon" and 'a bribe-taker."

I will read again from this testimony:

Q. Colonel Elliott says, in the twelfth paragraph of his answer, that the fact that Smalls had been convicted of taking a bribe had been made an issue in the that smalls hat been convicted of dating a bridge and along a bridge and a comparing.

A. That is a fact.
Q. He also says that this gave him the support of a large number of supporters of Smalls's political party.
A. It certainly did carry a great many Republicans to Colonel Elliott.

J. C. Mardenborough testified that they opposed him "principally because of his conviction of accepting a bribe." The people (he said) are becoming more enlightened; consequently, more sensible. C. B. Smalls, a colored man, testifies to the fact that Robert Smalls was unpopular among his people and was not their choice.

I now call attention to another matter which may throw some light upon the question of who it was that stuffed the ballot-boxes. Mr.

Sawtelle testified as follows:

Q. Did or did you not have any conversation with Smalls prior to the election in regard to the probable result? State what.

A. I did; I had a conversation with him in regard to Bowen getting the nomination; he said Bowen had not money enough, but he had money enough to earry him through.

Again, Mr. W. H. Thompson testifies:

Q. In what way was he improperly nominated? And please state fully all the considerations which operated upon you and induced you to withhold your support from him.

A. Because the delegates that were seated in Congressional convention from Berkeley County were not entitled to their seats.

These were the delegates that were elected after others had been elected by a full convention, and after the majority had gone out. Smalls, by threats and intimidation, had compelled the chairman to go back and call the meeting to order again. This witness further

A majority of the Republicans of the district were opposed to Smalls when he came home from Washington. When he came home he said to me, "I understand that you are going to oppose me." My answer to him was, "It will depend on what you will do to cause me to come out actively in opposition to you." He then struck his right-hand pocket and said, "A fat dog can always beat a lean one."

Until I read this testimony I had an idea that a Senator from "a State which never sent a Democratic Representative to Congress' the originator of that use of the word "fat," when he proposed to "fry the fat? out of the large manufacturers (who, as he said, received the chief benefit of the protective tariff) in order to carry on the recent campaign, but I see now that the credit of originating it belongs to South Carolina. [Laughter.]

But I must briefly consider Brick Church, Beaufort County. The question is, were the colored men so intimidated at this precinct that we are justified in throwing it out? On the subject of intimidation in the district, first, I refer again to Mr. Sawtelle's testimony:

Q. De you or do you not know of any colored men who desired to support Colonel Elliott at the last election? And, if so, state what number A. There were several, and I know of five.
Q. Do you or do you not know if any were prevented from supporting Colonel Elliott?

nel Elliott?

A. They were prevented through fear of the other colored people.
Q. How many hands do you employ at the Bulow mines?
A. From three to five hundred.
Q. Did all of your hands go to vote on election day?
(Objected to.)
A. No.
Q. Did or did not as many of your hands vote on election day as at previous lections? ctions?

elections?
(Objected to.)
A. No.
Q. State the difference in the number of your hands voting at the last election and the previous elections as nearly as you can.
A. At previous elections all voters went to the polls; at the last election there were very few; I do not think more than ten went,

Ten out of three to five hundred were all that went to the polls at that district. How can you account for this lack of interest? They were all opposed to Smalls in that precinct; that is the testimony. That, however, is not the precinct I have under consideration. I have introduced it to show that this intimidation was general. I will now come to the immediate vicinity. J. C. Mardenborough testifies that he heard Smalls speak on St. Helena Island:

heard Smalls speak on St. Helena Island:

On St. Helena Island I heard him speak. There were a large number of people present, a great many of whom were women—a feature of Republican meetings. On that island there exists a Democratic club, consisting mainly of colored young men. This club, in 1836, assumed considerable proportions, so much so that the Republican leaders became alarmed, and held frequent meetings there, when in previous years they did not have more than one as a rule. At one of these meetings Smalls, addressing the old people, told them that their sons were being misled in voting against him, and told hem that the land they owned was sold to them by the Republican party; that the Republican party was their friend, and so was he; that their sons had joined the Democratic party, who were not their friends, as they knew from years of experience; told them of the time when they had masters; told them of the persons who did own the lands upon which they live; of bad treatment; of children being sold from their mothers, and of scars upon their backs. These things are calculated to stir up women. He told them if their sons voted for a Democrat to put them of their lands; told women to see that their husbands and sons voted for him; to be at the polls on election day and see that they voted the Republican titles.

In pursuance of this advise of Smalls he says that a large number

In pursuance of this advice of Smalls he says that a large number of colored women were within 300 feet of the polls, armed with sticks and bludgeons to prevent men from voting the Democratic ticket. I would like to see some members of this committee who sneer at men being run by colored women-I would like to see them pursued by a crowd of that kind. They would make the liveliest time that they ever made in their lives. [Laughter.]

Let me next refer to the testimony of E. M. Whaley:

Q. How many persons did you see come in with the Republican ticket and then vote the Democratic ticket?

A. Several.
Q. Can you name any?
A. I decline to name them, because some of them asked me not to say that they did it, because it would hurt them with their associates.

A good deal of testimony has been read as to intimidation, and it is well that members, if they have the time, should look at that testimony for themselves. An attempt has been made to create the impression that there was no intimidation because there was no actual killing of anybody on election day. I will again read from the testimony of Mr. Sawtelle, on page 15 of the report:

Q. 27. Have you witnessed elections in your neighborhood in past years?

A. No.
Q. 28. Do you or do you not know anything of the means used by colored Republicans to make colored voters vote?
A. Up to the last election every voter had to go to vote or be whipped by the

Q. 40. From your observation and experience among the colored people, do you or do you not regard it safe for a colored man to vote the Democratic ticket at a precinct where the Republicans are in the majority?

A. I do not.
Q. 41. Give your reasons for your opinion.
A. I think they would mob him, if not kill him.
Q. 42. Have you or have you not ever voted the Democratic ticket?
A. I have never voted for a Democrat in my life.

Q. 51. Have you ever witnessed an election at the North?

A. Several.

Q. 52. Have you or have you not ever seen the same means adopted to keep voters within party lines as you have seen adopted by colored Republicans to keep colored men within the Republican lines in this State?

A. I never have.

Now, I will ask your attention to the testimony of Emanuel Haynes.

Now, I will ask your attention to the testimony of Emanuel Haynes. Before election the colored Democrats on Ladies' Island were treated shamefully by the Republicans. They were abused in public, and were threatened to be killed out because they were Democrats. Witness was threatened to be killed three or four times by Larry Green, cousin of Samuel Green, who fired off his pistol four times in witness's presence, and other times at his house repeatedly. At the polls the Democrats were told not to let 6 o'clock catch them there; and Larry Green fired off his pistol and said, "Look out, Democrats." Home Democrats have had to leave the island, and witness is constantly expecting trouble, and believes he will have to leave the island.
Witness gives the names of nine men, all colored, who promised to vote for contestee, but would not on account of threats. If the people had their free will contestee would have carried the poll.

Another one of these witnesses says that if the people had had their free will at this poll the contestee would have had 300 majority; that was his view of the situation. This same Emanuel Haynes, after testifying, was intimidated or attempted to be intimidated. He was assailed by some of the friends of the contestant, who threatened to break his neck because of his testimony. Aaron Alston testifies:

his neck because of his testimony. Aaron Aiston testifies:

Resided on Ladies' Island. Was a member of the Ladies' Island Democratic Club, and was at the mass meeting at Beaufort. Describes pelting of the club with brick-bats. During the campaign-witness's life was threatened because he was a Democrat. He had charge of a Sabbath school, and was told that "no Democratic nigger should teach our children." The school was broken up on this account. They threatened to kick the Democrats out of the churer. There was a club of women organized to prevent Democrats from voting, and Samuel Green and other leaders told the women not to let the Democrats come in their houses. On election day James Green, brother of Samuel Green, tried to make a fuss with a Democrat named Devereaux, and witness had to drive Devereaux off in his buggy to prevent a row. They met a large crowd of women on the road, at Samuel Green's house, armed with canes and sticks. Witness's horse was caugh by the bridle and jerked about because he was driving a Democrat, Democrats were threatened during the day. Many men who promised to vote the Democratic ticket were afraid to do so on account of threats, particularly of Samuel Green. Samuel Green.

Robert Houston testifies that-

On election day there were a great many women on the road with sticks, threatening to mob the Democrats. Contestant told them in his speech to turn witness out of the church if he voted the Democratic ticket.

William Lockwood testifies that he-Attended a meeting held by Republicans on Ladies' Island day before the election; many women were there, all with sticks. They said they had them to kill Democratic dogs. Mr. Elliott was to speak on the island that day, and these women said he should not pass them. Contestant spoke at the meeting. Said that any woman married to a Democrat, she must kick him out of the house.

Tom Bonner (page 558), colored; age about forty-two:

Lives on Ladies' Island. During the campaign there were many threats by Republicans of killing and whipping Democrats. Jack Johnson, a prominent Republican and delegate to the convention, said the Republicans intended to carry the island or kill the last damn man on it. On election day the women behaved just like they intended to fight a battle, according to the clubs they had. They said they intended to kill out, whip out, and drive out the last man that voted the Democratic ticket. The Democrats left the polls early for fear of trouble.

Is not that intimidation? Who of these timid men would care to endanger their lives by going to vote with such threats made by one of the leading Republicans? "Oh," say gentlemen with a sneer, "if the Democrats were in a large majority why should they have feared inremidration?" Have they not been talking continually about the Republicans being in a large majority in the districts of the South and yet being intimidated? Is it not possible for an organized force, having in its control organization and influence, and backed up by a member of Congress inciting them to evil deeds of this kind—is it not possible to intimidate men to such a degree that they would rather stay at home than go out to vote?

Felix Bonner testifies:

He is forty-four years old, and has lived on Ladies' Island for nine years; belongs to the Ladies' Island Democratic Club, and carried the club flag to a Democratic mass meeting October 22, 1886. On the way back from the meeting the members of the club were brick-batted. From that time on there were continual threats made against the Democrats. But for these threats the Democrats would have carried the polls. On election day there were women at the polls with clubs, using such threats as "We will kill you Democrat niggers to-night," "Never mind, we will fix you to-night." They blockaded the roads to one of the polls, saying, "Theresis no law for women on the day of election."

That is another lesson they had been taught by the member of Congress from that district. I read further down from the testimony of the same witness:

Q. Was anything said by them why they made this attack on you?

A. After I did not get out they didn't get hold of me; they used these words,
"We intend to kill every Democrat nigger that fools around here; if they do vote a Democrat ticket they sha'n't own it around here."

vote a Democrat ticket they sha'n't own it around here."

Q. Did they say anything about your earrying the club fing?

A. Yes; they did. "Felix Bonner, we want to get you anyhow, because you tote that fing to the mass meeting in Beaufort."

Q. What did you do after that; did you remain there after that night?

A. After that night I thought it best to get away from there as quick as I could; I left on Sunday; went back to Ladies' Island; I could not go back, and have not been back since; I had to hire two of my friends to bring my family from there.

Q. Why couldn't you go back; were you prepared by anything any

Why couldn't you go back: were you prevented by anything, or were you

A. My reason for not going back is because I had a doubt; I was afraid of being mobbed by the Republican party.

The next is on page 33 of the report. D. J. Lawrence, colored (page 567); forty-one years of age. He was a Union soldier, and there were two or three other colored ex-Union soldiers in the list of witnesses who asserted their manhood to testify in this case, and his testimony proves the position we maintain, there was such intimidation at Ladies' Island that at this very precinct there was not a fair elec-

Resides at Beaufort; attorney at law; trial justice for Beaufort County; learned to read and write as a slave; was first sergeant Company E, Thirty-fourth United States Colored Troops; engaged in several battles; was wounded twice at the battle of Honey Hill; promoted quartermaster-sergeant; honorably discharged from that regiment and enlisted in Fortieth United States Regulars; after leaving the Army taught school and studied law, and was admitted to the bar in South Carolina; have been a Democrat since 1876; attended several Republican meetings in Beaufort during last campaign; was cursed and ordered to leave, as no negro Democrat was allowed there; heard Thomas Reynolds, Republican State senator, tell the people to go to the polls armed, and to go knee-deep in blood, if necessary, to carry the election; heard Joseph

Robinson, ex-representative, at another meeting, say "that the law allowed him to carry arms, and that he would go as far as any man to carry the county against the Democrats;" heard Robert Smalls, contestant, say in several public speeches in Beaufort "that any colored woman having a Democratic husband should put him out of the house, and that they could have his assistance in doing so."

Gentlemen say, forsooth, that talk of Smalls had no influence, because the women who were married to Democrats did not abandon them; that only two did abandon their husbands, but afterwards returned to them.

Lawrence goes on further:

Lawrence goes on further:

There is no such thing in Beaufort County as a free election and a fair count among the Republicans. I have been a Democrat in Charleston County for a number of years and voted unmolested; but I am told here in Beaufort County that this is a Republican county, and no nigger can vote here for the Democrats. I have a daughter, a young lady, who attends public school in the town of Beaufort, who has been abused more than once on account of her father being a Democrat. I had to stop her from the school until I saw the principal in reference to this matter. I complained to him by letter and have his reply; not only her, but my family, my wife, and myself have been ostracized in the church and socially, and felt the estrangement keenly, on account of my political views.

Here was abuse of a young lady because she was the daughter of a

W. H. Bartless (page 616); forty-four years old. This witness gives a description showing a little pleasant amusement indulged in like that which was described the other day by the gentleman from Illinois.

which was described the other day by the gentleman from Illinois.

Lives in the town of Beaufort, at Green's Ferry; is a lumber manufacturer. On the 22d of October, 1886, after the Democratic mass meeting in Beaufort, was at the saw-mill, near the ferry; heard a great noise in the street leading to the ferry, yelling and whooping, so much so that witness left his work and went to see what the matter was; saw some colored men running from a crowd of half-grown boys and women who were throwing brickbats at them. One man was bleeding from a wound in the head. The air was full of bricks. Some fell in the mill-yard; some struck the kitchen across the street; found that the men who were being brickbatted were members of the Ladies' Island colored Democratic club. Witness itelephoned for the town marshal, who made one or two arrests, but did not commit any one. The men went down to the ferry, and seemed to be very much intimidated; saw a hack go down there with one or two men in it; think it was Doo Day's hack. Fearing further violence, witness went to the ferry; did not see any further violence, but heard a good deal of loud talking; earlier in the day heard a good many threats on the streets of Beaufort against colored Democrats. They said, "Wait until night and we will fix them;" thinks that Doo Day was one of these parties. Peter Green, brother of Samuel Green, runs Green's Ferry. A few days before the election witness was down at the landing; a boat had just pushed off; Samuel Green was in it, and said to an old colored man that came up, "That no Democrate dould go in that boat," meaning colored Democrat. From what witness saw and heard at various times in the town of Beaufort, he would say it required the highest order of curage in a colored man to vote the Democratic licket.

Parris Sherman (nage 619), colored: seventy years of age:

Parris Sherman (page 619), colored; seventy years of age:

Resides on St. Helena island; doin not vote at the last election; went to the Congressional poll for the purpose of voting for Mr. Elliott for Congress; did not vote because there was such an uproar there, got him so frightened he did not stay; heard heap of threatening, and being old thought he had better get out of the way.

A. B. Colonel (page 619), colored; forty-two years old:

Lives on St. Helena Island; served in the late war in Thirty-fourth Regiment Colored Troops, United States Army; during the last campaign Republicans of St. Helena Island made a great many threats against colored Democrats; that Republicans should club together and kill every one that voted Democratic ticket; Cyrus Jenkins, Republican, threatened him; took up a stick at church and struck him two licks, because he advocated Colonel Elliott; the deacons threatened to turn Democrates out of the church; in consequence of these threats a great many were kept from voting Democratic ticket; thinks that the Democrates would have gotten about 300 votes at Brick Church.

William Lockwood (page 558) says:

Q. What did Smalls say in his speech should be done to the Democrats?

A. He said that any woman that married to a Democratic man the woman must kick him out of the house; and if any man's daughter married to a Democratic dog they must kick them out, too; 'cause if we don't both parties will lose their vote if we have any row, and after the poll was closed then they could do as they choose.

S. D. J. Lawrence, on page 568, an ex-Federal soldier, says:

I heard Mr. Robert Smalls, the contestant, say on more than one occasion in a public speech in Beaufort that any colored woman that had a Democratic husband, she should put him out of the house, and not allow him to come in there by any means, and could have his assistance, and in consequence of this speech I know of several cases where husband and wife have been separated.

Roland White (page 612), also an ex-Federal soldier, says:

Q. During the last political campaign did you hear Robert Smalls make a speech at Brick Church?

A. Yes.
Q. What did he tell the people to do with the Democrats?
A. He told the people this: "Who that votes a Democratic ticket to women must put him out and have no use for him, and who votes a Democratic ticket votes against his own right. The women must do away with their husbands if they vote a Democratic ticket." My wife she left my house for overtwo weeks and went to her mother's house.

Jack Freeman says (page 625):

A. Smalls met me on Bay street, in the town of Beaufort, in the presence of other people, and said to one of the persons tanding there, "Do you know any Democrat nigger by the name of Jack Freeman?" I said; "Yes, here's Jack Freeman himself now." Smalls then said, "You boys ought to tie him and lick him." I told him I considered myself a negro and not a nigger. He said, "Yes, you are a nigger, and a low-down nigger." I said, "You are neither a negro nor a white man; you are a mongrel."

George Rivers says (page 376):

Q. Did you hear Robert Smalls make any speeches on St. Helena before the election?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. What did he say the people ought to do with the men who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket?

A. Yes, sir; any one who vote the Democratic ticket for Col. William Elliott, he was sahamed of them. The other day when he was standing in Beaufort, on Bay street, "seen forty mans of Ladies' Island—I was ashamed of myself—coming under a Democratic banner. What use Democrat have for a colored man? The Democrat carried them and feed them in Fincken horse stable; the lowest place you can imagine; that night half had to take the creek to Sammy Green's ferry by the women and boys brickbat them till a constable had to go down and protect them; and these few Democrats on St. Helena ought to done the same way to those few Democrats which are on the island."

Mr. Smalls was a witness on the stand, and he did not deny there was intimidation. He knows this intimidation continued from the beginning to the end of the campaign. He did not deny that he was re-sponsible for making disturbances, which existed in this precinct, which were of such a character as prevented a fair election.

Two witnesses say that they believed Mr. Elliott carried the poll.

One says he believes he would have had 300 at this poll if it had not been for this conduct, which rendered the people excited and turbulent and lawless.

Under these circumstances it seems to me this House would encourage, would be responsible for future bloodshed, possibly, if it permitted such a precinct under such circumstances to be counted for the contestant. And it is in the testimony that this intimidation prevailed on the whole island. Men were driven away; some were assaulted and some were threatened to be killed. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Johnston] that the counting of this precinct or the noncounting of it should determine the election, and that if counted the contestant should have his seat, and if not counted the contestee should have the seat. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]
Mr. ROWELL. Mr. Speaker, I now ask unanimous consent that the contestant may be allowed to proceed for an hour to address the House in this case

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

RESERVATION OF CERTAIN GALLERIES.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent before the contestant proceeds to submit a resolution which it is necessary to adopt

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That all of the west gallery, exclusive of the diplomatic and executive galleries, be reserved on Wednesday, February 13, in addition to the galleries named in the resolution of the House of February 8, for the admission of persons holding tickets issued by the Speaker, as provided for in said resolution, and none others shall be admitted on said day.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. Has not provision been already made for the seats to be occupied by the holders of tickets?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. For two tickets to each of the members, but there are not enough seats provided in the galleries set apart to supply those holding tickets.

Mr. KEAN. It is necessary to adopt this resolution in order that the tickets may not be rendered useless in the hands of those who hold

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I asked because I understood provision had been made already for this purpose.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and adopted.

CONTESTED ELECTION-SMALLS VS. ELLIOTT.

Mr. SMALLS (contestant). Mr. Speaker, I had thought that I would not find it necessary to have a word to say in regard to this contested-election case. I had felt that the American Congress would try this case upon the evidence taken in the Seventh Congressional district in South Carolina. But, to my surprise, I find, going entirely outside of the question, that I am arraigned here and placed on trial for an act said to have been committed in 1873 in South Carolina. It is true, sir, that I was arrested in that State in 1877, charged by the Democrats of the State with receiving a bribe in 1873. This was done after the Democratic party had taken charge of State affairs; but the evidence upon which this trumped-up charge was brought was that of one Josephus Woodruff, who was clerk of the senate and also public printer of that State, and who had acknowledged that he had robbed the State out of over $250,000, and had run away and was brought back from Pennsylvania by a writ issued on the governor of that State.

He testified that of twenty checks which he had given to "cash" or to "bearer" one was given to Robert Smalls. Why so?

Simply because they found that I had deposited in the Banking and Trust Company of that State $5,000 on the 18th day of January, 1873. But when they went to examine the record they found that the check in question was drawn on the 19th day of said month. On examining the calendar they found that the 19th day of January was Sunday, and that if the check was given to me on that day I could not have deposited until the 20th.

Mr. Speaker, in the days of slavery there was a law in South Carolina, I believe, which prevented the negro from having money, but I did not know that there was now any restriction, and especially, sir, after I had given four years to my country in the war, doing all that was in my power to perpetuate that flag which floats above your head. Is it because I had taken a steam-boat out of Charleston under the guns of Forts Sumter and Moultrie and surrendered her with all her ammunition to the Federal Government, and given my service to that Government, pointing out the torpedoes laid to destroy the Federal gunboats, pointing out the masked batteries and taking the Federal vessel under their very guns and driving some of them from their homes that I am now to be arraigned and tried on such a charge? I hope not, gentlemen. I hope you will take this case upon the evidence submitted for your consideration.

The gentleman preceding me [Mr. OUTHWAITE] a few moments ago said that I was convicted, the testimony being corroborated by the cashier of the bank. That gentleman is a member of the Committee on Elections; but, sir, he could not have read the record in this case. The cashier of that bank was a man named Jacobs, who had been charged, as the record shows, under four indictments for perjury, and had fled the State, and a man by the name of Zealy brought in a little slip of paper, written in pencil, and said it was the handwriting of Mr. Jacobs, the cashier of the bank. Mr. Woodruff himself testified that he had made arrangements to borrow money, or had been trying to do so, and asked me to loan him $5,000, and that when I brought the money to him he had already made the arrangements to get $20,000 from Dr. Nagle. I am as innocent of that charge, Mr. Speaker, as you who sit in that chair, and the House knows well that you are innocent.

But, sir, that matter is brought in here. The State of South Carolina was in the hands of the Democratic party. It has been said that Judge Townsend was a Republican. That is the first I have ever known of it. He was not elected as a Republican, but as a Democrat, from Marlborough County, and to-day stands there as a Democrat. No one ever heard of Judge Townsend in the Republican ranks anywhere or at any time until now it seems convenient to serve a Democratic purpose.

If any one has, I have not heard of it. It was said again by gentlemen on the other side that I was convicted by a jury of colored men or Republicans. Mr. Speaker, there were two colored men that might have been Republicans on that jury; but every man on that jury had been a Democrat and had worked and voted for Wade Hampton. There is Jo Taylor. Where is he to-day? Somewhere in Canada. He is a good Democrat; but he stole twenty bales of cotton the other day and has now gone somewhere else. [Laughter.] I stand here to-day and I say that I am just as innocent of that charge as a child unborn.

I say that I am just as innocent of that charge as a child unborn.

And even if I were guilty, Mr. Speaker, what has that to do with the election in the Seventh Congressional district of South Carolina? This trial took place in 1877. I was just elected then to the Forty-fifth Congress. Mr. TILLMAN, from the Fifth Congressional district, then contested my seat in a Democratic Congress. That contest went on to the end, and that Congress took no cognizance of it whatever. I ran again for the next Congress. But before I come to that let me say that after that trial and after I was arrested I appealed to the supreme court of the State. The supreme court held that opinion off over one year, as this record will show. After I had run a second time the supreme court. After that was done, under section 641 of the Revised Statutes, I took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, came here to Washington, and appeared before that court. This record shows it. I went before Chief-Justice Waite, and he granted the appeal and docketed the case.

No sooner was this done, and no sooner had I returned to South Carolina than, without a single word from me or a friend of mine, directly or indirectly, Governor Simpson, of South Carolina, issued and sent to me in Beaufort a pardon which I have here in this paper. [Applause on the Republican side.] I at once called a meeting in the town of Beaufort—not such a bulldozing meeting as some gentlemen on this floor may imagine; but the people turned out, white and black, and I denounced Governor Simpson in as strong terms as I was capable of using for giving me that pardon pending an appeal to the Supreme Court. [Applause on the Republican side.] I went to Columbia, where Governor Simpson resided, and there I was serenaded by the people for my conduct. There, upon Lady street and Assembly street, I said all a man could say against Governor Simpson for doing this pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, thus depriving me of all the right God Almighty gave me, and here I am standing in the American Congress, and here distinguished gentlemen, because I was deprived of a right belonging to every American citizen in the vindication of his character, are trying to prejudice the minds of men on that side of the House to vote against me.

deprived of a right belonging to every American citizen in the vindication of his character, are trying to prejudice the minds of men on that side of the House to vote against me.

But, Mr. Speaker, a few days after, or a little while after, I had returned from Washington to South Carolina, Mr. Youmans, the attorney-general of South Carolina, slips up here to the Supreme Court, goes into the court and asks that this case be stricken from the docket, on the ground that it had been adjudicated in the State. I knew nothing of this at all until I happened to see a sketch of it in the News and Courier, published in Charleston, saying that Mr. Youmans was in Washington and had made such a motion. I at once telegraphed to my lawyer, William A. Cook, in Washington. I did not get an answer, and I telegraphed to Mr. T. J. Minton:

I see by the papers that Youmans was in Washington, and that he has moved to strike my case from the docket on account of its being settled by the State, Stop it. There is a principle involved. My right is involved. Do what you can to stop it. Please write,

I got a telegram from Washington in reply stating "it was stricken off yesterday." When I first learned of Youmans's action I took the next train for Washington, and when I got to Charleston I received the telegram that had been sent to Beaufort and forwarded to me at Charleston.

I came on to Washington, however, and found that Youmans had gone and met C. C. Cole, who was then the partner of Mr. Cook, and had gone before the Supreme Court. Mr. Cole had said to him that the expenses were $125, as I was informed. Mr. Youmans paid the $125 to Mr. Cole, and Mr. Cole went and drew the $125 that I had deposited. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Speaker, these are about the facts in the case so far as they go. Governor Simpson knew that he was right. He knew there was no evidence against me. Governor Wade Hampton told me with his own lips, "Smalls, there is nothing against you. We are not after you. We are after these infernal carpet-baggers. Those are the men we want to get rid of."

It is to be remembered that at the time there were a good many men away from South Carolina. They were hunting them everywhere—in Canada and God knows where. Some of them have never been found. Mr. Butler, now the librarian here, who was an officer, had warrants for them and went all over the United States hunting them. It must be borne in mind that at that time the Democrats of South Carolina were prosecuting every Republican who had held an office in the State and was in office at that time. I stood my ground like a man. I knew that I was innocent. [Applause.] Governor Simpson, a very few days after, knowing I had been unjustly persecuted, and like an honorable man endeavoring in some slight degree to repair the wanton outrage, issued me a commission as captain of one of the militia companies of the State, and in that commission speaks in very commending terms of me, and says it was issued for "meritorious services rendered." Gentlemen, do not think that the governor would have said this if he had believed the charge. I do not think he would.

There was something peculiar in this case. I was arrested in Beaufort and I was brought to Columbia. When I got to Columbia Mr. Woodruff was not there. I went and saw General Connor, who was then the attorney-general. I was in charge of a constable. General Conner says, "Smalls, that is all right; you are all right; we know you won't go anywhere." I staid in that town, and I walked it for five days before Joe Woodruff was sent for and brought from Charleston. When he came he went up to the trial justice's office, and I gave a bond for $5,000 for my appearance, and then came back to Washington and took my seat, to which I had been fairly and honorably elected, in the Forty-fifth Congress. When the case was called for trial I left here and went down and stood my trial like a man.

But while I was there, before the trial came off, Mr. Cochrane, the chairman of this great investigating committee appointed by the Legislature of South Carolina, said to me, "Smalls, you had better resign." "Resign what?" "Resign your seat in Congress." "What," says I, "the seat the people elected me to?" "Yes; you had better resign, because if you don't they are going to convict you." Says I, "I don't believe that, sir. I am innocent and they can not do it." "Well," said he, "bear in mind that these men have got the court, they have got the jury, and an indictment is a conviction." I did not believe it, but I tell you those gentlemen taught me it was so. [Laughter.] And it was so. [Renewed laughter.] I was sought by another gentleman, a gentleman from Aiken County, Mr. Drayton, the editor of a paper there. He came to me and said, "Smalls, we don't want to harm you. Get out of the way. We know you have been kind to the people just after the surrender, and Governor Hampton says he don't want to injure you. We want this government and we must have it. If you will vacate your office, here is your $10,000 for your two years' salary." Says I, "Mr. Drayton, where did you get this money to give me?" Says he, "Smalls, don't youask that. We have got the money. The people of South Carolina have paid in 10 per cent, on their taxes to perpetuate the Hampton government and we intend to have it." Says I, "Sir, if you want me to resign my position you must call meetings all over the Congressional district and get those people who elected me to pass resolutions requiring me to resign, and then you can have the office without a penny. Otherwise L would suffer myself to go into the penitentiary and rot before I would resign an office that I was elected to on a trumped-up charge against me for the purpose of making me resign." [Applause on the Republican side.] I thank the gentlemen on the other side of the House for bringing up this matter and giving me an opportunity to say a few words in regard to this persecution which was p regard to this persecution which was perpetrated upon me twelve or fifteen years ago.

Mr. Speaker, I feel sorry for the people of my State if one-half that has been said on the other side of the House by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crist] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] who has just preceded me is true. Gentlemen, think of what you have done! The State of South Carolina to-day has every judge in it a Democrat, every prosecuting officer a Democrat, every constable a Democrat, and yet they have allowed all this bulldozing and threatening of life, and these attempts to drive people out of the church and away from their homes, and they have not arrested a man. [Applause on the Republican side.] Not a single man has been brought into court for any of these offenses. Not even an old woman. [Renewed applause and laughter.] They brought in fourteen men charged with committing an assault on Dr. White, and the evidence shows that Dr. White was drunk and fell down over some planks as he came out of the door, and Dr. White will testify if he is put upon the stand that I went into the room and stood by him and went to his home with him.

Mr. Elliott himself will not say half as much about the condition of things down there as some of the gentlemen on that side of the House have said. I hope, in the name of God, that the gentlemen who have made those statements do conscientionsly believe what they have said. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Speaker, who are the men that make these charges? Is there a gentleman on this floor, and especially a gentleman in the Democratic party, who has not had opposition for the nomination? Why, sir, I saw the other day in the papers that some of them have been a month getting a nomination. [Laughter.] I got mine on the first ballot. [Renewed laughter.] And I got every vote with the exception of 7, and they were from Sumter County, and the candidate from Sumter County moved that the nomination be made nnanimous and went home and stumped every precinct in the county for my election, and his testimony shows that fact. Mr. Bowen was a candidate. Mr. Thompson was a candidate. Neither one of those gentlemen belongs in the district. Mr. Thompson does not belong in the district. Mr. Bowen does not belong in the district. Both those gentlemen live in Charleston. Mr. Sawtelle does not belong You have not heard read here the testimony of a single man who is a resident and voter in the Seventh Congressional district outside of Beaufort County to sustain these charges of fraud on the part of my friends, who, if asked the question, "Whom did you vote for?" will not say "I did not vote," because if they had voted they would probably have been indicted for illegal voting, for the reason that they did not belong in the district.

There was not, Mr. Speaker, a single dissenting voice in that district as to my nomination until after the election and not until the testimony hrd begun to be taken. And, sir, I could refer to this very record to show you how some of these men testified. In the county of Berkeley they created an office. We have here the testimony of the chairman of the board of county commissioners and the clerk of the board of county commissioners of Berkeley County. That office, known as the detective of Berkeley County, was created, at a salary of $50 a month, an office not known to the laws of South Carolina, an office that does not exist in any other county in that State. When that office was created some one said to Thompson, "You can have this office;" another said to Mr. Aaron, the Dutchman, "You can have that office." In the same way the office was offered to several others. But no one could have it until he had outrivaled the others telling the best lies against me. There was really a competitive examination in falsehood for this position. [Laughter.] But this mixed-breed, white Republican, Aaron, succeeded over all the negroes and got the position, and he holds it to-day.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask gentlemen on the other side of the House to look this record over, and if I was not honestly and squarely elected to this House I ask you, gentlemen, in God's name, be honest, be true to your convictions, and do not vote to seat me. If after careful examination you come to the conclusion (though I can not for my life see how you e n do so) that I was not elected, do not vote for me.

Now, I have said enough in regard to this matter of bribery. I would be glad before I close to have read from the Clerk's desk a petition for a change of venue that I filed with the judge of that court before my case was tried. That petition is in this record; and if any decent man calling himself a judge or a lawyer, except Judge Townsend, would have attempted to try that case after that petition was filed, I would like to see that man. But Judge Townsend, in his anxiety to retain his office, can scarcely be considered responsible at that time, because he had been elected in South Carolina by the Republicans, and just as soon as the Democrats got into power they said that all the judges elected by the Republicans, notwithstanding they had been in office ten years, were illegally elected; that the constitution said they must be elected by ballot, and they had been elected by a viva roce to the General Assembly. A resolution declaring their elections illegal, and which was finally passed, was then pending before the Legislature, and Judge Townsend was just as "dodgeful" as one of those partridges down our way—what you call quaits in the North. [Laughter.] He was dodging day by day, waiting for the Legislature to decide whether or not he was a judge, and Attorney-General Connor had him do as he pleased.

The record is all here. I would ask you gentlemen, after you have east your votes against me, to take this record home and in your leisure moments read the testimony; read the record of the case as it went to the supreme court; read what is said by Mr. Zealy, not the cashier of the bank; read what Mr. Woodruff said; and when you get through you will say to yourselves, "I have done one negro a wrong in my life." If you could only stop with saying "one!" [Laughter and applause.] Mr. Speaker, I shall not undertake to deal with the legal questions arising upon this testimony, because I am not a lawyer; and sometimes I thank God that I am not [laughter], because now I can agree upon something. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, I have my certificate of registration. [Producing it.] Gentlemen on the other side say that a man must have two certificates; in other words, that if he votes at the Episcopal Brick Church, 6 miles from Mount Pleasant, he must have a certificate for that box, and must have one also for Mount Pleasant; for it will be borne in mind that Mount Pleasant and the Episcopal Brick Church are both in the county of Berkeley; one is the Congressional polling place, and the other the polling place for State and county officers. Now, if a man had to change his certificate to the Brick Episcopal Church because he lived outside of the corporate limits of the town, he could not vote for State or county officers unless he had another certificate on which to ca-t that vote. The law does not provide for any such thing. I have here the certificate on which I voted for State and county officers at the court-house in Beaufort. Then I tramped down a mile to the council-room in the town, and there I cast my vote for Thomas Miller for Congress and Harrison and Morton Presidential electors on the same identical certificate; and I have never had it changed since it was issued to me in

We have a peculiar law, sir, in our State. The gentleman says it is a Republican law; that it was passed by the Republicans. This registration law was passed by the Democratic Legislature of 1881. The Republicans were cleaned out of office in South Carolina in 1876. We had a different registration law in the State then. Every man before he voted would go up to the polls, lift his hand, and swear he was qualified under the constitution and that he had not voted anywhere else during that day, and he was then allowed to deposit his vote, his name being taken. But now you must register before you can vote. Do I say you must register? No; you can not register. Why do I say this? I will tell you. You had a chance to register in 1882, and any man who was twenty-one years of age in 1882, who did not register then, can not vote or register in South Carolina to-day.

The constitution of our State says that any man who goes into the State of South Carolina and lives in the State for one year, and for sixty days in the county, is entitled to vote. But, Mr. Speaker, if you go there to-day and stay there until Gabriel shall blow his born calling us to come to the place, wherever it may be, that we are to go, you can not register except by courtesy. There is no law which authorizes a man who moves into the State to register as a matter of right. The law says that only those who become of age since 1882 can register, and the decision has been rendered time and again that any man who was twenty-one years of age and neglected to register in 1882 can not register now and vote.

Mr. HAUGEN. Is that a decision of the courts or of the registering officers?

Mr. SMALLS (contestant). Of the registering officers.

Again, sir, the registrar goes to the court-house on each Monday, or rather on the first Monday of every month, commencing in January and continuing until July, and if you happen to live 30 or 60 miles from the court-house you must go to that point, pay your own fare on the train, 30 or 60 miles, and then be registered after you have passed through all kinds of objections, if permitted registration at all

Why, Mr. Speaker, two years ago, before I ran for Congress, on Edisto Island there were one hundred and thirty-odd men without certificates of registration. They made an agreement with the steam-boat Pilot Boy, running between Edisto and Charleston, to take them to Charleston for one fare. One hundred and thirty men went to Charleston and went from there to Mount Pleasant on the day fixed for registration, but no registrar put in his appearance during the entire day, and they had to return home without a single man of that number being

But, sir, they tell you that my vote has fallen off, that my people have gone against me. They say that I have become unpopular. distinguished gentleman from Georgia, the chairman of this committee, says that the votes had fallen off over 10,000. No, sir, no vote has The vote is the same to-day and more, but Democrats have improved their methods of preventing votes from getting into the box. [Laughter.] There were six thousand and odd voters in Beaufort County colored, and 693 white voters, according to the census of 1880.

Now, gentlemen, think of it for a moment. I have become very unpopular. All the negroes have quit me down there and are craving to vote the Democratic ticket. [Laughter.] All of them are voting that ticket except those who are bulldozed, and yet nobody is arrested for that offense. Still the Democrats do not get their votes. What is for that offense. Still the Democrats do not get their votes. What is the matter? What has become of the Democratic votes? Are they going to me? They have quitted the contestee and do not vote for him. He did not get but 6,000 votes in the whole Congressional district, where he is entitled to 7,000. I have 32,000 votes in the district: he has 7,000. Still, he gets but six thousand and odd votes and says he is a popular man and I am unpopular. Nobody votes for me. According to his theory he ought toget the 7,000 Democratic votes and all of mine too. [Laughter.] Why, it looks odd. I do not know how the distinguished gentleman accounts for it. Are you disfranchising the white men down there? I do not think so. I will tell you, sir. A majority, or a large percentage of the honorable Democrats of that district feel and have said it time and again, and say now, that it was a shame that an honorable man like Colonel Elliott was willing to receive the benefits of such a gigantic steal as has been perpetrated upon that district. They have said it time and again, and I am not saying anything but what the papers and the people say themselves.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I heard that said to you myself while

I was there.

Mr. SMALLS. And if any gentleman on this floor will go down there I will guaranty him to-day, upon my oath, if I am seated in this House, to permit you, Mr. Speaker, to withhold every dollar if you do not find that a majority of the honorable men in the district will tell you the same thing, and you may donate the money, if it is not true, to some charitable institution, and I am as poor as any you can send it to, but do not give it to me.

Now, sir, the people of that district are just as much allied to me to-day as they have ever been. The question was asked me, "Why did you not run again for Congress?" Why did I not? Simply because I could not do it. I had not the means. I paid in this contest $5,200, and there are vouchers to-day in the room of the Committee on Elections, sworn to by men who say that they received the respective amounts from me, making up that sum. That has been the amount of my expenses; and yet that committee allowed me $2,000 for it. Besides that, I am kept out of the seat; and I knew that if I did run I would have another contest on hand. I was very unpopular, as they said. Still, another popular man did run, and he has a contest now. He had no opposition after his nomination; that is to say, after he received the nomination every Republican went to work for him.

There has been something said about the Brick Church. I-say, sir, that precinct gave me 503 votes and Colonel Elliott 45 votes. Gentlemen have made allusions here about intimidation. Ever since the reconstruction there has been a small number of Democrats on a dissatisfied element on that island. In the first election that we ever had in South Carolina, in 1867, to elect delegates to the constitutional convention, Samuel DeNett got 75 votes on St. Helena Island. And there has been no election since the reconstruction when there has not been a dissatisfied element on that island. Men whose votes the man gets who pays for them. [Laughter.] And they have been let alone by me and others. [Laughter.] Mr. Elliott got them this time. Now, sir, every Democratic officer, with one exception, swears that on that island there was a peaceable and quiet election. There is not a single syllable in the testimony from beginning to end to prove that a single man had been deprived of his right to vote. Wherever any witness has stated such to be the fact, the party named by the witness when called upon the stand has denied it, and has stated that he either did not attempt to vote or did not vote, but testified that he would have voted for me if he had voted at all. But it was very necessary that these votes should be thrown out. The 503 alone would give me enough votes to give me a seat here, and you, Mr. Speaker, would have

Take again the Santee precinct. Think of it, gentlemen. When I went before this Berkeley County board, Mr. Elliott, by his attorneys, Messrs. Barnwell & Brawley, protested against over half a dozen of the precincts on the ground that there were no barricades in front of the

Let me tell you something about these barricades. The law of that State says that there shall be a barricade 6 feet high and 20 feet long in front of the door, so that no one can see persons in the room or how the ballot-boxes are arranged. But one voter is allowed in the room at a time. No one is in this room but the three Democratic managers of the election and one clerk.

Then the law says again that whenever the number of ballots in the box exceeds the number of names upon the poll-list, the ballots shall be placed back in the box and one of the managers, without seeing them, shall draw out the excess of ballots and immediately destroy them. I tell you, sir, that we can not get the votes, for, while the Re-publicans may cast 600 votes, they docket 150 or 200 votes on the poll-list and then the excess vote must be taken out. There is nobody there to protest.

But, sir, Mr. Elliott found that by making this charge against the poll not being properly barricaded he was going to defeat himself, because half the polls were not barricaded, and those among the polls where he got the most votes. Next day he was advised of this; and, as the record shows here, Mr. Barnwell, an honorable and distinguished lawyer in the State, came into court and withdrew the protest against the Berkeley votes, and they went in. But when they got up to Santee, where I had 212 and Mr. Elliott only got 4, there was no barricade, and this committee says that must not be counted. Generous commit-

[Laughter.]

If you are going to throw out votes at all the polls where there were no barricades, it would defeat Mr. Elliott, and therefore that would not do. [Laughter.] Again, this committee says that Gadsden, that gives me 451 votes, must not be counted. One of the reasons given is because it was not opened until 10 o'clock in the morning. I passed on the floor yesterday and heard my distinguished friend, Colonel Elliott, laboring with some Democrats on the other side of the House, and saying, "Why, don't you see he abandoned it himself? His lawyer abandoned it." Well, now, Mr. Speaker, what does the committee do with Salter's precinct, in Williamsburgh County? That did not open at all until 12 o'clock? That was for Elliott. Smalls did not get any votes there; and though it did not open until 12 o'clock this committee says, "That is all right."

Mr. BURROWS. Did they count it?

Mr. SMALLS. They counted that, though it did not open until 12 o'clock. But they did not count Gadsden, where it was opened at 10 But still, Mr. Speaker, not a single man testifies that he went to that poll of Gadsden and could not vote. There was no shape of fraud or attempt to drive them away from the polls; but just simply because the two Democratic managers who were appointed would not serve, the United States supervisor swore in two other men, and they held an honorable election. Every man who went to the poll exhibited his certificate to show that he was entitled to vote before he cast a ballot. But those 400 votes would of course elect Smalls again. [Laughter.] So Smalls must go. [Laughter.] And I suppose he will go when the vote is taken to-morrow. [Laughter.]

But, gentlemen, he will go good-naturedly, because he will be up here himself next year and will be likely to see some of you go out, too. [Great laughter.] The only difference is that I am going out before you; but I can afford to wait. [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Speaker, there has been a good deal said about several of these precincts, but I have not heard a single word said by a member of the committee about the Lake City precinct. I am going to ask the Representative from the Sixth district of South Carolina, whom I see in his seat [Mr. Dargan], to rise upon this floor and state whether Lake City is in the Seventh or Sixth Congressional district, and if he says it is in the Seventh I will not say another word.

Mr. DARGAN. I will say, in response to the gentleman's inquiry, that I understand that Lake City is on the line between the Sixth and the Seventh districts; that the line runs through Lake City. I do not know that myself, but such is my understanding. I understand further that the voters of both districts vote there at a common precinct. I have no personal knowledge of that, however, but my understanding is that both the Sixth and the Seventh district voters vote at Lake City at a common precinct, in separate boxes, because the line runs through

Mr. SMALLS. I have some little knowledge of the subject, and I certainly am ready to take the word of the gentleman from South Caro-I take stock in him. [Laughter.] He is all right.

Mr. DARGAN. I am much obliged to the gentleman.

Mr. SMALLS. But, Mr. Speaker, I say here that Lake City is in the Sixth Congressional district, and over a mile from the line; so far into the Sixth district that at no election when I have ever run for Congress did we have a single manager or supervisor there from the Seventh district. We never had a representative at that poll. That poll gave Mr. Elliott a considerable vote. They cheated my friend from South Carolina [Mr. DARGAN] out of a large vote there, because it was necessary to make a majority for Mr. Elliott in the other dis-They might have placed my distinguished friend [Mr. DAR-GAN] in the same position I am in, by taking his vote from the Sixth district and putting it over into the Seventh. [Laughter.]

There has been a good deal said and a good deal of testimony quoted here, and among others we have had the testimony of S. J. Bampfield, and it has been remarked that Mr. Bampfield is my son-in-law. is true. I have had the pleasure in my life of educating a daughter in Massachusetts, at West Newton. This young man was once the servant of Mr. Trenholm, but he had the fortune to graduate at Lincoln University, in Pennsylvania, and he has been clerk of Beaufort County for twelve long years. He has just been re-elected, and every Democratic judge in the State that comes to Beaufort says that notwithstanding he is a negro, he is one of the best clerks in that State. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw Mr. Bampfield's testimony from the record and ask that no attention be given to it, if Mr. Elliott himself will rise in his place here and say that he would not believe him under oath. I have heard Mr. Elliott say time and again that Bampfield is oath. I have heard and the most accomplished clerks he ever met, and for truth and veracity he is second to nobody; and because he happened to marry my daughter, must he perjure himself for me? I do not support either him or his wife. They have their own house and live by them-

But he was at Pocotaligo. That is where he lives and where he taught school before he was elected a member of the State Legislature. He is elected to every county convention from that precinct as a dele-Mr. Elliott says himself-I have heard him say it time and again-that Mr. Bampfield is as respectable and reliable a man as he ever met; and if he says now that he never said so, I will withdraw every line of Mr. Bampfield's testimony from the record and lay no stress upon it in regard to Pocotaligo precinct.

Now, another point that there has been a good deal of comment about is this poll-list coming down without being certified. Well, I could not help that. If the chairman of the committee will look at the receipt in the committee-room he will find that the secretary of state charged me for certifying it. [Laughter.] He will find that it is on the paper with the rest of them that have been certified as brought from the secretary of state's office.

Mr. Speaker, I had a fearful time in getting this record. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] said yesterday the record was very easily gotten; that all I had to do was to go and get it. I went up to Columbia and spent two days myself and I came away without it. I was told that the papers were not there; that they had not been sent up. The law requires that a copy should be left with the clerk of the court. I tried to get the record at the clerk's office without going 208 miles to Columbia. At the clerk's office I was told "There is not a copy here; it has never been left here." Then I must go 208 miles to Columbia to the secretary of state; and I must wait until he chooses to Columbia to the secretary of state; and I must wait until he chooses to give it to me. He says he is busy with other business, and will send it to me in a few days. In a few days it was sent. I supposed the papers were all correct. I do not make any charge of intentional wrong-doing against that secretary, who is now dead. I am charitable enough to say that I believe what he did was done by mistake, and that this is the reason he did not sign these papers with the rest. The bundle of papers was sent to my lawyer, and when they were offered as evidence this one was objected to by Mr. Elliott's lawyer, for the reason it was not properly certified to. The names on the poll-list tally with the names of the men who swore they voted for me at Pocotalizo. of the men who swore they voted for me at Pocotaligo.

Bear in mind the law allowed me in taking testimony forty days. I used my forty days. Mr. Elliott then had forty days in which to take evidence on the other side. He never commenced taking his testimony until the last ten days, except at Beaufort. started eighteen days before his time ran out, and he took testimony every day until the expiration of the time; but he took evidence at some six or eight places at the same time; and I had to have my lawyers scattered all over the Congressional district to keep up with him. After his time was out the law allowed me ten days in which to take my testimony in rebuttal. He would not receive notice from me until his time was up; and under the law I must give him five days' no-

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCreary). The time allowed the gentleman under the rules has expired.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent that he may proceed and finish his remarks.

Mr. SMALLS. This is the quickest hour I ever knew in my life.

[Laughter.]
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from South Carolina be allowed to continue his remarks.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I suppose this extension of time will be deducted from the time of the other side.

Mr. NELSON. Oh, you should not ask any deduction; he has done better than you did. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] that the extension of time be deducted from the six hours allowed on that side of the case.

Mr. ROWELL. Our time is all apportioned; if this courtesy is granted it must be simply an extension of the time. This is in effect only a request for unanimous consent that the House may continue in session for such time as the gentleman from South Carolina may desire to speak.

Mr. HEMPHILL. How much longer will that be?
Mr. NELSON. Oh, let him go on; you can stand it.
Mr. HEMPHILL. We do not want to be unreasonable on our side, and we do not want you to be unreasonable on your side. Anything that is fair can no doubt be agreed upon.

Mr. SMALLS. I will say to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Hemphill] that if I can be allowed just fifteen minutes to-

Mr. HEMPHILL. I have no objection to granting fifteen minutes

Mr. SMALLS. I shall not say much more. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state the request. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from South Carolina be allowed to continue his remarks, the time to be taken from the six hours allowed to that side.

Mr. NELSON. That was not my request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair stated the request with the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE].

Mr. ROWELL. The time on our side has all been allotted.
Mr. NELSON. The amendment of the gentleman from Ohio was no part of my request. Will the Chair please put my request as I stated it?

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. The proposition, as I understand, is to extend the time of Mr. Smalls this evening, allowing him to take such time as he wants. I understand him to want fifteen or twenty minutes. If this request is denied it will not make a very comfortable

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from South Carolina be allowed to proceed and finish his remarks. Is there objection?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I object, unless this extension of time is taken out of the time allowed on the other side. I do not care if he occupies all the rest of the time.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio (to Mr. OUTHWAITE). What are you afraid of? Let him go on.
Mr. DALZELL. There is good reason to be afraid.

Mr. HEMPHILL. We are not very much afraid.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I do not think gentlemen on the other side want to set the precedent of denying this courtesy to a contestant, for it may return to plague them in the next Congress. I do not think it is wise for them to cut off this contestant.

Mr. HEMPHILL. So far as I am concerned, I am perfectly willing he shall go on a reasonable time, but I do not want to stay here all

A MEMBER.

A MEMBER. Say half an hour.
Mr. HEMPHILL. I am perfectly willing to agree to that, if it be taken out of the time of the other side.

Mr. BURROWS. The gentleman simply asks to be allowed fifteen minutes to-night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is asked that the gentleman from South Carolina be allowed an extension of fifteen minutes. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman from South Carolina will proceed.

Mr. SMALLS. Thanking the House for its courtesy, I will say that the next precinct to which I wish to refer is the precinct of Green Pond. Green Pond is in a section of country where scarcely anybody lives but Republicans. It is among the rice fields; the people living there are almost entirely colored people; and I state here upon the honor of a man that no investigation can prove that six Democrats have ever lived or voted at Green Pond. Yet on election day Green Pond gave 200 votes out of a registration of about 800; 165 for William Elliott and 35 for Robert Smalls.

The gentleman on the other side quoted yesterday some of the testimony which those poor people gave. I regretted somewhat that this was done by a Southern man, because if those people are ignorant, the Southern whites are responsible for it. They closed the school-house door against us. Prior to the war it was a crime for us to carry a book. I can remember myself how before the war I used to try to hide my book. And those people, if they can not express themselves properly, certainly know how to vote. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.

I will tell you, gentlemen on the other side, that I for one have no objection to a colored man being a Democrat, but I do not want him to be a Democrat until the Democratic party have done something for the negro. What have you done? You have voted against every amendment to the Constitution; you have voted against every proposition to give the negro a right to vote. In South Carolina you have enacted one of the most infamous election laws known anywhere in the world. There is nothing to equal it anywhere. For a man to vote for State or county officers, he must go into a precinct where there are six or eight ballot-boxes. No one is allowed in the room but him.

If the voter puts one of these tickets in the wrong box that vote is not counted. He is not told which is the right box. He comes in, and here are the boxes—one for governor, one for each of the other State officers, one for the candidate for Congress—and he puts his tickets in the boxes, and just so soon as his back is turned one of the Demoin the boxes, and just so soon as his back is turned one of the Democratic managers changes the position of the boxes, and, of course, the ballots are constantly being put in the wrong boxes. [Laughter.] The Democrats change the boxes and you have to start again. It is done to throw our votes out. Then, because that is done and the ballots are thrown out, you say, "Oh, Smalls is unpopular; the people have gone back on him." [Laughter and applause.] Of course it is unfair but it is all of a rise. unfair, but it is all of a piece.

I am sorry the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], came here and tried to set you men of the North against me. He made a fine speech, and he can do it, as I have been told he was a good judge on the circuit. But he need not attack me for having lost those votes. I see the Congressional Directory says that he only had 1,704 out of a possible 35,000 votes at the last election. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] I suppose he will say he had no opposition. No, he did not, and if he had the result would have been the same. It would have amounted to the same [Laughter.] thing.

I will ask members to turn to the record and see the testimony of J. H. Chapman, which is uncontradicted, as to the votes cast at Green Pond. Mr. Elliott did not dare to put the manager on the stand. Some of these managers of the election said, "We have done the work, but do not ask us to swear to it." [Laughter.]

Any man can know as to the vote at Green Pond; there is no secret about it. The report is there.

I speak of this because the chairman of the committee went out of the record to attack me in the House of Representatives-to brand me with the worst infamy which could come from his lips. He did not gain anything by it.

The same thing occurred at Grahamville. It would be well to notice how this vote was counted. Forty-nine ballots were cast for Smalls, one for Elliott. It was a fair, square, honest election. The managers saw the ballots placed in the box, and when the voter put in his ballot the manager would take his pencil and push it down. When the election was over those ballots were not counted, but rejected as mutilated because they had that slight pencil mark on them. for me and one for Elliott were thrown out for that reason. [Laughter.]

It was insisted those ballots with a slight pencil mark should be counted, or at least sent to the State board for the canvassers to pass upon them; but no, one of the county canvassers threw them into the fire and burned them. Dead men tell no tales! [Laughter and applause.] So I was deprived of those 48 votes which had been cast for nie.

A MEMBER. Forty-nine votes were thrown out for that reason.

Mr. SMALLS. Yes, sir; and they were cast into the fire and burned. It is all to be found in the testimony.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will not trespass upon the good feeling of this House any longer, but will simply ask to be allowed to print in the RECORD my petition filed in the court, asking that I be allowed to change the venue in the case against me. This is all, with the exception of a few other portions of my testimony, and also, Mr. Speaker, a table which I hold in my hand from the census of the district. They make a fuss about Richland County. If every Democratic vote in that county had been polled they could not have had but 225 as against 1,642, and I only got there 451, although I am charged with intimidating them, and they will not even count that. [Laughter.] But they will count, as I say in conclusion, the vote at Salter precinct, where the polls were not opened until 12 o'clock.

I ask to extend my remarks to this extent, and I thank the House for its courtesy.

There was no objection.

The articles referred to by Mr. Smalls are as follows:

The board of county canvassers failed and refused to count and include in the returns made by them to the State board the whole number of legal votes cast, canvassed, and returned by the boards of managers of election as follows, to

HARDIN COUNTY, KENTUCKY.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11871) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky, and put it upon its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read subject to ob-

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is hereby authorized and required, on appeal to him made, to refund and pay back to the county of Hardin, State of Kentucky, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, any and all money collected from any and all corporations or from any other person or party whatsoever, as internal-revenue taxes on dividends on shares of stock owned by said county, any statute of limitations to the contrary notwithstanding.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

After the word "county," in line 10, insert:

"In the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, to the extent that such taxes were deducted from any dividends due and payable to said county."

Mr. BURROWS. How much is involved in this bill?

Mr. MONTGOMERY. About $4,000.

Mr. BURROWS. Is it recommended by any Department?

Mr. TAULBEE. Yes, sir; by the Commissioner of Internal Reveue; a very strong recommendation.
Mr. BURROWS. Very well; I have no objection.

Mr. KILGORE. Do I understand this is the last one of that batch

Mr. MONTGOMERY. It is the last one that I know of.

Mr. TAULBEE. The same tax has been refunded to every other county in the State.

Mr. KILGORE. All of them?

So long a time has elapsed in these cases that I fear they will be able to trump up others.

Mr. TAULBEE. I think this is all.

There being no objection, the bill was considered and ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MONTGOMERY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

RETURN OF A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives providing for the printing of the annual volumes of the Astronomical Observations of the Naval Observatory for the years 1886, 1887, and 1888 was sent to the Senate by mistake; and it is requested that an order be made asking the Senate to return the resolution. Without objection that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CHEYENNE STREET RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. CAREY. I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (S. 1804) to authorize the Cheyenne Street Railroad Company to build its road on and across the Fort D. A. Russell military reservation.

R. 11871) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HEIRS OF REAR-ADMIRAL CHARLES H. BALDWIN.

Mr. PAYNE. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 125) authorizing the heirs of Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, United States Navy, to receive a snuff-box set in diamonds from the Czar of Russia, to report it favorably without amendment, and I desire present action on the joint resolution. I ask that the letter which I forward to the desk may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

coronation.

Friends of the late rear-admiral did present a bill some years ago, but no action was reached, and as my late friend was ill for three or four years before his death, no effort was made to get this attended to.

Of course now the family would like to retain this as a memento.

I am one of the executors, and with the great friendship that has always existed for Admiral Baldwin and his family, explains the interest that I take in this matter. this matter.
I remain, very truly,

C. ADOLPHE LOW.

Hon. John Sherman, United States Senate, Washington.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the joint resolution may be now considered. It will be read at length for information, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, ctc., That the heirs of the late Rear-Admiral Charles H. Baldwin, United States Navy, be, and hereby are, authorized to receive the snuff-box set in diamonds presented to the rear-admiral by the Czar of Russia, while he was special naval representative of the Government at the coronation of the em-

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I present the conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11879) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 20, 1899, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5, 6, 7, 13, 25, 26, and 27.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24, and agree to the senate

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 11 and 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Substitute for the sum proposed the following: "$378,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

EUGENE HALE, W. B. ALLISON, F. M. COCKRELL, Managers on the part of the Sena'e. JAMES B. McCREARY, CHAS. E. HOOKER, ROBERT R. HITT, Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection to the present consideration of the report, the question is, Will the Senate agree

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to have the Senator explain what is mone with the amendments in regard to Samoa.

Mr. HALE. The large appropriation which was made by an amendment in the Senate of half a million dollars is left in the bill and bement in the Senate of hair a million donars is left in the bill and becomes a part of the report.

The item of $100,000, which covered the taking possession of the station which the United States has at Pago Pago, is struck out of this bill for the reason that the House of Representatives put it in a better form in the naval appropriation bill, so that the work which is to be done there will be done under the Navy Department. The Senate has already consented to that amendment and it has passed both Houses upon that bill, and will undoubtedly in a few days become a law men that bill. Otherwise there are no substantial changes in the law upon that bill. Otherwise there are no substantial changes in the bill from the Senate's action.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senate concur in the report of the committee of conference?

The report was concurred in.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 3960) granting a pension to Mary B. Hunt; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

I move to have the House bill changed from Order of Business 2435 to 2026, the place where it properly belongs. I called the attention of the Senator from Vermont to this mistake in the Order of Business of this bill and he agreed that it should be put at 2026.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the proposed change in the enumeration of the Order of Business, and that change will be made.

WHITE EARTH INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. SABIN. I am directed by the Committee on Indian Affairs to report favorably with an amendment the bill (H. R. 12443) granting to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company the right of way through the White Earth Indian reservation in the State of Minnesota, and I desire to have action by the Senate on the same at this time

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the bill reported by him may be now considered. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read for information.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read at length for information, subject to objection.

The bill was read, and by unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider it.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs was, in section 2, line 24, to strike out the words "as to the amount of said compensation" and insert "to the provisions of this act;" so as to read:

Compensation "and insert." to the provisions of this act; "so as to read:

But no right of any kind shall vest in said railway company in or to any part of the right of way herein provided for until plats thereof, made upon actual survey for the definite location of such railroad, and including grounds for station buildings, depots, machine shops, side-tracks, turn-outs, and water stations shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and until the compensation aforesaid shall have been fixed and paid, and the consent of the Indians on said reservation to the provisions of this act shall have been first obtained in a manner satisfactory to the President of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate bill 3919, upon the same subject, if there be no objection, will be indefinitely postponed.

I move that the Senate insist on its amendment and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. DAWES, Mr. SABIN, and Mr. JONES of Arkansas were appointed.

THE ELECTORAL COUNT.

Mr. HAWLEY. If the morning business is concluded—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there further morning business?
Mr. HOAR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator rise to morning

Mr. HOAR. I rise to make what I suppose is a privileged motion. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state his motion.

Mr. HOAR. I move that at ten minutes before 1 o'clock to-day the Senate proceed to the Hall of the House of Representatives, there to take part under the Constitution and laws in the count of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERMAN. Before that question is put I should like to inquire whether the usual custom has not been to await notice from the House of Representatives?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has just been notified by the Clerk of the House of Representatives that no notification will be forwarded, but that the House will be ready to receive the Senate at the time appointed in the concurrent resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. My impression is that heretofore the custom has always been for the House of Representatives to notify the Senate that they are ready to receive the Senate so that the votes may be counted.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose the departure by the House of Representatives from the usual custom may perhaps be explained by the fact that there is now for the first time in existence a statute regulating the holds are always a large the regulating the statements. whole proceeding, which makes it a legal duty. I suppose, therefore, Mr. PUGH. I desire to call attention to Order of Business 2435, being the bill (H. R. 10633) for the relief of Dr. John B. Read. At the for an invitation. The Constitution provides for the assembling or these two bodies at the count of the electoral votes, and the statute places the Hall of the House of Representatives at the command of the convention for that purpose and provides who shall preside.

Mr. HARRIS. I would ask the Senator from Massachusetts if the concurrent resolution agreed to by both Houses does not fix the hour at which the Senate shall appear in the Hall of the House of Represent-

It does.

Mr. HARRIS. It seems to me that that is sufficient.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose the Chair perhaps would not execute that resolution without an order of the Senate. The statute requires the two Houses to be at that place at 1 o'clock to-day. This motion is that the Senate proceed—I will say at five minutes before 1 o'clock—that the Senate leave this Chamber for that purpose at five minutes before 1 o'clock, so that they will be on the spot at the appointed time. I modify the motion and make it five minutes before 1 o'clock, which will give, I suppose, time enough.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate has heard the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts, that at five minutes before 1 o'clock to-day the Senate will proceed to the Hall of the House of Representatives as required by the concurrent resolution for the ascertainment and counting of the electoral vote. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

JACOB CRAMER.

Mr. CAMERON. I ask the S bill 855, Order of Business 2606. I ask the Senate at this time to consider House

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Calender under Rule VIII being in order, the Senator from Pennsylvania moves that the Senate proceed The Calender under Rule VIII being to the consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 855) for the relief of the heirs of Jacob Cramer.

The PRESIDENT protempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides for the issuance by the Commissioner of Pensions to the heirs of Jacob Cramer of a bounty-land warrant for 200 acres of land, the warrant to be locatable only on public land subject to private entry, for services rendered by Cramer as a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania Continental Line in the Revolutionary war, he being entitled thereto pursuant to the resolution of the Continental Congress of September 16, 1776, and the provisions of the act of July 27, 1842, extended by the act of February 8, 1854.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY M. RECTOR.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate that the vote by which the bill (S. 314) for the relief of Henry M. Rector was passed may be reconsidered, and that the House of Representa-tives be requested to return the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered if there be no objection. The Chair hears no objection.

CALIFORNIA INDIAN WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. STEWART. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3439, Order of Business 2315.

By unanimous consent, the bill (S. 3439) authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain the amount of money which has been expended and the obligations assumed by the State of California, growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof, not heretofore reimbursed by the United States, was considered as in Committee of the

Mr. SHERMAN. I move to amend the bill by striking out the clause beginning in line 18 down to and including line 22, as follows:

The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to ascertain the amount of interest paid and assumed by said State on obligations incurred for the purposes hereinbefore enumerated, and which has not heretofore been reimbursed by the United States.

And also, in line 26, after the word "enumerated," by striking out all down to and including "United States," in line 29, as follows:

Including the amount of interest actually paid and assumed by said State on moneys borrowed for the purposes above enumerated and not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

So as to make the clause read:

The Secretary of War shall report to Congress the amount of money which may be thus ascertained to have been actually paid and assumed by the State of California on account of the matters above enumerated.

Mr. STEWART. I have no objection to the amendment:

Mr. COCKRELL. What is that amendment?
Mr. SHERMAN. I have moved to strike out all that relates to interest. As a matter of course, if the Government ought to pay interest (which I deny, for the Government does not pay interest anyway) it should pay it without respect to any rate paid by the State of California.

Mr. STEWART. The bill as it is would not commit us to anything except what has been done.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is a recognition of the claim, and I think it had better be stricken out.

Mr. STEWART. Ido not care about delaying the bill by discussion, and I will consent to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. J. FINLEY.

Mr. EUSTIS. I am instructed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections to report favorably upon the petition of J. J. Finley, and accompanying the report there is a resolution.

Mr. CALL. I ask unanimous consent that that resolution may be now considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, reports a resolution, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to J. J. Finley, who was appointed a Senator of the United States by the governor of the State of Florida, a sum equivalent to the salary of a Senator from March 5, 1887, the day of his appointment, to May 10, 1887, the day of the election of a Senator to fill the vacancy to which he was appointed.

Mr. CALL. I ask unanimous consent that that resolution may be now considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that under the rules the resolution should be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. CALL. Very well, then; I withdraw the motion. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so referred.

THE ELECTORAL COUNT.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the considera-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time has arrived for the execution of the order of the Senate.

The Senate, preceded by the President pro tempore and the Sergeant-at-Arms, thereupon proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representa-tives for the purpose of participating in the count of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The Senate returned to its Chamber at 2 o'clock and 25 minutes

p. m., and the President pro tempore resumed the chair.
Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, the tellers who were appointed on behalf of the Senate in pursuance of the concurrent resolution of the two Houses to ascertain the result of the election for President and Vice-President of the United States beg leave to report that the two Houses met in joint convention in pursuance of the resolution, and that thereupon the certificates of the electors of the various States of their votes for those officers were opened by the President of the Senate and delivered to the tellers; and on being examined it appeared that the votes of the several States had been cast in accordance with the list which I send to the Chair.

From those votes it appeared that the whole number of electors appointed to vote for President and Vice-President of the United States for the term of office beginning on the 4th day of March, 1889, was 401, of which a majority was 201. The state of the vote for President of the United States appeared to be:

For Benjamin Harrison, of the State of Indiana, 233. For Grover Cleveland, of the State of New York, 168.

The state of the vote for Vice-President of the United States appeared to be:

For Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, 233.

For Allen G. Thurman, of the State of Ohio, 168.

Which result having been ascertained and counted by the tellers was delivered by them to the President pro tempore of the Senate, where-upon the President pro tempore of the Senate announced the state of the vote to be, that Benjamin Harrison, of the State of Indiana, had received 233 electoral votes, and that Grover Cleveland, of the State of New York, had received 168 electoral votes, for the office of President of the United States; and that Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, had received 233 votes, and that Allen G. Thurman, of the State of Ohio, had received 168 votes, for the office of Vice-President of the United States.

Mr. EDMUNDS. That will be entered on the Journal, I presume.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The certificate of the ascertainment and counting of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States submitted by the tellers will be entered at large upon the Journal of the Senate.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The report had also better be entered in connection with the certificate. It is a written report.

The PRESIDNET pro tempore. It is proper that there should appear, the Chair thinks, between the certificates signed by the tellers and the announcement of the state of the vote by the President of the Senate, the direction of the President of the Senate to the tellers to report in accordance with law the result of their counting and ascer-Mr. EDMUNDS. Then have the reportentered in the Journal as well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report also will be entered in the Journal.

Mr. HOAR. This document is the report signed by the tellers. The report of the tellers, as entered on the Journal, is as follows:

The undersigned, Charles F. Manderson and Isham G. Harris, tellers on the part of the Senate, and Daniel Ermentrout and Charles S. Baker, tellers on the part of the House of Representatives, report the following as the result of the ascertainment and counting of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1889:

CHARLES F. MANDERSON,
ISHAM G. HARRIS,
Tellers on the part of the Senate.
DANIEL ERMENTROUT,
CHAS. S. BAKER,
Tellers on the part of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore thereupon announced the state of the vote, as follows

The state of the vote for President of the United States, as delivered to the President of the Senate, is as follows:

The whole number of the electors appointed to vote for President of the United States is 401, of which a majority is 201.

Benjamin Harrison, of the State of Indiana, has received, for President of the United States, 233 votes; and Grover Cleveland, of the State of New York, has received 168 votes.

The state of the vote for Vice-President of the United States, as delivered to the President of the Senate, is as follows:

The whole number of the electors appointed to vote for Vice-President of the United States is 401, of which a majority is 201.

Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, has received 233 votes; and

Allen G. Thurman, of the State of Ohio, has received 168 votes. This announcement of the state of the vote by the President of the Senate is, by law, a sufficient declaration that Benjamin Har ison, of the State of Indiana, is elected President of the United States, and that Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, is elected Vice-President of the United States, each for the term beginning March 4, 1889, and will be entered, together with a list of the votes, on the Journals of the Senate and House of Representatives.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3880) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky, reported it without amendment.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print extra copies of the report of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 3116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wynne.

The message also announced that the House had ordered the Clerk to request the Senate to return to the House the House concurrent resolution providing for the printing of the annual volumes of the Astronomical Observations of the Naval Observatory for 1886, 1887, and 1888.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 12th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 1481) granting a pension to Ellen White Dowling; An act (S. 2829) granting a pension to Sarah J. Foy;

An act (S. 3283) granting a pension to Reuben Ash; An act (S. 332) granting a pension to Harrison Wagner; An act (S. 2765) granting a pension to Adaline A. Smyth; An act (S. 3249) for the relief of Zo. S. Cook;

An act (S. 2623) granting an increase of pension to James Patterson; An act (S. 3794) granting to the Big Horn Southern Railroad Company a right of way through a part of the Crow Indian reservation in

An act (S. 379) to increase pensions in certain cases; An act (S. 1092) for the relief of certain property in the District of Columbia; and

An act (S. 2441) to refund illegal internal-revenue tax collected of James R. Berry, as late auditor of the State of Arkansas.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The PRESIMENT pro tempore. The Senate resumes the consideration of the unfinished business, being the resolution reported by the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] from the Committee on Privileges and Elections to revise the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress. Is the Senate ready for the question upon agreeing to the resolution?

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be directed carefully to revise the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress, with a view of providing for a more complete protection of the exercise of the elective franchise, and for the punishment of offenses against it, and to report to the next legislative session of the Senate by bill or otherwise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on agreeing to the resolution which has just been read?

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I do not intend to debate, so far as I now know, that resolution. When the Senate adjourned last evening the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] had the floor for the purpose, as I understood, of submitting remarks upon it, and as he is not present at this time I supposed that it would be informally laid

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it stand over until he comes in.
Mr. MITCHELL. I ask that the pending business may be temporarily laid aside, and that I may be permitted to offer a resolution.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be received if there be no objection.

KLAMATH INDIAN RESERVATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is is hereby, directed to inform the Senate what proceedings, if any, have been had in his Department relative to the survey and sale of the Klamath Indian reservation, in the State of California, in pursuance of the provisions of the act approved April 8, 1864, entitled "An act to provide for the better organization of Indian affairs in California."

DISTRICT MILITIA.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, the Senate is thin and the Senator Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, the Senate is thin and the Senator from New York, who has the floor, is absent. Therefore, unless there is something pressing, I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HOAR. Let us go on and do other business.

Mr. HAWLEY. I very much desire to have a little bill finished that was under consideration the other day.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections can be laid aside informally, so that it will not lose its place, I do not object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the pending business is informally laid aside.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of a bill that was debated for a while the other day upon which we practically arrived at an understanding-House bill No. 4961, Calendar number 2648.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill will be stated. The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HAWLEY. That bill has been read. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. Cockrell] offered an amendment which, I presume, he This begins practically de novo.

Mr. COCKRELL. The amendment was pending.
Mr. HAWLEY. Do we take up the proceedings where they were left off, or, according to parliamentary law, would not the whole proceedings drop then? Will the Chair inform me does the Senate resume the consideration at the point where it left off the other night?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senate proceeds to the consideration of the bill moved by the Senator from Connecticut, the question pending at the time when the bill was last under consideration be the one submitted to the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. The question, then, is on agreeing to the amend-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment. Mr. COCKRELL. I simply say that the amendment I offered is the bill that was fully considered in the Senate and passed by the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. And I beg leave to add that the House bill that comes here covers very much the same ground; but it is an improve-ment in some respects, and the Senate bill is an improvement in other A conference will no doubt make a good bill from the two.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment moved by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engressed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, and ask for a conference with the House of Representatives thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HAWLEY, Mr. MANDERSON, and Mr. Cockrell were appointed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. TELLER. I desire to call up Calendar 1464, being the bill (S. 1030) to submit to the Court of Claims for adjudication the title of William McGarrahan to the mineral interest of the rancho "Panoche Grande" in the State of California, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York is entitled to the floor on the pending business (which was informally laid aside) if he desires to proceed.

Mr. TELLER. I will not call this bill up now if the Senator from New York desires to go on.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate resumes the consideration of the unfinished business, being the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to Congressional elections. The Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] is entitled to

Mr. EVARTS. Mr. President, the Committee on Privileges and Elections were put in charge of an inquiry into transactions in Washington County, Texas. These transactions had to do with the election of 1886, which was in part a municipal election covering an important number of offices and embracing many candidates, a large list upon either side. There was also at the same time an election for a member of Congress in the Congressional district of which Washington County formed a part. There was no particular excitement in the canvass or preparation for the election that I am aware of, as appeared before the committee, in respect of the election of a Congressman, but there was a very animated canvass and a very wide-spread interest in the result of the municipal election. As the elements of that controversy there came to be a great disturbance at various polls held within that county; and owing to this earnest contest for place and for predominance of party, and from incidents that occurred in it, there came about following the election a proscription in the population there of certain active Republicans who had taken a part, a distinctive part, an aggressive part, if you please, on the one side, as against a distinctive and aggressive part taken on the other side in disposing of the result

By that proscription it was alleged that certain Republican citizens had been driven from their homes by violence and threats of violence, by fear of their lives, and to the sacrifice of their property of which they were owners in that county, producing a fatal result to their interests not to be repaired. A v-ry well conceived, a very clearly expressed petition from three of the victims of this proscription was presented to the Senate, and I will introduce the situation by reading their own statement of the positions which they held in the community and among their neighbors at the time of this election:

Your petitioner, Stephen A. Hackworth, is a native-born citizen of said Washington County, Texas; has resided a greater part of his life in said city of Brenham; is now forty-seven years of age; is by occupation a dealer in real estate; and from 1870 to 1882 held several civil positions in said county; owned real estate and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $4,000; was comfortably situated, the income from his business securing an assured support for himself and family.

Your petitioner, James L. Moore, is a native of the State of Alabama, but has been a citizen of said Washington County, Texas, since 1856; is now 'orty-five years of age, and by occupation a merchant; and from 1876 to 1882 held the office of district clerk, and from 1882 to 1884 held the office of sheriff of said county; owned real and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $6,000; was comfortably situated and earning a comfortable living for himself and family.

family,

Your petitioner, Carl Schutze, was born in Germany, but was many years ago naturalized, and has resided in the United States during the past thirty years, and has been a citizen of said Washington County since 1871; is now thirty-five years of age and unmarried; is by profession a lawyer, and from 1877 to 1839 held the office of district attorney of said county and State; was until recently editor of a German Republican newspaper published at the said city of Brenham, known as the Staats Zeitung; was comfortably a trated, owning personal property to the value of $3,000; the income from his profession and paper earning him a competent support.

These statements are verified by the evidence and are accepted and reported by the committee as showing their situation in that community before this alleged proscription drove them from home,

Your petitioners are white citizens of the United States, and dared to believe and maintain the right to be Republicans in politics.

For this, their only crime, your petitioners are now exiles from their homes, having been compelled to leave under serious threats of assussination, and abandon their property or accept for it such prices as were proffered them.

Your petitioner, S. A. Hackworth, was obliged to sell his homestead for $1,150, being less than one-half its real value.

Your petitioner, James L. Moore, was obliged to sell his homestead for $2,000, being less than one-half its real value.

Your petitioner, Carl Schutze, was compelled to remove his paper to Galveston, Tex., thereby destroying its patronage and support, and preventing him from obtaining even one-tenth of its real value.

These were the wrighteness that had been as forced by these positioners.

These were the grievances that had been suffered by these petitioners, and the committee have found in substance and effect that these grievances were suffered by them with no pretense of exercise of this power against them that is at all supported in the evidence except their activity in the canvass and in support of the ticket and the principles of the Republican party.

It will be easily understood, if we left out of view any other circumstances or influences that govern the actions of men, if we left out of view all but the elements of this transaction which belong to the character and situation of these men and the surrounding population under whose proscription they suffered these injuries-it must be admitted by all that no greater encroachments upon the dearest rights of the common citizens of the country could ever be practiced than those which have been practiced upon them. And when therefore the committee came to the conclusions they did on the general propositions of their attitude there in this home of theirs and in the exercise of rights not denied or to be denied to any citizen of the United States, and when out of political transactions, political excitements, local inflammations, this strange consequence had been visited upon the mere exercise of suffrage, the committee were prepared to look with interest upon the further investigation that was to show what there was in these circumstances of the election and in this antagonism between political parties and the ordinary efforts of candidates and of parties that could have produced out of what upon the face of things should be a perfectly quiet and lawful exercise of the suffrage this extraordinary result.

It was quite important, though not wholly necessary, that at the outset of our examination, as we shall submit it to the Senate, and I shall hope to point out in its outlines and principal features, we should see whether there was any just ground upon which the evidence submitted to us would present these aggrieved sufferers in any attitude of disfavor or discredit with their neighbors and their friends in the ordinary conduct of citizenship and in the probity of life. We could not find, and we have so reported, that these citizens can be accused of any such misconduct as should place them or did place them out of the ordinary relations that belong to the peaceful and quiet citizen.

Whatever allowance might properly be made for the acerbities and irritations which belong to politics, whatever might properly be yielded to the adverse observations and the different aspects in which the conduct of these citizens could be placed, there was not, in our judgment, anything that should disturb us in our treatment of this investigation and the results that we should assign to it, that should at all vary this transaction from being in substance and effect an inflammation and agitation in politics and with no other rightful basis for irritation or proscription towards these sufferers than that which belongs to this excited canvass between parties situated as they were and as I shall disclose

With this view taken of the situation of these citizens at home, we also were of the opinion and are of the opinion from the testimony which has been fully expanded before the committee and thoroughly and earnestly canvassed by cross-examination, and also by the light shed upon it by bitter and earnest political opponents, some of the persons themselves deeply involved in the inculpated conduct which it is the purpose of the Senate to pass judgment upon—we think there has been no other aspersion of these sufferers from proscription than such as belongs to the canvass, the excitements, the oppositions, and the severities of canvass that attend elections.

The testimony they gave, not very much of it depending wholly upon their own evidence, is entitled, as we submit to the Senate, to the same credit that we have given to them, not everything that they have said must be taken as accurate and as complete, and that countervailing evidence may not be rightfully brought to qualify or reduce or to fill out the testimony given in behalf of these petitioners, but that there is no discredit thrown upon the truthfulness of the statements of

The next situation that I need to call attention to will be the political situation before the election of 1886. Washington County, Texas, is a county, as I understand, largely occupied by farms and peopled by farmers. There is a very large proportion of white population there of the Germans, who, so far as I can understand from the testimony, are good citizens, good farmers, and a good population in all the ordinary sense of the make up of neighborhoods of this kind.

The election of 1886 was for county officers, as I have said, and for a member of Congress. As between the two great political parties of the county, Republican and Democratic, the voters were divided according to various estimates in about the proportion of a Republican majority of from 600 to 1,600 out of an aggregate vote of 5,600. As between the voters of that county, the division between white and colored voters was about 2,500 to 3,100 of whites and about 2,500 to 2,800 of colored, thus producing a somewhat nearly equal division between the white and colored population. There was a large element of German citizens and voters in that county, namely 1,900, 1,600 of whom were Republicans, and it is estimated that on a full count of white voters alone the Republicans outnumbered the Democrats by a majority of 300 at least, and probably by 500 or more.

The plan upon which this report has been made is to append to such propositions of fact as I have stated wherever they may occur in these elections the testimony, intending to present as reasonably as may be the opposite estimates and views of every point considered. Of course in a great body of testimony like this, testimony which began in February, 1887, and was not closed until March, 1888, testimony of some 700 pages with the prolixity, and the necessary prolixity, of direct examinations and cross-examinations of a multitude of witnesses, I think sixty or more having been examined, it is not easy either to be sure that you select adequately to show the situation that the testimony should present nor to be quite secure that you can make it impartial, but the fairest way, as the committee thought, was, while stating distinctly their conclusions upon any point of fact or of the elements of controversy, to take such extracts as could be conveniently grouped from whatever part of the testimony the evidence was to be drawn, grouped elections the testimony, intending to present as reasonably as may be controversy, to take such extracts as could be conveniently grouped from whatever part of the testimony the evidence was to be drawn, grouped under these heads. It was a work of considerable labor, and I hope that an examination by the Senate, if they shall read the evidence adduced in the report and then carry their investigation further by reading the body of the testimony, will show that this has been successfully, as it has been very seriously, undertaken by the committee.

Besides this testimony there comes to be added a record of a trial that was held in Texas involving an investigation into the transactions of graphic report of the evidence taken are appended to the volume of the testimony proper taken by our committee.

Mr. GEORGE. The entire testimony in the case?

Mr. EVARTS. The full record. This record was brought also to the notice of the committee and was exposed to the examination of some part of the important witnesses after that trial had been concluded, and therefore in our testimony as we have recorded it and presented it as the basis for our conclusions, we have not hesitated to embody from this record as well as from our own testimony what from authentic assurance bears upon particular points.

That being the situation of the political divisions between the two classes of population depending upon color, I will ask attention as briefly as may be to the particular transactions themselves at each of the polls where encroachment upon the suffrage and the rights of voters was practiced, and to the incidents, not necessary to that, but the incidents that did grow out of these disturbances, incidents of the most excited nature, which of course tended to aggravate, on all sides if you please, the severity of the antagonisms that were provoked by the mere innovations upon the suffrage if no such great injuries had followed to life.

This county has I do not know how many precincts, but at four precincts independent and not connected there were great interferences with the suffrage, and I will begin with that at the polls in Chapel Hill district. But in order here to understand fully the transaction of the election of 1886 it is necessary to look back upon the election of 1884. At the election in 1884, which was of the same nature, that is, for county officers and for a member of Congress, disturbances had arisen at the polls held there and the remembrance on all sides of those occurrences had a direct bearing upon the fate of the election in 1886.

The Republican party in this county of Washington had been in possession of local power substantially since the close of the war until 1884, when a very vigorous effort was made on the part of the opponents of the Republican party there and of the administrators of affairs that had thus been committed to them to substitute a new set of officers and give supremacy to the opposite party. That effort, that canvass, that conflict ended in the success of the opponents of the Republican party and placed in power from that time onward to 1886 representatives of the opponents of the Republican party.

At the election in 1884, which was the critical period of contest for a continuance of power by the Republicans or the subversion of it, this occurred at Chapel Hill precinct. I read from the report:

At that election the ballot-boxes then in the possession of the officers of election, being colored men, were "raided"—

Using a phrase that is familiar to all of us, unhappilyat 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning after the day of election by masked and armed men. Three of these colored officers of election were shot, and one of them died of his wounds, but the other two recovered.

One of these men, by hiding with the ballot-boxes under the table, was able to escape, and the ballots were brought in and counted and returned. No efforts were made apparently to discover or punish the actors in this outrage and murder.

In preparation for the election of 1886 the Chapel Hill district was divided into three precincts, and one of the precincts was known as Chadwick's Gin. The polls were not opened at this precinct at all during the election of 1886, and the situation by which the opening of the polls was discouraged or prevented can be most readily understood by reading a few words in our report on that subject:

There was also a large attendance of colored voters ready and desirous to vote the Republican ticket. Mr. J. M. Nicholson, a white man and a Democrat, and enlisted in the success of the "People's ticket"—

Which was the form given to the opposition to the Republican ticket-attended with proper papers and stated his readiness to open the polls if a necessary number of competent men to conduct the election would volunteer. He declined to serve in the number, assigning as an excuse that he was suffering from neuralgia. The voters staid about the polls through the day in the hope of being able to vote. Mr. Nicholson staid there himself through the day. His statements are that there were not enough men, black and white, competent in intelligence and ability to read and write, to make up the necessary number. The colored men declined to undertake it. There were sundry white men attending there armed. Some colored men had been advised not to take part in the election. Others showed an unwillingness to undertake the conduct of the election unless some white men were in the board.

Apparently

The committee say-

The committee say—

Apparently the occurrences at the last election were understood by all, and it seems to the committee that there would have been no difficulty in organizing a competent board if the white men had wished it organized and had been willing to share in that duty, but that the colored men were afraid to expose themselves to the perils of the service if unsupported by the participation of white men. The failure to hold the polls at this precinct, the committee thinks, is chargeable to the leaders of the opposition ticket and in that interest, with the motive to discourage and suppress the Republican vote there, and to the colored Republican voters being unwilling to expose themselves to the fate which was visited upon the colored judges of the election at Chapel Hill in 1884. A few extracts from the testimony are cited to this point.

Passages are cited from the evidence that bring us to that conclusion. This was a strong Republican precinct, and the vote therefore by whatever degree of oppression or inquiry it may have been attended, the refusal to open the polls or their not being opened of course excluded the apparent and expected majority of the Republican ticket.

The next district that we have occasion to consider is that of Lott's Store.

This was a strong Republican precinct. The election was quiet and not interfered with. The votes cast for the Republicans were 156, those for the opposition were 33. The latter were all white and Democratic, and the former all Republican. The clerk of the election, a Democrat, after the count, started with a companion to take the ballot and the tally-sheets to Brenham, to make the return there in accordance with his duty. This was on the day after the election, and as they were nearing Brenham, after dark, three armed and masked men stopped the carriage and demanded, under threats to fire, the surrender of the ballot-box and the tally-sheets. The clerk refused to hand over the ballot-box and the armed men took it from the carriage. They then required the delivery of the tally-sheets and the clerk gave them up. The clerk reported this transaction to the county clerk and the judge, both of whom were on the opposition, Lewis and Kirk, but nothing was done about it, and the vote at Lott's Store was thus suppressed.

The clerk of the election, Mr. Spann, who it is, I believe, stated was a Democrat, gives his own statement upon that point.

Mr. GEORGE. What election was that?
Mr. EVARTS. Except in the first preliminary instance it was all in 1886. That was all suppressed.
Then the polls at Graball's, another precinct, need attention.

Then the polls at Graball's, another precinct, need attention.

This was a strong Republican precinct, and the colored people were there some five to one of the whites. The election proceeded quietly, and while the count was going on, and it had been ascertained that the votes cast were 347 and they had counted and strung all the votes but 96, which were still in the ballot-box, three armed and masked men entered the room, called the judges to "hold up," and at the point of the pistol seized the ballot-box, the string of votes, and one of the tally-sheets. The ballot-box they carried away, and while still in the room they fore up the votes and the tally-sheet they seized. The tally-sheet which one of the judges had retained was carried to Brenham and delivered to the county judge, Lafayette Kirk. There is some indistinctness, from conflict and obscurity in the testimony, as to the exact state of the polls.

The committee, however, thinks that there was a majority of something like 100 for the straight Republican ticket among the votes strung, and that all ballots remaining in the box were Republican. Not long before the "raid" upon the ballot-box, a prominent Democrat had entered the room and conferred with one of the Democratic judges, and rend a note to him and left it with him, the contents of which the committee was not able to ascertain. The manner in which the seizure of the votes and the ballot-box was made is shown in the testimony.

And the citations are given.

I come now to the fourth vote, and that was at Flewellen's, and that transaction embraced in it a most lamentable occurrence without reference to the question of the fatal result, and that was the slaying of young Bolton, and as briefly as possible the committee have set forth that occurrence, and I will read it from the report:

At about 12 m. of election day Kirk, who was a candidate for county judge on the People's ticket, sent a telegram from Brenham to D. D. Bolton at Courtney, near Graball's, who was on the same ticket as county commissioner, in these words:

"Things here look doubtful. Do your work."
There had been an agreement the day before for the conveyance of information as to the look of the voting. D. D. Bolton received this message at dusk and showed it to his son Dewees Bolton, and on starting for his home, not distant, directed his son to come with him, and he did so. Graball's is 4½ miles from Flewellen's. The latter polls was a strong Republican and colored voting-place.

The election was quietly conducted and the officers were engaged in counting the votes when Kirk came in, inquired how the votes were running, looked at the tally-list, which had been counted up to 69 out of about 159 votes, and looking over the tally-sheet on the table, called out, "Jimmie Hewitt 43, and Charlie Herbst 19." These were Hewitt, colored, Republican, and Herbst, Democrat, opposing candidates for district clerk. Kirk called the presiding judge, white and Democrat, Robinson, out of the room, and after a few minutes Robinson returned alone. They went on with the count and in about half an hour a knocking was heard upon a closed door, and upon its being repeated, an answer was made from the room, "Come in." The door was opened from without, whether by force or not seems uncertain, and three men, armed and disguised, presented their pistols and some or one of them called out, "Hold up" or "Hands up," and demanded the ballot-box.

The foremost man in entering turned out to be young Bolton. There were several colored men in the room, unarmed and peaceable; but one of them, Polk Hill, passed out of the room, through a door opposite that at which the entrance was asked, into a gallery where there were some shotguns. Instantly upon the demand of the ballot-box at the point of the pistol, a shotgun was fired from the gallery through the partly open door, and young Bolton fell dead across the threshold, his pistol falling at his feet. He was disguised in a yellow waterproof, called a "slicker," covering his body, and a white handkerchief covering the face below the eyes, knotted behind his neck. All in the room fled at once in dismay, and the dead man was left alone, uncared for, as he lay, all night, the lamp burning brightly.

Towards morning Presiding Judge Robinson per

Lamentable as was this transaction, there followed a greater loss and certainly a more deliberate taking of life as a consequence of this bloody occurrence at the polls. After the election Judge Kirk, who was the county judge elected in 1884 and a candidate for re-election and re-elected in this unfortunate election, issued this committal:

The State of Texas to the sheriff or any constable of Harris County, greeting:

The State of Texas to the sheriff or any constable of Harris County, greeting:
You are hereby commanded that you take into custody, and commit to the jail of your county, Steve Jackson, Alfred Jones, Ephraim Jones, Shad Felder, John Glass, William Davis, Phelix Kinlow, Andy Hays, charged with murder, and there safely keep to appear at the next term of our county court, to be held at Brenham on the 19th day of November, 1886, unless he gives good and sufficient bond in the sum of $500.

Given under my hand officially this 9th day of November, A.D. 1886.

[SEAL]

LAFAYETTE KIRK,
County Judge, W. Co.

Issued 9th November, 1886.

This commitment included five colored men. The only ground of committal at all was that assigned in this commitment, and that was murder; but by the laws of Texas, as we were advised and is almost apparent without an inquiry, a commitment for murder upon a mere suretyship of $500 is foreign to our system of jurisprudence, and the committee must look at this as a comprehension in this form of law of these unfortunate colored men that they might be there kept and dealt with as might be conceived in the future. There they were, at any rate, shut up under a commitment which I am told—though of course subject to correction, if I shall hear it from the Senators from that State a commitment that on its face was not lawful, as it was a commitment only on conditions of suretyship of $500, the law being that there can be no bail for murder without examination. That is on commitment, and never after that except on examination.

Upon some demonstration or indication that an attack would be made on the jail, these prisoners were sent to Houston and there held in jail. While there the prisoners were visited by their counsel, Mr. F. D. Jodon, who there prepared the papers to take them out of jail by habeas corpus. With Mr. Jodon was associated Mr. C. R. Breedlove, a prominent lawyer and citizen of Brenham, a Democrat, and they had been retained professionally and fees paid them by the friends of the prisoners.

The papers are according to the forms and one of them is set forth which is adequate for understanding the real situation.

which is adequate for understanding the real situation.

On the 18th or 19th of November these prisoners, without any application to that end, as far as appears, and after these papers were ready for their presentation to the judge of the district of Houston, but before their presentation, were sent back to Brenham and lodged in jail. This transfer required the preparation of a new set of papers. On the 2d of December, about midnight or a little later, the jail was visited by an armed and masked company, some six or eight in number. The guards were awake and away from the jail and in the adjacent court-house, up stairs, sitting by the stove. The town constable on watch that night was upstairs with these guards, and upon hearing the noise and looking from their windows the three men started to go down the street. They were covered by the guns of some of the assailants of the jail and ordered to "keep quiet" and they would not be hurt, and they returned to the room and remained there to look out upon the removal of three prisoners from the jail by this company of armed and masked men.

These midnight visitors were admitted by the jailer, they informing him that they had a prisoner for the jail. The jailer, who seems to have had the keys of the cells in his hands, laid them down by the lamp which he deposited on a table in full sight. The armed men entering forced the jailer behind the opened door, threw a waterproof over his head, and two men held guard over him. The demand of the keys from the jailer was superseded by their observing the keys in sight.

door, threw a waterproof over his lican, and the foot the depth colored men, ascertained from the keys in sight.

Some of the party opened the cells of the eight colored men, ascertained from them their respective names, selected from them Alfred Jones, Ephraim (called also Stuart) Jones, and Shad Felder, and leaving the other five locked in their cells, took these three from the jail. They marched their pinioned captives before them out through the streets of the town, where they were joined by a mounted armed escort, spoken of variously as from twenty-five to seventy-five. The cavalcade conducted their captives along the public road to a point about a mile from Brenham. Here these colored men were hung "on a pecan tree," and there left until they were cut down the next morning by clitzens who had come from the town.

The dead bodies were taken to the jail, when, in the language of the local paper, the Brenham Banner, "new drawers, undershirts, and nice shrouds were purchased and good coffins procured, and the bodies prepared for burial, after which they were turned over to their friends and relatives, who took them to their homes near Flewellen's for burial."

A coroner's inquest was held, evidence heard, and the conclusion reached was—

A coroner's inquest was held, evidence heard, and the conclusion reached was—
"We, the jury, find that A. Jones, E. Jones, and S. Felder came to death by being hanged by parties to us unknown."
It does not appear to the committee that any participation, certainly any guilty complicity, in the death of Bolton was imputed by any one to either of these murdered men. The selection for execution, from among the eight imprisoned, was careful, deliberate, and systematic. The other five were immediately set at large on merely formal bonds of $500 each. Polk Hill, then and now in custody, was the only person suspected or accused of being the actor in the homicide.

I have spoken already of the illegality of the commitment, and there was no other charge against these men except the charge of murder.

was no other charge against these men except the charge of murder.

The committee is, therefore, upon all the evidence, of the opinion that these murders were each committed upon the motive and in the interest of the policy and purpose that had countenanced and caused the "raids" on the ballot-boxes at that election. The sacrifice of these worthy and blameless lives was demanded for the suppression of their evidence, which would have demonstrated the death of Bolton as befalling him in the act of a preconcerted attack upon the ballot-box at Flewellen's to defeat the election of the Republican ticket. The committee can not find any escape from this conclusion upon the whole body and weight of the testimony.

Then extracts, to a considerable extent, are given.
In our conduct of this examination we gave the largest and the most liberal system of inquiries that was asked for on either side. We desired that these should be as full and as honest and as adequate upon all, not these mere distinct and evident facts that would be included within a narrow compass, but all that should fairly enter, upon the demand of either side, into all the occurrences and circumstances, states of feeling, rumors, conditions of solicitude or fear that could bear reasonably or at all upon any explanation, we will not say justification, for perhaps no one would claim any such justification, but such like for perhaps no one would claim any such justification, but such like aspect that would relieve the occurrences from the natural judgment in the conduct of men on the part of all honest, peace-loving people.

One of the first lines of this inquiry was to see whether any efforts to punish the raids perpetrated upon the ballot-box, or to discover or punish the murders of colored men had taken place. Our conclusions are set forth very definitely that we can not find that there was any such course or any such action. There was a coroner's jury, and the verdict was as I have stated it. But if Senators will examine the body of the testimony they will find that there was a prevalent for under verdict was as I have stated it. But if Senators will examine the body of the testimony they will find that there was a prevalent fear under caution of self-protection that pervaded the weaker portion of the community, the colored race, and a very strong enlistment on the part of the managers, and leaders, and body, if you please, of the white organization in politics and in society, that should leave it as bare as possible from anything like exaggeration of wrong on the part of the perpetrators of these injuries, and no tone that we could discover of public opinion or of even a very limited cohesion on the part of citizens of this neighborhood towards discovering and punishing these heinous offenses.

The evidence is spread out, and we regarded it as not an unimportant matter. Of course, when we confine ourselves to the mere corpus delicti, the criminal assassination as a matter of indictment and pundelicti, the criminal assassination as a matter of indictment and punishment, these extraneous examinations have no efficacy in law or in logic; but they may bear upon the heinousness of the offense and the degree of punishment with which a guilty person should be visited.

But that was not the inquiry here. The inquiry was not what it would have been before a grand jury looking only to the indictment of any of the discovered perpetrators of this hanging of the colored men or of the transaction on the side of Bolton. Really the very subjectmatter of our inquiry was that these proscribed and exiled neitilioners. matter of our inquiry was that these proscribed and exiled petitioners were themselves made the victims of this incitement and inflammation and violence on the part of that community.

I do not think that any one who reads the whole body of the testimony can hesitate to think that there is no evidence to them, as there has been, as we say, no evidence to us, that can disturb or vary the conclusion that the community did not arouse themselves to any resentment whatever over this infliction upon the black men, nor in any punishment of the violence and injuries to the sufferers. occur, after our examination was well under way, a criminal prosecu-tion in the courts of the United States, which I am glad to think and glad to say was earnestly and honestly conducted by the United States attorney of the district within which the cognizance of these crimes fell, and the judge was firm.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator state what was the charge, the issue in that criminal prosecution?

Mr. EVARTS. Senators will see that the only jurisdiction of the United States court was under our provisions protecting the suffrage and punishing violation of it to a certain extent, partaking substantially only of the nature of conspiracies, and the indictment pursued the lines entirely of an interference with the polls. Of course, the crime of the hanging of the black men was a crime under the laws of Texas not under the laws of the United States. There was no possibility of pursuing to punishment any of the guilty perpetrators if they could have been found and if the evidence could be brought against them.

This indictment is not copied in the report, but is found in the body of the record, at pages 646 and on. There were three counts, but all pursuing this same line. The persons accused upon each of these counts included Mr. Kirk and various others, eight or ten, and the result of the trial was:

We, the jury, find as follows:
On the first count in the indictment we can not agree.
On the second count in the indictment we find the defendants Lafayette Kirk, Bayliss Wisenant, Joda Route, Joe Tolan, and Will Crawford not guilty; and as to the defendants Milton sty and John Crawford we can not agree.
On the third count in the indictment we can not agree.

The result of that prosecution, however honestly conducted and faithfully, as I understand it to have been, by the United States attorney and by the judge in the conduct of the trial, as belonged to him as a judge, was wholly ineffectual.

Mr. COKE. I will state to the Senator, if he will permit me, that I understood that afterwards those parties were tried again and ac-

Mr. EVARTS. That was the situation of this trial, and then a second trial was had considerably later, I imagine.

Mr. COKE. Yes, sir.
Mr. EVARTS. The result of which was that there was no conviction and all were acquitted. So that is a very good illustration of the very imperfect condition of our protective legislation affecting the suffrage under the Federal rights and powers under the Constitution. Therefore what we must consider in our conclusion, so far as it goes, it seems to us borne out, that when the actual transactions were of the very distinct nature I have stated—I now refer wholly to the violence to the polls, the ballot-box, etc.-for some reason or other under the indictment for conspiracy against the suffrage, the ballot-box, etc., the prosecutions were wholly fruitless.

Another subject of interest was one to which we gave the largest liberty, although we regarded it a remote consideration as really bearing upon the very transactions themselves, which had for their principal substance and results the exile of these petitioners. Yet it was allowed, and that is what was proved under the head of the "conduct of county affairs by the Republican party prior to the election of 1884." There is a good deal of evidence bearing upon this topic, and the important parts, as I think, are cited here.

The effort was made to show, and certainly was not at all curtailed or embarrassed by the committee in the freedom of its allowance in showing, that this Republican administration of affairs in this community, in this local government, had been a corrupt, an incompetent, an unsatisfactory, a harmful and pernicious conduct of power which had excited and aroused resentments that would color and infuse into the canvass elements that were not of this division of parties proper or division between the distinctions of color.

It appeared that the conduct of affairs was from the disordered state of things immediately following the war, and was continued in the same hands, not always the same officers, until 1884; and it was said that the situation and the record of that administration of affairs justified and led to a subversion of Republican control there, which might have been a very good reason for accomplishing those results by the ordinary means which excite opinions and influence conduct through the peaceful methods of the suffrage. But we do not find that there was any such extravagance of misconduct or incompetency or corruption in the management of affairs there as is imputed. It was, I think, not until 1875 or 1876 that the laws of Texas allowed land to be sold for There was an interval of some years, I think, up to that time, which would carry us ten years after the close of the war. The people were all poor from the war, and the resource for the conduct of public affairs was not very ample, especially if there was no sanction permitted to the sale of property for taxes, and most of the property was real estate there. But they rubbed along as well as they might. The public securities were down at one time as low as 20 or 30, and it had worked out prior to 1884 until this scrip was up to, as some say, from 80 to 85, and others say from 85 to 90. So you will perceive that, so far as that conduct of affairs was concerned, nothing could be said in the way of plunder or of spoliation that had shown that these parties were going from worse to worse. It is shown also that public improvements had taken place and been paid for out of the imperfect resources of that community.

Then it was said that there had been peculations and embezzlements; but after all it was reduced, as I think, to this, that there were only two persons who were really brought to responsible charge for these accusations, two of them being under indictments, the result of one of which was the acquittal of the accused, and of the other, if I am right about it, a nolle prosequi. So an ag regation or accumulation or mass of misconduct that would carry a community out of the methods, and powerful methods, which belong to peaceful discussions of such subjects does not seem upon this evidence to have found any place that would instify any exasperation of feeling.

Then there was a point made, and a feeling to some extent prevailed perhaps, though it was searched pretty thoroughly and not found to be very substantial, that as an attendant or in concurrence with this imprisonment of black men and their execution the public there were in a state of alarm or of terror against an expectation or a fear that in some parts of that country an insurrection or violent combinations on the part of colored men might invade the peace and expose the lives of that community. To that also very thorough examination was given, with everything that belonged to rumors and fears and facts. We are not wrong in concluding that as a matter of fact there never was such an element of movement and of purpose or combination on the part of the colored people.

Then the question was, how much fear there was of that; and fear might take the place of fact, of course, in affecting judgment. It was very difficult for us to come to a conclusion that there was any real rear on the part of the people in Brenham or in the suburbs of Brenham which really showed that they were arrayed for themselves and for their color against any such combinations. But this evidence is very fully shown in the report of the committee, and from the different aspects which Senators bring to such matters, in regard to which, of course, there are those more conversant than I am with the condition of Southern feeling and of Southern fears in this neighborhood, or in any populations where there is a nearly equal division between the blacks and whites; they are better able to judge perhaps than I am as to whether vagueness and unsubstantial fears really may have prevailed upon a state of facts and a condition of rumor such as is disclosed here,

Then there was another ground by which the excitement and resentful heat of popular movements against this Republican ticket and these Republican canvassers and leaders and public speakers sought to be justified, by connecting them with having made at the canvass preliminary to the election, at different gatherings, speeches which would in brief and in a somewhat summary way embrace what were called incendiary speeches. That was probed to the bottom, we think; first, as to what the speeches were; secondly, how much the people who testified about them knew what they were; and third, as to what incendiary speech meant by those people who on the proof of such facts or such utterances could be thus embraced in a charge of incendiary speeches. The committee dispose of that matter in this way: as incendiary speeches at Republican meetings or at political gatherings of colored voters.

Some color was sought to be given to the excitement in Washington County which followed the election by assigning as a contributory cause of the excesses which marked the election and its sequel the making of what were stigmatized as incendiary speeches at Republican meetings or at political gatherings of colored voters.

The committee allowed a wide range in the testimony in support and in refutation of these accusations. It seemed but fair that every opportunity should be given to present the canvass, as bearing upon this point, as accurately and intelligently as possible. The exploration of this subject has, the committee thinks, demonstrated that the accusations themselves were vague and mere hearsay; that the imputations, when reduced to any definite expressions, came to nothing more serious than the ordinary methods of political argument and persuasion; that the infusion into these arguments of any race prejudices or preferences in the canvass did not transcend the legitimate and natural scope of party zeal for candidates, and that any stimulant to passion and disorder was entirely absent from the canvass. As to any combination or incentive to accomplish any results by violence, the Republican speakers and the colored assemblages were entirely exonerated by the testimony from any such charges. A perusal of the following extracts from the testimony will, the committee submit, extinguish any impression that "incendiary speeches" entered into the canvass, and will justify its conclusion that no substantial or reasonable support for such imputations ever had any basis in fact.

What the witnesses very largely adduced, perhaps as largely as from

What the witnesses very largely adduced, perhaps as largely as from any one, Lafayette Kirk, the Democratic judge, a political leader down there, enters into the substance of our evidence. The subject is an interesting one no doubt. It was properly inquired into, and enables perhaps all who shall care to examine into the general situation of political controversies in communities that are under the operation of a nearly equally divided population between the colored and the white, and the methods, disturbances, and consequences of irregular intrusion into what should be everywhere a peaceful exercise of the

Mr. President, the conclusion to which the committee have come will, I hope, be conceived by all Senators who shall examine the conclusion, and will receive from them the approval of not extending beyond the absolute necessary conclusions from the evidence which we have presented. Nor have we undertaken to go into censorship of communities, or their natural or at least habitual prejudices or feelings— if they are to be called prejudices. On the very grave subject of which this transaction forms but an instance the conclusions are these:

The committee has extended its examination into the political transactions in Washington County over the widest range asked for either by the petitioners or by the inculpated parties. It has embraced in its inquiries every topic bearing upon the state of feeling prevalent in any portion of that population, or entering into the rivalries and competitions which animated the political contest out of which arose these outrages upon the freedom of election, upon the peace and order of society, upon the personal safety and immunities in their homes of the brave and unflinching defenders, against whatever odds, of the essential and universal principles of constitutional, legal, and individual liberty which are the common right, all over the land, of citizens of the United States.

This extensive survey and patient investigation the committee has thought justified by its conviction that the actual case presented not unfairly the features that illustrate the political disorders which afflict portions of our country where the population is at all nearly divided between white and colored citizens. These disorders do not alone disturb and threaten the good fame and security of the neighborhoods where they occur, nor of the States within whose borders these disastrous mischiefs pass unchecked, unredressed, and uncondemned. They tend to weaken and set back the sincere desire of the country at large to obliterate all distinctions, as between geographical or political divisions, in the prevalence of justice, peace, good-will, and equality of right in discussing and solving all the problems which affect the welfare of this great people.

While, in the opinion of the committee, the state of feeling in these communities is not ripe to receive just and permanent impressions from investigations such as have been conducted by the Senate, it can not but expect considerable benefit in the country at large from a dispassionate and responsible exhibition of the true and the principal traits of this transaction. The moral, social, and political bearings of such a condition of things, as is displayed upon the evidence taken by the committee, upon the community in which it exists address themselves to the calm judgment of thoughtful and patriotic minds in these populations. Not less do they engage the earnest attention of the great body of the American people which are removed from the environment in which these occurrences take place.

It can not be expected that these incidents, when looked at from opposite points of view, will make the same impression or lead to the same con

The committee recommends a careful revision of the laws, and concludes with the resolution which forms the subject of this debate as now on the Calendar of the Senate.

Mr. President, there seemed to the committee—there certainly seemed to me when this matter was first introduced for examination to the Senate-that there could be no more propitious time for an investigation than that which was open to us when this petition was presented. It was as close as possible after the last election of 1886, itself not connected with the Federal election otherwise than in respect of the choice of a Congressman, and it was as far as possible from the election and canvass for the great contest of the parties in the country at large in

It was not expected that so protracted an examination would at all be necessary, but from time to time on each side there was a demand for a larger inquiry and a reinvestigation, adducing witnesses to contradict or qualify what had proceeded from others, till when we really terminated our actual production of testimony at the end of March, 1888, it was thought then that it should be kept open during the summer. No testimony, however, was called subsequent to that time.

I can only properly here, and I hope not with any undue emphasis, call attention to the fact that while this examination was still open and unconcluded, one of the very important and valuable, not only wits, but valuable men, in the consent, I think, of all parties, Joe Hoffmann, as he is familiarly called, long an office-holder, a German of excellent character and conduct, having the confidence, as I believe, of that community in all that relates to probity and propriety and duty of social and other obligations, fell a victim to an assassination. In that assassination was included another victim, a very important and, as I understand, excellent man of the Democratic party, Mr. Holt, known well, I take it, to the Senators from Texas, and well known, perhaps generally, in Democratic circles. This was an assassination, and a clear assassination. These two men were sitting together in front of a restaurant, and it was the heat of a canvass for the approaching election of 1888. The same aggravations, or zeal and interest, about the municipal affairs were then in progress, and were to culminate in an election. Out of the dark, at a safe distance, the discharge of two barrels of a shotgun killed both of these men.

Mr. COKE. One Democrat and one Republican.
Mr. EVARTS. I have stated that. One of them, Mr. Holt, it was supposed might survive and recover. Hoffmann was killed instantly. Holt died also.

Mr. EVARTS. Yes; I know. It was expected that Holt might recover, and at one turn of his wounds there was, I believe, a confident opinion that he would recover, but by relapse or discouragement there was a disappointment of these hopes, and he died.

It is impossible not to connect that transaction, under the light of this evidence, as being a part of a continuous and protracted situation of this disturbance. Mr. Hoffmann, so far as our examination showed, had not incurred any enmity or any ill opinion in any quarter, but he was a leader in opposition to the ticket which was headed by Judge Lafayette Kirk, and it was a question of restoration of power by the Republicans or continued power in the same hands that held it.

With regard to Mr. Holt, although I think there is not any doubt that he was in all things wholly a Democrat, an important one, there is, I believe, an opinion on our part that Mr. Holt had purposed and had perhaps shown a purpose to take part against the powers that be in that coming election. I may be wrong about that, but that is our notion.

Therefore, we have this unhappy result growing out of violence unchecked, unpunished, unresisted, uncondemned, an easy occurrence two years afterwards resulting in so deplorable and wholly inexcusable mur-der, for there were no such heats, or renconters or terrors or fears, vague or of any kind. It was, as it would appear, a result in execution of a systematic purpose that at whatever cost the supremacy in local affairs should be maintained by the men and the adherents of them who then held that power.

I do not propose to allude to any other occurrences connected with elections and with fatal disasters to life, but it opens the general question (and I earnestly submit to all Senators who shall discuss this matter further, as unquestionably they will and should) that this is a case in which there was a reasonable opportunity of getting at the facts; that the investigation has been conducted with as much intelligence and legal faculties as belong to the members of the committee who were intru-ted as a subcommittee with the taking of testimony, Senator EUSTIS and Senator PUGH representing the minority, and Mr. SPOONER, Mr. Teller, and myself the majority; and that the investigation has been patient. There has been no important irritation in the conduct of it. Everything has been explored. Everybody has had an opportunity on either side, at whatever expense to the Government, for neither of us thought that that was an element which for a single instant should bear upon this investigation.

If it shall be held that the majority of the committee and the majority of the subcommittee have not given as impartial and exact a view in general of this transaction as they should have done, it is to be regretted; but it is a regret not without a remedy, for the whole body of the testimony is here, and, so far as I can see, it embraces a general discussion of what the disturbing influences are that in these communities draw a distinction between what individual transactions are open to the condemnation of everybody, and those violences against the suf-frage, violences that have attacked life, have sacrificed life, and those violences that have proscribed and driven away some citizens not open to condemnation by law or by society upon any general opinions of condemnation. I do not know where else we can find a better scene of transaction and a treatment of evidence that would enable us to better consider whether there is really in our affairs a great persistent power that is to suppress, overpower, and set aside the Government of the Constitution and the laws passed in pursuance of it, and the execution of the law through officers and the administration of justice, for that at last must come to be the question.

The relations of the Federal Government directly to elections in the States and the great authority the States have over those elections in regard to the absolute possession of the basis of the suffrage, except when controlled by the amendments to the Constitution, are all understood; and elections are to go on year by year, so long as any one can see, to the end of the cohesion of these States. We are one people. We are divided into States. We have one great opinion that prevails all over the United States on certain subjects, and the Constitution of the United States and its laws and the suffrage under them is one of There is no private or local public opinion accorded in any part of this country by either of those questions. All the States, all citizens, from Maine to Georgia and off to California, are parties, the same parties, of equal authority, of equal courage, and of equal duty. That public opinion which is the life-blood of our institutions everywhere is the public opinion that is behind the power and the duty of the Federal Government, and there is no power or right to divide off and monopolize freedom on that subject either in expression or in conclusion to one part of this country.

The magnitude of the value and of, as I hope, the perpetuity of local influence and local control over what belongs to local administration and State authority, I have no desire to disparage, either in Texas or in New York; but if it ever comes to this, that as to which of these great areas of opinion shall control, if there shall be irreconcilable conflicts between them, the end must be, as I submit, that the opinion of the whole country must finally settle that behind the law and behind the Constitution. Its prevalence, and the general and complete rights of society and of suffrage are to be as clearly, as thoroughly, and I should hope, as quietly all over this country in one part as in another.

Mr. President, I shall not go into the large considerations while the discussion rests upon the exposure of the facts and the situation upon which the debate is to proceed. Iask that the report of the committee may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered, if there be no objection.

The report is as follows:

Mr. EVARTS, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, submitted the following report to accompany Senate resolutions of January 26, 1887, and February 28, 1888:

The Committee on Privileges and Elections respectfully reports that it has inquired into the circumstances and events referred to in the resolutions of the Senate passed January 26, 1887, and presents to the Senate the testimony taken before the committee and the conclusions upon such testimony to which it has

The resolutions referred to the committee are as follows:

"RESOLUTIONS.

"Whereas Stephen A. Hackworth, a native citizen of the United States and of the State of Texas; James L. Moore, a native of Alabama, and now for twenty years a citizen of Texas; and Carl Schutze, a native of Germany, for thirty years a resident of the United States and now a naturalized citizen thereof, have presented their petition to the Senate, wherein they allege that they have been driven from their homes in Washington County, Texas, and compelled to abandon their property at a great sacrifice, and that armed and lawless bands of ruffians have taken possession of and destroyed certain ballot-boxes in said county at a late election therein for county officers and member of Congress, and have murdered three citizens of said county, and overthrown republican government therein, and committed other outrages and crimes, all of which have been done in order that the majority of the voters therein may be deprived of their lawful and constitutional rights of suffrage, and that the minority may unlawfully usurp and exercise control in said county, and that the constituted authorities of said county and State refuse all remedy for said outrages and crimes:

"Be it resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be, and it is hereby, instructed to inquire into all the circumstances of, and connected with, the said alleged events, and that it report as soon as may be; and that said committee have power to send for persons and papers, to employ a stenographer, and to act by any subcommittee, and that any such subcommittee shall, for the purposes of such investigation, be a committee of the Senate to all intens and purposes.

"Be it resolved, That the necessary expenses of said committee in said investigation be paid out of the appropriation for the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman thereof."

The petition to Congress upon which the resolutions of the Senate were based states with perspicuity and conciseness the history of the transactions in Washington County, Texas, out of which the grievances of which the petitioners complain arose, and which constitute the public grounds upon which their appeal is made to Congress to investigate these transactions, and take such action as in its wisdom may seem appropriate to its jurisdiction and duty in the premises.

The petition reads as follows:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The petition reads as follows:

"Your petitioners, Stephen A. Hackworth, James L. Moore, and Carl Schutze, respectfully state—

"That they are clizens of Brenham, Washington County, Texas, but that they are now refugees from their homes in consequence of political persecutions.

"That they are law-abiding clizens and are not charged with the commission of any crime whatever against the laws of said State, and they possess the confidence and esteem of all law-abiding clitzens who know them.

"That, having in vain appealed for protection for their lives and property and for the security and property of their families to the local and state authorities of said county and State, they have now no other recourse except to appeal to you in the earnest hope that there may somewhere exist sufficient power to protect a clizen of the United States in his own country.

"Your petitioner, Stephen A. Hackworth, is a native-born clitzen of said Washington Country, Texas; has resided a greater part of his life in said city of Brenham; is now forty-seven years of age; is by occupation a dealer in real estate; and from 1570 to 1882 held several city in positions in said country; owned real estate; and from 1570 to 1882 held several city in positions in said country; owned real estate and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $4,000; was comfortably situated, the income from his business securing an assured support for himself and famity.

"Your petitioner, estad Washington County, Texas, since 1865; is now forty-five years of age, and by occupation a merchant; and from 1576 to 1832 held the office of district clerk, and from 1882 to 1884 held the office of district clerk, and from 1882 to 1884 held the office of district clerk, and from 1882 to 1884 held the office of serieng in the said cuty of the said washington County; owned real and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $6,000; was comfortably situated and earning a comfortable living for himself and family.

"Your petitioner, Carl Sch

for their lives and property, by appeal to the local and State authorities of said county and State, has been prevented by the wanton and cruel mirder of important witnesses, and by the further fact that a body of State troops, ostensibly ordered to said county by the State authorities to preserve law and order, in fact acted in open concert with the lawless men who had committed the election outrages, and were then actually engaged in terrorizing the county preparatory to the commission of other outrages, alterwards perpetrated by them.

"Your petitioners further state that, since the said 2d day of November last, who are Republicans in politics; that one-half or more of the white clitzens who are Republicans in politics, and, together with the colored citizens who are Republicans in politics, and, together with the colored citizens who are Republicans in politics, and, together with the colored citizens who are Republicans in politics, and, together with the colored citizens who are Republicans and personal property of said county; that said citizens developed the property of said county; that said citizens are peaceable and law-arbding, and have never resorted to unlawful acts or the lives of proscribed Republicans, such an assemblage would be declared to be a 'negro insurrection' by the civil authorities and would furnish a desirable pretext to said civil authorities and their armed bands of rufflans to call for and obtain from the State authorities sufficient re-enforcement of State troops on the social of herero insurrection in the state of the property of the civil authorities and their armed bands of rufflans to call for and obtain from the State authorities sufficient re-enforcement of State troops on the social county, Alfred Jones, Shadrach Felder, and Stewart Jones, three colored Republicans, were arrested upon pretended and malicious charges of crime, and, while in the custody of the civil authorities of said county, were, on the 2d day of December ultimo, surrendered by said civil authorities into come exiles.

"And your petitioner Stephen A. Hackworth was, on the l6th day of December, ultimo, escorted to the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fé Railway depot at said city of Brenham by members of the Democratic executive committee of said county, also by a number of friends who went with him to protect him from being murdered by armed bands of ruffians who had collected in said city of Brenham, on the 5th and 6th of December ultimo, for the purpose of murdering him if he refused to obey the demands of the said Democratic executive committee requiring him to leave said county, and as the train bore him away from the depot said lawless bands of armed ruffians rent the air with several prolonged and exultant yells of triumph. And your petitioner, S. A. Hackworth, further states that no time was given him to remove his family from said city of Brenham; and knowing it to be unsafe for him to remain in Texas, he came to Washington, D. C., where he is now temporarily residing.

"Your petitioner James L. Moore was permitted to remain until the 12th of December, ultimo, to enable him to dispose of his property, and on said date he, with his family, left Brenham for Los Angeles, Cal., where he and his family now reside.

with his family, left Brenham for Los Angeles, Cal., where he and his family now reside.

"Your petitioner Carl Schutze was compelled to leave Brenham on said 6th of December ultimo, but returned to Brenham on the 13th of December ultimo, for the purpose of removing his paper, the Staats Zeitung, to Galveston, Tex., and on said 13th day of December was, while leaving the depot at Brenham for Galveston, attacked by armed ruffians, who fired two pistol shots, and also threw a heavy stone at him through the car window, but he escaped unhurt, and is now in Galveston, Tex.

"And your petitioners further say that they are unable within the limits of this petition to state all the facts and set forth the long lists of cruel crimes committed upon helpless citizens of said county because they dared to exercise their political rights as Republicans to obtain representation in the local, State, and Federal governments of the country; and your petitioners are prepared, and stand ready when called upon to do so, to establish by conclusive evidence the truth of all facts herein set forth and submitted.

"And your petitioners hereby respectfully submit all matters herein stated and complained of to your honorable body for your careful consideration, and such action as you may deem necessary to cure the evils herein stated, and thereby secure to all citizens of the United States their rights under a republican form of government in fact as well as in name.

"As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

"STEPHEN A. HACKWORTH.

"JAMES L. MOORE.

"CARL SCHUTZE.

"By the written authority and request of Messrs, James L. Moore and Carl Schutze, I have signed their names to the above and foregoing petition, this the 6th day of January, 1857.

Before considering the specific incidents in the election in Washington County on the 2d day of November, 1886, which make up the alleged ontrages on the suffrage at the election and produced the defeat of the Republican majority, it seems to the committee due to the petitioners to express its opinions as to their character and conduct, as citizens and as participants in the disturbed politics of Washington County have been made the subjects of much criticism and contumely by the principal actors and their abettors in the political outrages, which the petitioners have denounced to public condemnation and have exposed before the committee of the Senate.

Much attempt has been made by insinuation, if not by testimony in the course of the examination, to show that these petitioners were not proscribed at home for their Republican principles and their maintenance of those principles in the methods of free speech, free suffrage, and political organization which are the common right of all parties and of all citizens. It has been pressed upon the attention of the committee that, as a matter of fact, these petitioners were not, subsequent to the election, in peril among the population where they lived; that they were not driven from their homes, their property sacrificed, their honest livelihood broken up, and their exile a cruel and brutal banishment by violence and fear for their lives.

est livelihood broken up, and their exile a cruel and brutal banishment by violence and fear for their lives.

THE PETITIONERS RESPECTABLE AND SUBSTANTIAL CITIZENS AT HOME.

The committee is unable to attach any importance to the efforts in the testimony to disparage the characters and lives of these petitioners. But for the political agitations, the flerce passions, the violent and cruel and bloody incidents whice mark the election of Washington County and its sequel, the committee is persuaded that the people of Brenham, where the petitioners had long been residents, would have found no occasion for any reflections upon them other than such as belonged to the heat of political contests for place and influence between opposing parties.

The committee, therefore, is not deposed to reduce its confidence in the faithment of the committee, therefore, is not deposed to reduce its confidence in the faithment of the committee, therefore, is not deposed to reduce its confidence in the faithment of the election. Nor does the committee find that it has any warrant, upon the whole testimony before it, to discredit the evidence these petitioners have given upon the essential points under examination upon any considerations affecting their sincerity or veracity. Whatever qualifications of their statements may properly be raised by contradictory evidence or by their enlistment in the controversy belongs to the judicial comparison of conflicting views among the witnesses, and does not, in the opinion of the committee, justify any censure on the probity of the petitioners' testimony.

The committee, therefore, is of opinion that the averments of the petitioners as to their situation in their homes in Texas and the occasion of their being reason to their should be considered to the state of the sustained by the evidence. These averments are as follows:

"That they are clavities of Brenham, Washington County, Texas, but that they are now refugees from their homes in consequence of political persecutions."

"That they are law ab

DEMONSTRATIONS WHICH DROVE THE PETITIONERS FROM THEIR HOMES IN TEXAS,

DEMONSTRATIONS WHICH DROVE THE PETITIONERS FROM THEIR HOMES IN TEXAS.

The evidence bearing upon the expulsion of the petitioners in Texas occupied much of the attention of the committee and filled many pages of the testimony. The direct and explicit affirmative evidence in the case of each of the petitioners of their banishment under threats and fears for their livesseems to the committee wholly unimpaired in its conclusive effect by any opinions or convictions to the contrary expressed by those who would weaken or palliate the severity of their proscription and their expulsion. Some extracts from the testimony of either aspect will leave no doubt of the soundness of the conclusions which the committee has reached on this head of its inquiry.

Mr. Hackworth's testimony on this point is as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Did you receive any notices to leave?
"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Have you got any of them?
"The WITNESS. Do you mean written notices?
"Mr. SPOONER. Yes.
"A. No, sir; I have not.
"Q. Tell us all you know about it. You left there, did you?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Why did you leave?
"A. The excitement had grown so intense and the efforts we made to get these colored men released under writ of habeas corpus and their hanging had created such a terrible excitement, that I found it would be impossible for me to remain there any longer without not only great danger to myself, but great danger to the lives of my friends.

"Q. Did you have any advised me.

"A. Oh, yes, sir; a great many advised me.

"Q. I asked you a little while ago to give me the names of the parties, Democrats, who notified you, if any there were, to leave, or who advised you that it was necessary for your safety to leave?

"A. I am not willing to give the name of but one, and that is Mr. Louis Bryan, who conducted the negotiations.

"Q. Tell us about that; you know all about it?

"A. This was after the colored men were hung. I think it was on Friday, the 3d. I was up at Mr. Schutz's office and we were talking over the matter as to what we thought was best to be done. Mr. Schutz's advised with me and said that he thought everything was hopeless, from the warnings we had received, and that from the state of feeling we would be compelled to leave. About that time Mr. Bryan came up in the office and inquired about a case in the court in which he was on one side and Mr. Schutze on the other side. After talking a few moments this letter of Judge Kirk's came up; I think I brought that up myself. It had been said over town that myself, Mr. Schutze, Mr. Moore, and leading Republicans had that letter written to Judge Kirk, and it was creating a great deal of bad feeling over Brenham. I knew this letter was bogus, or felt satisfied of it. I knew it was gotten up for the purpose of provoking a riot, or something of that kind, to give an excuse or pretense to murderers, and I spoke to Mr. Bryan about it. I told him that we had not written the letter nor advised any one to write it; that we were for peace, and were doing everything that could be done to secure peace and harmony in the county, and that I felt satisfied from what Democratic friends had told me that Mr. Rodgers had written the letter to Judge Kirk, and that he had done it with Judge Kirk's knowledge; that I was not cert

"The WITNESS. He asked me how much my homestead was worth, and I told him it had cost me over $2.500.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. What was the event of these negotiations for the purchase of your home?

"A. Mr. Bryan came back to me on Monday, and said the most he could get was $1.50, and I might just as well take it and be done with it, as there was no time to be acting as a friend. I had learned enough that morning from other Democrats (if I have to give their names I will not tell what it was) to know that there was a mobforming to come into Brenham either Saturday or Sunday to hang us, perhaps; the same men who hung these colored men.

"Q. What was the event of these negotiations for the purchase of your home?

"A. Mr. Bryan came back to me on Monday, and said the most he could get was $1,150, and I might just as well take it and be done with it, as there was no time to lose.

was $1,150, and I might just as well take it and be done with it, as there was no time to lose.

"Q. Did he tell you there was no time to lose?

"A. Yes, sir; he told me that; that I must leave Monday night, and that men were in Brenham. I got that from many friends. I went into town once and hurried back home, and I was in my office for a few minutes, and Mr. Bryan came up in that back room and told me, 'the men are here and they are coming in, and it is necessary for you to make your arrangements and you and your wife sign that deed immediately and go away.' I agreed to do it, and signed the deed. I can not remember, of course, all that occurred, only I knew the danger was great.

"Q. Did you leave for any other reason than the one you have stated?

"A. No, sir; I did not leave for any other reason. It was never my intention to leave Washington County.

"Q. Had you committed any offense against the laws?

"A. No, sir.

"A. No, sir; I did not leave for any other reason. It was never my intention to leave Washington County.

"Q. Had you committed any offense against the laws?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Had there been any complaint made against you as a citizen?

"A. None whatever.

"Q. Do you know of any reason for this excitement and feeling and threats against you other than political?

"A. That was all; it was all political.

"Q. Did you take the $1,150?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And conveyed your homestead?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And left?

"A. Yes, sir.; and left. The money was paid to my wife.

"Q. What was the property worth?

"A. The property was worth, I think, $2,500, and I think I could have got that for it. I might not have got it all in money, but I know I could in trading around.

"Q. Who bought it?

"A. I think Mr. R. Hoffmann; I do not remember. I was so excited at the time I looked at the deed I can not say " (pages 226-228).

The testimony of Carl Schutze, esq., showing how he was driven from Washington County, is as follows:

"Q. Did you have any order to leave there; any order, written or verbal?

"A. I had no direct order to leave, written or verbal. I can not say that any letter was sent to me, or other paper. No man came to me and told met that I must leave, but to every man who lived there it was very evident that I could not stay there. My friends who were with me, they had friends in town, and some of them were Masons, and they received information, of course, from their fraternity and others. Mr. Hackworth, for instance, has a very large family and has relations in town there who were mostly all Democrats, and from statements that were given to these persons and from what I saw in the town myself I knew that I could not live there any longer. I left town twice. On the evening of Wednesday—that is, the day after the election, all the Republicans had to hide out that night—

"A. I mean these leading Republicans, Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Hoffmann, and others. They did not sleep in the that in house. Mr. Hoffmann, who used to s would come up to the office and kill us, and we took arms and went down to Mr. Hackworth's house. They went to another house to sleep, and I went to Galveston that night, because I have no family, and I did not want to bother

Mr. Hackworth's house. They went to another house to sleep, and I went to Galveston that night, because I have no family, and I did not want to bother anybody by remaining there.

"Q. Did you sell your property there?
"A. No. sir; I did not sell it. I will tell you about that,
"Q. State, as briefly as you can about it.
"A. After the colored men were lynched on Thursday morning, the next day I think it was on Friday, Mr. Louis Bryan came up to my office. He looked very much excited and very eager and talked very fast. He wanted to know about the papers in the case of Zapp against Amslers & Brothers, I think, and said something about continuing the case to the March term of the county court. I did not know whether it had been continued or not, and it seemed to me very extraordinary that he should come there at that time. It was on the 2d of December, the court had adjourned some time, and the next term of court would not be until the middle of January. I thought it was very strange. While he was sitting there Mr. Hackworth approached him on the subject of a letter which he had apparently written to Judge Kirk. Judge Kirk claimed that he had received it from the post-office. I had heard of that letter myself, and I heard that a man by the name of Rankin, who was part owner of the Brenham Banner, had been going around the streets with that letter and inquiring of everybody if I or Steve Hackworth had not written the letter. I think he told Mr. Jodon about it, and Mr. Jodon said that it was not in my handwriting or in Mr. Hackworth's either. They went all over town asking people about it.
"Q. This Brenham Banner was a Democratic newspaper?
"A. Yes, sir. They asked if we had not written it to try to excite people against us. Of course every man who is not half-witted would know that it was not to our interest to do anything of that kind to get ourselves into a difficulty.

"O. Did you write that letter?"

culty.

culty.

"Q. Did you write that letter?

"A. No, sir; I did not know anything about it. Mr. Hackworth told him then that he thought he ought to know that he would not have written that letter, and that he had heard that Judge Kirk had written it himself; and from what I have since learned, either Judge Kirk or Mr. Rogers, it is said, put some young man up to it to write that letter. Mr. Bryan then said, 'You disclaim the authorship of that letter, or any knowledge of it.' Well, of course Mr. Hackworth told him that he did. Then he went out and called me out into the hall; said he wanted to see me. He says, 'Mr. Schutze, it is very evident that you can not live here.'

"Q. Excuse me a moment; was this Mr. Bryan a Democrat?

worth told him that he did. Then he went out and called me out into the hall; said he wanted to see me. He says, 'Mr. Schutze, it is very evident that you can not live here.'

"Q. Excuse me a moment; was this Mr. Bryan a Democrat?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is he connected officially with the Democratic county organization as a member of the executive committee or anything of that kind?

"A. It was generally understood in Brenham that he belonged to the executive committee. Mr. Bryan then stated to me, 'It is very evident that you can not live here; that they are determined to kill you, Hackworth, and Moore, and,' he says, 'we do not want you to go off without a cent, and if you want to leave we will buy you out.' I said,' What can you give me?' 'Well,' he said, 'about two or three hundred dollars.'

"Q. What was it he offered to buy out?

"A. He offered to buy out my paper. He said, 'We want to get rid of that paper; we want to break that thing down; we have no use for it.' I laughed at that and said, 'If I have to go! might as well go withowt any money; two or three hundred dollars is not anything.' I said I would submit it to some people who had a financial interest in the paper and let him know; and I spoke next day to some parties, and, to make the matter short, Mr. Breedlove, who was also interested and had advanced some money on the paper, I spoke to him afterwards. The next Monday Mr. Hackworth came there in the morning looking very white and pale, and told me that Mr. Bryan had told him that they were coming in that day, and if he wanted to sell out to anybody there he would see to it that they would not but him.

"Q. They proposed to buy Mr. Hackworth out, too?

"A. Yes, sir. I understood afterwards that Mr. Bryan talked with Mr. Hackworth he same day that he saw me in the office, when I had told him that it would take about $1,500 to $2,000 to buy me out, and he would not think of that at all, and said he had no use for the paper. That night Mr. Hackworth left.

"Q. Was this Mr. Bryan connected with either noon and went down mot the country. I knew that my me was not worth a nickel.

"Q. You left, then, under those threats and under that influence?

"A. Yes, sir. That is, I returned after that to wind up my affairs. I was assured by Mr. Breedlove that he had assurances that I would not be molested if I came back to wind up my affairs, and perhaps they would buy me out. But they refused to buy me out. Mr. Breedlove negotiated the matter with Mr. Bryan; they could not stand the amount I asked, and I had to move the paper to Galveston. On the Monday following Mr. Hackworth left, and on the next Monday I left on the evening train, and that was the time when they fired two or three shots at the car. I thought it was only two shots that they fired at the time, but Tom Foley, the conductor, told me there were three shots fired.

"Q. State more fully in regard to that, if you please.

"A. As the train was starting some pistol shots were fired, and a rock was thrown into the window. I was sitting in the car facing in that direction [indicating], and the rock came in here [indicating], and it broke out a panel of the shutter and dashed it to pieces almost.

"Q. The stone was thrown into the window of the car near where you were sitting?

"Q. The stone was thrown into the window of the car near where you were sitting?

"A. Yes, sir; just to my right, a little ahead of me. It passed within perhaps an inch of my face.

"Q. Do you know who threw it?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. You stated that pistol shots also were fired?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Were bullets shot into the car?

"A. I did not see any. I do not know whether the shots were fired into the car or not, but they were close up to it.

"Q. Did you hear of any threats made by the Republicans, or were the threats that were made entirely confined to the Democrats?

"A. Yes; they were entirely confined to the Democrats.

"Q. Have you been back to Brenham since you went to Galveston?

"A. I was there, as I stated, on the 13th of January. I will state to you how I got there. I went up there at night because I knew it was unsafe, on the central train, and took a sleeper, so that nobody should see me, and when I got there slept in a private house, and I was in town but half an hour the next morning, and then I took a horse and rode out to see Mr Julius Lehmann, 3 miles in the country, and returned by another road so that they would not follow me. I saw Mr. Fricke and he told me that my life was in danger; that the deputy sheriff had made certain remarks about me; and I rode around and went through a back door and came into a store, and was told by the proprietor and clerk that these fellows I mentioned were hunting me, and he begged me for God's sake to go away, and I rode to Albert Vernon's, and he went with me to the depot, and the train left in three minutes; and instead of going south I went north and went around and came back to Galveston? (pages 203-210). Mr. Moore's testimony is as follows:

"Q. Do you know of any threats being made there against the leading Republicans about election time or after the election?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. By whom were they made and against whom were they made?

"A. They were made by the leading Democrats against leading Republicans.

"A. Myself, among others.

"A. Whyself, among others.

"A. Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, Mr. Potter, Mr. Gilder, Mr. Lockett, and others.

"A. Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, Mr. Potter, Mr. Gilder, Mr. Lockett, and others.

"Q. What was the nature of those threats?

"A. The threats were that unless certain of us left that county in a very short time that we would be murdered, hanged, or shot; the threats were that unless myself, Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, Mr. Potter, and others left the county that we would be shot, hanged, murdered, or otherwise disposed of, as the Democracy, the kuklux portion of the Democracy, might decide to dispose of us.

"Q. Did you receive any notice to leave?

"A. No written notice; mine was verbal.

"Q. From whom did you receive such notice?

"A. From several Democrats.

"Q. Who were they?

"A. I received some of those communications in a confidential way, and would not like to disclose them unless I am compelled to do so. The principal part of my information came through Mr. B. F. Robertson.

"Q. A Republican?

"A. No, sir; he is a Democrat.

"Q. But there were other Democrats who communicated to you the fact that it would be better for you to leave?

"A. They told me that my life was not safe and that they advised me to leave; that they were Democrats and I was a Republican, but they did not know that I had done anything wrong except to advocate the Republican cause; that the Democracy was worked up to a great state of excitement and they knew my life was not safe and I would be murdered if I staid there.

"Q. They communicated that advice to you in friendship and under promise of secrecy on your part?

"A. They soir: except in the case of Mr. Robertson: there was no secrecy in

"Q. They communicated that advice to you in friendship and under promise of secrecy on your part?

"A. Yes, sir; except in the case of Mr. Robertson; there was no secrecy in what he told me. He represented himself as being the authorized representative of what he and I called a 'mob' in Washington County. There was no secrecy in his communication with me.

"Q. Who was Mr. Robertson?

"A. He was one of the nearest neighbors I had there,

"Q. A prominent Democrat?

"A. A prominent Democrat, although he does not take an active part in politics,

"A. A prominent Democrat, although he does not take an active part in politics.

"Q. Were you a property-owner there?
"A. Yes, sir; I owned some property there in Washington County.
"A. No, sir; I did not.
"A. No, sir; I did not.
"Q. Why did you leave?
"A. I left there believing that my life was not safe. That belief was created in my mind by the information that I had received from Democratic sources and from Republican sources, too, but of course I attached the most importance to the information I had received from Democrats.

"Q. You knew of the meeting which had been held at Eldridge Hall?
"A. I heard of it; I was in town at the time.
"Q. Was that meeting attended by any Republicans, to your knowledge?
"A. I never heard or knew of a Republican being there.
"Q. It was attended by Democrats from different parts of the county?
"A. Yes, sir: that was my information.
"Q. Were they armed?
"A. Yes, sir. I heard there were parties of armed men in the town, and I saw several of them.
"Q. Were you negotiating for the purchase of your property preparatory to leaving?
"A Yes, sir.

"Q. Were you negotiating for the purchase of your property preparatory to leaving?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who did you sell your property to?

"A. The deed was made to Mr. Felder, a prominent Democrat there.

"Q. Who negotiated for the sale of the property?

"A. Mr. Robertson did the most of it, and Mr. Breedlove representing my interest as an attorney.

"Q. Had your property been for sale prior to this time?

"A. I had said I would take a certain price for it.

"Q. What did you estimate it to be worth?

"A. I asked $6,000 for it.

"Q. What did you sell it for?

"A. I owed three notes, and one of them was due on the 1st of last January, another was due the following year, and the third was due in two years. The party who bought the property assumed the debt that was on the property of $1,500 and paid me $500 cash.

"Q. What was the price of your property?

"A. The price I asked for it was about $6,000.

"Q. And how much did you get for it, allowing credit on the notes?

"A. I owed $1,500 on the place, payable by notes, and the first note fell due in January—

"O. Then you get $2,000 for it?"

January—

"Q. Then you got $2,000 for it?

"A. Yes, sir; the purchaser assumed the payment of these three notes for $1,500 and gave me $500 in eash.

"Q. So that you sacrificed your property?

"A. Yes, sir; it was a sacrifice; I did not get half what it was worth nor half what it cost me.

"Q. What crime had you committed that you should not be permitted to live in that community?

"A. The only crime that I heard myself charged with was being a prominent Republican, and having made Republican speeches and trying to induce Republicans to vote the Republican ticket against the so-called People's ticket or Democratic ticket.

"Q. You had made no social-equality speeches."

Democratic ticket.

"Q. You had made no social-equality speeches?

"A. I never made a social-equality speech in my life, and I never heard a Republican make one, that I remember.

"Q. When did you leave Brenham?

"The WITNESS. For California?

"Mr. Spooner. For good.

"A. I left there about the 13th of last December, I think.

"Q. You took your family with you?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You left because you did not consider it safe to live there?

"A. That was my reason for leaving.

"Q. And the prejudice which had been created against you was, so far as you know, political only?

"A. I can assign no other cause.

"Q. And is chargeable to the fact that you had been an active leader in the Republican party of that county?"

"A. That is the only offense I knew that I was charged with" (pages 512-515). Florent T. Jodon, esq., thus describes the situation at Brenham:

"Q. What do you know of threats being made against Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, Mr. Potter, and Mr. Moore?

"A. I know particularly of them against Mr. Hackworthand Mr. Schutze, not so much against Mr. Moore. I never heard them made against him, but in regard to Mr. Hackworth and Mr. Schutze I heard threats made quite often. In fact, the state of feeling in our community for a long time was simply terrible. It not only extended to Republicans, but to all classes of good, quiet citizens. Our town was for a while under the control of a mob, men who made their headquarters at saloons, and who were armed, and the state of feeling was very bad indeed" (page 182).

Many other prominent Republicans were ordered to leave their homes and establish themselves elsewhere. Below are given a few of the notices that were sent to them:

"George W. Brown (colored) was recalled and further examined.

"George W. Brown (colored) was recalled and further examined.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Have you seen the paper which I now show you before this time [handing a slip of paper to the witness]?

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Where did you first see it?
"A. I first seen that paper tied to my saddle,
"Q. Is this the paper that you testifled yesterday was found tied to your saddle?

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Was this before you qualified for the office you hold, or after.

"A. It was just after, on the same day.

"A. It was been in your possession ever since?

"A. Yes, sir; I have had it folded up and have carried it in my pocket all the

"A. Yes, sir, I have the continuous and the paper:
"Mr. Spooner. I will read what is on this paper:
"George W. Brown. As Republicanism is dead, dead, in Washington County, you better resign and leave the county, or you will be killed.'—with a picture of a cocked gun at the bottom of it" (page 109).

tre of a cocked gun at the bottom of it" (page 109).

O. B. Potter's testimony:

"Q. Have you known of any notices being served on men in that county instructing them within a given time to leave the county?

"A. Yes, sir; I have known of several, and have seen several of them.

"Q. Tell us what you know about that.

"A. I can give you my notice if you want it.

"Q. One was served upon you?

"A. Yes, sir; this one [handing a paper to Mr. Spooner].

"Q. When was that sent to you?

"A. Yes, sir; this one [handing a paper to Mr. Spooner].

"Q. Is this the identical paper?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Just as it came?

"A. Yes, sir; exactly like that. It has not been changed a particle.

"Q. With this broad band of mourning around it?

"A. Yes, sir; exactly like that. It has not been changed a particle.

"Q. You did not stop to study the date?

"A. No, sir; I was somewhat excited. I judge that is the 21st.

"Brenham, December 21.

"BRENHAM, December 21. "'SIR: We have been waiting for some time for you to arrange your business and leave this county. This is to notify you that if you persist in staying here havy days longer you will be dealt with in a very severe manner." "CITIZENS W. CO."

"By Mr. Spoonen:
"Q. This signature, 'Citizens W. Co.,' I understand means Washington County?
"A. Yes, sir."

W. H. Blount's testimony:

"Mr. SPOONER. This notice reads as follows:

"'BRENHAM, TEX., December 9, 1886.

"'You are hereby notified to leave the county without further warning.

"'W. H. BLOUNT.

"'W. H. BLOUNT.'

"Mr. SPOONER. Let that be marked as an exhibit, and put in evidence.

"Q. What crime had you committed?

"A. They say none. One of the fellows who notified me met me on the street in the day san he asked me, he says, 'What is your name?' and I said 'Blount.' He said, 'Aha.' 'Well,' he says, 'Yhave a message to deliver to you.' I said, 'All right; let's hear it.' He says, 'You must leave the county, and,' he says, 'you must leave the mmediately.' I says, 'What is your name?' He says, 'I am from the lower counties.' I said, 'That is not the question I asked you; and he said, 'That is all you will get, by God.' I said, 'Do you expect I am a fugitive from justice, a thief, or a robber, or what do you consider me?' He said, 'No, you are a pretty fair citizen, they say, but you wield an influence among the freedmen that is detrimental to the white people, and they won't stand it'" (page 128).

Joseph Hoffmann's testimony:

Joseph Hofmann's testimony:

"Q. Did you receive any written notices to quit?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Have you got one of those notices now?

"A. Yes, sir.

"(The witness produced the notice called for and handed it to the chairman.)

"Q. Has this been in your possession ever since?

"A. Yes, sir. I have shown it to several parties and they have had it in their hands, but that is all. That is the envelope it came in.

"Mr. Evarts. This note reads as follows:

"December 8 1886.

· · · DECEMBER 8, 1886.

'Job Hoffmann:
"'You are requested to vacate Burton forever by Saturday night.
"'CITIZENS,"

"That is written in red ink.

"Q. This came through the mail?

"A. Yes, sir; and the post-office mark on it is the 7th. I received it on the 7th (page 134).

"William W. Hackworth, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"Q. Are you a son of S. A. Hackworth?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Where do you live?
"A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
"Q. You still live there?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. And have continued to live there, although your father left?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. How long have you lived there?
"A. I was born and raised there.
"Q. What is your present age?
"A. I will be twenty next September.
"Q. Were you in Brenham at the time of the Eldridge Hall meeting?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did you go to it?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did you hear the resolution that was adopted and the speeches that were made?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. You are a Republican, I suppose?
"A. Well, I never have voted.
"Q. You are not entitled to vote yet?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. But you sympathize with the Republican and not with the Democratic party?
"A Yes sir.

"A. No, sir.

"Q. But you sympathize with the Republican and not with the Democratic party?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you hear the resolution which was offered by Judge Kirk in regard to notifying people to leave?

"A. Sir?

"Q. Did you hear offered by Judge Kirk at that meeting the resolution that he proposed in regard to requiring people to leave?

"A. Yes, sir; I did.

"Q. What was it that he proposed in the resolution?

"A. He made a motion that S. A. Hackworth, J. L. Moore, Ed. Lockett, and Larney Gilder be given twenty-four hours to leave the county in.

"Q. That they should leave the county in twenty-four hours?

"A. Yes, sir."

Lafayette Kirk, the Democratic county judge, who offered the resolutions referred to above, testified as follows:

"When I went into the meeting I had just been informed that Mr. Potter had said that he was in favor of going in with the negroes and resorting to the shot-gun policy to enforce their rights.

"Q. Had Mr. Potter said anything?

"A. I had been so notified and informed, and acted on that information.

"Q. How long had you known Potter?

"A. Ever since I had been in town.

"Q. He is a pretty good neighbor, is he not?

"A. So far as I knew. I didn't know much about him except in this canvass.

"Q. He had been a pretty good neighbor on general principles?

vass.

"Q. He had been a pretty good neighbor on general principles?

"A. He had so far as I know. I had nothing to do with him much.

"Q. Would you drive a man out of the county on what some fellow said without making proper inquiry about it?

"A. I said, in the event he had said it in his speech.

"Q. Did you hear him say any such thing?

"A. Never.

"Q. Why did he recommend them to adopt the shotgun policy?

"A. To enforce their rights, I suppose.

"Q. That is, if the white Democrats raided the ballot-boxes that they ought to be shot?

to be shot?

"A. I did not know what he had in his mind.

"Q. Don't you think it would have been a good idea to have found out what he said before undertaking to punish him?

"A. I do. The gentleman who informed me said he was making statements of that character; that he was in favor of arming them.

"Q. That was after the election that he was so reported?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. It is not true that you were told that Mr. Potter justified the shooting, when it was necessary, of men who raided the ballot-boxes?

"A. I was not told that; I was just told about a conversation in which he said he was in favor of arming the negroes and resorting to the shotgun policy.

"Q. Had not that rumor been traced up, and had not Mr. Potter made a denial of it?

"A. Not at that time, it had not.

"Q. Had not that rumor been traced up, and had not Mr. Potter made a denial of it?

"A. Not at that time, it had not.

"Q. What else was there; what other crime had these men committed?

"A. Some of them were notoriously bad characters there.

"Q. Bad in what way?

"A. They had no standing socially or otherwise.

"Q. That is, you mean with Democrats they had not?

"A. With Democrats or Republicans, or respectable Republicans.

"Q. Were they driven out on that account?

"A. I think their leaving the county was due to the fact that they had played completely out there. They had no social standing or financial credit, and no means of support, except—

"Q. You were not proposing to any public meeting to drive poor devils out because they had no financial standing or credit?

"A. No, sir. What caused me to make that remark was, it came on the heels of the news of the killing of Bolton. My advice was that he had been killed by negroes who had been advised to go there to the ballot-boxes, and were acting under the advice of Gilder and Lockett; and following that I heard that Mr. Potter had made this statement, that he was in favor of arming himself and acting on the shotgun policy and enforcing his rights, and in the course of my remarks at that meeting I said I was in favor of notifying them that such things must be stopped or they must leave the county.

Lewis R. Bryan, another Democrat who was present at this meeting, testifies that he resolution of Judge Kirk ordered certain Republican leaders to leave within twenty-four hours

"Q. Do you know whether the date at which these people were required to leave was mentioned by Judge Kirk?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Are you sure that he did not name some date within which they must leave?

"A. It was to notify them to leave within twenty-four hours if they did not leave?

"A. It was to notify them to leave within twenty-four hours if they did not "A. It was to notify them to leave within twenty-four hours if they did not stop.

"Q. That was his resolution as amended?

"A. Yes, sir. I misapprehended you. You said the date; if you had said the time I would have underst od.

"Q. It was twenty-four hours, then, was it?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Were any persons mentioned who would be required to leave within twenty-four hours if these things were not stopped—by Judge Kirk's resolution, I mean?

"A. The suggestion made by him was—

"Q. One of the andience cried out an additional name, then, to put on the list?

"A. Yes, sir; Schutze; Carl Schutze.
"Q. Who was it that called out that?
"A. Dr. Joseph Tristram, a German.
"Q. You knew at the time that it was he who did it?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Do you remember what he said?
"A. He said, 'Don't forget Carl Schutze' (pp. 574, 575)."

Mr. Bryan, in the following passage, shows under what fears these petitioners were placed:
"Q. Now, without knowing who wrote this letter to Judge Kirk, or whether it was written as a joke or seriously, or was written by an enemy of Judge Kirk, or whether it was written by a Democrat or a Republican, why did you say that if any harm came to Judge Kirk, Mr. Hackworth and these other men would be held responsible for it?

"A. I mean exactly what I said; that we would hold them responsible for it: that nobody was going to hurt them but somebody who was in their interest and was instigated by them. They hated Judge Kirk like they did the Old Scratch himself, and it could come from no other source but that. That is the idea I have.

"Q. But whether right or wrong, whether they had anything to do with it or not in that state of feeling if harm came to Judge Kirk these men would be and was instigated by them. They hated Judge Kirk like they did the Old Scratch himself, and it could come from no other source but that. That is the idea I have.

"Q. But whether right or wrong, whether they had anything to do with itor not, in that state of feeling if harm came to Judge Kirk these men would be held responsible for it?

"A. They would have been, sir, undoubtedly; yes, sir.

"Q. In what way would they have been held responsible?

"A. I do not know, sir, in what way.

"Q. What was in your mind?

"A. I do not know, sir, in what way.

"A. I do not know, sir, in what way.

"A. I do not know, sir,

"Q. Well, it might have included hanging?

"A. Yes, sir; it might have been.

"A. I do not know whether it would have been, but that is generally the way that amobtakes. If it had taken the form of a mob, that is generally the way in which they act.

"Q. And it would have been a mob with which you would have sympathized?

"A. If Judge Kirk had been killed I would have been with it, sir.

"O. And all the other good Democrats would have been with it, too?

- "Q. And it would have been a mob with which you would have sympathized?

  "A. If Judge Kirk had been killed I would have been with it, sir.

  "Q. And all the other good Democrats would have been with it, too?

  "A. The Democrats, and as good Republicans, Senator, as there are in the State of Texas or anywhere else.

  "Q. You may put in all you please so long as you put in all the Democrats.

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. And that would have been the state of things and the treatment given to these men if harm had come to Judge Kirk?

  "A. I think so; I am only giving my individual views.

  "Q. Of course we can not get anybody else's opinion but yours. As far as you know, that was the general opinion among the Democrats there?

  "A. Yes, sir; as far as I know.

  "Q. And in your answers you speak of both Hackworth and Schutze?

  "A. Yes, sir; they were both present.

  "Q. And you told them they would be responsible, and you were serious about it, were you not?

  "A. I meant exactly what I said.

  "Q. You meant that if any harm came to Judge Kirk those men would be hanged?

  "A. I did not ween that they would be bayered.

"Q. You meant that it any narm came to Judge Kirk those men would be hanged?

"A. I did not mean that they would be hanged.

"Q. Or shot; I will ameliorate it in that way.

"A. I meant that they would suffer for it in some way. Of course, if they had happened to get away from them they could not do it.

"Q. If you could not hang them or shoot them, of course you would have been

"Q. If you could not hang them or shoot them, of course you would excused.

"A. I meant they would suffer the consequences.

"Q. And you meant that would be very serious?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. But that would be about the shape of the thing, would it not?

"A. Yes, sir; something of the kind.

"Q. You talked seriously to these men?

"A. Yes, sir."

An account of the meeting at Eldridge Hall to which reference has

An account of the meeting at Eldridge Hall, to which reference has been made in several of the citations which have been given, taken from a Democratic lo-cal paper, is inserted:

"On Thursday, at 2 p. m., November 5, there met at Eldridge Hall upward of three hundred leading citizens from all parts of the country. The committee appointed at a meeting held November 3 submitted the following report:

"Your committee, appointed at a former meeting to consultand recommend a course of action to be pursued in view of recent acts of lawlessness, frauds, and intimidation practiced at the recent election, respectfully report:

"That we have duly considered the matters referred to and deprecate and condemn the character of political speeches made by the leading white Republicans as incendiary and calculated to engender strife and bad feelings between the races, which, if permitted, must inevitably lead to bloodshed.

"That those designing white men are responsible for the present unfortunate condition of feeling between the races and for the murder of Dewees Bolton, a peaceable and unoffending citizen, guilty of no offense except a desire to witness the count of ballots.

"That we assure all citizens that they shall be protected in the enjoyment of all their rights, but that we will not allow incendiary speeches to be made to the ignorant colored people whereby our lives and property shall be placed in jeopardy.

all their rights, but that we will not allow incendiary speeches to be made to the ignorant colored people whereby our lives and property shall be placed in jeopardy.

""That we congratulate the good people of Washington County upon the triumph of the People's ticket and the election of men to office who will faithfully guard your rights against the attacks upon the ballot-box and the reprehensible methods adopted by the opposition.

"That we recommend to all the observance of law, and the preservation of law and order by every means in our power."

"Colonel Giddings said, speaking to the resolution, he had been with the people for thirty-two years, and never had he seen a more intelligent gathering of representative men; he felt the occasion and we were interested as no one could be; we were tied to Washington County soil; we could not pick up like the carpet-bagger and run; a large mass of the voters of the county were ignorant and only influenced by fear; their party had used every means of intimidation to influence votes, and such means kept up would result in war between races, and bloodshed. The People's ticket, representing the best interests of Washington County, were, with one exception, elected by good majorities. That one man, though called by the people, had refused to run on their ticket; but now, if elected, he should be allowed to serve. There was no need of violence or force; that time should have been when the canvass opened and the incendiary speeches were made to the ignorant and vicious of the county; now we should see the law prevail. He knew there was a deep feeling for using violence, but advised that the law take its course and be rigidly enforced. In the future no one should be allowed to make speeches to incite the violence of the ignorant. The people who owned the county should have it stopped.

"Harry Haynes said ordinarily he was for peace and was a peaceable man, but when he heard of the outrages and rumors of outrage he was for war. He was for holding what we had accomplished by force, if necessary. We were right and should stand by ourselves. Incendiary speakers should be repressed, and their infamous methods put down. As a legitimate fruit of their infamy a foul murder had been committed, instigated by designing villains, who had made tools of the negroes. He wanted, in the resolution, the name of the murdered man, so that the whole world should know our grievance. His name was Dewees Bolton; a pure man and good citizen.

"M. M. Felder said we should be cool and act coolly, and counseled holding on to the victory.

"Al. M. Felder said wesiteful decorrands to the victory.

"W. W. Searcy and L. R. Bryan said the same in substance.

"Judge Kirk said he had served the people for two years; had tried to act impartially, and had done his best for their interests; that he had talked to the negroes and thought most of them were on the right side; there were six or seven white men in the county instigating these outrages; he could name seven white men in the county instance at them.

"Joseph Tristram being called up said he fully indorsed the report. H. Hodde said the same in substance, and moved the adoption of the report, which was carried by a rising vote.

"The chairman stated that the precinct committees appointed at the previous meetings were permanent, and would meet again at the call of their chairman, H. Hodde. The meeting then adjourned."

POLITICAL SITUATION BEFORE THE ELECTION OF 1886

The election of 1886 in Washington County, of which Brenham is the principal town, was for county officers, and also for a member of Congress in the district of which Washington formed a part.

As between the two great political 'parties of the country, Republican and Democratic, the voters were divided, according to various estimates, in about the proportion of a Republican majority of from 600 to 1,600, out of an aggregate vote of 5,600.

As between the voters of that county the division between white and colored voters was about 2,800 to 3,100 of whites and about 2,500 to 2,800 of colored. There was a large element of German citizens and voters in that county, namely, 1,900, 1,600 of whom were Republicans, and it is estimated that in a full count of white voters alone the Republicans outnumbered the Democrats by a majority of 300 at least, and probably by 500 or more.

Extracts from the testimony of Florent D. Jodon, esq., Prohibitionist, Lewis R. Bryan, a Democrat, and Stephen A. Hackworth, a Republican, as to the political complexion of Washington County, are herewith appended.

"TESTIMONY OF FLORENT D. JODON (page 167).

"Florent D. Jodon, baving been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"By Mr. Spooner:

"Q. What are you, politically?
"A. I am a Prohibitionist for State officers and an Independent in our county politics. I voted for men on both tickets at the last election.

"Q. Have you ever been a Republican?
"A. Never. Up to 1873 I voted the straight Democratic ticket.
"Q. Were you in the army during the war?
"A. Yes, sir; I was in the Southern army. I voted at the last election for Mr. Duhonay for governor.

"Q. What is the political complexion of Washington County?
"A. Its Republican.

"Q. How long has it been so, to your knowledge?
"A. Ever since I have lived in the county, for twenty years with one exception.

tion.

"Q. What has been the average Republican majority there on the county ticket?

"A. Some of the officers on the county ticket, of course, would be more popular than others, but the average was from five hundred to fifteen or sixteen hundred. Mr. Joe Hoffmann, I believe, got nearly seventeen hundred.

"Q. What is the average, about?

"A. I presume about seven or eight hundred. I have no precise data, but that is my remembrance.

"Q. About how many colored voters are there in the county?

"A. The vote of the county is about equally divided between the whites and blacks, and has been for some time. At one time there was a majority of about two or three hundred.

"Q. What is the total vote of the county?

"A. About fifty-six hundred to fifty-eight hundred votes.

"Q. About one-half colored?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. The colored men, as a rule, are Republicans?

"A. Yes, sir; that is the rule. At the last election they voted solid, almost. The Democratic papers so stated, as I can show by my scrap-book, and that was the fact.

"O. There are a great many Germany in that county are there not?"

"Q. There are a great many Germans in that county, are there not?
"A. Yes, sir; a great many. The Germans have been increasing in number, and the white Americans have been decreasing by moving out for some time. "Lewis R. Bryan, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. What is your full name?
"A. Lewis R. Bryan.

"Q. What is your age?
"A. I am twenty-eight years old.
"Q. Where do you live?
"A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
"Q. How long have you lived there?
"A. I have lived in the town of Brenham about six years, but have lived in Washington County for twenty-four years.
"Q. What is your business?
"A. I am a lawyer.
"Q. What are your politics?
"A. I am a Democrat.
"Q. Have you had any regular Democratic nominations in that county since 1884?

"Q. Have you had any regular Democratic nominations in that county since 1884?

"A. We have not. I will go on and state about that matter, knowing of course what you want, and it will save time. In 1884, just as the other witnesses have stated here, the condition of our county had been, from a few years after the the war up to 1884, a peculiar one. The county had been mainly under Republican rule. I wish to state here that Washington County is a Republican county. It is understood that on a strict party vote on national and State issues the majorities in Washington County range from 600 to 800 or 900 in favor of the Republicans. My recollection is that Garfield got a majority of some 800 votes over General Hancock in 1890, and Blaine's majority was some 600 or 700 over Mr. Cleveland. The statement was made by some one here yesterday that out of 5,500 or 5,600 votes in the county there was usually about 2,500 colored and about 3,000 white. Of the white vote we usually estimate 1,200 or 1,300 as the American vote and about 1,700 or 1,800 as the foreign vote, and in that foreign vote, as we call it, we include the Germans, Polanders, and Bohemians. The Bohemians generally vote the Democratic ticket, and there are about 200 of them.

"The Garmen vote is

The German vote is generally Republican, with the exception of a few old Germans who came there prior to the war. The most of the Germans in our county have come there since the war, and they are generally Republicans. They are these gentlemen we have here with us as witnesses.

"Q. How old are you?
"A. I am in my forty-seventh year.

there.

"Q. What are you politically, a Republican or a Democrat?

"A. I am a Republican.

"Q. What is the total vote, as near as you can get at it, in that county, the avarage total vote?

"A. It is about 5,600, or very near it.

"Q. What proportion of that is colored?

"A. I think about 2,300 or 2,400; I did have the exact figures; I do not know whether I have them here or not.

"Q. Are the colored voters generally Republican?

"A. Yes, sir; generally. There are about 1,700, perhaps, of them that will vote the Republican ticket without scratching the ticket, while there are perhaps 400 or 500 who will vote the Republican ticket, but will scratch it.

"Q. You mean now and then?

"A. Yes, sir.

"O. You think there are about 1,700 who will vote the straight Republican."

"Q. You think there are about 1,700 who will vote the straight Republican ticket?

"A. Yes, sir; about 1.700.
"Q. How many Germans are there in the county?
"A. I think there are about 1,900 German voters.

"Q. What proportion of them vote the Republican ticket ordinarily, if you know?

"A. Well, we count that there are perhaps about 1,600 of those who are Republicans, but they do not always vote the straight Republican ticket; they do a good deal of scratching.

"Q. What has been the usual Republican majority in that county since you have known of its political affairs?

"A. It has ranged all the way from 500 to 2,000 majority. I think in a fair election, where there would be no buildozing, that our majority would be 2,000, about" (pages 215, 216).

In preparation for the election of that year the Republicans presented a full ticket for county officers, and the opposition, under the name of the People's ticket, included the Democrats and such adherents as, for the nonce, could be incorporated with them. The Republican ticket was as follows:

" [Republican ticket.]

"For governor, A. M. Cochran; for lieutenant-governor, Lock McDaniel; for comptroller, J. M. Brown; for land commissioner, A. Zadeck; for attorney-general, C. W. Johnson; for State treasurer. Frank Cleaves; for justice supreme court, W. H. Burkhart,; for superintendent of public instruction, Henry Cline; for Congress, J. D. Rankin; for representative, seventy-second district, Dennis Farr; for representative, seventy-first district, W. H. Blount; for district attorney, twenty-first district, C. C. Lockett; for county judge, Carl Schutze; for county attorney, A. W. Wilder; for district clerk, J. C. Hewitt; for county clerk, C. C. Bryan; for county assessor, Joe Hoffmann; for county collector, William Ehlert; for sheriff, Faul Fricke; for county treasurer, T. J. Lockett; for justice of the peace, precinct No. 4, B. C. Anderson; for constable, precinct No. 4, D. E. Teague; for commissioner, William Holle."

The testimony does not show the whole of the opposition ticket, but for Congressman and the principal local county officers these names were upon that ticket: For Congress, Roger Q. Mills; for county judge, Lafayette Kirk; for county attorney, B. S. Rogers; for county clerk, Hugh M. Lewis; for sheriff, N. E. Dever.

E. Dever.

An effort made at the county election in 1884 to overcome the Republican majority by a combination on the part of the opposition on the canvass of the votes was declared successful. In 1886 the contest was vehement, and the opposition bent upon a desperate struggle with the Republicans for continual supremacy in the county, and for the permanent retention of the offices.

The canvass was conducted with much severity on the part of the opposition, the whole project of its success turning upon preliminary intimidation of the colored voters and violent denunciation of white Republicans as agitators, incendiaries, and dangerous to the peace of the community.

All this might have given no great occasion for public or serious notice had not the grave occurrences of the election itself given importance to these preliminary agitations as leading to them, and as justifying or palliating in the minds of the guilty their crimes on election day.

Out of the testimony as to the traits of the canvass which are above stated, the committee presents some distinct evidence on the subject.

Adam Newell, in the criminal trial of Kirk and others, testified as follows (see page 726):

Adam Newell, in the criminal trial of Kirk and others, tes (see page 726);

"Q. Where did you live in November, 1886?

"A. I don't know nothing about the years.

"Q. Where did you live last year?

"A. In Washington County.

"Q. Do you remember the last election?

"A. Yes, sir; I know when it was.

"Q. Do you know any of these defendants here at the bar?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Which one do you know?

"A. Sligh. I don't know anybody else that I know of.

"Q. Do you know Tolen?

"A. I don't know.

"Q. Do you know Rout?

"A. Yes, sir; I know Joda Rout.

"Q. Is he here?

"A. Yes, sir; yonder.

"Q. State what you know about him, if anything, on the day of the election,

"Q. State what you know about him, if anything, on the day of the election, before or after.

"A. I was not there the day of election."

"Q. Did he talk to you about the election?

"A. Yes, sir; that was my reason for not being there. I met him in Chapel Hill, and he says, 'Adam,' says he, 'we have been after you a long time to vote our way and you would not do it, and the election comes off next week, and you have to vote the way I say or I will kill you.' I said, 'You have been a friend to me and you tell me the way to vote and I will do it.' He said he wanted me to vote for Rogers and the others, and I had heard he said he wanted to kill, and I wanted time to get away; so I promised to vote as he said. I came up here and I went back Tuesday night and hauled in corn for his brother. Rout came along and he asked me who I had voted for. I said I was mighty sorry, but I could not get to vote at all. I let onto him I could not get to vote. I said my son wrote to me from Richmond that he was very sick and that I could not come back in time. He said, 'By God, that is all that saved you, but we beat the election.'"

8. A. Hack worth testifies as follows (see pages 231, 232):
"Q. You made speeches there during the campaign?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did you make any speech during the campaign which was calculated or intended to create any race excitement or prejudice among the negroes against the whites?

"A. N. sir: right to the contrary. All the speeches I made I think were cal-the whites?

"A. No. sir: right to the contrary. All the speeches I made I think were calculated to bring about and keep up a spirit of good feeling between both races. I was as much interested as any white citizen in the country in seeing that done. "Q. You did not make any speech that could be fairly called an incendiary speech?

speech?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Or any speech other than the ordinary Republican speeches in behalf of

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Or any speech other than the ordinary Republican speeches in behalf of your party?

"A. Judge Kirk may have called it an incendiary speech, because it was against him. We showed about the theft of the school fund and made it pretty plain that these stealings had occurred with his knowledge. That was about the most incendiary speech that we had made.

"Q. That is the first we have heard about that. What is there about that? Was it during Judge Kirk's administration?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is it possible? What was there of it?

"A. We got a certificate of the county treasurer. I do not know whether Mr. Hoffmann has it or not. We have the statement here. In the first place, Judge Kirk has charge of the free schools and issues vouchers to the school teachers. These vouchers are signed by him and have his seal of office placed on them, and then the teacher can go and draw his money. There were several forged vouchers found out by the county treasurer. Forged vouchers had been drawn on the county treasurer and had been paid by him, and Judge Kirk's name was signed to those vouchers, and so well signed that even the county treasurer himself believed it was Judge Kirk's genuine signature. The strange feature was that these forged vouchers had the county reasurer, and I told Judge Kirk at several of our meetings about it. He complained of the attack I was going to make on him. I told Judge Kirk that I was going to charge him with the responsibility for the theft of money from the school fund, and that he should defend himself the best he could. We charged that all the way through the canvass, and it is published in Mr. Schutze's paper, and I believe that is another reason why Judge Kirk and his friends were determined he should not go out of office. I should not be surprised if there was quite a large amount of the school fund missing. I think there has a great deal of fraud gone on. But we only know that there was a lot of money stolen by forged vouchers.

"Q. How much altogether?"

"A. Three or four hun

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"Q. That was the topic insisted on?

"A. Yes, sir; that was the only incendiary speech that was made. Judge Kirk got very angry several times, and I suppose he called it 'incendiary.' Well, during the whole canvass they had a certain lot of men, men who were charged with murder, and were under indictment for murder, who went around with them, and those men were armed.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Who do you mean?
"A. I mean Judge Kirk, Mr. Rogers, and the Democrats.
"Q. Were they at your meetings?
"A. Yes, sir; they were at all our meetings with armed men.
"Q. Attended your meetings, Republican meetings?

"Q. Attended your meetings, Republican meetings?

"A. Yes, sir; they would come to our meetings and demand a division of the time.

"Q. Who else beside Judge Kirk did that?

"A. Judge Kirk and Mr. Rogers were the leading men.

"Q. And these armed men with them?

"A. Yes, sir; these armed men were with them.

"Q. How many such men?

"A. I think they generally carried about six or seven men with them.

"Q. How did you know they were armed?

"A. We saw the weapons.

"Q. Revolvers?

"A. Yes, sir; and six-shooters, some of them.

"Q. What sort of men were they?

"A. Some were white and some were colored men; some were under indictment for murder. Mr. John Taylor was one. He did not attend all the meetings, but he attended the meetings held at Chapel Hill precinct. He was under indictment for murder in Washington precinct. and they had another man under indictment for murder, Mr. John Ewing. These men were completely in their power and were ready and willing to do their bidding. At one of the meetings at Cedar Hill one of our men drew a pistol on them and it broke up the meeting. There were a lot or Germans in the meeting, and they withdrew from the meeting and waited until Judge Kirk went away, and we called a meeting, after they had gone, outside of the house, and I made my talk to them there. And at Chapel Hill on another occasion I was informed that pistols were drawn on me while I was on the stand, and I know I was cursed by their bulldozers.

"Q. You mean to say, then, there was something of intimidation among the Democratic leaders prior to election day?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. At Republican meetings?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you divide the time with Judge Kirk at any of those meetings?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you divide the time with Judge Kirk at any of those meetings?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That was compulsory?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. It was demanded?

"A. Yes sir (means and the publican meetings).

"A. Yes sir (means and the publican meetings).

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. It was demanded?
"A. Yes, sir (pages 231, 232).

"On page 232 of my evidence appears another error, in which I am reported to say that at one of the meetings at Cedar Hill one of our men drew a pistol on them and it broke up the meeting. I wish this corrected, for I said that at one of the Republican meetings held at Cedar Hill one of the bulldozers drew a pistol on me, but one of our men prevented him from shooting me, This broke tol on me, but one of our men prevented him from shooting me, This broke up the meeting (page 620).

"Q. Up to the time of the election there were no notices given to Republicans to leave the county?

"A. No, sir; the Democrats felt certain they would beat us without resorting to violence, I think; at least we were unmolested. But perhaps if the Republicans had resented the insults that we often received at these meetings there would have been violence; but we took the insults and went right straight along with our speeches. I believe there was some violence; I came very near forgetting that. On the day we held our Republican convention in Brenham some of Judge Kirk's colored friends came up there and raised a disturbance. They beat one or two colored men over their heads with six-shooters when they came down on the street, and one colored man was fined for carrying a six-shooter, and Judge Kirk very promptly paid his fine for him, so I was informed. There was violence then.

"By Mr. EVARTS:

- "By Mr. EVARTS:

  "Q. What day was this?

  "A. That was on the day when we had our Republican convention. They tried to break it up and prevent us from nominating a ticket. They did that by sending armed colored men there to provoke difficulties. Pistols were drawn there in the convention room by those colored Democrats, and after the convention adjourned some of the colored men came on the streets and were brutally beaten over the head by Democratic freedmen with pistols, and one colored man was arrested by the city marshal, and Judge Kirk would not permit him to be examined on the charge of carrying a pistol on the streets by the city marshal, but took him back in his office, and I understand that Judge Kirk afterwards paid the fine of this negro in the mayor's court (page 237).

J. L. Moore testifies as follows (see page 518):

"Q. You say that the Republicans would have had a large majority in the county if it were not for bulldozing?

"A. Aside from improper influences and bulldozing they might have used against them they would have had a large majority.

"Q. Did not the Democrats carry that county in 1894?

"A. Well, yes, sir.

"Q. Was there any trouble of any kind or any disturbance except at the Chapel Hill poll?

"A. I think there was a good deal of bulldozing, as there generally is when there is an election.

there is an election.

"Q. Do you mean to say that the colored people were bulldozed in 1834?

"The WITNESS. Do you ask me if they were?

"Mr. EUSTIS. You said they were.

"A. I said generally at all elections in Washington County there are more or less improper influences brought to bear on the colored people.

"Q. You used the word bulldozing or intimidation?

"A. Yes, sir; bulldozing?

"A. It is done in various ways; there are a great many colored men who own their own farms, and a great number of them are employed by white people and Democrats. These colored people that the Democrats hire for wages, the male portion of them, as a general rule, are compelled, under threats of losing their positions, to yote the Democratic ticket."

POLLS IN CHAPEL HILL DISTRICT.

In order to appreciate the occurrences in one of the precincts of Chapel Hill at the election of 1886, it is necessary to advert to the transactions at the polls there at the election of 1884.

At that election the ballot-boxes then in the possession of the officers of election, being colored men, were "raided" at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning after the day of election by masked and armed men. Three of these colored officers of election were shot, and one of them died of his wounds, but the other two recovered.

One of these men, by hiding with the ballot-boxes under the table, was able to escape, and the ballots were brought in and counted and returned. No efforts were made apparently to discover or punish the actors in this outrage and to escape, and the ballots were brought in and counted and returned. No efforts were made apparently to discover or punish the actors in this outrage and murder.

In preparation of the election of 1836 Chapel Hill district was divided into three precincts, and one of the polling places was known as Chadwick's Gin. The polls were not opened here at the election of November 2, 1836.

There was a large attendance of colored voters ready and desirous to vote the Republican ticket. Mr. J. M. Nicholson, a white man and a Democrat, and enlisted in the success of the "People's ticket," attended with proper papers and stated his readiness to open the polls if a necessary number of competent men to conduct the election would volunteer. He declined to serve in the number, assigning as an excuse that he was suffering from neuralgia. The voters staid about the polls through the day in the hope of being able to vote. Mr. Nicholson staid there himself through the day.

His statements are that there were not enough men, black and white, competent in intelligence and ability to read and write, to make up the necessary number. The colored men declined to undertake it. There were sundry white men attending there armed. Some colored men had been advised not to take part in the election. Others showed an unwillingness to undertake the conduct of the election unless some white men were in the board.

Apparently the occurrences at the last election were understood by all, and it seems to the committee that there would have been no difficulty in organizing a competent board if the white men had wished it organized and had been willing to share in that duty, but that the colored men were afraid to expose themselves to the perils of the service if unsupported by the participation of white men. The failure to hold the polls at this precinct, the committee thinks, is chargeable to the leaders of the opposition ticket, and in that interest, with the motive to discourage and suppress the Republican vote there, and to the colored Republican

"Q. Did you go to the Chadwick polling place?
"A. I went there that morning."
"Q. What time in the day?
"A. It was soon after 8 o'clock, I suppose; I do not know exactly. It was after 8 when I left home, and it was probably 8.15 when I got there.
"Q. Is that a Republican polling place?
"A. They say it is in the majority.
"Q. Is that the place at which a good many colored Republicans vote?
"A. Yes, sir; there were a good many around there that morning when I passed by there.
"Q. Were the polls open?
"A. No, sir; they were not open.

"A. They were not, I suppose. I passed by there that morning, and they were not open.

"Q. How many colored men were there—voters?

"A. I never counted them. They were lying around there. I suppose between 65 and 70.

"Q. Do you mean to say there were 65 or 70 colored Republicans waiting there to vote?

"A. I suppose so.

"Q. Do you know why that poll was not opened?

"A. I saked, that morning when I got there, some of the boys why they were not voting, and they said that Mr. Knoxson said he was not going to preside over the polls; that they lacked a man, a judge, of having enough. Mr. Charley Lockett was there. He was running for district attorney, and he came to me and said that we could get a man that would preside. I told him maybe so; that I would inquire among the boys; and I asked a man named Jerry Foster, a member of my church, who said he would act, would go in for one; and he went around to see if he could get somebody else, and they said they did not want to go in; they feared something would occur like it had at Chapel Hill two years ago, and Lockett told them that he would stay there with them.

"Q. What had happened at Chapel Hill two years ago?

"A. Three colored men, I believe, got shot there.

"Q. While acting as officers of the election?

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir, they say so. I was not there.

"A. Yes, sir; they say so. I was not there.

"A. Yes, sir; they say so. I was not there.

"A. And these colored men did not want to act that day for fear of a repetition of that outrage, did they?

"A. That is what they said, and I left. I did not stay there more than an hour then. I went off visiting."

Richmond Hayden testified as follows in the trial of Kirk and others (see Richmond Hayden testined as follows pages 698, 699):

"Q. Where do you live?

"A. At Chapel Hill.

"Q. In Washington County?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Where is your voting place?

"A. Chapel Hill is the place.

"Q. Was that the voting place in 1886?

"A. Yes, atr.

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did you have an election at Chadwick's Gin in 1886?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you have an election at Chadwick's Gin in 1886?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. State why you did not; state the facts.

"A. We all met that day—

"(Objected to by defense as irrelevant.)

"A. We all met there at 8 o'clock and went down, intending to vote. Nicholson, the presiding officer, was there; we could get no clerk. Nicholson got the law book and went to the boys and said we might open the poll if we had a mind to. The party objected. Billingsley said he could not write his name, and could not sit up at night to count votes, and we could not get any other man to go on to open vote with. We wanted some white men.

"Q. What white people did you see there in the morning?

"A. I saw Ben Rogers, James Nicholson, Walter Hill, Dan Lockhart, and Dr. Lockhart.

"Q. Were any of these defendants there?

"A. I don't think Sligh was; Joe Bob Rout, and Gergman and Bennett, and Traylor were there.

"Q. Were any of them armed?

"A. I think one of them, Mr. Haire, had a six-shooter.

"Q. Did anybody talk to you about the election that day?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Who talked to you the day before?

"A. Sligh and Rout told me I had better not take part in the election or I would get into trouble. They told me this at church that evening.

"Q. Did he say who would make the trouble?

"A. He did not say who.

"Q. Is that all he said?

"A. I don't remember anything else; Joe Bob Rout, he told me I had better not do anything or I would get into trouble.

"(Objected to by the defense and objection overruled.)

"Q. What did Traylor say?

"A. He took me out to the fence and said that I had better leave here or I might get hurt. Moore was making a speech on the stand at that time. I told him I was doing nothing and had nothing to do with them. He was down at Chadwick's Gin, and they were standing around until about 4 o'clock, and I left them for town. I met some of them going to town.

"Q. Did you try to open the polls?

"A. We tried to get enough men to open them."

"Q. Where was your voting precinct on November 2, 1886?

"A. Chadwick's Gin.

"Q. State now to the court and jury what occurred there that day.

"A. Well, there was a great deal of whites and colored people there; some of them asked me about the clerk, and when I saw so many whites there with pistols I drew back. I heard Baily Whesnat said to Kirkman that if the polls were opened there would be some dead niggers there that night.

"Q. Were the polls opened that day?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Who did you see with the pistols?

"A. I saw Kirkman and Rogers and Herring. Every one had a pistol.

"Q. Were they together or separate?

"A. Sometimes together and sometimes separate. They were there the best part of the day. They went away and came back.

"Q. That was on the 2d of November, 1886?

"A. Yes, sir."

POLLS AT LOTT'S STORE.

This was a strong Republican precinct. The election was quiet and not interfered with. The votes cast for the Republicans were 156, those for the opposition were 33. The latter were all white and Democratic, and the former all Republican. The clerk of the election, a Democrat, after the count, started with a companion to take the ballot and the tally-sheets to Brenham, to make the return there in accordance with his duty. This was on the day after the election, and, as they were nearing Brenham, after dark, three armed and masked men stopped the carriage and demanded, under threats to fire, the surrender of the ballot-box and tally-sheets. The clerk refused to hand over the ballot-box and the armed men took it from the carriage. They then required the delivery of the tally-sheets and the clerk gave them up. The clerk reported this transaction to the county clerk and the judge, both of whom were on the opposition, Lewis and Kirk, but nothing was done about it, and the vote at Lott's Store was thus suppressed. The clerk of the election, Mr. C. P. Spann, states the seizure of the ballot-box as follows:

"TESTIMONY OF C. P. SPANN (pages 7 and 8).

"C. P. Spann, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. What is your name? "A. C. P. Spann.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Where do you reside?
"A. In Washington County, Texas.
"Q. At what place?

A. I was both and exists a Democrat or a Republican?

"Q. What are your politics, a Democrat or a Republican?

"A. I am a Democrat.

"Q. How many election precincts are there in that county of Washington?

"A. I can not tell you how many there are in the county; I think there are about six or seven boxes in that precinct.

"Q. You mean in the precinct that you live in?

"A. Yes, sir.

"By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. Do you call that Lott's precinct?
"A. No. sir: that is Lott's Store.

By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. What is the name of this precinct?
"A. It is called Precinct No. 1.
"Q. How many voting places were there in that precinct?

"Q. How many voting places were there in that precinet?

"A. I think there are six; the one I was at was the fifth, and think there was another one.

"Q. The one you were at was at Lott's Store?

"A. Yes, sir; at Lott's Store.

"Q. Were you one of the officers?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You had a general election there on the 6th of November last?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. An election for what officers?

"A. For county and State officers.

"Q. And for members of Congress?

"A. Yes, sir; for members of Congress also.

"Q. What official function were you called upon to discharge at that election?

"A. I think I was a clerk; yes, I was a clerk. There were three managers and two clerks.

"Q. Are there negro voters in that precinct?

"A. Yes, sir; there are both whites and negroes.

"Q. Be kind enough to state to the committee what proportion of the votes cast at that box were white and what proportion were colored.

"A. There were 189 votes cast altogether; 156 Republican votes and 33 Democratio votes, or what was called votes for the People's ticket.

"Q. What proportion was the white vote to the colored vote?

"A. The votes for the People's ticket, the 33 votes, were all white.

"Q. And the colored men voted the Republican ticket?

"A. Yes, sir; a straight Republican ticket?

"A. Yes, sir; a nade out a tally-sheet and kept an account of the votes.

"Q. Uhon does your election end there; at sundown?

"A. Now many tally-sheets do you make there?

"A. We make three. One the presiding officer keeps, one is delivered to the county olerk, and one to the county judge.

"Q. Who was presiding judge of election? I understand you have such an officer.

"A. Yes, sir; my father was the presiding officer.

"Q. Who was presented as the presiding officer.

"A. Yes, sir; my father was the presiding officer.

"Q. How do you make your return of elections there?

"A. We deliver one tally-sheet and the ballot-box to the county clerk, and another tally-sheet to the county judge.

"Q. Do you have anything to do with the return, with the making of the return?

"Q. Do you have anything to do turn?"

"The WITNESS. Do you mean carrying the box?

"Mr. Spooner. Yes.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. State to the committee what you had to do with that.

"A. I started to carry the box from Lott's Store to Brenham on the 3d of November; I left home, I reckon, about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"Q. Who was with you?

"A. The young man who has just left here, Marshall Booker; I asked him to go along.

"Q. Who was with you?

"A. The young man who has just left here, Marshall Booker; I asked him to go along.

"Q. That was the next day after the election?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. He went with you at your request?

"A. Yes, sir, when we got to Independence, about 10 miles distant, we found that our buggy was broken, and we stopped there and borrowed a hack, and got supper while they were getting the hack ready, and then started on to Brenham, and when we had gotten to 2\(^1\) or 3 miles from Independence we were stopped by three masked men who were armed.

"Q. What time was this?

"A. It was between 8 and 9 o'clock at night, I reckon.

"Q. What time were armed, you say?

"A. Yes, sir; they had two pistols, and a Winchester or shotgun, I could not tell which at night.

"Q. Were they disguised at all?

"A. Yes; they had handkerchiefs tied across the lower part of their faces, and their hats were pulled down over their foreheads.

"Q. Was it a light or a dark night?

"A. As near as I can remember it was a moonlight night. I think it was cloudy, and think they stopped us in a shady lane, which made it almost dark.

"Q. What did they say to you?

"A. One of them stepped out in front of the horses and told us to hold up, and we stopped. I asked him what the meaning of it was, and he said that they wanted the ballot-box. He said he knew I had it, and that it was just as well to give it to him without making any disturbance or having any fuss about it. I told them that they had the drop on me, and that I could not make any resistance; that I would not give it to them, but that they could take it. He said,

'By God, he could do that,' and he just reached his hand into the buggy and took it out. Then he told me he wanted the tally-sheets, and I gave those to him, and he told us then we could drive on.

"Q. Did they ask for anything else?

"A. No, sir, they did not ask for anything else.

"Q. What did you do after that?

"A. I drove right on to Brenham, and got there about 11.30 o'clock at night. It was too late then to report to the county judge or to the clerk, but the next morning I went out and reported the facts to both of those officers.

"Q. To whom did you report?

"A. First I went to the county clerk's office and reported to the clerk, Mr. Lewis, and then I went to the county judge's office and reported to him.

"Q. What did he say?

"A. He said he supposed I could not help it. I told him no; that the men were armed, and I did not propose to run any risk on it."

"A. I live at Independence, Washington County, Texas.
"Q. What is your age?
"A. I am twenty-six years old.
"Q. How long have you lived in Texas?
"A. I have been in Texas thirteen years.
"Q. How long have you lived in Washington County?
"A. Ever since I have been there in the State.
"Q. What is your business?
"A. I am a farmer.
"Q. What are your politics?
"A. Well, I am not a politician by any means. Whenever I vote I mix my vote pretty well; it is owing to the man who is running for office.
"Q. Where did you vote?
"A. At Lott's post-office, which is about 12 miles from Independence,
"Q. Did you have anything to do with the election?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. Did you have anything to do with the ballot-boxes?
"A. I went with Mr. Spann—he asked me to go with him—to Brenham to make his returns.

"A. I went with Mr. Spann—he asked me to go with him—to Brenham to make his returns.

"Q. When was that?

"A. That was on the 3d of November.

"Q. The day after the election?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who is Mr. Spann?

"A. Mr. C. P. Spann is a farmer living there, living close by Lott's post-office.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who is Mr. Spann?

"A. Mr. C. P. Spann is a farmer living there, living close by Lott's post-office.

"Q. Did he have any official connection with the election?

"A. He was one one of the judges.

"Q. What did he ask you to do?

"A. He asked me if I would not go to Brenham with him, as he had to make the returns; and I have a brother living there, and I thought it a very good chance to see him, and so I went.

"Q. Did he have in his custody, do you know, any ballot-box used on election day, while he was going to Brenham?

"Q. Did he take the box along with him?

"A. Yes, sir; he had the box. He had to make the returns.

"Q. Did you go with him?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. He was taking the ballot-box to Brenham, was he?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What happened, if anything, on the way? What time in the day was it that you started?

"A. I suppose when we started it was about 4 o'clock.

"Q. In the afternoon?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What happened, if anything, on the way? What time in the day was it that you started?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What happened, if say thing, on the way? What time in the day was it that you started?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Wo wid you go?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You may proceed.

"A. Yes, sir, at Lott's Store.

"Q. You may proceed.

"A. I put in one of my horses and he put in one of his, and we stopped at Independence. When we got there we lost the tap off the bolt of the single-tree that holds the single-tree to the double-tree.

"Q. It was about sundown when we got there.

"Q. It was about sundown when we got there.

"Q. It was about sundown when we got there.

"A. And we stopped at my brother's to get his hack to go on to Brenham in, and I suppose it was about sundown when we got there.

"Q. How far is Independence from Lott's Store?

"A. Yes, sir; it was on the 3d. When we passed Independence, about 2 miles, I suppose, three armed men came out under the shade of the trees and halted us and told us to hold up.

"Q. What add they say?

"A. Yes, sir; it was on the 3d. When we passed Independence, a "Q. Was each man armed?

"A. Yes, sir; each man was armed and masked, and one said to the other, 'Stand on the opposite side and hold your gun on them.' Mr. Spann says, 'I will not give up the box.' The man said, 'Well, we will have it.' Mr. Spann said, 'If you will, you will have to take it; I will not give it up.' Then one of them said, 'Well, by God, I cantake it.' The box was down in front of us under the seat, right in the front of the hack, and he reached his hand in and took it out. Then he said, 'We want the tally-sheets,' and Mr. Spann put his hand back to get them out, and the man said,' We do not want any disturbance,' Then Mr. Spann pulled them out and handed him one, and he said, 'I think there is another,' and he handed him a second one, and he said, 'I think there is another,' and he handed him a second one, and he said, 'Well, I believe there ought to be another.' Mr. Spann said, 'I have no other.' 'Well,' he said, 'drive on' somewhere, and so we drove on.

"Q. They took the ballot-box, did they?
"A. Yes, sir; they took the ballot-box.
"Q. And the tally-sheets?
"A. Yes, sir,

- "Q. Did they ask for anything besides the ballot-box and tally-sheets?
  "A. That was all they asked for.
  "Q. Did you know who they were?
  "A. No, sir; I did not.
  "Q. Do you know whether they were white men or not?
  "A. No, sir; I can not say whether they were white or black, because they were masked.
  "Q. Were their hands masked?
  "A. I can not say that they were or that they were not.
  "Q. How dark was it?
  "A. The moon was shining, but this was under the shade of the trees.

- "Q. How dark was it?

  "A. The moon was shining, but this was under the shade of the trees.
  "Q. What sort of masks did they have on?
  "A. They had handkerchiefs over their faces and hats pulled down over their foreheads.

  "Q. What did you do then?
  "A. Mr. Spann drove on. We just drove on to Brenham and reported.
  "Q. Who did you report to?
  "A. To Hugh Lewis, the county clerk, and to Judge Kirk, the judge of that county.

- "A. To Hugh Lewis, the county clerk, and to Judge Kirk, the judge of that county.

  "Q. Do you mean this gentleman who is here [indicating]?

  "A. Yes, sir; I believe he is county judge. I do not know.

  "Q. What did you report to him?

  "A. We reported that we were halted by three masked men and that the ballot-box was demanded of us.

  "Q. What did he say?

  "A. I do not know what he said now.

  "Q. Do you know the proportion of colored and white voters in that precinet?

  "A. No, sir; I do not.

  "By My Everys.
- - "By Mr. EUSTIS:

  - "Q. You say you voted at Lott's post-office precinct?
    "A. Yes, sir,
    "Q. Was it or not a quiet and orderly election at that precinct?
    "A. Yes, sir; it was so.
    "Q. Was there any disturbance of any kind at that precinct?
    "A. Not a particle.
    "Q. Was there any intimidation of any kind towards any voters?
    "A. No sir.

- "Q. Was there any intimidation of any A. No, sir.

  "A. No, sir.

  "Q. Everybody voted freely and as he wanted to?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Were you at Lott's Store during the whole day until the polls closed?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. If any voter at that precinct wanted to vote the Republican ticket, could he not do it with freedom and without molestation just the same as any Democrat would do?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Mr. Eustis, That is all I desire to ask."

  THE POLLS AT GRABALL'S.

This was a strong Republican precinct and the colored people were there some 5 to 1 of the whites. The election proceeded quietly, and while the count was going on, and it had been ascertained that the votes cast were 347 and they had counted and strung all the votes but 95, which were still in the ballot-box, three armed and masked men entered the room, called the judges to "hold up," and at the point of the pistol seized the ballot-box, the string of votes, and one of the tally-sheets. The ballot-box they carried away, and while still in the room they tore up the votes and the tally-sheet they seized. The tally-sheet which one of the judges had retained was carried to Brenham and delivered to the county judge, Lafayette Kirk. There is some indistinctness, from conflict and obscurity in the testimony, as to the exact state of the polls.

The committee, however, thinks that there was a majority of something like 100 for the straight Republican ticket among the votes strung, and that all ballots remaining in the box were Republican. Not long before the "raid" upon the ballot-box, a prominent Democrat had entered the room and conferred with one of the Democratic judges, and read a note to him and left it with him, the contents of which the committee was not able to ascertain. The manner in which the seizure of the votes and the ballot-box was made is shown in the testimony, as follows:

  "Q. How old are you?

  "A. I will be twenty-four in about the 8th of March, coming.

  "Q. Where do you live?

  "A. In Washington County, Texas.

  "Q. How long have you lived there?

  "A. I was raised there; all my life.

  "Q. What do you do for a living?

  "A. I am farming.

  "Q. Are you a married man?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. What are you in politics, a Republican or Democrat?

  "A. I am a Republican.

  "Q. At what polling place do you vote?

  "A. At Graball's.

  "Q. Were you there at the election on the 2d of November last?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Do you know how many votes were cast at that polling place?

  "A. Three hundred and forty-seven.

  "Q. About how many of that number were Republican, and how many of the People's ticket?

  "A. I think there were about 69 for the Democratic ticket.

  "Q. By that you mean the People's ticket which was running at that time?

  "A. I mean the Democratic ticket.

  "Q. And the rest were Republican votes, were they?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. How many of these Republican votes, were they?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. How many of these Republican votes were colored votes?

  "A. I suppose all the rest remaining were colored Republicans tickets.

  "Q. Do you mean to say that the most of the Republicans who voted at that precinct were colored men?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. The white men were Democrats, generally?

  "A. Well, some few colored voted in with them. It amounted to about 60 tickets.

  "Q. That is, the white and colored Democrats amounted to 60 tickets? "A. Well, some few colored voted in with them. It amounted to abotickets.

  "Q. That is, the white and colored Democrats amounted to 60 tickets?

  "A. Yes, sir; and those scratched, too.

  "Q. And the others were straight Republicans?

  "A. Yes, sir; right straight through.

  "Q. Were you one of the officers of that election?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. What were you?

  "A. Judge.

- "Q. Presiding judge?
  "A. No, sir.
  "Q. One of the side judges?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. What happened at that election?
  "A. Well, the box was taken.
  "Q. Tell us all about it in your own way; what time of the day it was and all about it.
  "A. I could not exactly tell the hour, but it was two or three hours before "A. I could not exactly ten the block day.

  "Q. Do you mean after the polls closed?

  "A. Oh, no, sir; it was way after the polls was closed; it was past midnight. I mean about two hours and a half, I think, before day.

  "Q. The election went along quietly all day?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Then after the polls closed you took a count of the votes?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Who were the officers with you there that day?

  "A. Ed. Brown was one.

  "Q. Was he colored?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Who else?

  - "A. Ed. Brown was one.
    "Q. Was he colored?
    "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. Who else?
    "A. Ben Aubrey.
    "Q. Was he colored?
    "A. No, sir: he was white.
    "Q. A Republican or Democrat?
    "A. A Democrat.
    "Q. Was he a white man or a colored man?
    "A. A Democrat.
    "Q. Who else?
    "A. There was Paul Connell.
    "Q. Was he a white man or a colored man?
    "A. A white man.
    "Q. And a Democrat?
    "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. Who else?
    "A. There was Butcher; his first name I am not acquainted with.
    "Q. Was he a colored or a white man.
    "Q. And a Democrat?
    "A. He was a white man.
    "Q. And a Democrat?
    "A. Well, he said he didn't vote for nobody; that was what he said.
    "Q. Who else was there?
    "A. Well, he said he didn't vote for nobody; That was what he said.
    "Q. There were only two colored men, then, on that board?
    "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. You and Ed. Brown?
    "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. You and Ed. Brown?
    "A. Yes, sir.

  - "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. And the other three were white men and Democrats?
    "A. Yes, sir.
    "Q. What time did you commence counting the votes—when the polls closed?

  - "A. Yes, sir.

    "Q. And you kept counting until 3 o'clock in the morning?

    "A. Yes; until about 3 o'clock in the night.

    "Q. Had you finished the count at that time?

    "A. You sir.
- "A. No, sir.

  "Q. What made the count so slow?

  "A. Well, we were going along, and Mr. Connell he stated that it would be best to pick out the Democratic tickets and People's tickets, you know—those that were marked—and then after that we would tally by fives. He said that
- that were marked—and then after that we would tally by fives. He said that we would get along faster.

  "Q. So you went through all the ballots and picked out the Democratic or People's ticket, and then picked out the Republican tickets.

  "A. Yes; we were on them.

  "Q. You were picking them out?

  "A. We had done tallied up these Democratic or People's tickets.

  "Q. Had you began to tally the Republican tickets?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. But had not finished them?

- "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. But had not finished them?

  "A. No, sir.

  "Q. Then what happened?

  "A. Well, the box was taken.

  "Q. Then what happened?

  "A. I don't know, sir; but there were some white men who took it.

  "Q. Did the men come into the room?

  "A. Yes, sir,

  "Q. Well, tell us about it. How many men?

  "A. Mr. Calloway, he brought in a note and called Mr. Connell away.

  "Q. Well, tell us about it. How many men?

  "A. Mr. Calloway, he brought in a note and called Mr. Connell away.

  "Q. Who was Mr. Calloway?

  "A. Mr. Milton Calloway.

  "Q. Was he a Democrat?

  "A. I do not know.

  "Q. Was he a white man?

  "A. Yes, sir,

  "Q. Mr. Connell went out then, did he?

  "A. Yes, sir; off on the back—well, fully as far, I suppose, as it is to that map at the side of the room [indicating].

  "Q. Then what happened?

  "A. Then he read a note to him.

  "Q. Then Calloway read a note to Connell?

  "A. Yes, and Mr. Connell then called Mr. Butcher and read it to him, and then brought it back and laid it on the table.

  "Q. Did you see it?

  "A. Yes, il was looking at it, but I didn't get to read it.

  "Q. Did you read any of it?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Did you read any of it?

  "A. Nes, sir.

  "Q. What prevented your reading it?

  "A. He taken it up and put it in his pocket.

  "Q. Did he jerk it away?

  "A. Well, he raised up that way [indicating] and just held it up and put it in his pocket.

  "Q. So you had no chance to read it?

- his pocket.
  "Q. So you had no chance to read it?

- "Q. So you had no chance of "A. No, sir."
  "A. No, sir."
  "Q. What happened then?
  "A. About a half hour after that three men came in and taken the tickets.
  "Q. What was their appearance; how did they look?
  "A. They had something over their faces, a kind of mask,
  "Q. What sort of hats did they have on?
  "A. One had on a large white hat and the other two had on small hats.
  "Q. How were they dressed?
  "A. I never noticed their dress. I just looked at them and saw that they were masked. "A. I never noticed then a...

"Q. And took the box away from him?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Were all the ballots in the box?
"A. No, sir; I had strung a right smart of them.
"Q. There were some ballots in the box?
"A. Oh, yes, sir.
"Q. How many?
"A. There were about 96.
"Q. And they were all Republican ballots, were they not?
"A. Yes, sir; every one right through.
"Q. What did they do with the box?
"A. They carried it out of doors.
"Q. Did these gentlemen, these Democrats, protest at all or say anything; that is, Mr. Connell or Mr. Butcher? What did they say or do?
"A. When they taken the box, at the time they taken the box, they just disappeared outside of the door, you know, and Mr. Connell he laughed and said, Boys, what are you going to do; I wish they had come in about two hours and a half ago and taken the box. I knowed they were going to do it, anyhow."
"Q. Who said that; Mr. Connell?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. You say he laughed?
"A. Yes, sir, he laughed, and then jumped up and went right out as though he was going home.
"Q. That was the end of that election?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. What became of the ballots?
"A. They took those, too. I had those, and they taken those too.
"Q. Did you have any tally-sheets?
"A. They took those, too, they taken everything.
"Q. Did they have horses, do you know?
"A. I did not see them with any horses.
"Q. You never saw those ballots any more?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. You sever saw those ballots any more?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. What became of them?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. What hecame of them?
"A. They took those, too; they taken everything.
"Q. Did they have horses, do you know?
"A. I did not see them with any horses.
"Q. You never saw those ballots any more?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. How here them with any horses.
"Q. You never saw those ballots any more?
"A. Yes, sir; Henry Gardner, and Wright, and a good many m there.

"Q. They were not there when this thing occurred, were they?

"A. He told me that after they had taken the box (he was living at father's) how they went down the road.

"Q. Had there been some shooting before this box was taken?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. How long before this box was taken?

"A. That was in the first part of the night.

"Q. They had frightened most of the colored people away from the polls, had they not?

they not?

"A. Well, when I got out there were not many. I don't know whether they ran them off or what.

"Q. How long before the morning was it when these men came into the room?

"A. It was about two and a half hours before daylight.

"Q. What justice's precinct, if you know, was this Graball polling place in?

"A. It is precinct No. I at Graball.

"Q. Was that the strongest Republican precinct in the county, do you know?

"A. I do not know. I thought that Brenham was the strongest.

"Q. It was the largest colored precinct in the county?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That is to say, it was the principal colored precinct of the county?

"A. Oh, yes, sir.

"Q. You heard of other ballot-boxes being raided that day or night, did you not? not?

or "A. Yes, sir.
"Q. At Flewellen's?
"A. Yes, sir; at Flewellen's.
"Q. And you heard of the ballot-box and tally-sheets from Lott's Store being

"A. Yes, sir; I heard about that.

"A. Yes, sir; I heard about that.

"Q. These things only happened at that election in the colored precincts?

You did not hear of any such a thing happening in any of the white precincts?

"A. No, sir" (pages 50-55).

E. B. Brown (colored), having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Where do you live?
"A. In Washington County, in the State of Texas.
"Q. What is your age?
"A. I am about forty-five years old.
"Q. How long have you lived in Washington County, Texas?
"A. In Washington County I have lived twenty-one years. I went there in the spring of 1866. "A. In Washington County I have lived twenty-one years. I went there in the spring of 1866.

"Q. How long have you lived in Texas?
"A. Altogether about twenty-six or twenty-seven years.
"Q. What is your business?
"A. Farming.
"Q. Do you own land there?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. At what polling place do you vote?
"A. At Graball.
"Q. Did you attend the general election held there on the 2d of November last?

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Were you one of the officers of the election?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. What position did you hold there?
"A. I was a clerk.

"Q. Just tell the committee all about that in your own way; describe everything that happened.

"A. Well, we counted on up until we got up to that amount, and then three men walked in.

"Q. Did anybody come in there before anybody came and took the ballot-box? "A. Yes, sir; we had a heap of passing in.

"Q. Was any note sent in there?
"A. Yes, sir; Mr. Calloway, Mr. Milton Calloway.
"Q. What is he—a Democrat?
"A. Yes, sir."
"Q. Well, what about him?
"A. He brought in a note there and called two of the officers from the table.
"Q. Were they white or colored men?
"A. He called two of the white ones from the table, about as far as from here to those chairs [indicating]. We had a nice, big lamp in there, and we could see very well, and he was reading it off to them secretly. I don't know what was in it.
"Q. He was reading in a low tone of reviews."

"A. He called two of the white ones from the table, about as far as from here to those chairs [indicating]. We had a nice, big lamp in there, and we could see very well, and he was reading it off to them secretly. I don't know what was very large to the was reading in a low tone of voice?

"A. Yes, sir; he whispered it, so that I didn't know what he said.

"Q. Did one of those men bring that note and lay it down on the table?

"A. Yes, sir; he whispered it, so that I didn't know what he said.

"Q. Did one of those men bring that note and lay it down on the table?

"A. Yes, sir; Mr. Butcher; he could not see good there in the rear of the table; he gaye it to him, and he brought it before him just so [indicating], and spread it out and looked at it, and I was sitting like that gentleman there indicating], and he was sitting at the head of the table, just as I am here, and looking down at it, and I sort of peeped at it; I wanted to get a chance to look at it, I don't generally do such things, but I looked that way, and he catched my eye, like, and he folded it up nicely and put it in his pocket.

"Q. You did not see it?"

"A. No, sir; I never got to see what was in it. About half an hour after that the box was taken.

"Q. Tell us about that.

"A. Three white men came there.

"Q. How were they dressed?

"A. All three were dressed? rretty much alike, in black suits, and had their control of the seed of t 12, a few minutes before 12, and I lived about a mile and a half from the voting place.

"Q. Was it done by masked men?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you see them?

"A. Yes, sir. I saw two of them. Two of them came in the room where we were counting the votes, and there was a third one, but he didn't come into the room; he stood in the door and never came any further than the door. But two of them came in the room.

"Q. Have you ever formed any impression as to who those two men were?

"A. I could not positively say who they were; I could not tell from the way they were masked. That is, I could not swear to them who they were.

"Q. I know, but I speak of your impression?

"A. Well, the only suspicious looking characters that I saw about there that day were two men from Brenham who were trying to control the vote.

"Q. Who were they?

"A. The name of one of them was Lockett, and the other was Gilder; Ed. Lockett and Lonny Gilder. They were officiating around there that day, pretty much all day.

"By Mr. TELLER:

By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. You say Lockett was one; who was the other?

"A. Ed. Lockett and Lonny Gilder. They were trying to influence some people to vote.

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. To vote which ticket?

"A. They were trying to influence them to vote their way.

"Q. Which way is that?

"A. They were Republicans.

"Q. What is the character of those men; their general reputation?

"A. I am not very well acquainted with either of them, but from what I could learn about them they are a sort of hangers-on around the county seat at Brenham. They are not competent to fill an office, or the people haven't confidence in them to put them in, but it seems that they promised them a divide in their salary if they will officiate around and control the ignorant people enough to get their ticket through.

"By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. You are telling something you have heard; you don't pretend to know it?
"A. I only hear this. I saw them there officiating around.
"Q. But you heard they had agreed to divide with them; you do not know it?
"A. No, sir; I have only heard that,

"Q. You do not pretend you know anything about that?

"A. No, sir; I do not know it, but that is what I have heard. I know they were there officiating around that day.

"By Mr. Eusris:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. Did you hear anybody say that two of those masked men were Lockett and Gilder?

"A. No, sir; I never heard any one say so; but, as I say, they were officiating around there all day, and I understood afterwards they were at Mr. Flewellen's, which is the next voting box from our precinct, and the next morning as soon as I could get to Brenham to make the report of what had happened at our box, before I got out of the vehicle that I drove there in, these two men were the first two men who met me that I knew, and they asked me what was the news down in our part of the neighborhood, and I told them what was the news, that the box was captured and a young man had been killed at the other voting place; and they asked me several questions concerning the election and then left me, and I never have seen or heard of them since, and it seemed as though they must be guilty of something or they would not have left the country.

then left me, and I never have seen or heard of them since, and it seemed as though they must be guilty of something or they would not have left the country.

"Q. Had you any intimation whatever that this box would be raided?

"A. No, sir; I did not; it was all a surprise to me. At the time the box was taken there was a negro that was on the ground that day with a lunch-stand that I was well acquainted with and I had sent out for him to bring us in some coffee, and there were two of them came in with it, and one staid in while the other stepped back to get some sugar to sweeten the coffee, and about the time that he passed out at the door this party came in. We had had the door fastened previous to these black people coming in with the hot coffee, and when we unfastened the door to let them in, as this one went out to get the sugar he had forgotten it, this party of masked men stepped in, and I was not looking towards the door until some one hollered, 'Look out!' This was in the front room of the house of our neighborhood physician, we were counting the votes. I attempted to make my escape into the back room with the box, and one of them hollered, 'Look out,' and as I looked around the end of a pistol touched me on the end of the nose, and he taken the box and also grabbed the tickets that were strung. We strung these tickets as we counted them, and he grabbed them and tore them all to pieces, scattered them all over the floor, and went off with the box. "Q. He took it from you?"

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is that a Republican precinct?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Pretty strongly Republican, is it not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What proportion do you say are Democrats, or those who vote the People's ticket there usually?

"A. As I say, the black people are five to one in that precinct, but at the last election and the one previous to this last election, they were tolerably well divided" (pages 333-335).

THE POLLS AT FLEWELLEN'S AND YOUNG BOLTON SLAIN IN THE ACT OF "RAIDING" THE BALLOT-BOX.

At about 12 m. of election day Kirk, who was a candidate for county judge on the People's ticket, sent a telegram from Brenham to D. D. Bolton, at Courtney, near Graball's, who was on the same ticket as county commissioner, in these near Graball's, who was on the same ticket as county commissioner, in these words:

"Things here look doubtful. Do your work."

There had been an agreement the day before for the conveyance of information as to the look of the voting. D. D. Bolton received this message at dusk and showed it to his son, Dewees Bolton, and on starting for his home, not distant, directed his son to come with him, and he did so. Graball's is 4½ miles miles from Flewellen's. The latter polls was a strong Republican and colored voting place.

The election was quietly conducted and the officers were engaged in counting the votes when Kirk came in, inquired how the votes were running, looked at the tally-list, which had been counted up to 69 out of about 159 votes, and looking over the tally-sheet on the table, called out, "Jimmie Hewitt 43, and Charlie Herbst 19." These were Hewitt, colored, Republican, and Herbst, Democrat, opposing candidates for district clerk. Kirk called the presiding judge, white and Democrat, Robinson, out of the room, and after a few minutes Robinson returned alone. They went on with the count and in about half an hour a knocking was heard upon a closed door, and upon its being repeated, an answer was made from the room, "Come in." The door was opened from without, whether by force or not seems uncertain, and three men, armed and disguised, presented their pistols and some or one of them called out "Held up" or "Hands up" and demanded the ballot-box.

The foremost man in entering turned out to be young Bolton. There were several colored men in the room, unarmed and peaceable; but one of them, Polk Hill, passed out of the room, through a door opposite that at which the entrance was asked, into a gallery where there were some shotguns. Instantly upon the demand of the ballot-box at the point of the pistol, a shotgun was fired from the gallery through the partly open door, and young Bolton fell dead across the threshold, his pistol falling at his feet. He was disguised in a yellow waterproof, called a "slicker," covering his body, and a white handler-chief covering the face below the eyes, knotted behind his neck. All in the room fled at once in dismay, and the dead man was left alone, uncared for, as he lay, all night, the lamp burning brightly.

Towards morning Presiding Judge Robins

"TESTIMONY OF T. M. JONES.

"T. M. Jones (colored), having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. What is your name?
"A. T. M. Jones.
"Q. Where do you live?
"A. I live in Washington County, Texas.
"Q. At what place in the county?
"A. Whome is in Brenham, just outside of the corporation, but my work is in the country; that is where my work is—school-teaching.

"Q. You are a school-teacher?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. What is your age?
"A. My age is twenty-three.
"Q. How long have you lived in Washington County?
"A. All my days—for the last twenty-three years.
"Q. In what precinct were you a voter on the last election, on the 2d of November?
"A. I voted in Justice's precinct No. I.

"A. I voted in Justice's precinct No. 1.

"Q. Were you an officer of the election?

"A. I was clerk of the election.

"Q. At that poll?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. On the 2d of November last?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is in the black district, or black belt, as it was called?
A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That is in the black district, or black belt, as it was called?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. When you had partially completed the count, what occurred?
"A. Some men entered the house; I do not know how many there were. They came into the house and had on these long yellow rubber coats. I don't know what time of the night it was.
"Q. Were they all of them dressed in rubber coats?
"A. I can not tell you, but I am sure one of them was.
"Q. How many came in?
"A. I could not tell you. It seared me and I could not tell you how many there were or whether they were all dressed that way or not.
"Q. Were they armed?
"A. I am sure one of them was. I could not identify but one who was armed.
"Q. Were they in disguise at all?
"A. Yes, sir, partly; with handkerchiefs tied across here [indicating across the face].

"A. Yes, sir, partly; with handkerchiefs tied across here [indicating across the face].

"Q. How many do you think there were of them?

"A. I could not tell."

"Q. Were there more than two?

"A. Yes, more than two; about three, I suppose.

"Q. What time in the evening was this?

"A. It was something past Il o'clock.

"Q. What time il you were all there counting the votes?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What did they do; how did they get in; did they force their way in?

"A. They came up to the door and knocked on the door once, and at that time one of the men in the room walked out of the door, and then Mr. Robinson said, 'There goes one man after his shotgun'—in that tone of voice; and that time the second knock came on the back door; Mr. Robinson said, 'Come in;' and then they turned the button of the door and pushed it open and came in, and one presented a pistol and said something, but I could not tell you what it was, because the handkerchief was tied over his mouth; but he put his pistol down in that way [indicating]. I ran out of the same door they came in.

"Q. Did you strike one of them as you were going out?

"A. Yes, sir; I was stooping to go out, and I butted one of them in the stomach, the one that was the foremost one coming in.

"Q. Did he strike you when you did that?

"A. Yes, sir; just as I stooped to go out and butted him he struck me on the back with something hard. I suppose it was the handle of a pistol. I felt it strike me in the back.

"Q. Do you remember anything they said; but they said either 'hold "A. Yo, sir; I don't remember anything they said; but they said either 'hold strike me in the back.

"Q. Do you remember anything they said?

"A. No, sir; I don't remember anything they said; but they said either 'hold up' or 'hand up.' I couldn't tell you exactly which words they used.

"Q. What did they do?

"A. I could not tell what they did, because I was outside.

"Q. Did you go back again?

"A. No, sir; I did not go back into the house. Immediately after I got out of the door I heard two shots fired in quick succession.

"Q. Do you know what became of the ballot-box or the ballots?

"A. No, sir; I do not.

"Q. Did any one call there half an hour before this occurrence?

"A. Yes, sir; I could not tell whether it was half an hour or not, but it was some time before that.

"Q. Who was it?

"Q. Who was it?
"A. Judge Kirk came in before that occurred.
"Q. Tell as hear as you can how long it was before these men came there.
"A. Well, just before Judge Kirk came in—a few minutes before he came "A. Well, just before Judge Kirk came in—a few minutes before he came in—

"Q. Do you mean this gentleman here [indicating]?
"A. Yes, sir. Before he came in Mr. Calls asked me for my watch-key to wind up his watch, which had run down, and I took out my watch and held it in my hand and told him to take the watch-key and wind up his watch. But my key would not fit his watch, and he asked me what time it was and I told him it was a quarter past 10, I think, or three-quarters past 10; I think it was forty-five minutes past 10; and I suppose it was about a quarter of an hour from that time until Judge Kirk came in.
"Q. That would make it about II o'clock?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. What did he come there for?
"A. I do not know. He came in and asked, 'How is things going, boys?' and

"Q. What did he come there for?

"A. I do not know. He came in and asked, 'How is things going, boys?' and one of the officers said, 'We can't tell how things are going.' He said 'You can give an idea of the count; let me see how Hewitt and Herbst are running;' and he turned the tally-sheet on the table that Calls had and said, 'Jim Hewitt 43 and Charlie Herbst 19.'

"Q. Who was Jim Hewitt?

"A. He was the colored man running on the Republican ticket for district clark.

"A. He was the colored man running on the Republican ticket for district clerk.

"Q. And the other man was the People's candidate for the same office?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You say Judge Kirk looked over them and took note of the count as to those two officers?

"A. Yes, sir: he said 'Jim Hewitt 43 and Charlie Herbst 19.

"A. Yes, sir: he said 'Jim Hewitt 43 and Charlie Herbst 19.

"A. Yes, sir: he went to a bed where one of the gentlemen was lying—Mr. Rogers—and shook him and talked to him, and then came on back to where Mr. Robinson was at the table; that is, beside the table.

"Q. Who went out with Judge Kirk—anybody?

"The WITNESS. Do you mean when he started out?

"Mr. Spooner. Yes,

"The WITNESS. Yes, sir. When he started out he said, 'Robinson, let me see you a minute;' and Robinson said, 'I haven't time: I am busy.' Then he said, 'I only want to speak to you a few minutes.' So Robinson went out and spoke to him about a minute or two.

"Q. He went outside?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. How long after Judge Kirk's visit to the polls and his examination of the list was it before these gentlemen made their appearance with the pistols and disguise?

"A. Yes port tall exactly, but I grees it was about half an hour. I suppose it and disguise?

"A. I can not tell exactly, but I guess it was about half an hour; I suppose it was.

"Q. Did Jadge Kirk say anything about having been at Graball's?

"A. Yes, sir. Some one, I can not remember who it was, asked him was he from Brenham, and he said, 'No, not exactly.' They said, 'How is things at Graball's? and he said, 'Graball's sall right.'

"Q. You never went back to complete that count?

"A. No, sir; I did not.

"Q. Have you heard anything about whether it was completed?

"A. No, sir; I have not heard.

"Q. Did you hear anything about what became of the ballots or ballot-box that were taken away by these men?

"A. I could not say; I have not heard. I have heard many rumors, but it is not worth while to state them, for I do not believe hardly anything I hear.

"Q. Did all these men leave the room?

"A. I do not know. I was the first to leave, I believe, because I was nearest the door.

"Q. Robinson was the presiding judge?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was he a Democrat or a Republican?

"A. I do not know. I was not much acquainted around there.

"Q. He was a white man, was he not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was he the one who said, 'There goes a man for his shotgun?'

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did he say that in a loud or a low tone of voice?

"A. I a tolerably loud tone of voice, I believe; he spoke out tolerably loud.

"Q. How did he happen tosay this?

"A. I could not tell you. By the man's going out the door; that is the only reason I could say.

"Q. Did you hear these men in the alley at that time?

"A. Yes, sir. When they maked up on the gallery all stopped writing immediately, and as they walked up and shook the door this man went out.

"Q. You have heard, have you not, that this ballot-box was carried away at that time, and there was a portico on the front side.

"Q. Did you hear them at the time he made this remark?

"A. Yes, sir. When they walked up on the gallery all stopped writing immediately, and as they walked up and shook the door this man went out.

"Q. You have heard, have you not, that this ballot-box was carried away at that time, and there wore and that contradicted, have you?

"Mr. Ensyris! I

that time, and that the votes cast at that polling place were not counted?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And you have not heard that contradicted, have you?

"Mr. EUSTIS. I submit that that is hardly evidence.

"Mr. FELLEE. I think it is perfectly proper to show that an armed body of men came in and the judges ran away, and to show what the report is about; whether such is the public rumor or not.

"Mr. SPOONER. I will not press it. [To the witness:]

"Q. In counting, were these mostly Republican tickets as far as you had counted?

"Q. In counting, were these mostly Republican tickets as far as you had counted?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Straight tickets?

"A. A few of them were scratched.

"Q. How did you count them, in tens?

"A. We started to count them in tens first. We made two tallies first,

"Q. Did you count slowly or rapidly?

"A. Right slowly; tolerably slowly.

"A. Right slowly; tolerably slowly.

"A. I do not know exactly, but we started to count about 7 o'clock, as near as I can reckon.

"Q. And had only counted 69?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Most of them straight Republican tickets, as you say?

"A. Yes, sir.

"By Mr. Eustrs:

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. Do you know a man named Polk Hill?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was he at that precinct that night?

"A. Yes, sir; he was.

"Q. Is he a white or a colored man?

"A. He is a colored man.

"Q. Did you see him there at that precinct that night?

"A. Yes, sir; I saw him there.

"Q. Was he armed?

"A. I do not know whether he was or not. I saw him sitting in the house. He did not have any gun in the house with him. I did not see him with a gun.

"Q. You testified before the coroner's inquest about the killing of Bolton, did you not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You said there, 'I know that Polk Hill had a gun on the ground.'

"A. During the day he had one, but I did not see him with one that night. He may have had one home; I could not tell you. I know he came there with one that day when he voted.

"Q. What time did he come there?

"A. I think it was about 12 o'clock.

"Q. He came with a gun?

"A. Yes, sir; with a shot-sack hanging across his shoulder.

"Q. Who were present outside that night? Do you remember seeing Shad Felder?

"A. He was not outside. Those I saw on the inside were Polk Hill, Shad Felder? Felix Kinlaw, and Stewart Jones.

Felder?

"A. He was not outside. Those I saw on the inside were Polk Hill, Shad Felder, Felix Kinlaw, and Stewart Jones.

"Q. What were they doing there?

"A. They were sitting down on a long bench in the house.

"Q. Were they white or colored men?

"A. Colored men.

"Q. Do you know they were not armed?

"A. I do not know, sir. I did not see them with a gun; that is, they did not have it in there. In fact, I was so busy I did not notice any one in the house. But I know I saw some of them with a gun that day, I saw Polk Hill have a gun that day, and whether he had one that night or not I can not say.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Who else did you see with a gun?
"A. Let me see; did I see any one else. [Pausing.] Probably I did, but I can not remember. It has been a good while.

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. Don't you know that Shad Felder, Andy Hayes, Alfred Jones, and some others, colored men, were there that night, and had arms within their reach if not on their persons?

"A. No, sir; I do not know that. I did not inquire into the matter.

"Q. And that they had come there armed?

"A. No, sir; I did not know it; I did not know that any one at all had come there armed, in fact, because I did not think of such a thing, because I was in the house all day and didn't know anything that was going on outside.

"Q. What made you so frightened merely because a man came there into the room?

"A. Well, I know when they came, I remember that one of the men, I can not remember who it was—Calls or Robinson, one, spoke of it—of the men coming in during the day, and he said, 'Suppose somebody should come in on us like they did at Chapel Hill.' He said, 'There would be hell to pay;' just in that language. He spoke of it twice.

" By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. You say this was Robinson who said that?
"A. It was Robinson or Calls; I can not say which. But that frightened me; was scared all the evening.

" By Mr. EUSTIS:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. Who was it that was killed that night?
"A. Mr. Dewees Bolton.
"Q. Who killed him?
"A. I do not know any more than I heard. I heard that Polk Hill said that he killed him; I do not know it; I only heard it.

"Q. Polk Hill is the man whom Robinson alluded to when he said there goes a man for a gun?
"A. Yes; he was the man.
"Q. You said that some of these tickets were scratched?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. In whose favor were they scratched?
"A. I nevertook notice. Some of the Republican tickets were scratched I am sure, and on the People's ticket I noticed that there was one man running, Rankin I think it was, and that was the only name that I noticed on the People's ticket that was scratched.

"Q. Did you notice any scratching in favor of Judge Kirk?
"A. Yes, sir; there were a few Republican tickets scratched in favor of Kirk and Schutze.

"Q. Who did you hear say that Polk Hill killed Bolton?
"A. I could not tell you who I heard say so; I could not tell where it started from.
"O It was a general report?

"A. I count for the from.
"Q. It was a general report?
"A. I do not know about its being general, but I heard several parties say that he made that statement.

"Q. They said that he had made that statement? "A. Yes, sir.

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"Q. Do you remember any of their names?

"A. No, sir; I do not. I do not remember taking note of their names.

"Q. Where did you go when you left that precinct, that house, or polling place?

"A. I went down to my brother's, about 2 miles below, I guess.

"Q. Did you come back?

"A. No, sir; I did not come back.

"Q. Did you come back the next morning?

"A. No, sir; I went on out to where I was teaching school, and a young man named Flewellen came after me; he came on past there; it was not very far from there.

"Q. Where was the inquest held?
"A. At the same place, in the same room.
"Q. Did you not testify there?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. You were present there, then, if you testified?
"A. Yes, sir; I was present there.

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was his father a candidate on the People's ticket at that election for county commissioner?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Where was Bolton shot?
"A. He was shot in that room.
"Q. Was he in disguise when he was shot?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. In what sort of disguise?
"A. I do not know that. When he came into the room I saw a handkerchief tied around his face.
"Q. As he lay dead?
"A. No, sir; I mean when he first opened the door to come in.
"Q. Did you recognize him when he came into the room?
"A. I think I knowed who he was, but I was not positive.
"Q. He was one of the men who came in in disguise?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was he armed, do you know?
"A. Yes, sir, he had a pistol in his hand,

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was it a rainy night?
"A. No, sir; it was not a rainy night.
"Q. Was the water-proof coat for the purpose of disguise; was that what it was put on for?
"A. I do not know.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. What sort of a night was it?

"A. It was a pleasant, moonlight night.

"Q. A warm night?

"A. Yes, sir. I know we had no use for fires in the room, so that it must have been a warm night.

"T. M. Jones (colored), having been recalled, was interrogated, as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"By Mr. Spooner:

"Q. I want to ask you a few additional questions. In connection with this election you recollect three men were hung?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was your brother one of them?

"A. Yes, sir, he was there.

"A. Yes, sir, he was there.

"Q. Where was he?

"The WITNESS. When the shooting occurred?

"Mr. Spooner, Yes,

"A. I do not know, sir. He said he was on the outside one time, but he was not in the house at the time.

"Q. How long before had you seen him—I mean before these men came into the room?

the room?
"A. I remember seeing them here about dark. He came there at that time,

"Q. What did he come there for?

"A. He came for the purpose of bringing me some supper, as I didn't have any dinner that day."

"Q. Was he armed at all?

"A. If he was I didn't know it. I told him to bring me my overcoat and some supper, and if he was armed I did not know it.

"Q. What he came there for was at your request to bring you your overcoat and some suppers.

Some supper, and if he was armed I did not know it.

"Q. Did he own land there?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was he a man of family?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. What was he in politics?

"A. He was a Republican. He never took much stock in politics in any way more than just voting; but he voted the Republican ticket, I remember he said.

"Q. He was a Republican?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. When was he hanged?

"A. On the night of the 2d of December.

"Q. Just a month from this election?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You said yesterday that Mr. Bolton, this man's father, was on two tickets, did you not?

"A. Yes, sir; I think I did.

"Q. Have you any explanation to make about that?

"A. Yes, sir. Yesterday I stated that he was, but since that time I have thought of it and think he was not on both tickets. There was a People's ticket and another diamond-shaped Republican ticket, and he was not on that ticket, I remember. But there was some tickets came in there in the afternoon; who printed them I do not know, and his name was on them.

"Q. It was a bogus ticket for the use of the darkies, wasn't it?

"A. I suppose so (pages 14-23).

"Q. Will you tell the committee what happened there that day? First, what office did you hold in connection with the election?

"A. Yes, sir, I was.

"Q. Presiding judge?

"A. I was one of the pludges of election.

"Q. Presiding judge?

"A. Well, during the day the election went on very quietly and up until about 11 o'clock in the night, when there was some men come in at the back door. They knocked at the door, and there was a man sitting there by the name of Polk Hill, and when they knocked he got up and walked out at the north door, and Mr. Robinson said to them when they knocked the second time, he said, 'Come in', and they threw the door open and came right in, and then got away from my seat to get out of the house, and just before I stepped to the door this man fell that got killed, Mr. Bolion, and staid time there may a gun fired. I had then got away from my seat to get out of the house, and just before I stepped to the door this man fell that got killed, Mr. Bolion, in fired. I had then got away from my seat to get out of the house

"Q. Name the officers first.

"A. Mr. Rogers was there; he was not an officer. The officers were Mr. Robinson, Mr. Calls, Mr. Wright, Tom Jones, and myself.

"Q. How many of you were colored?

"A. Two of us.

"Q. In addition to the officers, who were there?

"A. Shad Felder, Andy Hayes, and Felix Kinlaw. I believe that was all.

"Q. Colored men?

"A. Yes, sir; they were colored men.

"Q. Did you notice these men when they came in?

"A. I did not just as quick as they got in; I did not notice them; I was not thinking anything about it, and did not pay attention to them when they first came in.

thinking anything about it, and did not pay attention to them when they first came in.

"Q. But you saw them after they came in?

"A. Yes, sir; and before they shot.

"Q. Were they in disguise?

"A. They had on handkerchiefs over their faces so that a man could not see their faces, and white hats, and slickers on; large white hats and these slickers on. "A. They had on handkerchiefs over their faces so that a man could not see their faces, and white hats, and slickers on; large white hats and these slickers on, "Q. What do you mean by 'slickers?'
"A. I mean overalls.
"Q. Did you recognize any of them?
"A. No, sir; I was not acquainted with any of the people in that settlement.
"Q. Was the man who was shot the man who demanded the ballot-box?
"A. I could not tell you which one demanded it. They came in abreast. They just threw the door open and every man just filed in.
"Q. You say they were armed?
"A. Yes, sir; they were armed?
"A. Yes, sir; they were armed. I saw three pistols.
"Q. What did they say; anything else except this demand that you surrender the ballot-box?
"A. That is the only word I heard used.
"Q. How long was that before the shooting was done?
"A. Right immediately.
"Q. How many votes were polled there that day?
"A. One hundred and fifty-nine.
"Q. Who had the most, the Republicans or the others?
"A. The Republicans were in the majority.
"Q. How much of a majority about; we do not expect you to give it to a vote, but about how much?
"A. It is just a guess; I can not identify it positively, but I think 85 to 90.
"Q. You mean 85 or 90 Republican majority?
"A. It is just a guess; I can not identify it positively, but I think 85 to 90.
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. This precinct is what is called the 'Black belt' or 'Black district?'
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Do you know whether the votes cast at that polling place were counted at the county seat at that election?
"A. I do not.
"Q. Do you know now who those men were—either of them?
"The WITNESS. The men that came there?
"Mr. Spooner. Yes; the men who came in to raid the ballot-box.
"A. The one that was killed was Dewees Bolton; that was the only one I knew.
"Q. You did not know any of the others?

"A. The one that was killed was Dewees Bolton; that was the only one I knew.

"Q. You did not know any of the others?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Was there any effort made there, that you ever heard of, to detect or discover who they were or to bring them to justice?

"A. No, sir.

nen came in?

"A. They ran out.

"Q. Where are they now?

"A. One of them is dead; he was hung.

"Q. Which was that?

"A. Shadrack Felder.

"Q. Who else was hung; there were three men hung, were they not "A. Yes; a fellow named Ephraim Jones and Alfred Jones.

"Q. Were they there that night?

"A. No, sir. Ephraim Jones was there, but Alfred Jones was not to my nowing.

"A. No, sir. Ephraim Jones was there, but Alfred Jones was not to my knowing.

"Q. When were they hung; about a month later, were they not?

"A. Yes, sir; on the 2d or 3d day of December.

"Q. Who was in the room before these men came in there; did any one come to the room?

"A. Yes, sir; Judge Kirk came in there.

"Q. How long before these men came into the room, these raiders, as I call them; was it before Judge Kirk came there?

"A. As near as I can get at it, it was half past 11 o'clock when he left there.

"Q. When who left there?

"A. Judge Kirk; and about 12 o'clock these men came in.

"Q. Then you think it was about half an hour after Judge Kirk left when these men came in?

"A. Yes; half to three-quarters of an hour.

"Q. Where does Judge Kirk live?

"A. At Brenham.

"Q. Where does Judge Kirk live?

"A. At Brenham from this Flewellen poll?

"A. It is said to be about 15 miles.

"A. At Brenham.

"Q. How far is Brenham from this Flewellen poll?

"A. It is said to be about 15 miles.

"Q. Had Judge Kirk been there about the polls during the day?

"A. Not that I know of.

"Q. You do not remember to have seen him, then, that day or evening until he came into the room?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. What did he want there?

"A. He just came in and asked the boys how they were getting on and how they were running, and taken a look over on the list on the tally-sheet, and mentioned something about some one being—he called the names of some and how they were running, but I never paid much attention to it and I do not recollect them exactly. But I noticed that he looked on the tally-sheet and said something about Charlie Herbst and Jim Hewitt; that Herbst had 18 and Hewitt 44, or something like that; I do not recollect it.

"Q. Who was Hewitt, the colored Republican?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who was the other man, Herbst?

"A. He was a Democrat.

"Q. Wo heard Judge Kirk when he looked over the list speak those names and state the number of votes that each had received?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. As it appeared then on the list?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You had not finished your count then?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You had been counting very slowly during the evening?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You had been counting very slowly during the evening?

"A. Yes, sir, we counted very slowly. We counted some few Republican tickets first, and they were so straight that Mr. Robinson said, 'We will count

"Q. Did any one go out of the room with Judge Kirk?

"A. Yes, sir; Mr. Robinson did.

"Q. How did he happen to go out with him?

"A. The judge told him he wanted to see him a minute.

"Q. Judge Kirk told Mr. Robinson that he wanted to see him a minute?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was that before or after he had examined the poll-list?

"A. I do not recollect; I think it was afterwards.

"Q. Robinson was the presiding judge, was he?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What were his politics?

"A. He said that he did not have time to go out, that he was busy there and could not leave, and he said 'Appoint Rogers.'

"Q. Judge Kirk said that?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That is, to keep that place while he was gone?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. So that after having appointed Rogers, in obedience to Judge Kirk's advice, he went out, did he?

"A. Yes, sir, but he did not appoint Rogers.

"Q. Who did he appoint—anybody?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. But he went out?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did he have conversation in that room with any other officer of the election?

"A. Not that I know of.

"Q. Did he with Mr. Rogers?

"A. He went to the bed where Mr. Rogers was lying down; but I did not notice them.

"Q. Did he hold a whispered conversation with Mr. Rogers. "Q. Did he with Mr. Rogers?

"A. He went to the bed where Mr. Rogers was lying down; but I did not notice them.

"Q. Did he hold a whispered conversation with Mr. Rogers.

"A. If he did I did not see him.

"Q. You do not know that?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Was Mr. Rogers an officer of the election at the polls?

"A. I did not exactly understand it. He was the man who had appointed me as one of the judges, but after that Robinson taken possession, and I do not know who really the head man was.

"Q. Was Rogers either a judge or clerk, or was he connected with the election as an officer at all?

"A. No, sir. I think the box was signed in Rogers's name, but after it got out there he got Robinson to take his place.

"Q. How long after this conversation outside between Robinson and Judge Kirk was it before these gentlemen in masks made their appearance?

"A. It was between half and three-quarters of an hour.

"Q. Have you stated all that happened that you recollect after they came in and before they left?

"A. Yes, sir; that is all I can recollect.

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. I will read you the statement that you made at the coroner's inquest, which was also made under oath, and I will ask you whether it is true or not. [Reading.] 'Testimony of Lewis Pennington, duly sworn. I was one of the judges of election held on the 2d day of November, 1886. The election was going on quietly and orderly. I was busy counting votes when somebody knocked on the door. At the same time Polk Hill got up from his seat and ran to the door. I do not know who did the shooting which took place about 11 o'clock p. m. Outside of the officers of election there were present in the room Chad Felder, Andy Hayes, Felix Kinlaw. And Polk Hill went out of the door.' And upon re-examination you made the following statement: 'Statement of Lewis Pennington, being re-examined. I did not see anybody coming in the door disguised with a pistol in hand. I was sitting close to the fireplace, in plain view of two doors.' Is that statement correct?

"A. No, sir; that is not correct.

"Q. Say in what respect it is not correct.

"A. Well, there was double-barreled shotguns and six-shooters around there until I was naturally afraid to tell the truth.

"By Mr. Spooners."

"By Mr. SPOONER: "Q. You mean at the inquest?"A. Yes, sir; at the inquest.

"Q. You say that in your testimony at the inquest you did not state that these men were in disguise, and all the facts about it, because you were afraid?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was there great excitement there?
"A. Yes, sir; I should think there was.
"Q. A good deal of talk about a nigger insurrection and a race war?
"A. I could not state anything about that, There were too many guns and six-shooters there for me.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Who was it who was hung?
"A. Shad Felder, Alfred Jones, and Stewart Jones.
"Q. Which of them was an old man?
"A. Alf. Jones was between sixty-five and seventy years of age, I think.
"Q. Was he a man of family?
"A. I do not know. He told me he had a bed-ridden wife.
"Q. Was he a reputable man?
"A. The colored people all said that he was a church member and a good man. I did not know him until I investigated this case.
"Q. Had he committed any offense that you know of against the law?
"A. I never heard of any; no, sir.
"Q. Had he anything to do with the shooting of Bolton?
"A. I never heard him charged with it; he was not there.
"Q. Was he present at the shooting?
"A. He told me not.
"Q. Did he tell you where he was at the time of the shooting?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Where?

"A. He said he was at home; that it was between 11 and 12 o'clock when he heard the shooting. He was a short distance, about 100 or 150 yards, from the place of shooting.

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"Q. That is, his house was that distance from the place of shooting?

"A. Yes, sir; where he lived, on the Flewellen plantation, was about 100 or 150 yards from the counting place. He said his wife was sick and he had to sit up with her, and he was lying down on the bed with his clothes on and his shoes off, and he heard a shot and went out on his gallery and staid there a few minutes and heard nothing more—on his little porch to his cabin I presume, I never have seen it. He said after listening a little while he went back into his house and laid down on the bed, but did not go to sleep. Within fifteen or twenty minutes his dogs began to bark loudly, and he went out on the porch, and found Dick Robinson, the presiding judge of the election. He got up and called the dogs off, and Mr. Robinson jumped up and ran into his house bareheaded and sat down in a chair. Mr. Robinson said, 'Uncle Alf, there has been a man shot down in there and I want you to go to Chapel Hill and telephone the sheriff about it." He told him his wife was sick and he could not go. Judge Robinson aked him if he could get anybody else to go. He said that perhaps his son, Oliver Jones, would go. He went off, Uncle Alf said Robinson did, and in about two hours he came back to Uncle Alf's place and asked him fe would go down to the polling place; that there was a dead man down there and he did not like to go down alone. Uncle Alf said that he woulddo so. He went down there with Judge Robinson, and they found both the front and rear doors of the house open, with a lamp sitting on the table, and a bright light in the room. They went in on the back gallery and found Bolton lying across the door.

"By Mr. Sponer:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"By Mr. Spooner."

"Q. What do you say about a gallery?

"A. The Flewellen dwelling-place had a gallery. That is where the counting place was. There was a little porch in front covering the one door that entered the room. The front door and back door were both wide open. They went in and found Bolton lying across the door with his feet out near the hinges of the door, and his head in the other direction, with his het off. They stepped across Bolton's body and they went through, Judge Robinson in advance—

"Mr. Eustrs. Whose recital is this?

"Mr. Spooner. It is a recital of Alf Jones, the man who was hanged, as made to the witness.

"The WITNESS. Yes; he made the statement to me.

"Mr. Spooner. As his counsel?

"The WITNESS. Yes, sir. As they went out of the gallery they heard a number of men at the front gate, which is about thirty steps distant. They did not know who it was, and they all went back into the room, and Judge Robinson stopped at the table. Robinson seemed to be scared, and did not know who it was coming in at the time. Uncle Alf said that he, instead of passing and going out back, just backed out over the dead man. He said he did not know who they were, and he wanted to face in that direction to see who they were. He stepped back out on the gallery and leaned up against the jam of the door, and stopped down and looked at the man. He said that he had a handkerchief or cloth of some description, he could not tell which, it was very bloody, tied across his nose; that he was lying upon his right side and back partly, with his left leg drawn up a little and the right one straightened out, and with a pistol at one of his feet; he could not remember which foot. He had a slicker on, one of those yellow rain-coats—not.

"Mr. Eusris. When you have already had direct testimony about the whole transaction.

"Mr. Evarts. This testimony not only shows these facts, but it shows that this man was not at the polls and had nothing to do with the shooting.

"Mr. Eusris. I understand that, if the witness confines himself to that portion of it.

"The WITNESS. He told me he had not been at the polls after 4 o'clock until that time.

"Mr. Evarrs. We are not going into the killing, but the way he found Bolton

"Mr. EVARTS. We are not going into the killing, but the way he found Bolton lying is important.

"Mr. EUSTIS. This witness did not find him.

"Mr. EVARTS. But this colored man told this witness that he found, at the request of the presiding judge, this dead body, and he described to the witness, who was his counsel, how he found that dead body, in what condition he found it, and that we wish to prove.

"Q. You may proceed with your statement.

"A. He stooped down and looked at him. He had his handkerchief over his face, which was bloody, and he could not tell whether it was a handkerchief or a cloth. I asked him if his slicker was buttoned up, and he said he could not tell whether it was buttoned or unbuttoned, he was so excited. His hat was off, and he was lying with his face partly turned up, and he could see that his right eye had been shot out. He said just about that time the men from the gate came in, Tom Evans in advance. Evans took the lamp off the table and went and sat it down by the man's head and said, 'Boys, this is Dewees Bolton,' Uncle Alf said he had not known who it was before; that he could not tell who it was. He then went home, he said, and the next day he was arrested in the field where he was at work.

"Q. Did he testify at the coroner's inquest?

"A. I understand so. The papers containing the proceedings are here.

"Judge Kirk. Yes; he testified there.

"The Witness, Uncle Alf said that at the jury of inquest Mr. Vernon, who held it, told him that there was nothing against him, and he could go, and Steve Jackson also, and that somebody in the crowd said, 'No, put them with the rest of them.'

"Q. Is that all you care to say about Alfred Jones?

"A. Yes, sir; I believe I have stated all the material points.

Jackson also, and that somebody in the crowd said, 'No, put them with the rest of them.'

"Q. Is that all you care to say about Alfred Jones?

"A. Yes, sir; I believe I have stated all the material points.

"Q. What about the other parties?

"A. Well, Shad Felder told me—

"Q. He was the man who owned the property there?

"A. Yes, sir; he owned a farm. He was hung also. He said that he had been there all day at the polls, and at night they were counting the ballots and he was sitting on a bench looking on at the count, with Handy Hayes and Felix Kinlaw. He said about 10 or 11 c'clock Judge Kirk came into the room and spoke to them—to the white officers, I believe—and asked them how things were going there, and they made some reply; I forget what he said it was. Then they asked Judge Kirk, 'Where are you from, judge; are you from Brenham?' and he said, 'No, I am not; I am from Graball.' They asked him how things were going at Graball, and he said everything was going straight. He then went to Mr. Alfred Rogers, who was lying on a bed in the corner—

"Q. Is he a white man?"

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And a Democrat?

"A. I can not tell you that. He lived on the Flewellen place. I do not know him, and never saw him.

"Q. He was not an officer of the election?

"A. No, sir; he was lying on the bed, and Judge Kirk talked to him a little while in a low tone of voice. Then they came back to the table, and he took him out in the yard and talked to him awhile.

"Q. He took who out?

"A. Judge Kirk took Dlek Robinson, the presiding judge, out. Robinson then came bæck, and in about half an hour afterwards he said somebody knocked on the back door. The back door was shut and the front door was open. He said that when the man knocked on the back door, Polk Hill, who was sitting on the end of the bench nearest to the front door, got up and went out on the porch. Somebody had said, 'Come in,' to the first knock, and there was no reply to it. At the second knock somebody told them to come in, and the door was pushed open with considerable force, and standing in the doorway were three men with these yellow slickers or rain-coats on, and behind them on the gallery were two more men, the three in front presenting pistols, and one behind presenting a pistol over their heads, and they said something. I do not think he told me what it was. Shad said he was badly scared, and rolled off the bench and crawled under the bed with Handy Hayes and Felix Kinlaw; they crawled under the bed. I asked him how many shots he heard fired, and he said he was so badly scared that he did not remember any shots. The other one, Felix Kinlaw, said, I think, that he heard one shot fired, and they all ran out of the room—no, the others went out of the back door, and after it was over these two were under the bed. Rogers got up in the bed, and said to the men in front. 'Don't shoot in here, boys.' After they went out they came from under the bed and went out also. Rogers, they said, had been a little under the influence of liquor.

"Q. He denied any participation in the affair?

"A. Yes, sir; they both said they had nothing in the world to do wit nder the influence of liquor.

"Q. He denied any participation in the affair?

"A. Yes, sir; they both said they had nothing in the world to do with it.

"Q. What about Stewart Jones?

"A. He told me that he came down there to bring his brother, Tom Jones, his supper.

"Q. Tom was one of the election officers?

"A. Yes, sir. He said he came down there to bring his brother his supper and his overcoat. It was a pleasant, mild night, Stewart said, and he was lying out in the front yard asleep with John Glass when the shot was fired, and that waked him up and he ran off.

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"By Mr. Evarts:

"Q. Those were the three men who were hanged?

"A. Yes, sir (pages 177-180)."

Kirk shows his presence at Flewellen, and his whispered conference with Robinson, the Democratic judge of election.

"Q. You went from Chapel Hill to Flewellen?

"A. Yes, sir; I did.

"Q. What time did you get to Flewellen?

"A. I think about half past 10 o'clock.

"Q. How far was Graball from Chapel Hill?

"A. I suppose about 12 or 14 miles.

"Q. How did it lie with reference to Flewellen?

"A. Flewellen voting place was about half way distant between Chapel Hill and Brenham.

"Q. What did you do at Flewellen?

"A. I went into where they were canvassing the vote and looked at the tally-list and made some inquiries there about the vote, what the opinion of the officers was as to what would be the result there (page 250).

"Q. Did you leave Flewellen before the box was raided?

"A. I did; I only remained there a short time and came direct to Brenham.

"Q. What did you call one of the officers out for; was it at Flewellen that you called the presiding judge out and had a talk with him?

"A. I did not take him out of the room.

"Q. But you called him to one side and had a whispered conversation with him?

"A. Yes, sir.

him?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What were you talking about?

"A. I asked him what he thought the colored people had voted that day; what he thought would be the result, if he could form any idea from the way the ballots were deposited.

"Q. What did he tell you?

"A. Well, he said that the Republicans had a majority there.

"Q. How large a majority?

"A. He said he thought there had been a good deal of scratching there by the colored people, but they would give a considerable majority; he said he thought they had done a good deal of scratching there that day, but they would give a majority for the Republican ticket; that was his best impression about it, being one of the judges and seeing the ballots deposited" (page 254).

Several extracts are given from the testimony of Democrats as to the disguise of Bolton.

Lafayette Kirk testifies (page 266):

'Q. Did you ever hear it disputed that he had on a rubber coat, and an oil-

"Q. Did you ever hear it disputed that he had on one of those yellow rain-coats, commonly known as 'slickers' in our section, "Q. And you knew it was not a rainy night?
"A. Those coats were generally universally worn by the people in the country.

"Q. Was it a rainy night?

"A. It was not a very rainy night.

"Q. No, it was not raining at all.

"A, It was not raining, but it was a right cool night."

William Cause, a clerk of the election at Flewellen, testifies (page 304):

"Q. Do you know whether he was masked?
"A. I do not; I didn't see any mask. He had on one of those water-proof coats.

"Q. Did you see his face?

"A. I do not remember seeing his face that night at all. I didn't pay any attention to it. We were so badly scared that we were for getting out of the room as quick as we could. I was expecting to get a shot every moment after I saw that muzzle of the gun stack in the door. I never paid any attention to anybody and never went back there until the next morning.

"Q. When did you go back there?
"A. I went back there, I reckon, about 8 or 9 o'clock the next morning; "A. I went to all about 8.

"Q. Did you see the body of the dead man?

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did he have any mask or disguise on his face?

"A. No, sir. I think there was a handkerchief just laid over his face, and he still had on a water-proof coat. The handkerehief was bloody and there was a very large pool of blood lying under him."

R. P. L. Wright, another Democratic officer of election, testified as follows in the trial of Kirk and others (see pages 756-757):

"Q. What sort of a night was that; was it rainy?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. Was it a cold night?
"A. It was not cold, it was not warm—it was cool.
"Q. Did you have a fire?
"A. No, sir.

"Q. You left after the shooting?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. When did you come back?
"A. I came up to the gate and as there was no one there I went away.
"Q. When did you come back?
"A. I came up to the gate and as there was no one there I went away.
"Q. When did you come back?
"A. About sun-up.
"Q. Was anybody there?
"A. Yes, sir, he was lying on the floor near the door with a handkerchief over his face.
"Q. Who spread the handkerchief over his face?
"A. I don't know; it was a handkerchief or a towel.
"Q. Was it bloody and torn?
"A. I don't know.
"Q. Did you notice whether it was knotted around his neck?
"A. I don't know.
"Q. Did you look up before the shot was fired?
"A. I don't know.
"Q. Did you look up before the shot was fired?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. When you looked up the man had already been shot?
"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who did you see then?

"A. I saw a man there. He had a gun. I went out pretty lively at the same door Bolton was shot.

"Q. Did he have a slicker on?

"A. Yes, sir; buttoned up at the throat." D. D. Bolton, the father of the dead man, testified as beld (see page 766):

"Q. Was he disguised in any way at all?

"A. No. sir.

"Q. Was there anything over his face?

"A. Robinson had spread a handkerchief over his face,

"Q. Was there one tied around his neck?

"A. There was.

"Q. Was that an unusual thing?

"A. He was in the habit of wearing it."

Kirk, when testifying before the committee, attempted to evade the inquiry as to the telegram which he sent D. D. Bolton on the election day. His testimony at that time was as follows (see pages 251, 252):

at that time was as follows (see pages 201, 202):

"Q. Did you send any telegrams on election day?

"A. I had one telegram sent, I believe, to a man at the Graball box.

"Q. Did you send any telegrams on election day?

"The WITNESS, Did I send any?

"Mr. Spooner. Yes; did you send any?

"A. I did send one, and then sent another or had it sent.

"Q. Why didn't you answer that way when you first answered my question instead of saying that you had one sent? You know how many you sent on the day? "A. I did send one, and then sent another or had it sent.

"Q. Why didn't you answer that way when you first answered my question instead of saying that you had one sent? You know how many you sent on that day?

"A. I had two sent. I sent one myself and had one sent.

"Q. Why didn't you say so then?

"A. I did say so.

"Q. After awhile. How many telegrams did you send off on election day?

"A. The two I refer to that related to the election.

"Q. Who were they sent to?

"A. I sent one near about 12 o'clock on election day to D. D. Bolton. I told him I could not tell much about that time as to how the vote was going.

"Q. Give me the language of your telegram?

"A. As I best recollect, I told him things were mixed; that it was mixed there in the town of Brenham, and that the result was doubtful.

"Q. What else did you say?

"A. That is all I said, I think so.

"Q. Don't you know that that is not all you said?

"A. No, sir; I do not know that is not all I said.

"Q. Then you have nothing but an opinion on the subject? I wish you would take the time to remember what you said in that telegram.

"A. The idea I intended to convey to Mr. Bolton was—

"Q. No; I want your words, and we will try and get at the idea,

"A. Aly best recollection is that I said things were mixed.

"Q. What else?

"A. That is all.

"Q. Do you swear that is all?

"A. I do not know. If I said anything else, I do not remember. I will swear tomy best recollection that that was the contents of the telegram to Mr. Bolton in which you said 'things look gloomy,' or 'look bad; do your work?'

"A. I said things were doubtful. That was the idea to be conveyed.

"Q. Didn't you say something like this; didn't you send a telegram to Mr. Bolton in which you said 'things look gloomy,' or 'look bad; do your work?'

"A. I do not recollect any such expression as that in the telegram.

"Q. That is not an answer to my queston. You will be pretty likely to recollect it in view of what happened afterwards?

"A. I didn't send a telegram to him?

"A. I do not reollec

"Q. Is it a mere matter of opinion with you?
"A. I am satisfied I did not.
"Q. Are you willing to swear that you did not.

"Q. Is it a mere matter of opinion with you?

"A. I am satisfied I did not.

"Q. Are you willing to swear that you did not?

"A. I do not undertake to say exactly what the contents of the telegram were.

"Q. I want you b: swear, if you can, whether you sent a telegram to Mr. Bolton on that day which was substantially like this: 'Things look gloomy,' or 'things look bad,' or 'things look mixed; do your work.'

"A. I do not recollect sending any such telegram, and to the best of my recollection I never did send any such telegram, and to the best of my recollection I never did send any such telegram, and to the best of my recollection I never did send any such telegram, and to the best of my recollection I never did send any such telegram, and to the best of my recollection I never did send any such telegram?

"Q. Will you swear that you did not send any such telegram?

"A. I gave you my best recollection as to the contents of the telegram.

"Q. Will you swear that you did not send such a telegram?

"A. I will not swear to anything on the subject except as to what my best recollection of the telegram was.

"Q. Are you positive that you did not send to Mr. Bolton on election day a telegram in which you said, 'things look bad,' or 'things look gloomy,' or 'things look mixed' (you may take your choice of those words); 'do your work?'

"A. I will give you my best recollection as to what the contents of it were, and I have done that.

"Q. I want an answer to my question, if I can get it. Are you positive that you did not send to Mr. Bolton on election day a telegram of that purport, 'things look bad,' or 'things look mixed; do your work?' Are you positive that I did not send such a telegram, but my best recollection is that the contents of the telegram were that things were doubtful or mixed.

"Q. Where was that telegram sent to?

mixed

rection is that the contents of the telegram were that things were doubtliff or mixed.

"Q. Where was that telegram sent to?
"A. To Courtney, which was the nearest telegraph office to Graball.
"Q. Who was Mr. Bolton?
"A. He was a candidate for county commissioner down there.
"Q. Was he a Democrat?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. He was the father of the young man who was killed that evening?
"A. Yes, sir; he was his father.
"Q. When had you seen him last before election day?
"A. On Monday before.
"Q. The election was on Tuesday?
"A. I think I had seen him Saturday before.
"Q. The election was on Tuesday?
"A. Yes, sir; it was on Tuesday."
Later in the investigation, however, the telegram itself was produced, and a copy is given below, together with the testimony of the telegraph operator identifying it. (See pages 645 and 657.) The following is the telegram? 1885.

"To D. D. BOLTON, "Courtney:

"Things here look doubtful. Do your work,

"L KIRK."

James E. Slater, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Senator SPOONER:

"By Senator Spooner:

"Q. You have been examined before in this investigation, have you not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You reside at Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You are telegraph operator at Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir; at Brenham, Tex.

"Q. How long have you been operator at that place?

"A. The last time since 1880, but I was in the office before.

"Q. Were you in charge of the office there in 1886?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Have you ever seen this before [showing a telegram to the witness]?

"A. I of course have seen it, because the words 'seven, paid' are in my handwriting, and 'fi ed 12 m.' is in my handwriting, and the time of the message sent to Houston is my handwriting.

"Q. What time was it sent to Houston?

"A. It was sent to Houston at 12.50 p. m., it says here.

"Q. That was received by you to be transmitted at 12 m. on November 2, 1886?

"A. Yes sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And was transmitted by you?

"A. Yes, sir; there is the evidence of it.

"Q. It was transmitted at 12.50 p. m.?

"A. This is the evidence of it.

"Q. That is the memorandum made by you at the time?

"A. Yes, sir; at the time. Whenever we send a message we mark the messages as we send them. When we receive a message we put in here [indicating] when they were filed. It was received at 12 o'clock to send to Houston.

"Q. This is the original of the message which was handed to you for transmission?

"A. Yes, sir."

"A. Yes, sir."

THE DIAMOND TICKETS.

The Republicans, in order to protect the colored voters from imposition and fraud practiced upon their ignorance and simplicity, had printed tickets in a particular arrangement of the imprint, called "diamond tickets." Some question had been raised as to the validity of these tickets under the election laws of Texàs, but the supreme court of Texas a year before this election had pronounced them valid. This decision was found in the reported volume of the court's decisions. These volumes were distributed by law among the county judges and one of them was in the hands of Kirk, the county judge.

Yet at several polling places the diamond tickets were discarded and were not returned as valid to be canvassed by the returning boards.

"G. A. Mayo (colored), having been duly sworn, was interrogated as fol-

"Q. What are you in politics, a Republican?
"A. A Republican; yes, sir.
"Q. At what polling precinct do you vote?
"A. Independence.
"Q. How long have you voted in that precinct?
"A. Ever since I have been there. I went there in 1869. The whole county voted at Brenham when I first went there, but I have voted there ever since.
"Q. Were you present at the election at that polling place on the 2d of November last?
"A. Yes, sir,

- "Q. Do you know how many votes were cast there?
  "A. Yes, sir; I think I do.
  "Q. How many?
  "A. Three hundred and twenty-nine.
  "Q. Do you know which party was in the majority?
  "A. The Republican party.
  "Q. How much was the Republican majority?
  "A. About 45 on the whole, I believe.
  "Q. Did you have any official connection with the election at that poll?
  "A. I was called in to be an inspector.
  "Q. You were one of the inspectors of the election?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. Engaged in discharging that duty all day at the polls?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. Were you present at the count?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. Were you present at the count?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. There were two tickets at that election, were there, the People's ticket and the Republican ticket?
  "A. There was a People's ticket, a Republican ticket, and a good many more little mixed tickets with names on them.
  "Q. Split tickets, as they are called?
  "A. Yes, sir.
  "Q. But the main tickets were the Republican and the People's ticket?
  "A. Yes, sir; that contained all the Democratic candidates.
  "Q. The People's ticket was the ticket voted generally by the Democrats?
  "A. Yes, sir; that was a diamond-shaped ticket.
  "A. Yes, sir; that was a diamond-shaped ticket.

- "Yes, sit."

  "Q. The People's ticket was the ticket voted generally by the Democrats?

  "A. Yes, sir; that contained all the Democratic candidates."

  "Q. When I speak of the Republican ticket I mean the straight Republican ticket.

  "A. Yes, sir; that was a diamond-shaped ticket."

  "Q. They had printed on them the names of the Republican candidates?

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. Were those tickets counted?

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. Were those tickets counted?

  "A. N. sir."

  "Q. Were those tickets counted?

  "A. N. sir."

  "Q. Were the officers of that election at that polling place?

  "A. N. sir."

  "Q. He was presiding judge?

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. He was presiding judge?

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. He was presiding judge?

  "A. A. A colored man named Mose Bird and another white gentleman named Rosuse: I forget his other name.

  "Q. Who else?

  "A. Just those three.

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. Who were they?

  "A. The other Mr. Seward and a gentleman named Burt,

  "Q. Were they white or colored men!

  "Q. Were they white or colored men!

  "Q. When they were but two colored Republicans on the board?

  "A. Only one: I was called in as an inspector.

  "Q. What happened there about the counting of those tickets?

  "A. When they commenced to count, the first Mr. Seward, he wanted to public, that there was no law for him to carry the box away until the tickets were counted, and Mr. Seward said he would see about it, and he went and got the law and read it and said, 'All right, I will proceed to count.' In about an hour or such a matter he began to count, and counted up until he reached about ten Republican tickets.

  "A. Yes, sir, and when he got up to that number—

  "Q. He counted ten and they were talked; and counted them?

  "A. Yes, sir, and when he got up to that number—

  "Q. He did not vote at that polling place?

  "A. Yes, sir, and when he got up to that number—

  "Q. Ho is Captain Clark sheet. Super did they reper the counted any more than two or three Democratite lickets when Mr. Seward daid for each eather. He voted about ten Republican tickets.

  "Q. Who is

- things run; and Mr. Clay and Mr. Young kept that tally, and when they wound up that tally he said. How many more of those diamond-shaped things have you got there? and Captain Clay said, 'We are near through;' and just before we got through with them Captain Clay wrote a little note and passed it to Mr. Young, and Mr. Young looked at it and he passed it to the presiding officer, and he looked at it and tore it up. And as soon as they got through the diamond-shaped tickets Captain Clay he raised up on his feet, and the tally he kept, the special tally, he tore it all to pieces.

  "Q. That is, they counted these diamond-shaped tickets after they had ruled them out?

  "A. Yes, sir; counted them in the whole.

  "Q. And he kept tally of them?

  "A. Yes, sir; by Captain Clay.

  "Q. And then this note was passed around?

  "A. Yes, sir; by Captain Clay.

  "Q. And he tore up the record of the number?

  "A. Yes, sir; when the presiding officer read it he tore it up, and some man said, 'You ought not to suffer that thing to be done;' and I said, 'Things are too critical here; you remember Chapel Hill; I don't dare to say a word.' Then some one walked in and touched Mr. Young with his walking-can and he walked out, and the colored people commenced getting scared, thinking about Chapel Hill two yearsago. I told them all to be quiet. I says, 'This thing will be attended to. I don't want anybody to get hurt, so be still;' and they all kept still. Mr. Seward, after he got through counting, got up and put all the tickets into the box and said, 'You see they will all go to Brenham, and they will decide it between us there,' and then went straight home.

  "Q. How many of those tickets were there?

  "A. There was 187 in the whole.

  "Q. How many of those tickets were there?

  "A. There was 187 in the whole.

  "Q. How many of those tickets were there?

  "A. There was 187 in the whole.

  "Q. How many of those tickets were there?

  "A. There was 187 in the whole.

  "Q. How many of those tickets were there?

  "A. Yes, sir" (pages 63-65).

  - Carl Schutze, esq., testified as follows:
- "Q. Do you know how many votes were thrown out at this last election?

  "A. Yes, sir. I will give you the figures. At Independence, 187 votes; at Chapel Hill, 188 votes; and at Felder's box, 100 votes.
  - "By Mr. SPOONER:
- "Q. Are those Republican votes you are talking about?

  "A. Yes, sir; Republican votes, the diamond-shape ticket, the straight Republican ticket, and it makes a total of 475.
  - "By Mr. EUSTIS:
- "Q. What box do you mean by Felder's box?
  "A. I am not so well posted in that section of the country that I should know. It is called Felder's box.
  - "By Mr. SPOONER:
- "Q. You mean to be understood as saying that in the county canvass 475 diamond-shaped tickets were thrown out?

  "A. Yes, sir; they were thrown out. They were straight Republican tickets, I will state that I take these figures from an article which appeared in my newspaper on the 11th of November. I charge also that the following Republican majorities were in the boxes that were stolen, if you desire to hear the state-

- majorities were in the boxes that were stolen, if you desire to hear the statement.

  "Q. Republican majorities in the stolen boxes, you mean?

  "A. Yes, sir. At Graball's, 380; at Flewellen's, 150; and at Lott's Store, 123,

  "Q. Where do you get your figures?

  "A. I got them from all sources that I could get them at that time. I understood at the time, and have learned since, that these figures are correct, and I think they have been sworn to here. That makes a total of 1,108 votes that were thrown out and stolen.

  "Q. That is, Republican votes?

  "A. Yes, sir; 1,108 votes that were stolen from there and thrown out. In this connection I might state the majorities which, according to my figuring on the face of the returns, the several officers had. Paul Fricke, 582, that is the minority which we had on the face of the returns; Carl Schutze, 582.

  "Q. What are those figures?

  "A. They are the minorities on the face of the returns.

  "Q. Who ran against you in that election?

  "A. Judge Kirk.

  "Q. Then you mean to say that on the returns as they were canvassed by Judge Kirk and the county commissioners, he, Kirk, had 582 majority?

  "A. I think that was it. That is the way I received the figures. I do not know whether they are exactly fair or not. But that is the way I received them at the time, and I have not looked at them since. William Ehlert, for county attorney, 742. He is a colored man.

  "Q. Who was the Democrat who was running against Wilder?

  "A. Mr. Rodgers. Against these minorities on the face of the returns we have to set off 1,108, and we claim we are elected by from 4:0 to 600 majority.

  "Q. What have you on the member of assembly?

  "A. I did not pay any attention to that in my article. I just read from the article which I wrote at the time, and I have no personal recollection of it since (page 214).

"Q. Do you know why the tickets were made diamond-shaped?

"A. I could tell you what my opinion is about it, if you would like to know.

"Q. I should like to have it.

"A. Well, the large majority of the colored people of that county can not read; they are unable to read their tickets—a large majority of them, and if they do not have a ticket by which they can know they are voting the Republican ticket without reading it, why they are not satisfied; and for that reason, as I suppose, to prevent designing men changing their tickets, and interlining and putting in Democrats in place of Republicans, they made a straight Republican ticket, different in shape from any ticket in the field, in order that those men who could not read should be certain they were voting a straight Republican ticket, as they all desired to do, or nearly all" (pages 125 and 126).

THE MURDER OF THE COLORED MEN, ALFRED JONES, EPHRAIM JONES, AND SHAD FELDER.

On the 9th of November, one week after the election, Kirk committed to jail at Brenham eight colored men. The commitment was as follows:

"The State of Texas to the sheriff or any constable of Harris County, greeting:

"You are hereby commanded that you take into custody, and commit to the jail of your county, Steve Jackson, Alfred Jones, Ephraim Jones, Shad Felder, John Glass, William Davis, Phelix Kinlow, Andy Hayes, charged with murder, and there safely keep to appear at the next term of our county court, to be held at Brenham on the 19th day of November, 1886, unless he gives good and sufficient bond in the sum of $500.

Upon some demonstration or indication that an attack would be made on the jail, these prisoners were sent to Houston and there held in jail. While there the prisoners were visited by their counsel, Mr. F. D. Jodon, who there prepared the papers to take them out of jail by habeas corpus. With Mr. Jodon was associated Mr. C. R. Breedlove, a prominent lawyer and citizen of Brenham, a Democrat, and they had been retained professionally and fees paid them by the friends of the prisoners. A copy of the papers prepared is as follows: "To the Hon. I. B. McFarland,

"ALEX. ERICHRON,

"Clerk County Court, Harris County, Texas,

"By L. H. WARING, Deputy,"

On the 18th or 19th of November these prisoners, without any application to that end, as far as appears, and after these papers were ready for their presentation to the judge of the district of Houston, but before their presentation, were sent back to Brenham and lodged in jail. This transfer required the preparation of a new set of papers. On the 2d of December, about midnight or a little later, the jail was visited by an armed and masked company, some six or eight in number.

in number.

The guards were awake and away from the jail and in the adjacent courthouse, upstairs, sitting by the stove. The town constable on watch that night was upstairs, with these guards, and upon hearing the noise and looking from their windows the three men started to go down to the street. They were covered by the guns of some of the assailants of the jail and ordered to "keep quiet" and they would not be hurt, and they returned to the room and remained there to look out upon the removal of three prisoners from the jail by this company of armed and masked men.

These midnight visitors were admitted by the jailer, they informing him that they had a prisoner for the jail. The jailer, who seems to have had the keys of the cells in his hands, laid them down by the lamp which he deposited on a table in full sight. The armed men entering forced the jailer behind the opened door, threw a waterproof over his head, and two men held guard over him. The demand of the keys from the jailer was superseded by their observing the keys in sight.

sight.

Some of the party opened the cells of the eight colored men, ascertained from them their respective names, selected from them Alfred Jones, Ephraim (called also Stuart) Jones, and Shad Felder, and leaving the other five locked in their cells, took these three from the jail. They marched their pinioned captives before them out through the streets of the town, where they were joined by a mounted armed escort, spoken of variously as from twenty-five to seventy-five. The cavalcade conducted their captives along the public road to a point about a mile from Brenham. Here these colored men were hung "on a pecan tree," and there left until they were cut down the next morning by citizens who had come from the town.

The dead bodies were taken to the jail, when, in the language of the local come from the town.

The dead bodies were taken to the jail, when, in the language of the local paper, the Brenham Banner, "new drawers, undershirts, and nice shrouds were purchased and good coffins procured, and the bodies prepared for burial, after which they were turned over to their friends and relatives, who took them to their homes near Flewellen's for burial."

A coroner's inquest was held, evidence heard, and the conclusion reached was—"We, the jury, find that A. Jones, E. Jones, and S. Felder came to death by being hanged by parties to us unknown."

It does not appear to the committee that any participation, certainly any guilty complicity, in the death of Bolton was imputed by any one to either of these murdered men. The selection for execution from among the eight imprisoned was careful, deliberate, and systematic. The other five were immediately set at large on merely formal bonds of $500 each. Polk Hill, then and now in custody, was the only person suspected or accused of being the actor in the homicide.

on the large on merely formal bonds of some each. Polk Hill, then and now in custody, was the only person suspected or accused of being the actor in the homicide.

The committal of the eight by Kirk, according to the evidence before the committee, and their discharge on bond were equally illegal, as the charge of murder, the only one alleged against them, was not by the law of Texas bailable, as the committal made it, nor ballable after committal except after judicial examination.

The committee is, therefore, upon all the evidence, of the opinion that these murders were each committed upon the motive and in the interest of the policy and purpose that had countenanced and caused the "raids" on the ballot-boxes at that election. The sacrifice of these worthy and blameless lives was demanded for the suppression of their evidence, which would have demonstrated the death of Bolton, as befalling him in the act of a preconcerted attack upon the ballot-box at Flewellen's to defeat the election of the Republican ticket. The committee can not find any escape from this conclusion upon the whole body and weight of the testimony. The following extracts from the evidence support this conclusion:

"We Someter having been duly sworn, was interprecated as follows:

"W. S. Buster, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"Q. What political party do you belong to there?
"A. The Democratic party.
"Q. You have always been a Democrat and are still?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did you know of the fact of three of those eight men being taken out of lead bure? jail and hung?

"Q. Did you know of the fact of three of those eight men being taken out of jail and hung?

"A. Yes, sir; I was on duty as a policeman in town the night they were taken out.

"Q. What were you engaged about as policeman at that time; where was your station?

"A. My station included the whole town, pretty much. There is one officer on at a time. At the time they came I was down at the city hall, near the jail. The city hall is an upper story and commanded a view of the jail-yard in the adjoining building.

"Q. Were you up there in the second story?

"A. I was up there when the crowd came—in the second story of the building, in the city hall.

"Q. You commanded the jail from where you stood?

"A. I could see the front of the jail-yard; I commanded a view of the front of the jail-yard. It was night when they came.

"Q. What time of the day or night was it that you were looking on and saw what you have described?

"A. Well, I went up there, I presume, about a quarter past 12. I think it was that time when I went up into the city hall.

"Q. In the daytime?

"A. No, sir; in the night. I had not been up there but a few minutes, I don't know exactly how long, when the gentlemen who were there with me—there were two with me—

"Q. Who was with you?

"A. There was Mr. Leonard G. and John Lockett. They were there as guards for the jail.

"Q. Who was with you?

"A. They were in the city hall too. I was up there sitting by the stove, and I hadn't been there but a few minutes, and I think Mr. Leonard G. looked out and said, "The yard is full of men." I looked then, and I could see several men in the yard, and I started to go down on the street. The way Lhad to go down was through a stairway which went from the outside. I ran on down to the street in front, and as I started down there were three or four men rode around in front of the steps and halted us, and asked who we were, and Mr. Lockett, who was with me, told them who we were, and they told us then to go back up in the room and keep silent; 'Keep quiet,' they said.

"A.

"A. Yes, sir; I went upstairs where they told me to go.

"Q. What became of the two men whe were with you?

"A. They went back, too; one of them went back with me upstairs?

"Q. And the other one had staid there?

"A. Yes, sir; he staid there; he didn't come down at all.

"Q. You say they were guards of the jail?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was it their business to be up where they were?

"A. Well, I don't know about that.

"Q. Did you inquire as you went down what the disturbance was about?

"A. No, sir; I did not say anything to them.

"Q. Did you know what it was about?

"A. Well, I supposed what it was.

"Q. What did you suppose?

"A. I supposed what they had come for. I had heard of an attempt being made once before. I had heard of something which led me to believe that was what it was for.

"Q. What was it?

"A. I heard there had been some threats made that they would take them out. That is the way I understood it.

"Q. How long before this had you heard that?

"A. Well, it had been some time; that was before the prisoners were taken away. They were taken off to Houston for awhile, and then they were brought back, and this was a few days after they had returned until this.

"Q. Then, how long before this night had you heard there were threats to take them out?

"A. Well, it had been a week or two; I don't remember the time.

I had heard no threats or anything after they had returned until this.

"Q. Then, how long before this night had you heard there were threats to take them out?

"A. Well, it had been a week or two; I don't remember the time.

"Q. And you had been a policeman all this while?

"A. Yes, str.

"Q. Had you done anything about it?

"A. No, sir; I had not.

"Q. Who was the head of the police force of which you were a member?

"A. Mr. T. L. Swayne is our marshal.

"Q. Did you see him there that night?

"A. No, sir; I saw him in the forepart of the night, I believe, early in the night.

"Q. At the time you were there did you see him at all?

night.

"Q. At the time you were there did you see him at all?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. When you went down stairs let me understand whether you made any inquiry or not of what the disturbance was for?

"A. No, sir; I did not.

"Q. You thought you knew, did you not?

"A. Well, yes, sir; I thought I knew what the design was.

"Q. Who was the first person who spoke to you; who among the crowd down there first spoke to you?

"A. This man I speak of riding around on his horse spoke to us, halted us, and asked us who we were, and Mr. Lockett told him who we were and gave him our names.

"A. This man I speak of riding around on his horse spoke to us, halted us, and asked us who we were and Mr. Lockett told him who we were and gave him our names.

"Q. Who was Mr. Lockett?

"A. Mr. Lockett was one of the guards who went down with us.

"Q. How did this man call, the one who was on horseback; what did he say?

"A. He said 'Hold up there,' and then he says, 'Who is that?' Mr. Lockett told him our names. 'Well,' he says, 'go back now up into the room and keep quiet, and you will not be molested,' or something. He had a gun presented at a half present.

"Q. Did he aim it at you?"

"A. He had it pointed in our direction; yes, sir.

"Q. Well, it was pointed at you, was it not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did he say he would fire if you came down?

"A. No, sir; he made no further threats, but we understood by his motions what he would do.

"Q. He pointed the gun at you, and told you to go back and be quiet and you would not be molested?

"A. Yes, sir."

"Q. He pointed the gun at you, and told you to go back and be quiet and you would not be molested?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Were you armed?

"A. I had a pistol.

"Q. What look place after they went up there?

"A. Yes, sir; I went back.

"Q. What took place after they went up there?

"A. They remained there a few minutes, I can not say how long, and they came back then, I suppose, with the men they took out; I could not tell. I could not see who they were.

"Q. But you could see the men they brought down?

"A. I could not see but one of them that I identified as a prisoner. As they came out of the front door they had a light with them inside, and when they came out some of them held the light back in the building, and as the first six or eight men stepped out of the first hey were in the light from the lamp they held inside, and I could see them, and I could see one of the prisoners, it looked like, with his hands pinioned behind him, but I could not say who he was.

"Q. Could see that he was a colored man?

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. And his hands were pinioned behind him?

"A. Yes, sir; it appeared to me they were; he held his hands in that position.

"Q. Did these men have hold of him?

"A. Yes, sir; the was right in the midst of them."

"A. Yes, sir; he was right in the midst of them."

"A. Yes, sir; he had no you, and they did.

"Q. Was he in among them, in the midst of them."

Then they blew out the light, and I could only see the dark bulk of the men as they went along.

"Q. As this procession came out from the jail they put out their lights?

Then they blew out the light, and I could only see the dark bulk of the men as they went along.

"Q. As this procession came out from the jail they put out their lights?

"A. Yes, sir; before the last ones got out.
"Q. What further could you see?

"A. I could not see any more. The crowd that went from the jail-yard went to the front together and were there but a short time, and they blew a whistle as a sort of signal, I suppose, and soon after that we could hear the horsemen coming down the street in different directions, and they all went off down the street.

"Q. These men on horseback approached at that signal?
"A. Yes, sir; the men on horseback followed the prisoners in a sort of procession, from what I could find out.
"Q. I understood you to say that after the signal men on horseback came down the different streets?
"A. Yes, sir; and fell into procession, and they all went off together.
"Q. They joined this party and all went off together on horseback?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. How were those prisoners carried off; did you see that?
"A. No, sir; I did not see that. After they got outside of the jail-yard I could not see them from the window I was at.

"Q. Was that the end of that matter?

"A. It was the end of it so far as I could see" (pages 77-81).
The character of the colored men who were murdered is shown by the following testimony of W. H. Blount (see page 129):

"Q. You knew these men who were hanged, did you?

"A. Yes, sir."

"Q. How long had you known them?

"A. One of them, Shad Felder, I had known for ten years; I don't remember how long I had known the others.

"Q. One of them was an old man?

"A. Yes, sir; one was Alph Jones; he was about sixty or sixty-five years old,

"Q. Were they bad men?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. They were men of good reputation?

"A. They were all good, peaceable citizens; all three of them.

"Q. Religious men, do you know; members of any church?

"A. Two of them were, Shad Felder and Alfred Jones. Stewart Jones was not a member of the church.

"Q. What was their business?

"A. They were farmers. Shad Felder owned a nice little farm of his own, with a steam-gin on it, and was in good circumstances.

"Q. Was he a man of family?

"A. Yes, sir; he had a wife and one child.

"Q. How about the others?

"A. I can not say about a wife and children, but each had a wife, I know.

"Q. You say one of them owned a place?

"A. I can not say about a wife and children, but each had a wife, I know.

"Q. You say one of them owned a place?

"A. Yes, sir; he owned a place, a nice little farm.

"Q. And lived on his own farm?

"A. Yes, sir; he owned a place, a nice little farm.

"Q. And raised their own crops?

"A. Yes, sir."

Joseph Hoffmann, the candidate for the position of assessor on both tickets, testifies as follows (see pages 142, 143):

"Q. Now, did you not understand, and was it not understood in the community, that these three men were hanged because they could tell the truth about what took place at the killing of Bolton?
"A. Yes, sir; that has been the general impression.
"Q. Did one of those three men testify at the coroner's inquest held upon Bolton?

"A. I do not understand your question.

"Q. Did one of these three men who were afterwards hanged give evidence at the Bolton inquest?

"A. Yes, sir; I think so.

"Q. Did he at the inquest state that Bolton was masked?

"A. I heard that Shad Felder stated at the inquest that Bolton was masked; that is my understanding of it.

"Q. And he was hanged, was he not?

"A. Yes; he was hanged."

"Q. You know, other than from hearsay, of the arrest of these negroes, do you not?

"A. Oh, yes, sir; I was counsel for them in preparing application for the writ of habeas corpus.

"Q. These men were all Republicans, were they not?

"A. Yes, sir; I have no doubt of it.

"Q. All colored men?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. When did you first see them after their arrest?

"A. I saw them at Houston about the 15th of November.

"A. They were arrested on the 3d of November?

"A. Yes, sir; on the morning of the 3d. They were brought to the Brenham iall and put in jail there, and a mob came up, so we heard, for the purpose of hanging them.

"Q. Did you see the mob?

"A. No, sir; I did not. The sheriff, I understood, had seen them down in the bottom, a few miles from that place.

"Q. Did you see any of these men while they were in jail at Brenham?

"A. No, sir.

"A. No, sir, in fact, their Republican friends were afraid to go to see them. They had asked met to prepare a writ of habeas corpus; Mr. Breedlove had asked me.

"O. How long before they were removed to Houston were you retained?"

"A. I found out afterwards, when I prepared the second application at Brenham, that they were put in jail there by John A. Vernon.

"Q. At Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir. He was sent up from Flewellen's Store. He is a magistrate in that justice's precinct.

"Q. Did you prepare applications for habeas corpus?

"A. Yes, sir; two sets of them.

"Q. For each of these men?

"A. Yes, sir; each of these men, and I have them here.

"Q. Had there been any examination of these men on this charge?

"A. None at all within my knowledge.

"Q. Are they in the habit, when men are charged with murder down there in that country, of admitting them to five-hundred-dollar bail before examination?

"Q. You say you prepared two sets of papers?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. When did you prepare the first set?

"A. On the 15th or 16th of November, when I went to Houston, I prepared them in the court-house there and took the ex-deputy county clerk with me to swear to it.

"Q. Is this a copy of your application?

"A. No, sir; that is the application itself of each one. It is the original. I never presented them to the judge. They were brought back before I could do it, and that necessitated a further application.

"Q. When were these man brought back from that jail at Brenham?

"A. About the 18th or 19th of November.

"Q. Was the fact that you had drawn the papers and were proposing to apply for a writ of habeas corpus known throughout Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir; well known.

"Q. Who was retained with you as a lawyer to secure the liberation of these men upon a writ of habeas corpus?

"A. Mr. C. R. Breedlove.

"Q. Is he a prominent lawyer there?

"A. Yes, sir; quite prominent.

"Q. A Republican or Democrat?

"A. He is a Democrat.

"Q. Before you presented this first application to the judge the men were taken from Houston and returned to Brenham?

"A. Judge McFarland was then holding district court in an adjoining county, and told us that he had ten or eleven murder cases on his docket and he could not take them up at once, as the law directs. He told us to hold them for a while. Then in the mean time they were brought up from Houston two days after I left Houston.

"Q. Why were these men taken to Houston?

"A. This mob that was coming up to hang them from below had been heard of—

"Q. Upon whose direction were they taken to Houston?

"A. I can not say.

"A. I seemed to brotect them from being hanged.

"A. It seemed to be entirely so. They were brought back without my knowledge of anything of the kind. They were brought up one night while I was down at the depot talking to a friend.

"A. I do not know.

"A. I do not know.

"A. I do seemed to know the said that the county commissioners' court issued an order for them to be brought back.

"A. It is said that the county commissioners' court issued an order for them to be brought back.

"Q. You say the excitement had all quieted down?

"A. No, sir; there was considerable excitement yet, but I had no idea that the prisoners were in danger. It had died down, the excitement had, and we all thought in Brenham that there was no danger to them at all.

"Q. So that you did not consider the necessity that led to their original removal in order to protect them still existed?

"A. No, sir, I did not; although Mr. Fricke warned me all the time that when the men were brought back they would be hanged, but I laughed at him.

"Q. When were they brought back?

"A. On the 18th or 19th of November.

"Q. When were they hanged?

"A. On the 2d of December.

"Q. Did you ever have any talk with those men?

"A. Yes, sir; at both Houston and Brenham I had full conversation with them in regard to what they knew,

"Q. Did you talk with all of them, the eight men?

"A. With all of them.

"Q. Why did you not get the writ of habeas corpus issued?

"The WITNESS. Do you mean the first, or last time?

"Mr. Spooner. No; since.

"A. In the first place the judge told us to wait until he had a little more leisure time.

"Mr. EYAPARS. What index?

"Mr. EYAPARS. What index?

ure time.

"Mr. Evarts. What judge?

"The Witness. The district judge, J. B. McFarland. And in the next place I had gone down to jail with R. P. Hackworth, and they had sworn to their application, and Jailer Estis was up there at the time, and Mr. Breedlove had taken the applications to Judge McFarland that day, and that night they were

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Was it generally known in Brenham that Mr. Breedlove had started with the application for a writ of habeas corpus?

"A. I believe so. I made it known myself; I did not conceal it at all.

"Q. And that night, before they could be presented to the judge, they were hanged?

"A. Yes, sir; they may have been presented and in the hands of the judge, but I do not know.

"By Mr. Evarts:

"Q. But before this writ was served on the sheriff they were hanged?
"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is there any general sentiment in that community as to the cause or purpose for which those negroes were hanged?

"A. Yes, sir; the general opinion was that they were hanged to prevent their evidence from being brought forward. I have heard plenty of men of both parties say that."

Mr. S. A. Hackworth testifies as follows (see pages 230, 237, 238);

"Q. You had something to do with this habeas corpus application, did you

"A. Yes, sir; I took an active part in it.
"Q. The theory on which that was asked was that if the examination had been had it would develop the names of the persons who had raided the ballot-boxes?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And your claim is that those men were killed to obliterate their testing."

"Q. And your claim is that those men were killed to obliterate their testing."

"Q. And your claim is that those men were killed to obliterate their testimony?

"A. Oh, there is no doubt of that. The day before these colored men were hung Judge Kirk, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Searcy, and nearly all the Democratic officials were in close consultation, not only in the court-house whispering, but they would come out on the streets and seemed to be very excited. Mr. Fricke came to me in the evening and said. 'There is mischief brewing. I can tell by the way these fellows are acting at the court-house there is some plot on hand, and, he says, 'I am very fearful these freedmen in jail will be hung. They know that Breedlove has gone to see about getting the habeas corpus."

"Q. You understand that the anxiety of Judge Kirk to induce these men to give bonds to secure their liberty rather than to have an examination upon habeas corpus was to prevent this examination and the disclosures which would be made there?

"A. Oh, yes; there is no doubt in the world about that. If the truth was known, Judge Kirk and all the officials knew about the colored men, and I am satisfied of it as well as I can be about any fact I do not know. They were at the head of the whole thing.

"By Mr. Pugh:

"Q. I have not been here during your examination and am not able to cross examine you in reference to what you testified before I came in. But I understood you to say that those colored men were hung because they were witnesses to prove who raided the ballot-boxes—I understood you to make that statement?

ent?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That is an opinion of yours, is it?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. You do not state that on personal knowledge?
"A. Well, from all the surrounding circumstances, I am satisfied that the opinion is correct.

"Q. I want you to state upon what facts or upon what information you make the statement that these negroes knew who raided these ballot-boxes, or any the statement that these negroes knew who raided these ballot-boxes, or any of them.

"A. They knew that Bolton was one of them.

"Q. Bolton was dead, but they knew that he was one of them, and I think they had a tolerably accurate knowledge about the others.

"Q. Please state upon what facts you supposed they had that knowledge; I want to learn upon what you base your opinion that these witnesses did have knowledge such as you have mentioned.

"A. You must take notice that in the investigation that would have occurred, if these colored men had been tried upon writs of habeas corpus, that not only these colored men themselves but a great many other witnesses would have been subpænæd.

"Q. I am asking you now about those who were hung.

"A. I know; I understand the question perfectly.

"Q. What information have you as to the knowledge of those negroes who were hung as to who raided these ballot-boxes?

"A. I do not know whether it would be proper for me to say what I do know about that if I have to go before the court.

"Q. You have already stated that those negroes were hung to destroy their evidence.

"Q. You have already stated that those means of the evidence which would have been obtained at "A. Yes; and to prevent other evidence which would have been obtained at these people were who raided the bal-

"A. Yes; and to prevent other evidence which would have been obtained at that trial.

"Q. Which would have disclosed who those people were who raided the ballot-boxes?

"A. I believe that would have done it. That is my opinion,

"Q. I want to get at the value of your opinion, and in order to do so I would like to learn what is the foundation of your opinion, upon what facts and information it is based. Why do you think that those negroes knew who raided those ballot-boxes?

"A. I understood at the time the shooting occurred, in the running of the men away from the place, that some of these colored men in running, perhaps, had run across some of the other men, or had heard cries from some of them and recognized some of their voices. I did understand that. I do not know how true it is, but, from all the surrounding circumstances, I am satisfied that if the trial could have been had, that not only the testimony of these colored men themselves, but the testimony of other witnesses, could then have been obtained that could not perhaps be obtained now.

"Q. Those other witnesses are still living?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Were there any other negroes in the jail from which these three were taken that had the same knowledge that the three had?

"A. No, sir; I think not."

Mr. J. L. Moore corroborates Mr. Hackworth's testimony (see page 512):

Mr. J. L. Moore corroborates Mr. Hackworth's testimony (see page 512):

Do you know of three negroes being taken from the jail there and

"Q. Do you know of three negroes being taken from the jail there and hanged?"
"A. I heard of their being hanged the next morning after they were hanged.
"Q. Do you know who they were?"
"A. Yes, sir; Shad Felder and the two Joneses.
"Q. Do you know why they were hanged?"
"A. From rumor.
"Q. Give me the general opinion, if you can.
"A. My opinion and the general opinion I heard expressed was that they were hanged in order to prevent their evidence from being brought out on habeas corpus proceedings that were being instituted; they were in jail at the time.

habeas corpus proceedings that were being instituted; they were in jail at the time.

"Q. Do you mean by that it was feared they would identify the perpetrators of the outrage there at Flewellen?

"A. That was the impression. It was the common rumor that they were hung because they knew too much about the parties who committed the outrage; that was the common report there; that they were hung for the purpose of destroying their testimony.

"Q. Have you anything more to say on that subject?

"A. That is about the substance of it."

The account of the hanging of these colored men, taken from the Brenham Daily Banner, a Democratic local paper, will conclude the extracts on this point. (See pages 682, 683.)

point. (See pages 682, 683.)

"HANGED—SHAD FELDER, ALFRED JONES, AND EPH JONES TAKEN FROM THE JAIL—THEY ARE FOUND DEAD HANGING TO A PECAN TREE.

"Thursday morning, at 1 o'clock, Mr. Jim Estes, the jailer, was awakened by a man at the jail door, who, in response to an inquiry, said that he was Schley and that he had a prisoner to put in jail. This seemed reasonable, and Estes got up, lit his lantern, and went the door, first putting the lantern and jail keys on a box in the hall. When he opened the door three masked gentlemen, two armed with Winchesters and one with a prodigiously large revolver, entered and covered him with their guns. They informed Estes that they wanted the jail keys, and, looking around, soon discovered them. They forced the jailer behind the door, and taking a gum coat from the wall threw it over his head. Others then came in, and, unlooking the jail, men went up to the cell room and examining all the prisoners took out Shad Felder, aged forty-five, Alfred Jones, aged sixty, and Eph Jones, aged forty. They locked the cells and jail and throwing the keys on the floor they carried the lantern to the gate, blew it out, and left.

throwing the keys on the floor they carried the lantern to the gate, blow it cou, and left.

"Leonard Gee and John Lockett, who were employed as guards, were upstairs in the city hall; they started to come downstairs; they were covered witing ans in the hands of masked men and told to keep still, they wouldn't be hurt. It is stated all the streets approaching the jail were carefully guarded. The number of the mob is estimated all the way from twenty to seventy-five men. They came to town on horseback in the most quiet manner imaginable, and their presence was not suspected till the jail was surrounded. The men had nothing to say, and were as orderly as soldiers on dress parade; where they came from or whither they went is a mystery.

"The hanging was the general theme of conversation during the day and a variety of opinions were expressed; most good citizens regret the hanging, but in the present state of public feeling it is regarded as one of those occurrences that could not well be avoided, and also that the negroes got no more than they that could not well be avoided, and also that the negroes got no more than they justly deserved.

"The murder of Bolton and the subsequent mobbing of these negroes is the direct outgrowth of the incendiary speeches made by the Republicans during the canvass and the advice of the two envoys who induced the negroes to arm themselves and go to the voting place at Flewellen's. The Republican leaders will doubtless attempt to make political capital of this affair, and the defunct darkeys will be mentioned as having fallen martyrs to the cause of Republicanism in Texas. The hanging of these negroes by a mob is an occurrence to be regretted, but it was brought on by the very men who professed to have the greatest friendship for the negro, and whose friendship consisted in arraying the colored people against their employers and true friends.

"THE VERDICT.

"THE VERDICT.

ored people against their employers and true friends.

"The jury of inquest summoned by Justice Hackworth to inquire into the cause of the death of Shad Felder, Alfred Jones, and Ephraim Jones, who were taken from jail at 1 o'clock on the morning of the 2d instant, on Tuesday morning returned a verdict that the parties mamed came to their death by hanging, and that the parties who hanged them are unknown. The testimony covered fourteen pages of paper, but nothing was elicited calculated to identify the men who did the hanging.

"At an early hour in the morning the dead bodies of the three negroes named were found hanging to the limb of a pecan tree, about a mile from the jail, on the Independence road, near the bridge over Sandy. The news of the hanging spread rapidly and was the cause of no little surprise, because no one had the least suspicion that a hanging was contemplated. In addition to the three hanged negroes there were five more, namely, Stephen Jackson, Felix Kinlow, William Davis, Andy Hays, and John Glass, in jail; all of them were charged with being implicated in the murder of Dewees Bolton, who was murdered by Polk Hill, a negroe at Flewellen's, on the night of the election, and this hanging may properly be said to be a sequel to the unprovoked murder. Justice Hackworth impaneled a jury, who viewed the bodies of the dead negroes and proceeded to take evidence. A number of witnesses were examined, but no testimony was elicited tending in the remotest degree to identify any member of the mob. The inquest was adjourned over till Tuesday next at 10 o'clock.

"The negroes were scientifically hanged with new grass ropes, and when found they were all facing one way, with their feet about 30 inches from the ground. The bodies were cut down and hauled to town in a wagon about 10 o'clock in the morning, and deposited in the jail. New drawers, undershirts, and nice shrouds were purchased and good coffins procured, and the bodies prepared for burial, after which they were turned over to their friends and rei

In connection with Mr. Jodon's participation in the effort to obtain the release of these colored men, it is deemed relevant to cite the following testimony, and to say that in the entire testimony not a single charge is made detrimental to Mr. Jodon's character. He appears always to have been an exemplary citizen and a faithful and competent lawyer. Mr. Jodon testifies (page 180;

"Q. Were you threatened in any way in connection with this employment?

"A. Not until after I was counsel of the negroes that were hanged. I got a letter the next morning after they were hanged. I will say, in advance, that when Polk Hill came up from Flewellen's that night he passed through Brenham and, I understand, staid at his mother's. A day or two afterwards Mr. Hackworth and I were accused of having harbored Polk Hill. I was out around the polling place the whole night and until 12 o'clock the next day looking on. But this is the letter I got the next day. It was not dated, as well as I remember, but it was post-marked. I will read it if you wish me to, or you can do so. "Q. Do you know who wrote this letter?

"A. Yes, sir; I have good reason to believe that Frank Harven wrote it. "Q. Who is he?

"A. A young attorney there.

"A. Yes, sir; and a particular friend of Judge Kirk's and others active in the canvass.

"Mr. Spooner, I will read this letter."

"Mr. Spooner. I will read this letter.

" 'F. D. JODON, Esq., Brenham, Tex .:

"'After careful investigation we find that you have used every means in your power to justify the uncalled-for outrage at Flewellen's store by continued false reports for no other purpose than to influence public opinion in favor of murderers. You have falsely advised and harbored and protected murderers hiding from justice, and in every possible way done all in your power against the interests of the tax-payers of this county. We therefore find it actually necessary for peace and good order, and to avoid further trouble between the races, to request that you leave the county in ten days.

"COMMITTEE." "'COMMITTEE,

The WITNESS, I received that letter by mail. My little boy brought it to me on the street.

"Mr. Spooner. It is postmarked 'Brenham, Dec. 3, 11 a.m., 1886, Texas,' and is addressed to 'F. D. Jodon, Brenham, Tex.'

"In regard to the letter I received, I did not for three days make it known even to my wife. I sent a copy of it to the Galveston News, with a little explanation as to what part I had taken with those negroes, and they refused to publish it unless I paid them forty-two or forty-three dollars; and that I would not do, and they sent it back. But there was Mr. Breedlove and a number of friends, one who was the city marshal and had been for from sixteen to seventeen years; I went to them and said, 'Gentlemen, this is a serious time; shall I leave or not?' Mr. Swain told me, 'Mr. Jodon, things have come to such a pass that I can not give you any advice;' and Mr. Breedlove said the same thing. He said, 'I would advise you to leave,' and he gave me this letter to a friend of his, Col. G. W. Jones, in Bastrop, describing the situation.
"Q. Where does Mr. Jones live?

"A. In Bastrop, Tex. He was a Representative here a number of years ago."
"Q. How far is Bastrop from Brenham?
"A. I suppose it is about 60 miles.

"Brenham, Tex., December 8, 1886.

"BRENHAM, TEX., December 8, 1886.

"'DEAR SIR: There is a bad state of feeling here, and F. D. Jodon is under the ban for some cause. He has been warned to leave here, and, under all the circumstances. I have advised him to go.

"Mr. Jodon is honest and trustworthy and possessed of good business qualifications. Withal he is a very fair lawyer. He goes to Bastrop to look for a location. I will be under additional obligation to you if you will assist Mr. Jodon in getting a location.

"Your friend, etc.,

By Mr. EVARTS:

"C R BREEDLOVE

"Q. You say Mr. Jones was formerly a member here?
"A. Yes, sir; he was a member of Congress here several years ago?
"Q. After this advice and your getting this letter from Mr. Breedlove what did you then determine to do?
"A. On the streets during the time it was well known I had received the letter—in fact before I made it known myself it was known on the streets,
"Q. Before you said a word in regard to it?
"A Veg sir."

"Q. Before you said a word in regard to it?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. The fact that the letter had been sent you was bruited about?

"A. Yes, sir. A friend came and told my wife about it. My wife asked me if I had received it, and I told her, 'Jennie, what would they send me a letter for?' but I had to tell her; I felt it was my duty to do so. During that time, the ten days, even my best friends, those who had been lifelong friends, or at least friends of mine since I had been living there, avoided me on the streets and would not stop and talk to me. In the mean time, on Friday, after I received the notice, they had this indignation meeting at Burton. I did not like to leave home, and did not know where to go. I thought from the impression it made on Brenham that there was a reaction setting in to some extent; I was not positive, but I hoped so. I saw that the good people of our county were making it known, and I could see, at least thought I felt, that I would not be driven out from my home. That is the truth. But I got a shotgun and some ammunition, and I proposed to stay there. I did stay there against the advice of my friends, dozens of them. I felt this way: That if any mob did attack me at night I could go up in the second story of my house, my boy and myself, and I could at least make an alarm such as would call the neighbors to me.

"Q. How old was your son?"

"A. Seeventeen years of age.

"Q. Is he the oldest member of your family?

"A. Yes, sir."

"Q. Is he the oldest member of your family?
"A. Yes, sir."
Q. How many children had you?
"A. Seven.
"Q. All living at home?
"A. Yes, sir; six boys and one girl.
"Q. Did any of your friends or neighbors stay with you?
"A. No, sir. There were one or two who would have done so, but I told them I did not want to involve them in my quarrels or troubles. I told them I thought I could defend myself; that is what I thought about it.
"Q. How long was it before you felt at ease so as to be able to dismiss these fears?

fears?
"A. Never while I remained in Brenham; I never did until I came up here."

When Mr. Jodon was called again before the committee, a year later, he testified as follows (pages 683-685):

fied as follows (pages 683-685):

"Q. Have you been back to Brenham since your testimony was given before in this matter?

"A. Yes, sir; I reached there on the 23d of last October?

"Q. You may state what your experience was at Brenham.

"A. I will state in the outset that Mr. Swearingen, in a conversation here the other day, said I would be as safe in Brenham as he would be.

"Q. Who is this gentleman?

"A. The gentleman here present, an attorney and witness. His name is J. T. Swearingen.

"Q. A gentleman from that county?

"A. From Washington County, nowhere representing the defense.

"By Senator Pugh :

"Q. Are you not here in the prosecution of this case?
"A. I will tell you what my condition is as I go along, Mr. Pugh.
"By Senator Teller:

"Q. Go on.

"A. After I left here I went over into Maryland. I was there about ten days, I suppose, visiting friends and relatives.

"Q. You started to tell what Mr. Swearingen said.

"A. In a conversation here on Monday, which he brought up, we were discussing the situation in Washington County. He stated that I would be just as safe in Washington County as he would himself. I told him that that surely was not true.

cussing the situation in Washington County. He stated that I would be just as safe in Washington County as he would himself. I told him that that surely was not true.

"Now I will go on and state about it. I went over into Maryland, and while at Emmitsburg I received a letter from my wife begging me not to come back, and in a little while I got, I suppose, half a dozen letters from different friends warning me not to come back. My intention was to go back just as soon as my visit was over, but through my wife's entreaties and the warnings of my friends I did not go back. I staid in Maryland and West Virginia until about the 16th of last October. Then I determined, against my wife's esire and against my wife's wishes, that I would not stay away from my family any longer. I went back there with the idea that they would not disturb me, because I had done nothing more than I have done here. I had done what I thought was my duty as a citizen. I had been brought into the case because I had been an attorney for the negroes that were hanged, and nothing else. I had no part in the political troubles; never have voted the Republicant icket, except occasionally for county officers, never in my life. When I got back there some of my friends told me I was in danger, and that I ought not to have come back. In judgment I disagreed with them.

"About three weeks afterwards I was out in the street one day, talking to a friend, when Bob Wright, who was a witness up here before, and who was one of the officers at Flewellen's, I saw coming across the street directly opposite me on Hosea's corner. I also saw Hunt, Gus Hopkins, and several other Democratic colored men who had taken a very active part in it down there, and I saw the county officers out in front of the court-house, on the east side of it, in a group. I had been warned about Bob Wright, that he would make an attack upon me. I didn't think he would do it. I had no arms or anything of the kind about me. A little before the attack was made, John Lockett, a policeman, who

"Q. What are his politics?

"A. Democratic; That is, one with the People's ticket all the way through. I consider him a Democrat on that account.

"Q. All those who voted the People's ticket are Democrats?

"A. No, no; I don't think so, Mr. Pugh; I don't charge so. I know it is not

"By Senator TELLER:

"By Senator Teller:

"Q. Go on with your story.

"A. He came behind me, within three or four steps, and sat down upon a barrel. I was suspicious the moment he came and sat down, and when I saw these other parties around different places I was more so. In a few minutes I saw Wright walking across the streets with his hands in pockets, and I was satisfied he had something in them. My wife had warned me about Bob Wright, because some of my friends had told her before I came back that he would attack me. I was sorry then that I had gone upon the streets, because I thought difficulty was coming. He came up to me, walked up very close, and the first thing he said he wanted to know what I had stated up at Washington at this investigation. I said to him, 'Bob, whatever I have said is sworn to, and in black and white.' Then he went on to state that I had spoken badly about him up here; that I had said he had lied in all his testimony. I told him there was no truth in it; that the record would show there was no truth in it. He told me that Mr. David and a number of others had told him that I had said he had lied. I told him I had the record at the house. I wanted to avoid a difficulty, because I was in no situation to get into one. I hadn't a friend there to depend upon. He kept pushing me, and at last I backed off from him. In the mean time I had gotten up from the barrel and stepped around the corner, and I kept trying to haffle him as much as I could, and at last turned to leave him, and as I turned to leave, he struck me on the back of the head; I don't know whether it was with a pair of brass knuckles or what it was, but I know it nearly knocked me down, and raised quite a lump. As soon as I arose we exchanged a good many blows.

"O. You mean you and Wright exchanged blows?"

with a pair of brass knuckles or what it was, but I know it nearly knocked me down, and raised quite a lump. As soon as I arose we exchanged a good many blows.

"Q. You mean you and Wright exchanged blows?

"A. Yes, sir; after he struck me. I had no arms, and I was afterwards glad of it. My friends had told me not to carry arms, because if I did and they were shown on the streets it would not be well for me, and I took their advice. I thought it was useless to fight under the circumstances. After that I was arrested and fined for having struck the first blow. Mr. Lockett and Mr. Wright swore that I had struck the first blow, and I could not find a witness to testify anything about it for me, although there was quite a number of persons around at the time. I found parties afterwards who saw it and told me they saw Wright strike the first blow, but it was too late then. After that my friends came to me and told me that I must leave the place. I told them I was not situated so I could leave; that I didn't have the means to leave with; that I had been away from my family so long, and I thought there was a prospect of my being able to sell my property, and I would like to take my family with me when I went. They told me that if I staid there I must not go upon the streets; that if I did I would have to take the consequences. So from the 20th of November until the 8th day of February I never went upon the streets of Brenham except two or three times, perhaps half a dozen times, at hight to visit friends on the outskirts. It was not that I was too cowardly at all, but I didn't feel that I ought to run such risks. I had already run more risks than I felt I was justified in doing.

"A. I sent to my brother-in-law in West Virginia and got some money; I couldn't raise it there; that is the truth of it. But when Mr. Swearingen says I am as safe in Brenham as he is he tells what he knows is not true. There is

"A. I sent to my brother-in-law in West Virginia and got some money; I couldn't raise it there; that is the truth of it. But when Mr. Swearingen says I am as safe in Brenham as he is he tells what he knows is not true. There is no man who has a wife and seven children would have staid away from home the length of time I have, and you know it [addressing Mr. Swearingen]. God Almighty will punish you men for this thing before you are done with it, if man don't."

NO EFFORTS TO PUNISH THE "RAIDS" PERPETRATED ON THE BALLOT-BOXES, OR DISCOVER OR PUNISH THE MURDERERS OF THE COLORED MEN.

DISCOVER OR PUNISH THE MURDERERS OF THE COLORED MEN.

The evidence before the committee showed that no attempt was made by the authorities of the county of Washington or of the State of Texas to bring to indictment, trial, or punishment any of the actors in the several raids on the bailot-boxes at the election of 1896. No such attempt had been made in respect of the outrage upon the ballot-box and the shooting of the colored judges of election at Chapel Hill in the election of 1896. No zeal or interest was shown by the citizens of Brenham, nor by the leaders of opinion there and throughout the country, to vindicate their good name or clear their skirts of complicity in these crimes. On the contrary the whole drift and purpose of sentiment and action seems to have been to cover and either justify or excuse the transaction, defeat the public justice, screen and protect all actors and abettors of the outrages, hide or pervert the truth, and turn indignation and accusation away from the guilty, and seek to inculpate the innocent victims and their surviving friends and sympathizers.

The wrath of this community was all excited, and was all visited upon the white and colored Republicians, who had striven at the polls to assert the will of the majority to decide by their votes and the canvass of them the pending election. The committee calls attention, in support of these views, to some extracts from the testimony showing the drift of the prevalent feeling, and also the sentiments of prominent citizens of Texas, conspicuously those of Governor Ireland.

Testimony of Carl Schutze, esq. (see page 201):

"Q. There is no dispute thus far about those occurrences, and the point 1 want to get at in this connection is simply whether you know of any steps having been taken by the Democratic county administration leading to the discovery and arrest of the perpetrators of those outrages.

"The WITNESS. No, sir; I know that they have not made any attempts in that direction.

"Q. Was any reward offered at any time by the county officers or sheriff for the apprehension of these men?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Does your sheriff offer rewards in Texas where murders have been committed, in order to discover the criminals?

"A. Yes, sir; sometimes they do.

"Q. You heard about these negroes being hanged?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you know those men?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Were any efforts made, so far as you know, to discover and arrest the perpetrators of that outrage?

"A. None whatever.

"Q. Do you know of any reward having been offered for their discovery?

"A. I know there has been none offered."

Mr. S. A. Hackworth testifies as follows in regard to the outrage at Chapel Hill in 1884 (see page 218):

"Q. And there was an outrage there in 1884, was there not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. In what did it consist?

"A. Well, armed and masked men went out into the election room about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning and shot two colored men, and one died afterwards from his wounds, and the others recovered; there were three men shot.

"Q. Were they officers of the election?

"A. I think so.

"Q. There were white officers at that same election at that poll?

"A. I do not think there were any white officers there. That election precinct was divided up after Judge Kirk got in into three election precincts.

"Q. Do you know of any effort having been made by the Democratic county officials to discover and apprehend the perpetrators of that outrage?

"A. No, sir; not a single effort was ever made.

"Q. Were any rewards offered for their apprehension?

"A No sir.

"A. No, sir.
"Q. Did the grand jury make any investigation into the matter, so far as you know?
"A. So far as I know, I think not; I never heard of any."

"A. Oh, yes, sir.

"Q. And some of the colored men being hanged?

"A. Yes, sir; I saw the three colored men after they were hanged, the next day, and one of my wagons took them back to the jail.

"Q. Where were they hanged?

"A. About a mile and a half north of Brenham, near the city limits, on a pecan limb.

"Q. Do you know whether any effort was ever made to discover and arrest the men who hanged them?

"A. No, sir; I never heard of any.

"Q. Do you read the newspapers published in that county?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you ever happen to read any proclamation signed by the governor offering a reward for the arrest of men who had hanged those men?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you ever see or hear of any reward being offered by any of the county officers for the arrest of those men?

"A. No, sir; I have not.

"Q. No reward offered for the discovery and arrest of those men?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you ever hear of any reward being offered for the discovery and arrest of the men who raided the ballot-boxes in the colored belt on election day?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. It was reported through the county that in this Washington precinct the ballot-boxes had been raided and the ballots stolen?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you hear of that being condemned at all at any of those indignation meetings?

"A. No, sir; I did not.

"Q. The condemnation was directed against the shooting of Bolton mostly, was it not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you know of any rewards being offered, or efforts being made to discover and arrest the perpetrators of these outrages upon the ballot-boxes?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. I want to ask you this question: Do you know of any effort having been made to discover and arrest the men who hung these three colored men?

"A. No, sir; none at all.

"Q. Do you know of any reward having been offered by the governor or the county officers for their apprehension?

"A. I have never heard anything of it.

"Q. And no arrests have ever been made?

"A. No, sir, none to my knowledge.

"Q. Do you know of any rewards having been offered for that purpose?

"A. I heard of none.

"Q. And no arrests have been made?

"A. None.

"Q. Did you ever hear a Democrat in Brenham express any indignation over the outrages upon the ballot-box?

"A. Yes, sir; I have heard a number.

"Q. A good many?

"A. Yes, sir, I have; and I have heard a good many express themselves to the contrary, and say that it was a white man's country, and they paid the taxes and ought to hold the offices."

The testimony of Lafayette Kirk, a leading Democrat of Brenham, is as follows (page 25):

"Q. Do you know of any efforts having been made to find the men who hung them?

"Q. Do you know of any efforts having been made to find the men who nung them?

"A. Yes, sir; I do.

"Q. Was any reward offered for the apprehension of the men who hung them?

"A. None that I know of. The county attorney and the justice of the peace of the Brenham precinct were both together and conducted the inquest; they took down the testimony of all the witnesses.

"Q. They had to do that according to law?

"A. Yes, sir; it is the business and duty of the justice to hold an inquest. They had an examination of the witnesses that they thought could shed any light upon the subject.

"Q. How do you know what they thought?

"A. Well, I talked with the county attorney about it and the justice of the peace, and it was generally understood that they devoted one day to the investigation and adjourned the inquest proceedings for three or four days. The object of the adjournment in the mean time was to see if they could get any additional testimony, or ascertain any witnesses who knew anything that would develop who did the hanging or who were implicated in it, or anything that would be the basis of a complaint or charge against any person or persons.

"Q. Were any other steps taken that you are aware of to discover the men who hanged these three colored men?

"A. No. sir; no other steps.

"Q. Except the holding of the inquest?

"A. That is all that has ever been done that I know of.

"Q. Have you heard of any steps being taken to discover and arrest the men who raided the ballot-boxes?

"A. I will state in that connection that the grand jury, which is the proper.

Governor Ireland appeared before the committee and testified as follows on this point (pages 344-347):

"Q. Do you know what happened in that county at the last election in November?
"A. I know it from general information.
"Q. What do you understand occurred there?
"The WITNESS. Do you speak with reference to this investigation and the memorial which has been presented?
"Mr. SPOONEE. I speak with reference to the offenses against the ballot-box.
"A. I understand that a peaceable, quiet white man was shot down there for making his appearance at one of the voting places by a lot of negroes under orders from white men to shoot any white man that presented himself at that poll that day, that night.

"Q. Do you know anything about it personally?
"A. I do not.
"Q. Well, what else do you understand?
"A. I understand that there was a ballot-box destroyed at some precinct of the county; I can not remember the name of it.
"Q. Was it at the Flewellen precinct?
"A. No.

"A. No.

"Q. Do you remember to have heard of the ballot-box containing ballots cast at the Lott's polling place being taken by armed men from the custodians of it?

"A. No, sir. I heard that there had been a ballot-box or two destroyed in that county, but I remember but one, a polling place that was called Graball

"Q. Was your attention called at any time to outrages upon the ballot in that country?

"The WITNESS. Do you mean officially?"

"Mr. SPOONER. What do you mean by 'officially?'

"The WITNESS. You asked me if my attention was called to it.

"Q. I mean, did any reputable citizen of Texas bring to your notice, as governor of that State, the fact that outrages had been perpetrated on the ballot-boxes in that county?

"A. No, sir; they did not; there was no representation made to me.

"Q. Do you know Mr. Hackworth?

"A. No, sir; I do not know Mr. Hackworth.

"Q. Did you receive a printed circular from any one in Washington County giving a history of what occurred in that election?

"A. I did not. If the circular was sent to the governor, to the office of the governor of Texas, it probably went into the waste-basket. I never read circulars. The governor of Texas has other business to do besides reading circulars.

"Q. I presume that is true. I suppose if a circular charging serious offenses against the law in that State, and over the signature of a citizen of that State, came to your knowledge, you would deign to read it?

"A. I have never found time to read such circulars while I was governor of Texas.

"A. I have never found time to read such circulars while I was governor of Texas.

"Q. Do you know Judge Rector?

"A. Judge Rector who lives in Austin?

"Q. Yes; chairman of the Republican State central committee.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you have any conversation with him at any time in regard to the outrages upon the ballot-boxes in Washington County?

"A. No, sir; I did not.

"Q. Or as to the hanging of the colored people there?

"A. There was a conversation between Judge Rector and myself about the hanging of those people.

"Q. The fact of their being hanged was brought to your notice as governor of the State?

"A. Yes; by Judge Rector.

"Q. You did not consider that officially brought to your notice perhaps?

"A. Well, sir; I considered it officially brought to my knowledge. Judge Rector waited upon me because I was governor of Texas, and I considered it an official communication, or rather I received it officially. He could have had no other motive in coming to me than that I was governor.

"Q. I suppose you took no measures to discover the perpetrators of that outrage?

"A. No. sir. The conversation between Judge Rector and myself was a pri-rage? A. No, sir. The conversation between Judge Rector and myself was a pri-surroundings in the case.

"Q. You were not requested to offer any reward?

"A. It was suggested to me; the matter was suggested.

"Q. But no reward was offered?

"A. No, sir; none was offered, and I will tell you the reason why. It was suggested that in no instance had any member of a mob of that sort, who came at night and committed a deed of that kind, ever been punished, and that the reward would effect nothing at all. I would effect nothing whatever.

"Q. It would not have cost the State of Texas anything to have made the offer then?" No, sir, it would not, but it would have been regarded as a bid for lariberry, a bid for corruption.

"Q. Why in that case any more than in any other case of murder or any other helinous crime?

"A. We knew that that murder had been committed and the men had been taken out and hung.

"Q. It is always known that a murder has been committed before the governor offers a reward?

"A. It is generally supposed, at least, that a murder has been committed if it is not known. Your asking me these things places me under the necessity of telling what Judge Rector said to me, position which you feel fairly calls upon you to do anything which a gentleman ought not to do; certainly not.

"A. You have aiready got down the fact that it was brought to my knowledge that the negroes had been lynched, and Judge Rector waited on me and suggested rewards; you have already got that.

"Q. You said in your direct examination, as I understood, that you had refused assistance?

"A. That was in the election and in the ballot-box matter.

"Q. You well; make any statement you choose.

"Q. You well make any statement you choose.

"A. That was in the election and in the ballot-box matter.

"Q. You well are a reward, although stating at the same time that it could effect no good; that the men could not be convicted if apprehended and identified, but that it would take from the Republican party in the North a handle in the coming elections.

"Q. That is you say Judge Rector suggested to you the offering of a reward and them advised you not to offer it, at the same time?

"Q. That his to say, Judge Rector suggested to you probably, the very proceeding that is now going on here by this Senale, and to take out of the mouth of the Republican party in the North a hue and cry against the South which they would have if I did not offer a reward, and I deward, but stated that he did not believe it would effect any good, except to stop, probably, the very proceeding that do if the vote or the ballot-boxes in a State in a State in a County.

"Q. I did not say in the State; I said Washington County.

"A. No, sir; I do not know that I would, because we are not in the habit of doing it in matters of misdemeanor.

"Q. Then you did not offer a reward for the apprehension of men who raided the ballot-boxes, because it was a misdemeanor?

"A. Yes, sir; and because I was not requested to do it."

The public sentiment is further shown by the fact that Governor Ireland, ex-Congressman Hancock, and other leading lawyers of Texas, volunteered without fee to defend Kirk and others in August, 1887, when they were tried for conspiracy to "raid" the ballot-boxes. This fact will appear from the following testimony:

"Stephen A. Hackworth, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Senator SPOONER:

"By Senator Spooner:

"Q. Were you present at the trial of this case of the United States against Kirk and others, at Austin?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who prosecuted that case?

"A. Rudolph Kleberg, the United States district attorney, and Mr. Franklin, who was employed by the United States to assist Kleberg.

"Q. Is he the assistant district attorney?

"A. No, sir; he was specially employed for that case only.

"Q. Who defended the case?

"A. Ex-Governor Ireland, ex-Congressman John Hancock, Seth Shepherd, W. W. Searcy, known as "Buck" Searcy, and one or two Democratic lawyers around Austin whose names I do not remember.

"The Wirness. The attorneys for the defense filed pleas to have the indictments against the defendants dismissed upon the ground that United States district courts had no jurisdiction to try white citizens of a sovereign State for election offenses; that it only applied to colored citizens alone. The motion was argued for about three days. Finally, Judge Turner overruled the motion to dismiss the indictment and they went to trial. United States Senator Coke was at the trial and sat inside the bar with the defendants, Judge Kirk and his attorneys, engaged now and then in pleasant coversation with them, and his presence there was construed by the public to mean that be was there lending his aid and influence in creating a public sympathy in behalf of the defendants. I heard several remarks myself made by spectators on the outside, who said that there was no danger in the world of the defendants being convicted; that Senator Coke, ex-Governor Ireland, and Mr. Hancock, they believed, had influence enough with Judge Turner to induce him to dismiss the indictment, but if they were forced to trial they had not the least doubt they would be acquitted, notwithstanding what the evidence might be" (pages 658, 659).

After the trial a public meeting was held, at which resolutions of thanks to the defenders of Kirk and others were passed, and later an amount of money was raised by subscription sufficient to buy a gold-headed cane, which was presented to Mr. Shepherd. These facts are supported by testimony as below:

8. A. Hack worth testifies (page 660):

"After the trials were over—I believe some of the defendants were acquitted; there was a hung jury on one or two of the main counts in the indictments against Kirk—and the defendants went home a mass meeting was called in Brenham, in which thanks were returned to ex-Governor Ireland, ex-Congressman Hancock, Mr. Shepherd, and other attorneys for having defended the defendants from charges made against them and for baving done so without legal fee. As a matter of course they had a right to do that. But it is usual with attorneys in defending men charged with grave offenses to charge very high fees. I know that the entire influence of the Democratic press and the leading Democratic politicians of Texas has been used to prevent the conviction of these defendants."

Henry Muller, a Democrat, testifies (page 658):

Henry Muller, a Democrat, testifies (page 658):

"Q. Do you know of any public meeting being held there after the trial, at which resolutions of thanks to counsel were passed—to counsel who defended Kirk and others?

"A. Yes, sir; I heard of that.
"Q. Were you present at the meeting?
"A. No, sir.
"Q. Do you know who attended it?
"A. A number of citizens; I do not know who, though.
"Q. Was it a public meeting?
"A. Yes, sir; a public meeting?
"A. I think so; I am not certain.
"Q. Was it largely attended?
"A. I think so; I am not certain.

"A. Moderately so, I think."

J. T. Swearingen, esg., a Democrat and a propring a leader in Westlandow.

- J. T. Swearingen, esq., a Democrat and a prominent leader in Washington County, testifies (pages 687, 688):

"By Senator TELLER:

eral court?

"A. I don't know about any money being raised. There was a cane presented to some of them.

"Q. Presented to whom?

"A. I think it was to Mr. Shepherd.

"Q. Was he an attorney?

"A. He came from Dallas, some distance from Austin; he had been raised in our county, and was a personal friend of some of the men indicted. He came from Dallas down to Austin and defended them. He is a lawyer of prominence and ability, and his time is valuable. A cane was presented to him by the defendants and their friends.

"Q. A gold-headed cane?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. How was the money raised for that; do you know?

"A. I think it was raised by contributions.

"Q. How were the contributions collected? Was there a public call for contributions?

"A. No, sir; there was a public announcement of thanks for the attorneys. I think this contribution was just made by four or five of the boys putting in the money and going over to a jewelry store and ordering it. There was no subscription list.

"Q. Do you not know that there was money raised to defray the expenses of Judge Kirk and his associates and of the witnesses going down to Austin to this trial?

"A. No. sir: I don't know it at - trial?

  "A. No, sir; I don't know it of my own knowledge.

  "Q. Have you never heard of it?

  "A. I think I have heard something about that.

  "Q. Was it not a matter of common notoriety there?

  "A. It may have been; I don't know about that. I confine myself to my office generally and do not know everything that is going on.

  "Q. You did not participate in that?

  "A. I did not. I do not think that any demand was ever made upon me or I would have done so.

  "Q. You are pretty well satisfied, are you not, that there was a fund raised of some amount?

  "A. Not to call it a fund; there may have been some money raised to many the content of the some money."

some amount?

"A. Not to call it a fund; there may have been some money raised to pay the expenses of witnesses to Austin; that is very probable; but I do not think anything like a fund to pay attorneys' fees or to pay expenses there.

"Q. How did you understand these attorneys were paid?

"A. I don't think they were paid at all.

"Q. Were they volunteer attorneys?

"A. I think so.

"Q. Ex-Governor Ireland was one attorney, I believe; what other attorneys appeared?

"Q. Ex-Governor Ireland was one attorney, I believe; what other attorneys appeared?

"A. Mr. Seth Shepherd and Mr. Searcy, I suppose, were the defendants' attorneys in the case. There were quite a number of defendants in the case, and some of them may have retained other attorneys, and I think they did.

"Q. Were they all influential attorneys?

"A. Yes, sir."

The following extracts throw light on the public sentiment of Washington County, Texas, in regard to the subject of this investigation.

William Perry, a Democrat, testifies (page 439):

William Perry, a Democrat, testifies (page 439):

"Q. If the facts were as claimed by the negroes, what would you say about the killing of Bolton?

"A. I say it would be unjustifiable either by whites or blacks.

"Q. You would not think it was right to defend a ballot-box with a pistol against a man who was taking it with a pistol?

"A. I never saw any necessity for that,

"Q. But if the statement was true as the negroes claim? They claim that Bolton came in there with a pistol drawn and demanded the ballot-box at once, the first thing. Now, if that were true—you need not assume it was true—but if it was true, what would you say about his being killed: would you think it was a great outrage to kill a man under those circumstances?

"A. Yes, sir: I should think it was.

"Q. Suppose it had been a negro coming in there and demanding the ballot-box under those circumstances?

"A. I do not think they had any right to do it.

"Q. Would you surrender the box if you were in charge of it?

"A. I think I would most surely surrender it before I would risk my life the way our politics are.

"A. It might be wrong in one sense of the word; circumstances alter cases.

"Q. You would not think it was right to defend the box?

"A. It might be wrong in one sense of the word; circumstances alter cases.

"Q. So even if you had known that the facts were as claimed, you would still have considered the killing of Bolton a great outrage?

"A. Yes, sir; knowing all the facts about the matter I do consider it was a cold-blooded murder.

"Q. Without reference to what Bolton was doing or attempting to do?

"A. Yes, sir,

"Q. If a man should break into your house in the night-time and present a pistol

istol—

"A. Oh, that is a different circumstance.

"Q. But you would think you had a right to kill him, wouldn't you?

"A. That is a different thing.

"Q. I want to see how high you hold the right of voting, or the franchise of vote.

"A. I think every man is entitled to his vote.

"Q. But that right to vote you do not regard as much in value as you would a silver dollar that you might have in your pocket?

"A. I do not think they go together.

"Q. Which would justify you in killing the man who was trying to steal?

"A. I do not think they go together; I think it is a different thing altogether."

"In regard to Mr. Rouse and the conversation I had with him. It was in Julius McFarland's book-store in the presence of Jake Miller and others. We got to talking about the matter, and he was approving of the whole affair, and I asked him how he could do it, and he said. 'This is a white man's country, and they pay the taxes and ought to hold the offices.' I told him that was queertalk from an Englishman, for a man from a country where the laws were so strictly obeyed and carried out. He said it did not make any difference, that was his feeling. That is about all I have to state."

Mr. Rouse's testimony as to the conversation referred to above is as follows age 545):

- (page 545):

  "Q. Do you know Mr. Jodon?

  "A. Yes, sir; I do.

  "Q. Did you have a talk with him at Julius McFarland's book-store about the middle of December in the presence of John Scholl, Jack Miller, Mr. Allen, Captain Burt, and Julius McFarland?

  "A. Yes, sir; I recollect being there.

  "Q. Did you say, in that conversation, to Mr. Jodon that you approved of the Democrats taking the offices, as you believed in a white man's government; that the white men paid the taxes of the county and ought to have the offices?

  "A. No. sir; I did." say anything of the kind in that language.

  "A. Yes, sir; I did.

  "Q. Did you say anything of that kind in any language?

  "A. I said that where there were ignorant colored voters and white tax-payers, I thought the white tax-payers ought to rule the country; that is what I said.

"Q. Are you an American citizen?

"A. No, sir; I am an English citizen. I have lived twenty-seven years in this country; twenty-three years in the State of Texas, twenty years of which I have lived in the city of Brenham or in the county."

Judge Kirk testifies as follows in regard to the public meeting at Eldridge Hall, at which he offered resolutions expelling Hackworth, Moore, and others from the county (see pages 256, 257):

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. You knew at the time this meeting was held that the ballot-box at Flewellen had been stolen?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. You knew that it had been taken forcibly from the polls?

"A. No, sir; I do not know it yet.

"Mr. Eusris. There has not been a particle of evidence of that.

"The WITNESS, I can tell you what my information was on the subject.

"Q. You knew that the polls had been raided?

"A. I knew that Bolton had been killed, and so far as I could ascertain from all the information I could gather that they found next morning, when they went there and held an inquest, the ballot-boxes, ballots, and tally-sheets scattered all around. went there and held an inquest the ballot-boxes, ballots, and tany-sheets scattered all around,

"A. I knew that after the count had progressed to about 221 votes the box was taken.

"Q. You knew that while the count was being made it was interrupted and the ballot-box taken?

"A. I understood so.

"Q. You knew, too, that the men bearing the ballot-box from Lott's Store to the county seat had been stopped and the ballot-box taken from them?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did it occur to you in this law-and-order speech of yours to condemn those performances?

"A. Well, sir, I didn't say anything about it.

"Q. You confined yourself altogether to the character of the Republican can-

"Q. You confined yoursell altogether to the constraint of the variety of the outrages on the ballot-boxes?

"A. I alluded to that in my speech and to what I heard.

"Q. But you can not remember hearing any condemnation in that meeting of the outrages on the ballot-boxes?

"A. The speeches most generally which were spoken there were advocating the observance of law—

"Q. Will you kindly answer my question?

"A. I do not know that that was specifically mentioned.

"Q. Do you remember hearing any condemnation expressed of the assaults on Republican ballot-boxes?

"A. I do not remember that I did.

"Q. Don't you remember that I did.
"Q. Don't you remember that you did not?

"A. My best recollection is that I did not hear that mentioned specifically."

CONDUCT OF COUNTY AFFAIRS BY THE REPUBLICAN PARTY PRIOR TO ELECTION OF 1884.

OF 1884.

It was pressed upon the attention of the committee that the political issue in 1884 between the Republican ticket and the People's ticket was conducted upon the basis of an effort to change the political control of the county, because of incompretent and dishonest management of affairs by the Republicans and to retrieve the credit of the county.

The county government has been in the control of the Republican party from the close of the war until 1884, when the People's ticket was elected.

The larger part of this time was during the impoverished and disordered condition not only of Washington County, but of the whole or greater part of Texas. Not until 1876 was the sale of lands for taxes allowed by law, and as Washington County was almost wholly a region of farms and farmers the finances of the county were not prosperous, the treasury not full, its revenues anticipated by the issue of scrip for expenditures, and, necessarily, at fluctuating and depressed rates.

Prior to 1884 the credit of the county had been brought up; necessary and permanent improvements, such as building the jail, constructing bridges, and improving roads, had been made.

The most reliable statements before the committee show that the county scrip in 1883-84 sold at 85 to 90 and 95 per cent. The only contrast in this respect by displacing the Republican control shown by the testimony is that the scrip by 1885 or 1886 had risen to par.

There were also loose and general charges that defalcation had occurred during the broken state of things in the county while the Republicans had control, and that these incited the public mind to demand a change. Sifted, however, it was apparent that most of these charges were in the nature of political and electioneering clamor; that only two during the whole period were of substance enough to justify the imputation, and the cases were prosecuted either to conviction and punishment or acquittal. In neither case was the accused a colored person.

An extensive examination, and with liberal latitude of hearsay, was allowed by the committee on this head, although it could not be regarded as pertinent or valuable on the subject of the "raids" on the ballot-boxes, the slaying of Bolton, or the murder of the colored men. The committee call attention to a few passages from the testimony thought specific enough, in either aspect given to the topic, to justify their citation.

a few passages from the testimony thought specific enough, in either aspect given to the topic, to justify their citation.

J.S. Moore testifies as follows (see page 527):

"Q. What was county scrip worth when you first went to that county?

"A. When I first went there it was in 1867 or 1868, pretty soon after the war, and I do not know whether there was any then or not.

"Q. Things were in a pretty badly demoralized condition, and the credit of that and other counties were pretty bad, was it not?

"A. Yes, sir; I do not think it had any credit about that time.

"Q. The counties were poor and just beginning to pick up after the war?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. During the Republican administration, from that time out, how was the credit of the county, constantly improving or otherwise?

"A. It gradually improved. When I commenced paying attention to it scrip was down to 40 or 50 cents on the dollar, and it gradually went up until in 1884, when it was sometimes at par and sometimes at a small discount.

"Q. Up to 1876 lands were not allowed to be sold for the non-payment of taxes?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. And the land-owners of that county did not pay their taxes to any considerable extent?

"A. A great many of them refused to pay their taxes, and there was no way of forcing them to do it.

"Q. And the county treasury was therefore not by any means plethoric of money?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. After 1876 machinery was adopted by the Legislature for collecting unpaid taxes?

"A. Yes, sir. The present constitution went into effect changing the tax laws.

"A. Yes, sir, The present constitution went into effect changing the tax laws.

"Q. And from that time the credit of the county improved?

"A. Yes, sir; because they could enforce the collection of taxes.

"Q. And from that time the credit of the county improved?
"A. Yes, sir; because they could enforce the collection of taxes.
"Q. Were there any improvements made in the county under Republican administration?
"A. Yes, sir; they commenced then a new court-house and a jail.
"Q. How many defalcations were there by Republican office-holders?
"A. Only two that I know of.
"Q. There has been some talk here on the part of witnesses about the general stealing and waste by Republican office-holders?
"A. I do not remember but two cases, one the tax collector and the other the county treasurer.

"A. I do not remember but two cases, one the tax collector and the other the county treasurer.

"Q. Two in how many years?

"A. I do not remember but two having occurred during my residence there, which has been for nineteen years; that is all I can remember. There was something said about some school vouchers being forged within the last two or three years, but I don't know whether that amounts to a defalcation."

Lafayette Kirk, the Democratic judge, testifies as follows (see pages 278-280):

"Q. You referred to the fact that the credit of your county was low. Do you issue county orders or certificates there?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What do you mean by the credit of the county; do you mean that they could not borrow money?

"A. Whenever a man does a piece of work for the county, under a contract or otherwise, he goes to the county clerk and scrip is issued, and goes to the treasurer and if there is any money it is paid.

"Q. When you say the credit is poor and sometimes ran from 25 to 75 cents on the dollar, you mean the price of the county scrip?

"A. I said it ran from 40 to 75 cents.

"Q. I beg pardon. You mean the price of the county scrip?

"A. Yes, sir; I mean the county scrip.

"By Mr. Eustis:

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"Q. What is the scrip worth now?
"A. It is worth dollar per dollar.
"Q. How long has it been worth that?
"A. For about two years.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. When was it worth 40 cents?

"A. It has been several years since it was worth 40 cents.

"Q. Do you know any counties in Texas whose scrip sold higher than 40 cents immediately after the war?

"A. I do not know what it sold for.

"Q. The country was impoverished?

"A. At that time I was so young I did not know what the scrip sold for.

"Q. When do you remember any of the scrip to have sold at 40 cents in Washington County?

"A. I do not know that, except by general reputation and hearsay.

"Q. It is so long ago that you do not know anything about it yourself?

"A. I have not examined the records myself personally to see.

"Q. Then you do not know much about it, do you?

"A. I know that the county credit had varied from 40 to 75 cents on the dollar.

ollar.

"Q. But when it was 40 cents you do not know?

"A. It was about ten years ago, I think, when it was down that low.

"Q. Did it constantly improve from that time on?

"A. It got some little better.

"Q. It went from 40, under Republican administration, up to 75?

"A. Yes, sir; about that.

"Q. No higher?

"A. I do not know.

"Q. If you do not know, why do you say it was 75?

"A. I say it varied from 40 to 75. A few years ago it might have got better.

"Q. Better than 75?

"A. It might; a little better than 75.

"Q. Did it, in fact, go up to 95?

"A. I do not think it ever did.

"Q. Did it go up to 99?

"A. I think, maybe, it got to 85 or 90 at times; it fluctuated.

"Q. It went from 40 under a Republican administration to 85 or 90?

"A. Yes, sir; that is so.

"Q. What was it when the honest administration went into power in 1884?

"A. The commissioners' courts have control of county affairs, and there had been some good men on the commissioners' court for several years.

"Q. Were they Democrats or Republicaes?

"A. Republicans.

"Q. Is that possible?

"A. Yes, sir; quite possible.

"Q. So that the credit was pretty fair?

"A. It had been improving, sir.

"Q. How much has it improved since 1884?

"A. It is dollar for dollar now.

"Q. What was it then?

"A. There were some debts against the county then and there was no money in the treasury to pay off any of the scrip, but when the taxes were collected—

"Q. What was it then?

"A. It was worth about 90 cents on the dollar,

"Q. With no money in the county treasury?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You call that pretty fair credit, do you not?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Then, when you said that the course of Republican administration had been one of malfeasance and defalcation in destroying the credit of the county you did not quite mean that, did you?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. I mean that exactly.

"Q. That is, in these two instances of defalcation?

"A. Well, very few.

"A. Well, very few.

"Q. Why did you say so?

"A. There was a jail built, that is the only thing I know of.

"Q. Why did you say there were not many; it amounted to nothing.

"Q. You say t

"Q. What do you mean, then, when you say there were no public improvements?

"A. I mean to say there were not many; it amounted to nothing.

"Q. You say there was a jail built?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. When was that jail built?

"A. Some years ago; I do not know how many years."

John Ireland, ex-governor of Texas, testifies as follows (see pages 341-343):

"Q. I understood you to say something about the revenues of the county. Let us see; they had a Republican administration in that county from the reconstruction days down to two years ago, did they not?

"A. Until two or three years ago, or four years ago.

"Q. Well, down to 1884?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Then for the first time a Democratic ticket was elected?

"A. A Democratic, or Conservative, or People's ticket I believe they call it.

"Q. I understood you to say that from the reconstruction days down to the election of this ticket in 1884 the revenues of that county had been wasted and stolen?

election of this ticket in 1884 the revenues of that county had been wasted and stolen?

"A. I mentioned that as one of the items; yes, sir.

"Q. It is as to that item that I desire to interrogate you briefly. Will you be a little more specific, if you please, on that subject?

"A. I am not able to specify, not living in that neighborhood, but it is a matter of notoriety that their revenues were destroyed, wasted, and stolen, to the amount, in one case, I think of $20,000 or $25,000.

"Q. But the term during which the Republicans had the administration of affairs in that county was from the reconstruction days, as I understand it, down to 1884, a good many years. The general charge which I understood you to make against the Republican administration of the county is that during those years the revenues were wasted and stolen?

"A. No; I repeat to you that I only mention that as one item, and I did not intend to say that the revenues during the whole time had been wasted or stolen.

stolen.  $^{\circ}Q_{\circ}$  I understand that was one of the items, but that was your statement in

"Q. I understand that was one of the items, but that was your statement in connection with that item?
"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Now I want to know what Republican officials during those years were found to have been defaulters?

"A. I am not able to mention them.

"Q. I do not care as to the names; I only want to know as to the office?
"A. I think it was a county treasurer, though I am not positive.

"Q. What other one?
"A. There was no other. I can not specify whether there were any sheriffs or collectors.

"Q. What other one?

"A. There was no other. I can not specify whether there were any sheriffs or collectors.

"Q. I want to ask you, then, to name the Republican county officials who, during the years of Republican administration in that county down to 1884, were found to have improperly used any of the public moneys?

"A. I repeat that I can not name them, because I only know that revenues were destroyed and wasted.

"Q. That is a pretty general indictment against the men who held those offices. I would like to have some specifications.

"A. A man not living there and not being personally interested could not specify, and I can not do it. I repeat to you that I can not do it.

"Q. Then you know nothing about it except that you have heard that the Republican county treasurer defaulted to the extent of twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars; is that true?

"A. Yes, sir; that is true.

"Q. And that is the only specific offense or the only instance which you can give upon which you base your assertion that the revenues were wasted and the moneys stolen, is it?

"A. Yes; that is the only instance which I can mention.

"Q. Do you consider that an adequate foundation for the broad charge you made, that during those years the revenues were wasted and the public moneys stolen?

"A. I repeat to you Senator, that I did not intend to say that the revenues."

stolen?

"A. I repeat to you, Senator, that I did not intend to say that the revenues during those years were wasted and stolen. I intended to mention that as an item that occurred during those years.

"Q. Then all you mean to be understood as saying on that subject is that one county officer during those years was found to have been a defaulter to the extent of $25,000?

"A. Yes, sir; that is all.

- "Q. Then you do not mean to say at all, having reference to the current administration from year to year in that county, that they were found to have been dishonest or wasted the public moneys?

  "A. No, sir; I do not mean to say that.
- "Q. Then you do not undertake to criticise from personal knowledge or in any specific way the methods which have been ordinarily resorted to by the Republicans of Washington County?
   "A. No, sir; I have no personal knowledge of the subject."
   B. S. Rogers, the Democratic county attorney, testifies as follows (see page

B. S. Rogers, the Democratic county attorney, testifies as follows (see page 555):

"Q. Excuse me for repeating the question, but how long do you say you have lived in the county?

"A. I have lived in Washington County since 1866.

"Q. From the time of your advent into the county down to 1884 the general administration of the county had been Republican, had it not?

"A. Yes, sir, so called.

"Q. Except now and then some individual candidate was elected to some office?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Do you know what the credit of the county was in 1884?

"A. I think scrip was perhaps about 80 to 85 cents in 1884.

"Q. Some of the witnesses have put it at 90 to 95.

"A. Perhaps it was. I think I sold some at 80 to 85 cents.

"Q. About what was it when the Republicans took hold; what was it when you first knew about it in 1866?

"A. I do not know that I could state what it was for that year; it ran down as low as 20 to 25 cents on the dollar under their administration.

"Q. When?

"A. That was along in the seventies, I think.

"Q. Then it increased right along?

"A. No, sir; there was a good deal of increase from 25 to 95 cents?

"A. Yes, sir; but they did not run it then.

"Q. In 1884, before the People's ticket was elected, was it not 85 to 95?

"A. I think it was about 85 when we went into office.

"Q. That came about under Republican administration?

"A. It do not know that it did.

"Q. It was while the general administration of the county was Republican, was it not?"

"A. Well, there were two or three Democrats in office; there was a Demo-

  "A. Well, there were two or three Democrats in office; there was a Democratic treasurer, a Democratic prosecuting attorney, and a Democratic country cratic treasurer. elerk.

  "Q. But it reached 85, you think?

  "A. During all these years it ranged from 20 up to about 85 cents."

  "A. During all these years it ranged from 20 up to about 85 cents."

RUMORS OF POSSIBLE INSURRECTION IN SOME INDEFINITE REGIONS IS AN ELE-MENT IN THE DISORDERS OF THE ELECTION OR ITS SEQUEL.

A favorable aspect was undertaken in the testimony to be given to the excesses in suppression of the suffrage, and in the violence which followed it, by imputing them to excitement, rage, and terror from rumors and fears of insurrection at some indefinite points in the county. The committee find no support of this suggestion as matter of fact, nor do they conceive that any such apprehension was felt in that direction at Brenham or elsewhere. The rumors seem to have been mere inventions to cover or palliate the outrages and to extinguish any tendency to reaction in favor of a just resentment against the law-breakers, and to anticipate any such movement.

Some extracts that seem most pertinent to this topic will dispel any notion that any honest suspicion ever excited fear in any one.

Florent D. Jodon, a prohibitionist, testifies as follows (see page 185):

"Q. There was talk there, was there not, of an anticipated negro insurrection."

"Q. There was talk there, was that there was any foundation for that?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Do you know whether or not there was any foundation for that?

"A. None in the world. I have heard good Democrats and other parties talking about it and ridiculing the idea.

"Q. But threats were being made there against various leading Republicans?

"A. Oh, yes, sir; they were so common that I did not even take upon my memory the names of those who made them.

"Q. Do you remember hearing any threats from the Republicans?

"A. No, sir; none whatever."

S. A. Hackworth testifies as follows (see page 230):

"Q. There were rumors there, were there not, of alleged or pretended negro uprisings?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was there, so far as you know, the slightest foundation for any such

"Q. Was there, so far as you know, the slightest foundation for any such rumor?

"A. No, sir; and no one else thought so. The Democrats knew it, and the whole matter was gotten up to keep up the spirit of mob violence every time the excitement would die down. I put about three thousand copies of this circular all over the county, and that began to create a favorable reaction in our behalf, and then they would get up a report of a negro insurrection. There was never any negro insurrection in the county. They knew the advice we had given the colored people. We had told the colored people repeatedly during the canvass that in the event a fight was brought on between the Republicans and the white Democrats, they were to leave immediately and go home and take no part in it, and let the white Republicans and Democrats fight it out among themselves. We did not want the colored men to be mixed up in any row. We knew that the moment a colored man killed a white man it would furnish a pretext to bring on a negro massacre.

"Q. Then there was no foundation for any such rumor?

"A. No, sir; there was no more foundation for it than to suppose the negroes would create an insurrection here in Washington City; not a bit."

William H. Blount testifies as follows (see page 129):

William H. Blount testifies as follows (see page 129):

"Q. You had been in office in that county before?

"A. Yes, sir; I served as county commissioner for three years in the county.

"Q. During l883 and 1884.

"Q. Had you heard at any time about that election, or after it, of any threatened uprising among the negroes, the colored people, against the whites?

"A. Yes, sir. It was rumored all over the country that the negroes were about to have an insurrection in the lower part of my precinct, down there in the Graball settlement, and I also heard one day, I forgot what time of the month it was, that it was reported about Brenham that I had organized about one hundred negroes with bayonets, and that we were coming to slaughter the white people. I heard that on the road going to Brenham, and if they had run across me they might have pulled me on a limb, and I dodged out of the way.

"Q. Was there the slightest foundation for those reports that the colored people were contemplating rising?

"A. No, sir; I do not think they did.

Q. Or were they contemplating running?
A. Yes, sir. The only rising was their going on their heels and getting in thickets and gullies and out of the way, so far as I know."

O. B. Potter testifies as follows (see page 614):

O. B. Potter testifies as follows (see page 614):

"Mr. JODON. Now, this negro uprising in Brenham, that has been spoken about, I will ask you in relation to. Did the people believe it was going to happen, or did they ridicule the idea?

"The WITNESS. There was nobody who thought of any negro uprising there; in fact, it was very difficult to get a negro to stick his head out of his cabin. The negroes were so scared and badly frightened, all of them, that they were keeping very dark; nobody had any anticipation of any uprising that I ever heard of."

Lafayette Kirk, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 261, 262):

"Q. Was there any uprising or arming of the negroes?

"A. It was generally so reported.

"Q. But I am talking about the fact.

"A. I never saw any uprising of the negroes.

"Q. And you do not know of any uprising of the negroes?

"A. I do not know of any uprising.

"A. I do not know of any uprising.

"Q. And you do not know of any threats among the negroes of an uprising, o you? do you?
"A. No, sir; I do not."

Fricke testifies as follows (pages 158, 159):

Fricke testifies as follows (pages 158, 159):

"Q. There were rumors of a negro insurrection there?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Do you know of any foundation for any such reports?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. There was a great excitement among the negroes, I suppose?

"A. They all kept themselves mighty close in their houses; they were afraid to talk to anybody, so far as I could see and hear.

"Q. Did you hear of any threats being made by Republicans against anybody?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. The threats came from the Democracy, did they?

"A. Yes, sir; they did that.

"Q. Did you know of any Republicans, leading Republicans, creating or attempting to get up an excitement?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. How about Democrate?

"A. It was just the reverse."

Harry Haynes, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 410-418):

Harry Haynes, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 410-418):

"A. It was just the reverse."

Harry Haynes, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 410-418):

"Q. What expression of feeling was given by that meeting while they were in session; what was the character of the speeches, if there were any?

"A. There were several speeches made which were distinguished for conservatism, the result of which was that we determined we had achieved the victory and would hold to it.

"Q. What evidence did you have that there were any persons organized in the county to prevent the lawful result of the election from being recognized and enforced?

"A. Well, in some parts of the county I suppose they had ocular evidence of it, but in my section of the county we had nothing more than current rumor. We were connected by telegraph and telephone with other sections of the county, and through this medium of communication we had been informed that in the eastern part of the county these insurrections, riots, rebellions, or whatever you choose to term them, were being organized. I suppose in the eastern part of the county we saw nothing of the sort, except that the town in which I live, a village situated 15 miles north of Brenham, was entirely deserted by the male colored population. It was a notorious fact that for tworty-four hours not a negro man was seen in the town, nor scarcely any who were able to go away at all.

"Q. At what point was that?

"A. At Independence. The women were very closely housed, but the men had all gone, and we have never been able to find out just exactly where they went. The supposition with us was that they had gone to the eastern part of the county to join these mobs that were being organized. We have no positive evidence, however, to that end. There were usually a good may colored people in our town, but for twenty-four or thirty-six hours we did not see a colored mon there at all, and that confirmed the rumors we had received that these mobs were being organized in different parts of the county.

"Q. You say there were very grave apprehensions in the communi

"Q. You say there were very grave apprehensions in the community of a negro insurrection?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You have lived in Texas all your life?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And were living there during the war?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. There were as many colored people probably in that section as now?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Was there any insurrection there during the war?

"A. None that I heard of.

"Q. Did you ever hear of any negro insurrection anywhere in your section during the war?

"A. I do not recall any just at this moment.

"Q. Do you recollect any which have occurred since the war?

"A. Well, no, sir.

"Q. But you thought then that there must be an insurrection because the men were not there at home?

"A. I think it argued in that direction."

J. M. Wesson (see pages 545-457):

J. M. Wesson (see pages 545-457):

"J. M. Wesson, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: "By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. What is your full name?
"A. J. M. Wesson.
"Q. How old are you?
"A. I am twenty-three years of age.
"Q. Where do you live?
"A. In Navasota, Grimes County, Texas.
"Q. What is your business?
"A. I am a lawyer by profession.
"Q. Are you in the militia?
"A. Yes, sir; I am captain of a militia company there.
"Q. In November last were you and your company ordered to Graball?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. By whom?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Is he the adjutant-general of the State?
"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What was that telegram?
"A. I haven't the telegram with me, but as near as I remember it"Mr. Spooner. See if this was it; I guess it was: "'AUSTIN, TEX., November 8.

"'Capt. J. M. WESSON, Navasota:

"'Put your company under arms and report to J. H. Roberts, secretary of the citizens' meeting. Preserve the peace at all hazards.
"'W. H. KING, Adjutant-General.'

"The WITNESS. That is the telegram.

"Q. How many men did you take with you?

"A. Sixteen men of my company besides myself.

"Q. You went to Graball at once?

"A. Yes, sir; to Lott's Store, very near to Graball—a mile and a half on the other side of Graball,

"Q. When did you get there?

"A. I got there about half past 11 o'clock that night.

"Q. What day of the month was it?

"A. It was the 8th of November.

"Q. What day of the month was it?

"A. It was the 8th of November.

"Q. To whom did you report?

"A. When I arrived there I found some members of the citizens' committee. I did not go to Mr. Roberts's house; I sent some of my men there, though. We were distributed then among the houses of the citizens in the vicinity. I think three of the men went to one house, and they were distributed around in that way. There was no reporting done to any one that night, though I reported to Mr. Roberts next morning at a citizens' meeting held near Lott's Store.

"Q. You went there armed and equipped?

"A. We went as militiamen to preserve the peace.

"Q. What did you understand from Mr. Roberts or the citizens was the occasion of your going there?

"A. I understood that they had been alarmed by reports from the negroes in the vicinity; that they apprehended trouble with them.

"Q. What do you mean by trouble?

"A. They apprehended that their houses would be burned and that they would be attacked.

"Q. That the white people would be?

"A. Yes, sir; the white people—the white Democrats of the vicinity.

would be attacked.

"Q. That the white people would be?

"A. Yes, sir; the white people—the white Democrats of the vicinity,
"Q. In other words, you understood there would be an uprising of the negroes in that locality?

"Mr. Spooner, He is an intelligent man; let him tell.

"Q. I ask you if that is true?

"A. Yes; that is what they apprehended or what they seemed to apprehend,
"Q. And that is what you understood was the reason and occasion of your going there as the captain of a militia company?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Ordered there by the adjutant-general of the State?

"A. Yes, sir.

"O. How long did you remain the second of the state?

"O. How long did you remain the second of the state?

"A. Yes, sir.

"A. We arrived there, as I said, about 11 o'clock on the night of the 8th, and we remained there all day on the 9th, leaving about sundown, and returning to Navasota.

Navasota.

"Q. You say you scattered your men around?

"A. I scattered them around that night for lodgings. As I say, next morning we all got together and remained together while we were in the county.

"Q. Where did you remain together, at what place?

"A. As I said, they had a meeting near Lott's Store, and we left Lott's Store and went to Flewellen, where the klining of Bolton had taken place.

"Q. How far is that from Lott's Store?

"A. I should judge it was about 4 miles. We got there about 10 or 11 o'clock the next morning and remained there several hours, and then returned home by a somewhat circuitous route; it was sundown before we got out of the county.

by a somewhat circuitous route; it was sundown before we got out of the county.

"Q. When you left everything appeared to be quiet?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And you considered that you had fulfilled your orders?

"A. Yes, sir; I saw no further necessity for remaining.

"Q. Did you make any report to the adjutant-general?

"A. Yes, sir; in writing. I reported that I had gone to the country as directed and had returned, as I saw no further necessity for my staying there.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was not everything quiet and peaceable when you arrived there?
"A. So far as I saw; beyond the alarm of the citizens I saw no demonstration of violence on the part of any one.
"Q. And nothing to warrant you in the supposition that such a thing had been thought of among the negroes, was there?
"A. No more than the testimony of the darkies, which I considered unworthy of belief entirely.
"Q. You went there from another county?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. It did not take you long to become satisfied that there was nothing in this apprehension of the people there?
"A. I can not say that I did come to the conclusion that there was nothing in the but I felt satisfied there would be no more.
"Q. There had not been any trouble, had there?
"A. There had been these reports by the negroes.
"Q. That was not trouble?
"A. But it was sufficient to cause an apprehension of trouble.
"Q. But you were not satisfied that there would be no more reports; the presence of your company diu not prevent reports being circulated?

"A. No, sir. What I mean is I consider that the display of force made by my company was sufficient.

"Q. How many men did you have?
"A. I had sixteen men under me, and I considered that display of force would be sufficient to prevent the darkies from making the attack, which I have no doubt they had talked about. Whether they seriously contemplated to the can not say.

"Q. You got there about what time?
"A. About 11 o'clock.
"Q. When did you leave?
"A. We got to Navasota about half-past 9 in the evening.
"Q. You had a pretty good time while you were there, did you not?
"The WITNESS. Do you mean in Washington County?
"Mr. SPOONER; Yes.
"A. No, sir; I can not say that we had any enjoyable time at all. It was raining, and we rode there through the rain.

"Q. Of course if the weather was not pleasant you did not. You did not have occasion to shoot anybody?

"A. No, sir; we never shot anybody.

"Q. Nor arrest anybody?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Nor make any hostile demonstrations with your sixteen men to arrest "A. No, sir."

J. H. Roberts, Democrat, testified as follows (see page 349):

"Q. State what you know about the sending of telegrams for troops.
"A. I have a telegram here that I sent off [producing the telegram].
"Q. You say there was a meeting held?
"A. Yes, sir; there was a meeting held.
"Q. Where was it held?
"A. It was held at the Baptist church, in the neighborhood.

"By Mr. TELLER:

"Q. Was it held at Graball?
"A. No, sir; not at Graball, but about 2 miles from Graball.

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. What was the meeting for?

"A. After the killing of Bolton out at this voting precinct of Flewellen the county was under a good deal of excitement, and there was a report came into the neighborhood there that the negroes—this was on Sunday, after the killing of Bolton. Bolton, you understand, was killed on the night of the election.

"Q. You mean he was killed on the night of the election, and on the next Sunday, sire the was killed on the night of the election, and they were so thoroughly stirred up and excited about the arrest of these parties, you know, that had been accused of killing Bolton that they would not go in the house to hear the preacher at all. They sat outside caucussing among themselves, and they made some threats and said if these negroes were not turned loose by Thursday that they intended to rise and release the negroes and massacre the white people. That was the news that was brought to the white people of the neighborhood. The news was brought in the neighborhood and a meeting of the people called. In that end of the county the niggers outnumbered us about six to one, and we were completely at their merey, and held a meeting and decided on calling for help, and that was the origin of that dispatch.

"Q. Were you secretary of the meeting."

"A. Yes, sir; I was secretary of the meeting.

"A. Yes, it hat is the dispatch, ou sent [handing a dispatch to the witness]?

"A. Yes; that is the dispatch had better go in evidence."

"The following is the telegram had better go in evidence.

"Courtney, November 8, 1885—5 p. m.

"COURTNEY, November 8, 1885-5 p. m.

"'Send to Lott's Store, immediately, fifty armed men, on horseback. Weap prehend an insurrection from the negroes. "'J. H. ROBERTS,

"By Mr. Eusris.

"Q. State whether your request for those troops was complied with by the sheriff.

"A. Yes, sir; it was. He came down with about sixteen or eighteen men."

Sheriff Dever, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 625, 626):

Sheriff Dever, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 625, 626):

"Mr. Jodon. From whom was the insurrection apprehended?

"The Witness. From the negroes.

"Mr. Jodon. Within your knowledge as sheriff was there any basis whatever for supposing there would be an uprising of the negroes?

"The Witness. I really did not think so.

"Mr. Jodon. Have you ever learned anything since which would make you believe it?

"The Witness. I did not apprehend any danger, except when I received that telegram and went down there. There are but few white people in that end of the county, and the women and children down there were terribly frightened. That was the cause of that meeting and the cause of that telegram being sent to me.

"Mr. Jodon. Did you of your own knowledge, up to that time, know of any acts by negroes pointing to an insurrection, or have you ever learned since anything which show that they intended to rise?

"The Witness. No, sir; I do not know that I did.

"Mr. Jodon. It is not acknowledged in Washington County that there was no ground whatever for the belief that the negroes would uprise in an insurrection?

"The Witness. Well, only those people being scared, and the day we went down there you could not see any of the negroes or but year.

rection?

"The Witness. Well, only those people being scared, and the day we went down there you could not see any of the negroes, or but very few.

"Mr. Jodon. Don't you know from general report that the negroes were so scared that they had hidden out; don't you know that that has since developed as the reason they were absent, that they were too scared to come out?

"The Witness. I do not know what was the cause. They have come out since, and there is no trouble.

"Mr. Jodon. Have you not heard that was the reason, that they were so badly scared that they did not dare to show themselves; haven't you heard that talked of?

of?
"The WITNESS. Yes, sir."

D. Kirk, Democrat, testifies as follows (see pages 274, 275):

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"Q. What were you going to say about Mr. Roberts?

"A. I was going to say that Mr. Roberts went down in that section of country known as the black belt, and he sent a telegram up there a few days after the killing of Bolton, stating that he believed there would be an uprising, and requesting the sheriff to come down there with a posse of armed men. As soon as that report was made known there the sheriff and others telephoned to Chapel Hill and Independence this report of this apprehended uprising, and the sheriff got a number of men from Brenham to go down there, and they did go, and healwas a military conveny came. and perhaps a military company came.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. And he found there was nothing in it?
"A. He found there was no uprising.

"Q. Was it not generally understood that these men whom the sheriff met were going to Brenham to hang the negroes?
"A. There were conflicting reports about that.
"Q. What did the sheriff tell you about that?
"A. The sheriff told me that they reported to him and fell in with him,
"Q. What did they report about it?
"A. That they had received these telephone messages that were telephoned from Brenham. I had telephoned myself both to Chapel Hill and to Independence, and also to Navasota. I think they met him half way between Brenham and Grabali.

and Grabali.

"Q. Do you remember what you said in those telephone messages?

"A. I do not remember my exact language.

"Q. Do you remember what you said?

"A. No, sir; I do not remember.

"Q. State as near as you can recollect it.

"A. I just told them that there were wild rumors of uprising down there somewhere in that Graball country.

"By Mr. EUSTIS:

"Q. Uprising by whom?

"A. By the negroes, and that the sheriff had gone down there, and telephoned some of them to go. I said I telephoned to Navasota, and I believe I responded to a telephone from there. They had heard of it from some source and asked about it, and I told them the best I could."

Fricke testifies as follows (see page 113):

Fricke testifies as follows (see page 113):

"Q. What was your understanding as to the object and purpose of the meeting?

"A. My understanding of the purpose of the meeting was to see what was to be done with those Republicans—scalawags as they called them—who had been inciting insurrection and rebellion and all that kind of thing, as they claimed.

"Q. Had there been any insurrection or rebellion?

"A. Not that I know of.

"Q. Had there been any uprising among the negroes?

"A. Not that I know of.

"Q. Had there been any threatened uprising among the negroes?

"A. Not that I know of.

"Q. Had there been, to your knowledge, any violence, except the raiding of the ballot-boxes and the hanging of those colored men?

"A. None, except the shooting of Bolton.

"Q. He was one of the men who raided the ballot-box?

"A. Yes, sir; he was one of the men, I understand.

"Q. Was there any foundation, so far as you know, for the rumors as to an alleged negro uprising?

"A. I think they were manufactured by the Democrats for the purpose of creating a pretext for them to commit outrages on the Republican leaders of Washington County.

"Q. I say, was there, to your knowledge, any foundation for those rumors?

"A. Not the slightest, except the foundation created by the rumors themselves, which were circulated in the county by the Democrats for the purpose stated by me.

"Q. Do you know of any real movement on the part of the negroes to uprise against the whites?

"A. They had no disposition to do it, or cause to do it, or inclination to do it.

"Q. Do you know of their having been counseled them when they made

"Q. Do you know of their having been counseled by prominent Republicans to it?

"A. On the contrary, the Republicans had counseled them when they made contracts with the farmers, the land-owners, to stand up to their contracts and carry them out in good faith, but when they made a contract to sell the land-owner their labor or their produce to be careful not to sell them their vote; not to sell to the Democrats there the colored men's Republican vote; not to try to intimidate Democrats and require them to vote the Republican ticket, and, on the other hand, not to be induced, bought, or persuaded by Democrats to vote the Democratic ticket. That is about the kind of argument we used to them.

"Q. Was there any excitement at the time of the election in Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir; just after the election, and it continued until the time when I left there.

"Q. Was there any excitement at the time of the election in Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir; just after the election, and it continued until the time when I left there.

"Q. So far as you know by whom, by what men, and for what purpose was that excitement brought about and stimulated?

"A. For the purpose of breaking up the Republican party and getting rid of the Republican leaders. It was brought about by Democrats circulating false reports and having false publications made in their organ, the Brenham Banner.

"Q. Reports of what; of the uprising on the part of the negroes?

"A. Yes, sir; and threats of violence.

"Q. There was an alleged apprehension of an uprising?

"A. It was a pretended apprehension of an uprising; but, as I understood it, they were merely circulating those reports in order to create a pretext to get excited themselves and to aid them in breaking up the Republican party and driving off its leaders.

"Q. What was the general sentiment there as to the ticket which had been elected in that county by the votes cast?

"A. The general impression was that the Republican ticket had been elected.

"Q. Was the talk at that time of contesting the election?

"A. Yes."

Carl Schutze testifies as follows (see page 206):

Carl Schutze testifies as follows (see page 205):

"Q. Were bullets shot into the car?

"A. I did not see any. I do not know whether the shots were fired into the car or not, but they were close up to it.

"Q. Was there any foundation whatever, so far as you know, for these rumors that were circulated of a negro uprising?

"A. No, sir,

"Q. Did you hear of any threats made by the Republicans, or were the threats that were made entirely confined to the Democrats?

"A. Yes; they were entirely confined to the Democrats."

S. A. Hackworth testifies as follows:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Did you hear of any threats being made by Republicans?
"A. None at all.
"Q. White or black?

"A. No, sir.
"Q. Did you hear any propositions of insurrection from colored people?
"A. None in the world; no, sir.
"Q. Who circulated those reports of threatened and apprehended insurrection? tion :

"A. All the news we got about it was from the Democrats.

"Q. Do you remember any prominent Democrats who were officious and active in creating excitement there, and perpetuating it?

"A. Yes, sir; I know of a good many who were.

"Q. Name some of them; who were they?

"A. Mr. C. C. Boyd is one that I would hear talking a good deal; and I heard of Mr. Tristam talking, and Mr. Leman talking.

"Q. How about Judge Kirk?

"A. I have heard of his talking, too, a great deal.

"Q. Then these rumors of apprehended violence from the negroes came from the Democrats?

"A. Yes, sir; altogether."

ALLEGED I .. CENDIARY SPEECHES AT REPUBLIC IN MEETINGS DURING THE CAN-

Some color was sought to be given to the excitement in Washington County which followed the election by assigning as a contributory cause of the excesses which marked the election and its sequel the making of what were stigmatized as incendiary speeches at Republican meetings, or at political gatherings of col-

as incendiary speeches at Republican meetings, or at political gatherings of colored voters.

The committee allowed a wide range in the testimony in support and in refutation of these accusations. It seemed but fair that every opportunity should be given to present the canvass, as bearing upon this point, as accurately and intelligently as possible. The exploration of this subject has, the committee thinks, demonstrated that the accusations themselves were vague and mere hearsay; that the imputations, when reduced to any definite expressions, came to nothing more serious than the ordinary methods of political argument and persuasion; that the infusion into these arguments of any race prejudices or preferences in the canvass did not transcend the legitimate and natural scope of party zeal for candidates, and that any stimulant to passion and disorder was entirely absent from the canvass. As to any combination or incentive to accomplish any results by violence, the Republican speakers and the colored assemblages were entirely exonerated by the testimony from any such charges. A perusal of the following extracts from the testimony will, the committee submit, extinguish any impression that 'incendiary speeches' entered into the canvass, and will justify its conclusion that no substantial or reasonable support for such imputations ever had any basis in fact.

Lafavette Kirk, the Democratic judge, testifies as follows (see page 259):

Lafayette Kirk, the Democratic judge, testifies as follows (see page 259):

Lafayette Kirk, the Democratic judge, testifies as follows (see page 259):

"Q. You consider it a pretty serious thing not to allow a man, white or black, a citizen of the United States, to live where he chooses, do you not?

"A. Yes, sir; I do.

"Q. What had these men done that they should be driven from Washington County, and no longer permitted to live there in that community?

"A. I do not think any of them were driven from the county.

"Q. What had they done that they should be compelled to cease doing under penalty of exile?

"A. As I say, I considered their course and conduct in the canvass—

"Q. What course and what conduct?

"A. The character of speeches they made,

"Q. What character of speeches?

"A. Speeches calculated to arouse the prejudices and passions of the negroes.

"Q. In what way did they do that?

"A. By appeals to their prejudices and passions, and by lies and falsehoods,

"Q. The lies they were telling about you was the principal thing that aggravated you?

"Q. In what way did they do that?

"A. By appeals to their prejudices and passions, and by lies and falsehoods.

"Q. The lies they were telling about you was the principal thing that aggravated you?

"A. It did provoke me a great deal.

"Q. Tell us some speech that any one of these men made, and what it was that caused their being put to that alternative to either stop making Republican speeches of that kind or leave the county?

"A. It was not so much the speeches they would make as the applause and countenance they would give to speeches made by negroes.

"Q. What have you in mind now?

"A. On one occasion there was a negro, a Republican canvasser, and in the course of his remarks he appealed to his colored friends, and he said, 'You can not east with the white people, you can not sleep with the Dennocrate, you can not associate with them, and what do you want to vote for them for?' And these gentlemen, whenever they were present, when such expressions were made use of, would become convulsed with laughter and would applaud vociferously. not eat with the white people, you can not sleep with the Democrats, you can not associate with them, and what do you want to vote for them for?' And these gentlemen, whenever they were present, when such expressions were made use of, would become convulsed with laughter and would appliad voeiferously.

"Q. Your idea was that they must be prohibited from becoming convulsed with laughter when they found something to laugh at or leave the county? "A. The reason that induced me to make the statement was—"Q. I want to get at the offenses these men had committed. One you say is that they became convulsed with laughter when some negro said that they could not eat or sleep with Democrats. That negro did not lie much, did he? "A. He was exactly right so far as that was concerned; but I do not think that was a Republican speech which ought to be made.

"Q. You do not hold the party or its leaders responsible for everything that a man would say?

"A. I do, when their laughter induces them to say it; when by their conduct and actions, by their applause or otherwise, they encourage it.

"Q. Uhe applanded?

"A. At this particular time one of the memorialists, Jim Moore, was present."

Q. Did he laugh, snicker, snort, or what?

"A. He was very vociferous in his applause, indicating his approval of what the negro said.

"Q. The negro said that no negro could sleep with a white Democrat, and Mr. Moore applanded that, and you consider that a mortal offense, for which he should be compelled to leave the county?

"A. No, sir; I do not consider that so bad as some others.

"Q. What clse?

"A. When I went into that meeting I had just been informed that Mr. Potter had said that he was in favor of going in with the negroes and resorting to the shotgun policy to enforce their rights.

"Q. Had Mr. Potter said anything?"

"A. How long had you known Potter?

"A. He had been so notified and informed, and acted on that information.

"Q. Had har. Potter said anything?"

"A. I had been so notified and informed, and acted on what his canvass.

nial of it?

"A. Not at that time, it had not.

"Q. What else was there; what other crime had these men committed?

"A. Some of them were notoriously bad characters there.

"Q Bad in what way?

"A. They had no standing socially or otherwise.

"Q. What other specific offenses had these men committed in the campaign?
One of them had laughed and applauded these colored men, and the other was reported to have said something that he denied saying. Now, what else was there of which you complain?

"A. They have detailed some of my social-equality speeches, and I will explain about that matter. In our district court there, all these men, I think every one of them, I can not remember which one, but they appealed to the negroes and said, "There is Dever, the Democratic sheriff, who has divided the district court-room, and made the negroes sit on one side and the white people on the other, and you see how the white men treat you. There are no negroes on the jury; and they said the same thing about the county court. The fact was that Judge McFarland, who was the Republican district judge, had made the order, which I considered a proper one, but in order to meet these sort of appeals, which did arouse race prejudice in the negroes, I told them that no such thing had been done; that Dever did not divide the county court-room, but that Judge McFarland did divide it. And they would make the statement, all of them, that the negroes had no representative on the People's ticket as elected, and were not permitted to sit on juries, and that their wives, when they had business to transact at the court-room, were not treated with respect, but were allowed to stand in the cold and shiver, and that they could not get near the stove, all of which was absolutely false.

"Q. Who did you hear make such a speech as that?

"A. Mr. Hackworth, and a number of the negro speakers made similar speeches."

"O And in reply to that, you showed that the negroes all sat around with

"A. Mr. Hackworth, and a number of the negro speakers made similar speeches.

"Q. And in reply to that, you showed that the negroes all sat around with the white people in your court?

"A. I said in reply to that that Mr. Dever did not make any order dividing the county court room, and did not divide the district court room.

"Q. And that in your court there was no such division?

"A. Yes, sir; and I denied the charges that the negroes had no representation. That was calculated, I considered, to arouse the negroes and array them against the whites. They said they had no representation anywhere, and that they were not permitted to sit on juries, while the fact was that as many of them had sat on the jury under that administration as in any former administrations. I had examined the records to see what proportion of negro jurors we had.

"Q. Those are the incendiary speeches you refer to?

"A. Yes, sir; and those were some of the things stated at the public meetings that we held. They would try to prevent anybody going up, and Mr. Hackworth and Mr. Potter would make charges against me of a personal character, which were without any foundation in truth or in fact, and then they would try to prevail on their chairman of the meeting not to permit me to answer the charges or represent my candidacy or do anything of the kind.

"Q. They were not your meetings, were they?

"A. They were public meetings, were they?

"A. They were called by negroes.

"Q. Were they not meetings called by Republican speakers?

"A. They were called by negroes.

"Q. Were they not Republican meetings called by Republicans?

"A. They were nealled by negroes.

"Q. Were they not Republican meetings in contradistinction to Democratic meetings?

"A. Usuppose you would call them that.

"A. They were called by negroes.

"Q. Were they not Republican meetings called by Republicans?

"A. Well, the majority of those who attended them were Republicans.

"Q. Were they not Republican meetings in contradistinction to Democratic meetings?

"A. I suppose you would call them that.

"Q. You know what a Republican meeting is, a meeting called by the Republican local organization?

"A. I will tell you how the meetings were gotten up. They would go out in the country in the evening, and they would get the negroes together and elect a chairman, and then they would address them, and they have done that during the last two canvasses.

"Q. What other crimes did these men commit that you thought worthy of punishment?

"A. No other that I know of.

"Q. You have given, then, the head and front of their offending, have you?

"A. I stated in the outset what caused me to make the statement I did in the citizens' meeting. If you want that repeated I can repeat it.

"Q. How is that?

"A. I say I can repeat what caused me to make the statement about their punishment, as I did in the citizens' meeting. I was never in favor of their being made to leave after that; after I found out that Mr. Potter disclaimed this statement I never said anything about his leaving or any of the rest of them leaving.

"A. Vou remember pretty distinctly what was said in these various speeches."

leaving.
"Q. You remember pretty distinctly what was said in these various speeches

"Q. You remember pretty distinctly what was said in these various speeches made?

"A. I can remember some of the things.

"Q. You have a pretty good memory, have you not?

"A. Another thing; they would tell the negroes that they would be put back in bondage if the Democrats got back in power, and all that sort of folderol.

"Q. And tell them, I suppose, that Abe Lincoln was their friend, and that the Republican party had been their friend always?

"A. Yes; they did that.

"Q. Wasn't that incendiary?

"A. No, sir; I do not think so.

"Q. That is funny. What else do you remember?

"A. I remember the meetings they had in camp there near Brenham in what is called Camp Town, a portion of the town where the negroes resided. They had a number of meetings down there with shotguns and Winchesters, and had endeavored, and successfully, to keep me—sometimes successfully—to keep me or anybody else from replying to their charges that Mr. Hackworth and his cohorts were making against me or men on our ticket.

"By Mr. TELLER:

"By Mr. TELLER:

"By Mr. Teller:

"Q. They prevented you from addressing the Republican meetings; that is the plain English of it?

"A. Well, they were colored meetings.

"Q. They were Republican meetings, were they not; you know whether they were or not?

"A. They were called by Republican negroes.

"Q. They were called by Republicans, to have Republican speakers address them?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And they declined to allow you to address them?

"A. Yes; and they declined to allow the Republican speakers to address them, if they wanted to defend any men not on the Republican ticket.

"By Mr. Sponer.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. That was nothing against you?

"A. No, sir; but I do not think they had any right to get up and make false charges and not allow me to disprove them.

"Q. That was not so much a matter of race or color as it was a matter between you and those men?

"A. They would try to get the negroes to prevent my speaking, and under their advice they would prevent it.

"Q. Who gave that advice?

"A. Mr. Hackworth.

"Q. Do you remember hearing Mr. Hackworth advise any meeting not to allow you to speak?

"A. Yes, sir; he tried to do that all through the canvass.

"Q. Where?

A. At every meeting that was held in Camp Town. Q. You would come there and demand a hearing?

"A. It every meeting that was held in Camp Town.

"Q. You would come there and demand a hearing?

"A. I would.

"Q. Why didn't you call your own meeting after they had gone and have some concerning the proposed to meet those very things.

"A. Because I proposed to meet those very things.

"Q. Had you a right to force yourself on a Republican meeting against the will of the people present?

"A. I think I had a right to speak in any public meeting that was called for the discussion of the Republican candidates.

"Q. Do you understand that when a Republican meeting is called you have a right to go there and speak?

"A. If it was a strictly Republican meeting I do not know that I would. These meetings were called for the purpose of public discussion.

"Q. These meetings were not called for the purpose of public discussion in that sense, but for the purpose of hearing Republican speakers denounce the Democratic candidates.

"A. I was always invited to those meetings by the negroes; almost universally invited there by the negroes.

"Q. By Republican negroes?

"A. You do not find any thing else but Republican negroes, or at least I haven't, down in our section.

"Q. But they can not always safely vote for the Republican ticket and have it counted.

"A Wall they did say that at this lest selection.

it counted.

"Q. But they can not always safely vote for the Republican ticket and have it counted.

"A. Well, they did say that at this last election.

"Q. Did Mr. Potter ask you at any point to stay at any meeting?

"A. I do not remember anything of the kind.

"Q. Did Mr. Hackworth tell you in advance of the charges he proposed to make against you in the campaign?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. You are sure of that?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did he before he made the speeches?

"A. No, sir, and the first I heard of them was on the stump.

"Q. Do you remember all that he said at any meeting on the stump?

"A. No, sir, I could not undertake to repeat any of his speeches.

"Q. Did you attend a Republican meeting at which you insisted that nobody should speak unless you were permitted to speak?

"A. I got up on the same stump he was on, and I told him if he made those charges and would not permit me to answer or reply to them, that the meeting would have to adjourn, even if I staid there a week.

"Q. Did it adjourn?

"A. He took the band away with him—

"Q. And the band carried all the meeting with it?

"A. No, sir; It left a considerable number of them there, and I staid there and addressed them—made a speech to them (page 288).

"Q. Before the election did you hear any incendiary species made by the publican orators?

"A. I heard such speeches as I considered rather incendiary.

"Q. You have given an account, I understand, of some of those you heard?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And have said all that you care to say on that subject?

"A. About all that I could recall. I have given samples of them.

"Q. Were those the extremest or severest instances of incendiary speeches that you heard?

"A. They were about as severe, I believe. It was their practices as much as their.

"B. S. Rogers, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

"By Mr. Eustis:

"Q. What is your full name?
"A. Ben S. Rogers.
"Q. How old are you?
"A. I am thirty-five years old.
"Q. Where do you live?
"A. In Brenham, Tex.
"Q. How long have you lived there?
"A. I have lived in Brenham a little over two years, perhaps three years, but heave lived near there for about twenty years. A. I have inved in Brennan a little over two years, perhaps three years, but have lived near there for about twenty years.

"Q. What is your occupation?

"A. I am a practicing lawyer.

"Q. Did you ever hold any office?

"A. Yes, sir; I am county attorney of Washington County at the present

"A. 1cs, sir, time.
"Q. How long have you held that office?
"A. Since 1884.
"Q. You were elected in 1884?
"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. And re-elected in 1886?
"A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you take an active part in the last canvass?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you hear any of those speeches made by the Republican leaders?

"A. I heard a great many of them.

"Q. Were they what you would call incendiary speeches, some of them?

"A. I do not know that I would term them that. They made use of a great many expressions and declarations that had a tendency to discontent the negroes and make them dissatisfied with their condition.

"Q. I mean did you hear any appeals made to their prejudices as colored people or to their fears as ignorant people?

"A. Yes, their speeches had that tendency.

"Q. Go on and state what you recollect about it?

"A. I do not know that I could give what each or any of the speakers said particularly, except in a few instances perhaps. Some of the Republican speakers made use of the language that 'the Democrats won't let you est with them, won't let you sleep with them, won't let you visit their families, or sit in their parlors, or converse with their daughters, and I do not see why you should vote for them,' and such expressions as that.

"Q. What else do you remember, if anything, showing the general character of their speeches?

"A. Well, they would go on and tell the negroes that the Democratic tariff was the cause of their situation, was the cause of their poor, and the cause of their cotton being worth but 6 or 8 cents, and the cause of their getting a low price for the picking of the cotton, that it was occasioned by the tariff; also that the earthquakes we were having at Charleston at the time were visitations of Providence upon the Democratic party for their treatment of the negroes.

- "Mr. Spooner. That was a joke, wasn't it? "Colonel Giddings. No, sir; it was not.

"Q. You have spoken about these incendiary speeches; you do not mean to characterize these as incendiary speeches, do you?
"A. I do not know that that is the proper term for them.
"Q. Did they differ from the ordinary Republican speeches you had been in the habit of hearing for years, except as to the earthquake, part of it, which was new?

"A. Yes, sir; I think they were a little worse than any I ever heard before.

"Q. What was there specially bad about them?

"A. They presented such arguments as that to the negro, that the Democratic tariff was the cause of their situation.

"D Is that the worst thing in worse their situation.

tariff was the cause of their situation.

"Q. Is that the worst thing, in your opinion?

"A. Well, such as that.

"Q. Is that the worst thing, in your opinion, that was said by the speakers?

"A. I do not know that it was.

"Q. It was as bad as anything, wasn't it?

"A. Then, again, the speeches that were made by some of the negroes there that I spoke of a while ago.

"Q. I am talking about speeches made by white Republicans.

"A. They would say themselves the very meanest things that were said; they would generally put a negro up to it.

"Q. How do you know they put a negro up to it?

"A. By the working of the machinery?

"A. By the working of the machinery?

"Q. Do you know of any white Republican advising any insurrection among the negroes?

"Q. How do you know they put a negro up to it?

"A. By the working of the machinery?

"Q. Do you know of any white Republican advising any insurrection among the negroes?

"A. No, sir; I do not of my own knowledge.

"Q. Or advising any violent or unlawful act among the negroes?

"A. I do not of my own knowledge.

"Q. There was a little of that sort of talk among the Democrats, was there not, at the negro meetings?

"A. I did not get the sense of your question.

"Q. What did you tell them at your meetings where you made speeches to these negroes; didn't you tell them about the beauties of free trade and all that sort of thing?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. You defended the Democratic tariff, did you not?

"A. No, sir; I did not.

"Q. What did you talk to them about?

"A. I told the negroes that these men were lying to them and had been for twenty years, and I tried to prove it.

"Q. Did you hear Judge Kirk make any speech?

"A. I heard him make several.

"Q. In which he told them that the Republican district judge, McFarland, divided off his court-room so as to have the negroes on one side and the whitemen on the other?

"A. Yes, sir; I heard that.

"Q. And that the negroes who came into the county judge's court—that is, his court—were treated just like white people, and were not compelled to separate?

"A. Yes, sir; I heard that.

"A. And that it was so in your office?

"A. I do not know that he said that.

"Q. Didn't he say that the county judge's office and your office were always full of negroes, and that they were just as well treated as the whites?

"A. He said something of that sort. I do not know that those were the words that he used.

"Q. But that was the idea?

"A. The idea was that a negro was not prohibited from entering the courthouse, and receiving the same attention that his business demanded that a white man would (page 552).

"A. He said something of that sort. I do not know that those were the words that he used.

"Q. But that was the idea?

"A. The idea was that a negro was not prohibited from entering Democratic county judge and district attorney did not; that was the idea, was it not?

"A. No, sir; I will tell you precisely how it came about. Mr. Hackworth and Mr. Moore got up and charged that there was a discrimination against the negroes; that they were not allowed to enter the court-room or the court-house, or take seats in the offices, or come behind the railings, and that they might have icicles on the skirts of their women and they would not be permitted to warm themselves at the stove, and so on; and he said that Dever, the sheriff, had discriminated against the negro. They were using it as an argument against him as a candidate then; that he had required the negroes to take one side of the court-house and the white people the other, and that they had contributed their taxes toward the building of the court-house and were entitled to sit where they pleased. Judge Kirk and myself, in defending Mr. Dever on that score, told them that Judge McFarland had drawn that line in the district court-room, and that Mr. Dever, who also waited on the county court-room, had not drawn the line there.

"Q. So that all there was in it on either side was this: That in a campaign, takking to colored men, the Republican speakers told them that they were discriminated against by the Democratic officers?

"A. And we told them that they were discriminated against by the Republican officers?

"A. And we told them that they were discriminated officers?

"A. Ves sir.

"Q. And told them that they were discriminated against by the Republican officers?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. That was six of one and half a dozen of the other in regard to incendiarism, wasn't it?

"A. I do not know that that would be considered incendiary.

"Q. You do not refer to that, then, as incendiary at all?

"A. No, sir; those speeches were made every night for two months, those different speeches, and I paid very little attention to some of them, and some of them I listened to."

B. F. Robertson testifies as follows (see page 540):

- B. F. Robertson testifies as follows (see page 540):

  "Q. At the time of the Eldridge Hall meeting there was very much excitement in Brenham?

  "A. Yes, sir."

  "Q. And a very great prejudice against Mr. Potter, Mr. Hackworth, and those leading Republicans?

  "A. Yes, sir; I suppose there was some.

  "Q. Would you consider a man who got up in such a meeting as that and said that it was reported that Mr. Moore had made negro equality speeches and that certain Republicans had advised the negroes to go armed at the polls and to shoot white men, as making an incendiary speech?

  "A. Well, if they were to get up—

  "Q. Answer my question.

  "A. Well, yes; I suppose if a man would get up and make that kind of a speech.

- "Q. You would consider that an incendiary speech, under the circumstances?
  "A. It might have been.
  "Q. Do you mean to say that no such incendiary speech as that was made at the Eldridge Hall meeting?
  "A. I do. They said if thus and so was the case; if it was the case that

Potter was advising them to go and get their shotguns and take them to the

"Q. Was it not stated that that was the case?

"A. It might have been; I think it was stated that it was the case.

"Q. On that theory, this proposition was made that they ought to be compelled to leave the country, wasn't it? Would you not call that an incendiary speech, with all the excitement and all the surroundings?

"A. Yes, sir; but it was—

"Q. But it was a Democratic incendiary speech, and that makes all the difference in the wide, wide world?

"A. There is a heap of difference between that and a negro meeting.

"Mr. EUSTIS (to the witness). Don't you mean by an incendiary speech—

"Mr. Spooner. He means what he says. Give him a chance to be original; we have had more of your meaning than of his."

"A. The candidates—
"Q. I say who circulated those stories that the Republican orators had said these things about the earthquakes and the low price of cotton?

"The WITNESS. Do you want the names of the individuals?

"Mr. EVARTS. If you know, you can tell us.

"A. I say the candidates on the People's ticket and persons who would go—others also who would attend those negro meetings. They were just talked of as a joke, but I do not believe that it was just a joke, a thing of that kind, and they could not appreciate the effect of it.

"Q. Who were the men who circulated these stories that the Republican orators in the campaign accused the Democratic party of the responsibility for the earthquake at Charleston and the low price of cotton?

"A. I do not understand.

"The PEVARTS. Read the question, as follows:

"Q. Who were the men who circulated!these stories'that the Republican orators in the campaign accused the Democratic party of the responsibility for the earthquake at Charleston and the low price of cotton?

"A. I think I just answered it; that I got my information, of course, from men who were in sympathy with the People's ticket who had gone to these meetings.

"Q. Can you give the names of any persons?

"A. Well, Mr. Rodgers, the candidate for county attorney.

"Q. He said these things?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Who else said these things, that the orators of the Republican party claimed so and so?

"A. Judge Kirk, and it seems to me I have heard others say it, but I can not

"Q. I do not want you to say anybody that you can not identify, but those you can say?

"A. I think I can safely say that they did, because I have heard them talking about it: they were the most active.

"Q. The county attorney and the county judge were the persons who circulated those stories?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And they were on the People's ticket?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What effect did those stories thus circulated by Judge Kirk and the county attorney, Rodgers, have on the votes of your people down there?

"A. I can not answer that.

"Q. Very well, if you can not, say so, and we will go on and do something else; I don't want to carry on a conversation with you.

"M. EUSTIS. If the witnesses were correctly understood, Judge Kirk and Mr. Rodgers testified that they had heard those speeches made.

"M. EVARTS. I am cross-examining him on his own views and not upon what has been said by other people. You can answer that.

"The WITNESS. As to the effect? No, sir; I can not. As to—

"Q. Very well, that is enough. What effect did it have on your mind in regard to the election?

"A. On my mind it had this effect: I just thought all that sort of talk was absurd and just showed the desperate efforts they were making—

"Q. That who were making?

"A. The Republican candidates—the candidates on the Republican ticket—the desperate efforts they were making to be elected when they would appeal in any such manner to an ignorant people who did not know any better; it had that effect on my mind.

"Q. Did you not think it was a desperate effort of Judge Kirk and County Attorney Rodgers to circulate such stories to affect the elections in their favor?

"A. No, sir; because I thought it was true.

"Q. It may be that you thought it was true, but you expected to get Democrats to vote for the People's ticket by that talk, did you not?

"A. Well, yes, sir; of course, I suppose so; certainly; yes, sir."

"A. Well, yes, sir; of course, I suppose so; certainly; yes, sir."

W. W. Searcy, esq., chairman of the Democratic executive committee, testifies as follows (see page 396):

"Q. As to Mr. Moore, what are your objections to him?

"A. The principal objection to Mr. Moore is the character of speeches that he is reputed to have made down there in canvassing.

"Q. That was in politics; public speeches?

"A. Yes, sir; public speeches; talking to the negroes. I do not know anything about Mr. Moore personally at all.

"Q. And therefore whatever feeling prevails there against Mr. Moore is, so far as you know, because of his political demonstrations?

"A. It was because of the character of speeches that he is reputed to have made there to the negroes.

"Q. In political campaigns?

"A. Yes, sir; in political campaigns.

"Q. Did you ever hear one of those speeches?

"A. I never did. I never went to one of those meetings in my life.

"Q. Did you ever hear anything from any speech he made?

"A. Yes, sir; I have heard that he advised social equality and all that sort of thing to the negroes down in that county.

"Q. 'All that sort of thing?' How many sorts of things are there down there?

"A. That means a good deal with our people."

"Q. 'All that sort of thing.'
there?
"A. That means a good deal with our people.
"Q. You said 'all that sort of thing?'
"A. Well, he advised them to act against the white people, and advised social equality.
"Q. Are those what are called incendiary speeches?
"A. I judge so, sir. I never heard one of those speeches.
"Q. But you have heard in Democratic circles of the speeches of Republicans as being incendiary speeches?

"A. There were a good many Republicans down there, and I have heard them talk about the character of these speeches they have heard these men make.

"Q. And called them incendiary?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And you understand that incendiary speeches are speeches that advise social equality and the uniting of the blacks against against the whites?

"A. Yes, sir; that is what I consider them to be,

"Q. Now, you spoke of this Mr. Moore as having urged in public debate the union of the colored people against the whites. In what way did he advise them to unite against the whites—in any way besides voting at the election?

"A. Well, as I stated before, he advised them that they ought to be permitted to go into white people's parlors, and to be permitted to dine with them, and to be permitted to marry white women, and all that sort of thing. That is what we mean by social equality down there.

"Q. That was ahead of my inquiry. You had two heads; one social equality, and the other the uniting of the colored people against the whites. My last question has nothing to do with the social-equality branch, but with this other branch.

"The WITTERS De you mean whether he advised them to the second."

branch.

"The Witness. Do you mean whether he advised them to vote against the white people down there?

"Mr. Evarts. Yes, at the elections.

"A. Yes, sir; he did.
"Q. At the elections?

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Was there any white man's ticket down there?

"A. No, sir; I do not think there was any ticket designated by that name down there. The People's ticket was generally supposed to be the white men's ticket.

"Q. Mr. Moore did not get up a white man's ticket, did he?
"A. No, sir; I do not think he did.
"Q. All he did in this election was to urge the people to vote against the People's ticket, was it not?

"A. I did not hear his speeches, but that is what I understood.

"Q. And that is what you mean by uniting the colored people against the white people?

"A. Yes, sir."

Q. To vote for their ticket as against the other ticket?

"A. Yes, sir."

S. A. Hackworth, Republican, testifies as follows (see page 231):

S. A. Hackworth, Republican, testilies as follows (see page 231):

"Q. You made speeches there during the campaign?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. You addressed white audiences as well as colored audiences?

"A. Yes, sir; we had several mixed meetings.

"Q. Did you make any speech during that campaign which was calculated or intended to create any race excitement or prejudice among the negroes against the whites?

"A. No, sir; right to the contrary. All the speeches I made I think were cal-

"Q. Did you make any speech during that campaign which was calculated or intended to create any race excitement or prejudice among the negroes against the whites?

"A. No, sir; right to the contrary. All the speeches I made I think were calculated to bring about and keep up a spirit of good feeling between both races. I was as much interested as any white citizen in the county in seeing that done.

"Q. You did not make any speech that could be fairly called an incendiary speech?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Or any speech other than the ordinary Republican speeches in behalf of your party?

"A. Judge Kirk may have called it an incendiary speech, because it was against him. We showed about the theft of the school fund and made it pretty plain that these stealings had occurred with his knowledge. That was about the most incendiary speech that we had made.

"Q. That is the first we have heard about that. What is there about that? Was it during Judge Kirk's administration?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is it possible? What was there of it?

"A. We got a certificate of the county treasurer. I do not know whether Mr. Hoffmann has it or not. We have the statement here. In the first place, Judge Kirk has charge of the free schools and issues vouchers to the school-teachers. These vouchers are signed by him and have his seal of office placed on them, and then the teacher can go and draw his money. There were several forged vouchers found out by the county treasurer. Forged vouchers had been drawn on the county treasurer and had been paid by him, and Judge Kirk's name was signed to those vouchers, and so well signed that even the county treasurer was that these forged vouchers had the county seal on them. We showed this, because we had a certificate from the county treasurer, and I told Judge K irk at several of our meetings about it. He complained of the attack I was going to make on him. I told Judge K irk senine signature. The strange feature was that these forged vouchers had the county treasurer, and I told Judge K irk at several of our hold of.

"By Mr. EVARTS:

"Q. That was the topic insisted on?

"A Yes, sir; that was the only incendiary speech that was made. Judge Kirk got very angry several times, and I suppose he called it 'incendiary.' Well, during the whole canvass they had a certain lot of men—men who were charged with murder and were under indictment for murder—who went around with them, and those men were armed.

"By Mr. SPOONER:

"Q. Who do you mean?
"A. I mean Judge Kirk, Mr. Rogers, and the Democrats.
"Q. Were they at your meetings?
"A. Yes, sir; they were at all our meetings with armed men,
"Q. Attended your meetings, Republican meetings?
"A. Yes, sir; they would come to our meetings and demand a division of the time me.

"Q. Who else beside Judge Kirk did that?

"A. Judge Kirk and Mr. Rogers were the leading men.

"Q. And these armed men with them?

"A. Yes, sir; these armed men were with them.

"Q. How many such men?

"A. I think they generally carried about six or seven with them.

"Q. How did you know they were armed?

"A. We saw the weapons.

"Q. Revolvers?

"A. Yes, sir; and six-shooters, some of them.

"Q. What sort of men were they?

"A. Some were white and some colored men; some were under indictment for murder. Mr. John Traylor was one. He did not attend all the meetings, but he attended the meetings held at Chapel Hill precinct. He was under indictment for murder. A colored man named Sloan was under indictment for murder in Washington precinct, and they had another man under indictment for murder, Mr. John Ewing. These men were completely in their power, and were ready and willing to do their bidding. At one of the meetings at Cedar Hill one of our men drew a pistol on them, and it broke up the meeting. There were a lot of Germans in the meeting, and they withdrew from the meeting and waited until Judge Kirk went away, and we called a meeting, after they had gone, outside of the house, and I made my talk to them there. And at Chapel Hill on another occasion I was informed that pistols were drawn on me while I was on the stand, and I know I was cursed by their bulldozers.

"Q. You mean to say, then, there was something of intimidation among the Democratic leaders prior to election day?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. At Republican meetings?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you divide the time with Judge Kirk at any of those meetings?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you make any of what are called negro-equality speeches?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Did you make any of what are called negro-equality speeches?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you hear any speeches of that kind made?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Did you hear any speeches of that kind made?

"A. No, sir. there were none made by any of the Republicans. The nearest social-equality speech that I heard was made by Judge Kirk and Mr. Rogers. They denounced Judge McFarland for dividing the races in his court-room that this court-room the whites and blacks all mired up together, and there was no difference made between the races. He boasted that in all his speeches, or words to that telfect. That was the nearest to a social-equality speech that I heard during the canvas, and I stated that openly in my circular of the 10th.

"Q. The statements in that circular are true, so far as you know?

"A. Yes, sir; so

Joseph Hoffmann, Republican, testifies as follows (see page 136):

"Q. Something has been said about incendiary speeches being made by the Republican campaigners and leaders. Did you hear any incendiary speech Republican campaigners and leaders. Did you hear any incendiary speech from anybody?

"A. I have been one of the Republicans who have been in every canvass in the last eight years, you may say, and I never have heard any Republican make an incendiary speech or a social-equality speech. I have heard Mr. Hackworth and others advise them to keep their contracts with the white folks, but he told them, 'when you make such contracts carry them out, but don't sell your vote with the contract.

and others advise them to keep their contracts with the white folks, but he told them, 'when you make such contracts carry them out, but don't sell your vote with the contract.'

"Q. Was that called an incendiary speech?

"A. I should not think so, str.

"Q. Now, they talk about incendiary speeches down there. What do the Democrats mean by an incendiary speech made by a Republican?

"A. Well, my idea of what they would mean by an incendiary speech would be to just tell the people, I reckon, to get up and kill one another; that is what I would call incendiary.

"Q. But what do these Democrats mean when they say that you, this, or that man makes an incendiary speech; what do they mean? What sort of a speech have they made?

"A. Maybe it is because they made Republican speeches.

"Q. And that is all?

"A. That is all I know of.

"Q. And advised the colored voters to cast their votes as they pleased?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And have them counted if they could?

"A. That is my idea of it. I know that after we were charged with having made incendiary speeches, while Mr. Hackworth and Mr. Moore were in Brenham, that we published a card in the Brenham Banner—I paid Mr. Rankin $3 to insert that card—stating that it had been asserted that we had made incendiary and social-equality speeches, and we denied the charges openly in their own newspaper, and it has never been contradicted by them,

"Q. You know Mr. Schutze well, I suppose?

"A. Yes, sir; I believe I know him better than anybody.

"Q. He was the editor of the paper at Brenham?

"A. Yes, sir; generally in Washington County. Some few numbers of it went mans?

"A. Yes, sir; generally in Washington County. Some few numbers of it went to Austin and Fayette Counties, the neighboring counties.

"Q. It was the only German paper, I suppose?

"A. No, sir; there was another German paper published there.

"Q. What was the name of that?

"A. That was the Texas Volksblatter.

"Q. Was that a Democratic paper?

"A. The editor used to claim to be a Republican, but during the last two canvasses he has always taken the Democratic side, as far as I have seen, in county affairs.

"Q. It was a German paper, published in the German tongue, and patronized by Germans, both of these papers you have spoken of were? "A. Yes, sir.

"A. Yes, sir.
"Q. Did Mr. Schutze make any speeches during this campaign last Novem-

"Q. Did Mr. Schutze make any special speech except one time, and that was when he came to Burton, to my house, and I do not believe any of the gentlemen knew of that. I took him out to my brother-in-law's, and there was a little gathering there, a friendly gathering of a few people, and he made a little talk in German, and he and I were the only condidates there. It was in a private house; it was no meeting.

"Q. And his remarks were made in the German tongue?

"A. Yes, sir; he spoke in German.

"Q. The negroes there do not understand German, do they?

"A. A few of them understand it.

- "Q. How does that happen?

  "A. They pick it up just as the Americans do. We have Americans there who talk as good German as I can.

  "Q. Was there anything incendiary in that speech?

  "A. No, sir; there was not. I do not believe it was known that he ever made such a speech except to the few persons present and myself.

  "Q. Look at this paper, and see if this is the card that you refer to as having been published [handing a newspaper extract to the witness].

  "A. Yes, sir; that is the card.

  "Mr. Evarts. I will read it:

  "SRENHAM. November 9, 1885.

- "BRENHAM, November 9, 1886.
- "'To the people of Washington County:

These and other charges are made against us to divert public attention from certain political acts of our adversaries, and we respectfully but earnestly ask a suspension of public judgment until we can be fully and fairly heard in regard to all matters complained of against us.

  "Q. Who drew this paper?
  "A. I believe it was either Mr. Hackworth or Mr. Schutze who drew it,
  "Q. One or the other of those gentlemen?

- "A. Yes, sir; I took it to the printing office myself, and paid for it, and had it printed.

  "Q. How long did the excitement on one side against you Republicans, and your fear, centinue?

  "A. It continued a long time, even through the month of December, mestly because my house, as I have stated before, was guarded every night, and I was afraid and did not commence my work of assessing. I generally start right off after New Year's, and commence assessing in the city of Brenham first; but I did not commence there this year until the 15th of January.

  "Q. Why did you delay so long?

  "A. The reason I delayed was, I was afraid to commence assessing right after the excitement, after I had left home. I could hear nothing from Brenham. I was at Burton, only 13 or 14 miles off, but I could hear nothing.

  "Q. What effect did this excitement or movement praduce upon the colored people out there?

  "A. They were afraid, and a great many of them have left the county to my personal knowledge.

  "Q. Where have they gone?

  "A. They have gone to Brazoria, to Wharton, to Matagorda, and Fort Bend, and some of them have moved into Burleson and Lee Counties, that I know of.

  "Q. Who were those?
  "A. There were five of them that I heard of.
  "Q. Who were they?
  "A. Ed. L ckett (but he was not made to leave), Mr. Schutze, Mr. Haekworth, and J. L. Moore. Ed. Lockett and Mr. Gilder they left, I believe, the second day after the election, before that meeting at Eldridge Hall. The reason I know that is that he came and borrowed my six-shooter, and he left that day. He said he was afraid there, there was so much excitement. They accused him and Lockett of having armed those negroes down there at Flewellen's, and he was afraid he would get hung, and he left; #n I Ed. Lockett, I believe, staid a day or two longer, then he left, and I have not heard from or seen him since.

  "A. I take the Brenham Banner, and I saw in the Banner that on the Friday, I believe it was, if I mistake not, after the shooting of young Dewees Bolton, that Colonel Giddings, I think, called a meeting of the Democrats of the county, and in that meeting they appointed three committees of each precinet, and in my precinet. Chapel Hill, M. Felder was appointed, and—

  "Q. What were those committees appointed for?

  "A. I do not just remember. I think the Banner said they were appointed to take under consideration the grievances of the people or to consider peace. There was great disturbance in the country there.

  "Q. Is he a prominent man?
  "A. Yes, sir; he is a leading man with us down there.
  "Q. Did you have any talk with him about that meeting and what they had done and were to do?

  "Q. When you say 'the people' you mean the colored people, members of your congregation?

  "A. Yes, sir: the colored people were not coming to church, and I had a committee of members of my church on church matters, and on that committee was one man named Henry Creecy, and it was to meet one night and did not meet. Mr. Busby came over the next day and told me that Creecy thought all the Knoxson Hill colored people had orders to leave, and for that reason he feared to come out at night, and I went over the next morning there to ask him about it.

  "Q. Who was Creecy?

  "A. He was steward of my church, a colored man. He said that Mr. Huggins and another white man had been there the evening before and had ordered him and all the colored people on that hill of the Knoxson family to leave the related that was the occasion of the meeting they had held. I told Creecy I did not believe it, and that I would go and see Mr. Feider about it. I saw in the Banner that he was the leading man in that precinet, and I went over there and saw Mr. Feider and Mr. Glass, the justice of the peace, and had a conversation with them about it.

  "A. After I called the name of Creecy and five or six colored men who told me they understood they had to move, Felder told me that it was not so, and he told me to tell Henry Creecy (which I did tell him in my pulpit, and several others) that they were just as safe there as he (Felder) was and that they need not leave; that they were not after the colored people, except old man Knox-son; that he had acted with the leading white men who had made incendiary precedes.

  "Q. Who did they say they were after?

  "A. They said it was just for old man Knoxson. That they were not after the colored people, but after the leading men who had made incendiary speeches.

  "Q. Who did they mame?

  "A. They said it was brought about by Gilder and Ed. Lockett; that they advised the colored people on the night Dewees Bolton was killed to go armed; and old man Potter and Steve Hackworth and that crowd; he named some five or six leading speakers that made incendiary speeches; he said those were the ones they were after.

  "Q. You have named Mr. Hackworth and Knoxson?

  "A. Yes, sir; white men.

  "Q. Republicans?

  "A. Yes, sir; they say so.

  "Q. They mentioned J. L. Moore, did they?

  "A. Yes, sir.

  "Q. Did he mention Shutze among the rest?

  "A. I do not remember whether he mentioned Schutze or not.

  "Q. What was it he said about those men?

  "A. He said they made incendiary speeches; and went on to say that the administration of these Republican carpet-baggers had been very bad; that they had robbed the county, so that good citizens on the People's ticket, many of them, were tired of them; and I told them that when I voted I voted for the good men; that I had voted for Judge Kirk for county clerk, and for Mr. Lewis.

  "Q. What did they say they were going to do about the carpet-baggers?

  "A. He did not say, only that they were the ones that seemed to have the spirit against which the meeting was held. He did not tell me what they were going to do. He said those were the ones they were after; that they were not after the colored people, and they would not trouble them.

  "Q. Were Mr. Felder and Mr. Glass both present at that conversation?

  "A. Yes, sir. Mr. Glass was the justice of the peace. We were sitting in the doctor's shop by the post-office."

CONCLUSIONS.

CONCLUSIONS.

The committee has extended its examination into the political transactions in Washington County over the widest range asked for either by the petitioners or by the inculpated parties. It has embraced in its inquiries every topic bearing upon the state of feeling prevalent in any portion of that population, or entering into the rivalries and competitions which animated the political contest out of which arose these outrages upon the freedom of election, upon the peace and order of society, upon the personal safely and immunities in their homes of the brave and unflinching defenders, against whatever odds, of the essential and universal principles of constitutional, legal, and individual liberty which are the common right, all over the land, of citizens of the United States.

essential and universal principles of constitutional, legal, and individual liberty which are the common right, all over the land, of citizens of the United States.

This extensive survey and patient investigation the committee has thought justified by its conviction that the actual case presented not unfairly the features that illustrate the political disorders which afflict portions of our country where the population is at all nearly divided between white and colored citizens. These disorders do not alone disturb and threaten the good fame and security of the neighborhoods where they occur, nor of the States within whose borders these disastrous mischiefs pass unchecked, unredressed, and uncondemned. They tend to weaken and set back the sincere desire of the country at large to obliterate all distinctions, as between geographical or political divisions, in the prevalence of jus ice, peace, good-will, and equality of right in discussing and solving all the problems which affect the welfare of this great people.

While, in the opinion of the committee, the state of feeling in these communities is not ripe to receive just and permanent impressions from investigations such as have been conducted by the Senate, it can not but expect considerable benefit, in the country at large, from a dispassionate and responsible exhibition of the true and the principal traits of this transaction. The moral, social, and political bearings of such a condition of things, as is displayed upon the evidence taken by the committee, upon the community in which it exists address themselves to the calm judgment of thoughtful and patriotic minds in these populations. Not less do they engage the carnest attention of the great body of the American people, which are removed from the environment in which these occurrences take place.

It can not be expected that these incidents, when looked at from opposite points of view, will make the same impression or lead to the same conclusion in all parts of the country or upon all political parties.

Besides, no greater element for the formation of a sound public opinion can be suggested than that a wider and wider spread should be given to a knowledge of and an interest in the real nature of this and similar proceedings wherever they may occur. Brought into the light where "a thousand intelligences may burn upon it," the truth will surely force these evils and dangers, anywhere in this country, and their consequences upon the conscience and the responsibility of the whole people.

The statutes of the United States have treated with circumspection and vigor the difficult province of regulating Federal elections where the constitutional rights of voters are not acceptable to the general sense and interests of the communities as they understand them. These regulations, however, depend, like all other laws, for their efficacy upon the zeal, activity, intelligence, and persistency of their execution. With all these the executive department of the Government is wholly charged under the Constitution. The selection and supervision of all subordinate offices throws upon the Chief Magistrate, the President, the responsibility of seeing that the whole weight of Government is to be thrown in the protection of the elective franchise and the punishment of all violators of the laws that have been passed to guard it. Beyond this every just, every possible authority and influence that attend upon official station should show themselves in every neighborhood as a "terror to evil-doers and a praise to them that do well." Many miscarriages, many shortcomings in reaching complete success in these efforts of the executive government may be looked upon by the people of the country with an indulgent temper. But the absence of such efforts, or a languid prosecution of them, will not long be tolerated by public opinion or left unvisited by political condemnation.

The committee recommends the careful revision of the existing laws regulating elections of members of Congress, and more efficient provisions for the punishment of offens

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.
Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will allow us to have a brief executive session.

Mr. HOAR. I doubt whether there will be Senators enough in attendance on such a session to transact any business of importance.

Mr. HARRIS. I chance to know the fact that there are several Senators in committee-rooms attending to committee duties who will come here when their presence is necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate do now adjourn. [Putting the question.] The ayes appear to have it.

Mr. HARRIS. I am inclined to call for the yeas and nays.
Mr. SHERMAN. We have not a quorum here.
Mr. HARRIS. We have a quorum in the building that can be obtained in a few moments.

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw my motion.
Mr. HARRIS. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. EVARTS. Will the Senator from Tennessee allow me to ask whether my request that the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections be printed in the RECORD was agreed to?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was so ordered. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HOAR. I call for a division on the motion.

The question being put, the ayes were 14.

Mr. HOAR. I will withdraw the call for a division if there is no objection. The Senator from Tennessee undoubtedly would not make the motion unless he had some good reason for it.

Mr. HARRIS. I shall not seek to transact any business unless there is a quorum here

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and eleven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 14, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

To the House of Representatives:

To the House of Representatives:

I return without approval House bill No. 9163, entitled "An act granting a pension to Eli Garrett."

This beneficiary enlisted in the Confederate army December 1, 1862. He was captured by the United States forces on the 26th of November, 1863, and enlisted in the Union Navy January 22, 1864.

He was discharged from the Navy for disability September 8, 1864, upon the certificate of a naval surgeon, which states that he had valural cardiac disease (disease of the heart), and that there was no evidence that it originated in the line of duty.

His claim for pension was rejected in 1882 upon the ground that the act which permits pensions to Confederate soldiers who joined the Union Army did not extend to such soldiers who enlisted in the Navy.

I can see no reason why such a distinction should exist, and the recommendation of the Commissioner of Pensions made in 1887, that this discrimination be removed, should be adopted by the enactment of a law for that purpose.

In this case, however, I am unable to discover any evidence that the trouble with which this beneficiary appears to be afflicted is related to his naval service which should overcome the plain statement of the surgeon upon whose certificate he was discharged, to the effect that there was no evidence that his disability originated in the line of naval duty.

JULIA TRIGGS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message; which was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed:

To the House of Representatives :

To the House of Representatives:

I return without approval House bill No. 5752, entitled "An act for the relief of Julia Triggs."

This beneficiary filed an application for pension in 1882, claiming that her son William Triggs died in 1875 from the effects of poison taken during his military service in the water which had been poisoned by the rebels, and in food eaten in rebel houses which had also been poisoned.

He was discharged from the Army with his company, July 24, 1865, after a service of more than four years.

The case was specially examined and the evidence elicited to support the claim of poisoning appears to have been anything but satisfactory.

The mother herself testified that her son was absent from Chicago, where she lived, and in the South from 1868 to 1869, and that he was in Indiana from 1869 to 1874.

to 1874.

The claim was rejected on the 12th day of February, 1887, on the ground that evidence could not be obtained upon special examination showing that the soldier's death was due to any disability contracted in the military service.

While I am unable to see how any other conclusion could have been reached upon the facts in this case, there is reason to believe that a favorable determination upon its merits would be of no avail, since on the 17th day of April, 1888, a letter was filed in the Pension Office from a citizen of Chicago, in which it is stated that the beneficiary named in this bill died on the 27th day of February, 1888, and an application is therein made on behalf of her daughter for reimbursement of money expended for her mother in her last illness and for her burial.

CLARA M. OWEN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following message:

To the House of Representatives:

I return without approval House bill No. 11052, entitled "An act granting a pension to Clara M. Owen."

The husband of this beneficiary was pensioned for a gunshot wound in the left chest and lung, received in action on the 30th day of September, 1864. He was drowned August 31, 1884. It appears that he was found in a stream where he frequently bathed, in a depth of water variously given from 5 to 8 feet. He had undressed and apparently gone into the water as usual.

Medical opinions are produced tending to show that drowning was not the cause of death.

cause of death.

No post-mortem examination was had, and it seems to me it must be conceded that a conclusion that death was in any degree the result of wounds received in military service rests upon the most unsatisfactory conjecture.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 12, 1889.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the message be referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. STEELE. I desire to ask my colleague [Mr. MATSON] how many bills with veto messages which have been referred to his committee have been reported back to the House during the present session?

Mr. MATSON. All that have been pressed. [Cries of "Regular order!"

Mr. STEELE. I move as an amendment that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The question was put; and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. STEELE. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 78, noes 104.
So the amendment was disagreed to.
The message was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

SANITARY CONDITION OF CITY HALL, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, with accompanying correspondence, a letter from the Attorney-General relative to the sanitary condition of the city hall in Washington, D. C.; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 12329) making appropriation for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY.

The SPEAKER also announced that the Senate had returned to the House with amendments the concurrent resolution to print 50,000 copies of the fourth annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

REPORT OF COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following concurrent resolution from the Senate:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 12, 1889.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 5,000 additional copies of the report of the Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1588, together with the usual necessary progress sketches and illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the nse of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for the use of the Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That resolution has already been reported favorably by the Committee on Printing of the House, and I ask now that it be considered.

There was no objection; and the concurrent resolution was agreed to. Mr. RICHARDSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. Yost, on account of sickness.

ADMISSION OF LADIES TO THE FLOOR.

Mr. ERMENTROUT. I offer the following resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration:

Resolved. That the Doorkeeper be directed to admit to the floor of the House ladies having tickets issued for the reserved galleries during the joint session for the count of the electoral vote, and also, upon request of Senators and Representatives, the ladies of their families.

Mr. MILLS. I would suggest an amendment, that the resolution shall read so as not to include the seats reserved for the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The officers of the House will see to the manner of seating the ladies.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. ERMENTROUT moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

THOMAS WYNNE.

Mr. MORRILL. I rise to present a privileged conference report on the bill (S. 3116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wynne. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wynne, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

PHILETUS SAWYER.

PHILETUS SAWYER, C. K. DAVIS, D. TURPIE, Managers on the part of the Senate.

The bill as it passed the Senate gave to the beneficiary a pension of $50 per month. The House amended by striking out "$50" and inserting "for all disabilities now found to exist." It has been shown to your committee that this soldier is in a helpless condition and not likely to live many months, and that the House amendment would be delaying the relief sought without lessening the amount.

The report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the conference committee was adopted; and also moved that the mo-tion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SMALLS-ELLIOTT CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE.

Mr. CRISP. It was my intention to ask the House to consider for half an hour at least the pending contested-election case before the time arrived when the Senate is to meet with the House to count the electoral vote. But suggestions have been made to me that there is so much confusion on the floor, and there will necessarily be from now until then, that perhaps that is impracticable. I want, however, to make this statement, that there are two hours and thirty-seven minutes of debate remaining upon this case under the agreement—one hour and twentyfive minutes on this side, and an hour and twelve minutes on the other side. Four years ago, on a like occasion, the Senate remained in the House one hour and seventeen minutes. If no greater time is taken to-day than was taken then, the House will be in a position by half past 2 o'clock to resume the consideration of this case. The statement I wish to make is that we shall then ask that the case be resumed and that the House remain in session until it is disposed of. In that way we can reach a vote by about 5 o'clock. I make this announcement now so that members may know that we intend to pursue this course in regard to the pending case, in order that it may be disposed of tobut as there is so much confusion on the floor I shall not ask to call it up until immediately after the Senate retires.

A MEMBER. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Mr. OATES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported, as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 11393) to amend the naturalization laws of the United States, a bill (H. R. 12577) to amend the naturalization laws of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill, with the substitute and report, be printed and recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary, with leave to report back at any time. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I object.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be printed and recommitted if the gentleman from Alabama so desires.

Mr. OATES. I do.

The bill was recommitted, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SENEY] and myself, I ask leave to file the views of the minority on that bill.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CAPT. GEORGE S. ANDERSON.

· Mr. ROCKWELL, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back the joint resolution (H. Res. 235) authorizing Capt. George S. Anderson, Sixth Cavalry, to accept from the President of the French Republic a diploma conferring the decoration of chevalier of the National Order of the Legion of Honor; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. ROCKWELL. It is understood and agreed that the minority shall have leave to file their views at any time.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, that will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

CHIEF ENGINEER GEORGE W. MELVILLE,

Mr. WISE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. 2659) for the rewarding of Chief Engineer George W. Melville, United States Navy, for meritorious services; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

DEBT OF ARKANSAS TO THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to file the views of the minority in relation to the bill (H. R. 3288) reported yesterday from the Committee on Public Lands, authorizing the settlement of the debt due to the United States by the State of Arkansas.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

On motion of Mr. CLARDY, by unanimous consent, the Committee on Commerce was discharged from the further consideration of Miscellaneous Document No. 88, in reference to a forfeiture of the Pacific railroad grants; and the same was referred to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads instructed me to present to the House a report and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. I now send it to the desk.

The SPEAKER. That can not be under this call; the Chair is now executing the regular order, which has been demanded.

Mr. PEEL. I wish to submit a conference report.

Mr. CRISP. I move that the House take a recess until five minutes before 1 o'clock

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas presents a conference report which the Chair thinks will have precedence of that motion.

ST. LOUIS AND SAN FRANCISCO RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. PEEL submitted the following conference report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 6512) to grant the right of way through the Indian Territory to the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the same.

S. W. PEEL,
B. W. PERKINS,
Managers on the part of the House.
H. L. DAWES,
JAMES K. JONES,
FRANCIS B. STOCKBRIDGE,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the Senate amendments be read. The Clerk proceeded to read the amendments.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution (S. R. 125) authorizing the heirs of Rear-Admiral Charles W. Baldwin, United States Navy, to receive a snuff-box set in diamonds from the Czar of Russia; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

Also, that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 11879) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

Also, that the Senate had passed the bill (H. R. 855) for the relief of the heirs of Jacob Cramer.

WITHDRAWAL OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS, OREGON.

Mr. HERMANN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back favorably the joint resolution (H. Res. 75) withdrawing from public sale and settlement vacant public lands along Columbia River between The Dalles City and Celilo, being in Oregon and Washington Territory, as a reservation for future improvement of river navigation between said points; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana demands the reading of the Senate amendments to the conference report submitted by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. CRISP. If this is to lead to discussion I shall raise the question of consideration upon it.

Mr. PEEL. I do not think it will take any time.

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration is raised, which will be regarded as pending, and the regular order of business will be suspended for the present, as the Chair is informed that the Senate will leave its Hall at five minutes before 1 o'clock.

The Chair desires to call the attention of the House to the fact that under the act of February 3, 1887, in regard to the proceedings of the two Houses in joint convention for the counting of the electoral vote, it is provided that the Senators shall be seated in that part of the Hall on the right of the Presiding Officer.

COUNTING OF THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

At two minutes before 1 o'clock p. m. the Doorkeeper announced the Senate of the United States.

The Senate entered the Hall, preceded by its Sergeant-at-Arms and headed by the President and Secretary of the Senate, the members and officers of the House rising to receive them.

The President of the Senate [Mr. Ingalls] took his seat as Presiding Officer of the joint convention of the two Houses, the Speaker [Mr.

CARLISLE] occupying the chair on his left.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. This being the day and the hour appointed for opening the certificates and counting the votes of electors for President and Vice-President, the Senate and House of Representatives have met together pursuant to the Constitution and laws of the United States. If there be no objection to the electoral vote of the State of Alabama, the certificate will be read by the tellers, who will make a list of the votes therefrom.

There being no objection, Mr. MANDERSON (one of the tellers) read at length the certificate of the vote of the State of Alabama, giving 10 votes for Grover Cleveland, of the State of New York, for President of the United States, and 10 votes for Allen G. Thurman, of the State of Ohio, for Vice-President of the United States.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. Following the precedents observed upon former occasions, unless in any case there be a demand that the certificate be reported in full, the tellers, having ascertained the certificates are in due form and properly authenticated, will omit the executive certificate of the ascertainment of the electors appointed and the preliminary formal statement of the proceedings of the college.

Mr. HARRIS (one of the tellers) read the certificate of the electors of the State of Arkansas, and announced the electoral vote of that State for President and Vice-President.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask by unanimous consent the tellers, having examined the certificates and found them to be regular, will simply announce the result and the number of votes of the State, whatever the result may be, and save the time of reading the papers. We all understand they have examined them and found them to be regular.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. If there be no objection, that course will be pursued. There was no objection.

The tellers then proceeded to announce the electoral votes of the States of California, Colorado, and Connecticut.

Mr. COX. I desire to call the attention of the President to the language of the law of February 3, 1887.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

The gentleman from New York can proceed only by unanimous consent, debate not being in order. Mr. COX. I do not propose to debate, but will have the law read from the Clerk's desk.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. The Chair thinks that in the nature of debate.

Mr. COX. I will ask unanimous consent to read one sentence of the law, in order, if possible, to prevent any improper precedent from creeping into the count of the electoral vote. "Upon such reading of any such certificate or paper the President of the Senate shall call for objections, if any." That means, sir, if anything, objections after the reading.

The tellers then proceeded to announce the electoral votes of the States of Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, and Ohio, to which there was no objection.

During the announcement of the electoral vote of Indiana there were manifestations of applause.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. The Chair is confident his suggestion that manifestations of applause or disapproval are in viola-tion of the rules of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, and that they disturb the dignity and decorum which should characterand that they disture the dignity and decorum which should characterize the great transaction which is now proceeding in the presence of the representatives of the American people will be sufficient to prevent a repetition of the disorder which has just occurred.

When the State of Oregon was reached,
The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. The President of the Senate has received two certificates and two other papers purporting to be certificates from the State of Oregon. He is required by law to deliver them all, and delivers them to the tellers, who will, if there be no objection, read those certificates which are authenticated by the signatures of the electors certified by the governor of Oregon to have been duty appointed in that State, as appears by the copy of such certificate, transmitted to the two Houses of Congress; and will make a list of the votes as they

Senator MANDERSON (one of the tellers). The tellers have examined the different certificates presented to them, and they find but one in duplicate that is certified by the governor of the State of Oregon, over the great seal of that State. It seems to be in due form, and by it it appears that Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, received 3 votes for President of the United States, and Levi P. Morton, of New York, received 3 votes for Vice-President of the United States. There was no objection.

The tellers then proceeded to announce the electoral votes of the States of Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin, to which there was no objection.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. The certificates having now all been opened and read, the tellers will deliver the result of the ascertainment and counting of the votes to the President of the Senate.

Senator MANDERSON (one of the tellers). The tellers on the part of the Senate and House of Representatives report the following as the result of the ascertainment and counting of the electoral votes for President and Vice-President of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1889.

The following is the report:

List of votes for President and Vice-President of the United States for the constitutional term to commence on the 4th day of March, 1889.

CHARLES F. MANDERSON,
ISHAM G. HARRIS,
Tellers on the part of the Senate.
DANIEL ERMENTROUT,
CHARLES S. BAKER,
Tellers on the part of the House of Representatives.

Senator MANDERSON (one of the tellers). The total number of votes cast is 401, of which Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, receives for President of the United States 233; Grover Cleveland, of New York, 168; and of which Levi P. Morton, of New York, receives for Vice-President of the United States 233 votes, and Allen G. Thurman, of

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. The state of the vote for President of the United States, as delivered to the President of the Senate, is as follows:

The whole number of the electors appointed to vote for President of the United States is 401, of which a majority is 201.

Benjamin Harrison, of the State of Indiana, has received for President of the United States 233 votes, and Grover Cleveland, of the State of New York, has received 168 votes. The state of the vote for Vice-President of the United States, as delivered to the President of the Senate, is as follows:

The whole number of the electors appointed to vote for Vice-President of the United States is 401, of which a majority is 201.

Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, has received 233 votes,

Allen G. Thurman, of the State of Ohio, has received 168 votes. This announcement of the state of the vote by the President of the Senate is, by law, a sufficient declaration that Benjamin Harrison, of the State of Indiana, is elected President of the United States, and that Levi P. Morton, of the State of New York, is elected Vice-President of the United States, each for the term beginning March 4, 1889, and will be entered, together with a list of the votes, on the Journals of the Sen-, ate and House of Representatives.

The count of the electoral votes having been completed and the result declared, the joint meeting of the two Houses is dissolved, and the Senate will now return to its Chamber.

The announcement of the vote was received with applause on the floor and in the galleries.

The Senate retired from the Hall; and (at 2 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Speaker resumed the chair, and the House was called to

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] raises the question of consideration against the conference report presented by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Peel].

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I suppose that report can be called up at any time as a privileged matter.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will have a right to call it up at any time.

Mr. PEEL. Then I will not insist upon its consideration at this time.

SOUTH CAROLINA CONTESTED ELECTION-SMALLS VS. ELLIOTT. Mr. CRISP. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to state again to the House, so that there may be no misapprehension as to the intention of those having the case of Smalls es. Elliott in charge, that there are two hours and thirty-seven minutes still remaining for debate; at the end of which time, by order of the House, the previous question is ordered. That will bring us to about 5 o'clock, and at that time we expect to ask a vote and to have the matter determined before the House adjourns. If I can be allowed to control the time on this side of the House I now yield thirty minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. HEMP-

HILL]

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, if I can have the attention of the House for a few minutes, after the proceeding which has occupied their thoughts for the last hour, I desire to make some response to the charges that have been made in the debate upon this election case against the people whom I in part represent upon this election case against the people whom I in part represent upon this floor. I have not seen anything during my service in Congress that seems to excite so much delight upon the part of our Republican friends across the aisle as the privilege or opportunity of abusing one great section of this country, and one who has listened to the discussion of this election case would conclude that the unwarranted, the wanton, and often the malicious abuse of the Southern people is about the only "unfinished business" that the Republican party has left to it.

A great deal has been said about the registration law of South Caro-

A great deal has been said about the registration law of South Carolina, and I want to explain to the House some of its provisions in order that it may go before them and before the country in its true light. The registration law of South Carolina was passed in pursuance of a provision of the constitution of the State, which was adopted by the Republican party and put upon the State of South Carolina by Republican votes, and it is in exact keeping with the constitutional provision which they adopted. If it is not in conformity with it, then the courts of South Carolina are open to every man who thinks that his rights are in any way infringed. It is a fact, however, that not a single man, white or black, Democrat or Republican, has ever questioned the constitutionality of that law. Not only is it a law passed in exact accordance with the constitution of the State adopted by the Republicans, but it is a fair and a just law. In many States of this Union it is required that a man shall register every time he votes.

In South Carolina if a man registers once in his lifetime and will preserve his registration certificate so that he may be identified at the polls, and will not change his residence, his voting precinct, or his county, he has a right to vote without any additional registration as long as he lives. Surely no one can object to a law of that character. If he loses his certificate or if it becomes defaced or in any way gets out of his hands without his fault, then all that he has to do is to go to the registrar, upon the first Monday of any month in the year except the months immediately preceding the election, and have a new certificate issued upon making affidavit that the old one has been lost, misplaced, or defaced. In addition to that, if he is not satisfied with the result of his application he has a right of appeal to the board of supervisors in any county in the State, and if he is not satisfied with its decision he has the right of appeal to the circuit judge, and from there he can appeal to the supreme court of the State.

Now, after all the testimony that has been adduced in reference to this case, and after all that has been said about the law of South Carolina with reference to registration, it turns out that of the thirty-two thousand colored men in this district who are said to be voters and who are claimed by the Republicans as being devoted to the Republican party, only twenty-two men-only twenty-two out of thirty-two thousand-attempted to register and were not registered, and not a single one of them had so good a case that he was willing to appeal to the board of supervisors. That disposes, I think, of the whole question of registration. If those thirty-two thousand men are fit to be voters in the State of South Carolina, or in any other State (and they are voters under the laws of that State and under the laws of the United States)-if out of the whole thirty-two thousand only twenty-two have attempted to register and have had their registration refused, and if not one of those appealed from the decision of the registrar, then I say, Mr. Speaker, that all this gabble and talk about the unfairness of the registration law of South Carolina is the merest twaddle, and is intended for a different purpose than to reach a just conclusion in regard to this case

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HEMPHILL.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Certainly.
Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Is it true that those who were twentyone years of age at the time of the passage of that registration law who did not then register can not register now?
Mr. HEMPHILL. There has been no such decision. It has been stated upon the floor of this House that if a man comes into the State he can not now register. No man who had read the laws of the State could have made such an assertion if he intended to be honest. In connection with this subject a good deal has been said about one Bampfield, the son-in-law of the contestant in this case. The contestant praised him, and I have no doubt that he had a right to praise him, and I want to take occasion to say here that the spirit exhibited by the contestant in this case contrasts most favorably with the spirit manifested by other gentlemen who have presented arguments upon it on this floor.

Now, what does Bampfield himself say? He had a number of certificates issued by the registrar of Beaufort County. One of them, by some mishap, did not reach him. What does he do? He writes to the registrar saying that "the old man will be disappointed" if he does not get his certificate, and then he adds, "Thanking you for your uniform kindness and courtesy in these matters, and hoping that I may hear favorably from you, I am, very truly yours, S. J. Bampfield." That is the letter of the son-in-law of the contestant in this case. He thanked the registrar of that county for his uniform kindness and courtesy, and yet. when this case comes upon the floor of this House, every registrar in the State of South Carolina is branded as a corruptionist and a fraud, and as a man who swindles the people out of their dearest rights. Now, I do not want to consume very much time upon this point, and will call the attention of the House to the election law of the State of South Carolina.

election law of the State of South Carolina.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. You did not answer my question.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes, sir; I did answer your question.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. If a man were living in the State—

Mr. HEMPHILL. If he were living in the State and were to apply to the judges for a certificate he would, in all human probability, have a certificate issued to him. There has never been any decision that he can not have it, and I have no doubt in the world that he would succeed if he made any effort to get it. There is no pretense here that any one under these circumstances, has made an effort to get a regisany one, under these circumstances, has made an effort to get a registration certificate and been refused.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. What does the law provide in regard to it?

Mr. HEMPHILL. The law provides that he shall have a certificate, in my opinion.

Mr. DUNHAM. Is that all?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I can not give you anything but my opinion, and I do not think that any man can give anything more than an opinion in such a matter. The law is there upon the statute-book for the construction of the court, and I say that not a single man has been denied a registration certificate who was entitled to it and has used his legal remedies to obtain it.

Mr. BURROWS. Will the gentleman allow me to read the law?
Mr. HEMPHILL. I have not time to have the law read now.
Mr. BURROWS. Only three lines.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I have no objection to your reading three lines.

Mr. BURROWS. After providing for the registration referrred to, that of 1882, the language or the section continues:

After the said next general election the said books shall be reopened for the registration of such persons as shall thereafter become entitled to registration.

Those entitled to registration "thereafter." That is the language of the law.

Mr. HEMPHLIL. But that does not exclude other people. When you provide that one man shall have a certain privilege you do not say that other men shall not have that privilege. It has never been so decided in South Carolina, and I think the opinion upon this side of the aisle will stand as of equal authority with the opinion on the other side of the aisle; and if the people of South Carolina are satisfied with the way the law stands, I need not trouble myself about it; neither need you.

Mr. MORGAN. Has any qualified voter ever been refused registration?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Not a single voter that I know of. Mr. KERR. Does the gentleman think it is none of our business

Mr. KERR. Does the gentleman think it is none of our business how the people vote in South Carolina?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Oh, no; I do not state that; but I say they have their rights, and they know what they are. If they are not satisfied with the administration of the registration law they can go to the courts; and they have not done so. That is what I say.

I wish now to call attention to the election law of the State. It is said that the election law of South Carolina is intended to cheat the Republicans out of their representation. I deny it. I am not going Republicans out of their representation. I deny it. I am not going to pretend that the election law there is for the purpose of putting the Republicans into power; because we believe there that a white man is just as good as a negro—that is what we believe. We are perfectly willing that a negro shall have all his rights, but we do not believe he should have his rights and ours, too; and we are determined that he shall not, if we can keep him from it. That is all there is in it. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I say that this election law is legal and constitutional. In one sense it is nothing more than a qualification for electors upon the educational principle; and if that can be adopted in Massa-chusetts why can it not be adopted in South Carolina?

But it is said by the Republicans that all the county canvassers and managers of elections are appointed by the governor. This is exactly the same thing that was done when the Republicans were in power in South same thing that was done when the Republicans were in power in South Carolina. For eight of the longest years that any people ever suffered under any tyranny the Republicans were absolutely in power there; yet they had a law that the governor should appoint every commissioner of election, and they appointed the managers, just as is done under the existing law. If the Republicans are satisfied with that, and the Democrats are satisfied with it, why should gentlemen on this floor interfere, unless from that overweening desire to ram their hands into something that does not concern them? I say that the Republicans could have changed that law if they had wanted to do so, and they did not do it.

In addition to that the Republicans had an election law there which, I suppose, was entirely satisfactory to our friends on the other side. Under that law, after an election the managers who had received the votes simply took the box home with them and did whatever they pleased with it for three days after the votes were cast. There was no law requiring the managers to count the vote in public; there was no law requiring them to carry the ballots at once, with the box locked up, to the county canvassers. But they held the election, and for three days they kept the boxes at their own homes and did with them as they saw fit. The result was that no matter how many Democratic votes were cast, or how many Democratic voters there were to cast them, the Republicans every time came out on top. Now, the present election law in our State—the law passed by the Democrats requires that as soon as the election is over there shall be a public count of the votes cast, and that every man who chooses to do so may see the result of the election.

Something has been said also in regard to the shifting of boxes on the day of the election. Now, let us see about that. It is claimed by the contestant that as soon as the voters arrange their ballots in a particular way the managers shift the boxes. What does the law say on this subject? It provides that "each box shall be labeled in plain and distinct Roman letters (just as plain as they can be printed) with the name of the office or officers voted for; and the managers, on the demand of the voter, shall read to him the names on the boxes" as they stand there before him. In other words, if the voter can not read and asks the manager to read to him, it is the sworn duty of the manager to read him the name upon every single box of the voting precinct. And at every voting precinct in South Carolina where Congressmen and electors for President and Vice-President are voted for there is a Republican supervisor, who can show by his affidavit or otherwise that that law has been violated, if there has been any violation of it. Yet there is no pretense on the part of any witness that any such jugglery as has been suggested here has ever been carried on or that a single manager has refused to perform his duty in this regard. Mr. Speaker, I merely wanted to say that much with reference to the election laws of my State.

There is another thing to which I would like to call attention. A great deal has been said on this floor and elsewhere in the United States, especially in another body connected with this Congress, about the suppression of votes in the Southern States. Some people have whipped themselves up into a great passion about this. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mason] who spoke the other day prematurely, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] who spoke more recently on this question, have delivered some terrific philippics against the Southern people for the suppression of the votes, as they say.

They declared on the floor of the House of Representatives that it is nothing less than robbery, and that the people of South Carolina stand convicted before their countrymen of the United States of a great crime in depriving these people of their votes.

Mr. ROWELL. If the gentleman refers to me he will find I referred to no voters but those in South Carolina.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I say in South Carolina; that is what I am taking care of now.

Mr. ROWELL. I confined myself to the Seventh district of South Carolina. Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, we will take the Seventh district of South Carolina, if that will satisfy my friend any better. I say the speech he made and the violent passion he worked himself into, knowing the ability which he possesses, to me are strong proof that the gentleman, not having a good case on the facts, was adopting the old plan of abusing the other side when he could do nothing better. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. ROWELL. I wish to say I was neither in a passion nor did I go outside of the record, but discussed simply and purely the facts in the case

Mr. HEMPHILL. Let us get down to the facts as to these votes. Take, for instance, the vote of California, which usually goes Republican unless now and then a sudden streak of virtue passes through the State and it goes Democratic. California gave in 1884 58.8 per cent. of its vote, while Alabama, which goes Democratic, gave 59 per cent. of its vote. Connecticut gave 77.4 per cent. of its vote, while Florida gave 97 per cent. of its vote. Maine, where the great Republican statesman comes from, the leading statesman of this country in the opinion of a great many men, gave 69.1 per cent. of its vote, while Tennessee gave 78.6 per cent. of its vote. I have here a table which shows the per cent. of the vote cast in six other Northern States and in six South-

States.	Vote.	States.	Vote.
Nevada	Per ct. 40.9 60.3 82.2 62.1 62.1 42.6	South Carolina	Per et. 44.5 91.1 84.7 85.2 73.3 50.3

If you add up the percentage of votes in these nine Northern and nine Southern States you will find in the Northern States it is 61.72 per cent., while in the Southern States it is 73.74 per cent.; so that in nine States of the South we have cast 12.2 per cent, more votes than you have cast in an equal number of States in the North.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Where does the gentleman get his figures from as to the Southern vote?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I got the Southern vote from the same book I got the Northern vote from.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR rose.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It is the vote of 1884; and I will give you something more if the gentleman will only keep quiet. Down in Florida it takes 28,268 men to elect a member to this House, and Florida is a Southern State; but in Massachusetts, where they have learned and patriotic men, where the people are supposed to have so much liberty, and where the breezes which blow through the heavens are not half as free as the voters on election day are said to be, it takes only a vote of 20,440 to elect a member of Congress. In Florida it takes 28,268, while in Massachusetts it takes 20,440.

Mr. MILLIKEN. How much does it take to elect a member of Congress in South Carolina?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will answer. [Laughter.] I do not say we cast so many votes, because we have a way down there—whites and blacks-when we get a good Democrat in we let him stay.

Mr. MILLIKEN. How many votes did it require to get to that happy state? [Laughter.]

Mr. HEMPHILL. Do not trouble yourself about that little matter. We will take care of ourselves. The trouble with us is that you want to take care of us. We can take care of ourselves if you will only let

Let us come to Rhode Island. In the first district it is— Mr. LONG. You know it does not trouble Massachusetts men.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I understand that Massachusetts and South Carolina have many points in common. You know how to get along. You let well enough alone. Take the great State of Rhode Island, a great State in many respects, with not a very great area in size and not very big on the map. Our friend Mr. SPOONER, a mild-mannered, good, conscientious gentleman, comes here from a district that takes 6,636 votes to decide who shall represent it, while in the second district, where our friend Mr. Arnold comes from, it takes 15,630 votes to determine who shall represent it. Now, gentlemen, according to your logic, and I will not depend upon my own statement as to what your logic is, for I have it here from Mr. KENNEDY, a gentleman on your side, who delivered a speech on the tariff question—according to your own logic, there is something wrong about that, for he says, in speaking about the general suppression of votes in Alabama:

	Votes.
First district, Jones, Democrat, no opposition	4,236
Second district, Herbert, Democrat, no opposition	5.659
Third district, Oates, Democrat, no opposition	4.662
Fifth district, Cobb, Democrat, no opposition	6, 333
	100000000000000000000000000000000000000

Could there by any possibility be a more systematic and determined suppression of the votes of any part of the Union? And yet it is by these very votes, which have been literally blotted out, that these gentlemen are enabled to stand here to-day in control of this Chamber and threaten the destruction of that system of protection which has builded up and diversified the industries of this country and enriched it beyond any other nation upon the civilized globe.

While the votes of these Southern States are being suppressed, and one man, by virtue of his living south of Mason and Dixon's line, is enabled by the ballot to wield as much political power as eight or ten men in other portions of the Union, it may be well for us to inquire how long this condition of affairs shall continue?

In the great State of New York, upon whose chariot wheels the Democratic party is clinging with the departing strength of despair, the election of 1886 showed in the—

	Votes.
First district, Mr. Belmont, Democrat	32, 594	£
Twelfth district, Mr. Cockran, Democrat	26, 782	2
Ninth district, Mr. Cox, Democrat	22,078	3

ONE DEMOCRAT SOUTH EQUALS TEN DEMOCRATS NORTH,

I commend these figures to my Democratic friends for their careful consideration. Not only is the Republican party completely destroyed in these States, but one Democrati in Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, and Louisiana is as powerful as ten Democrate in the North. One Democratic ballot in Georgia is equal to ten Democratic ballots cast in Indiana, Illinois, New York, and Ohio, and greater than fifty in Oregon or Dakota.

In short, it requires about 30,000 votes in Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Connecticut to elect one man to Congress, while 27,433 elect ten Representatives in Georgia.

Could anything be more preposterous? Is it possible to present a more outrageous example of the trampling under foot of the rights and liberties of the people? Can any just or plausible excuss be given for such a wholesale destruction of the ballot-boxes of the land?

Mr. Speaker, when I hear such statements as these I can not help sympathizing with my Republican friend, Mr. Spooner, and these sympathizing with my Republican friend, Mr. Spooner, and these gentlemen from Massachusetts, who, remembering the small vote they have received to give them seats upon this floor, must have felt these arguments cutting into their souls like the cold steel of the knife in the heart of a man dying by the assassin's hand. They must have realized this in a double sense, coming from their own side and knowing that according to the logic of the argument presented they were here occupying seats, pretending to represent their constituencies, by the suppression of votes and by willfully and fraudulently depriving the people of Massachusetts and Rhode Island of their dearest rights.

Under this wicked system of the suppression of votes in Northern

Under this wicked system of the suppression of votes in Northern States 40 per cent. of the voters of Massachusetts were wrongfully deprived of their suffrage, and one Republican protectionist in a district in Rhode Island is equal to four tariff-reform Democrats in Florida.

In the language of the Republican orator, Mr. KENNEDY, of Ohio-Could anything be more preposterous? Is it possible to present a more out-rageous example of the trampling under foot of the rights and liberties of the people? Can any just or plausible excuse be given for such a wholesale destruc-tion of the ballot-boxes of the land?

If because the people of the State of South Carolina failed to cast their ballots you are going to argue that there has been a suppression of the votes there, I ask you to apply your own argument and your own logic to the States of Massachusetts and Rhode Island and other States which I could name, and when you do that you will begin to put yourselves in a position to be heard by the country and to command some degree of respect for that advice given to the South that seems to be the chief delight of many Republican statesmen of these

The same state of things as to the suppression of the Democratic vote exists in Virginia, as shown by the following table:

		Lies A	1884.		1887.
Counties.	Black.	White.	Repub- lican.	Demo- cratic.	Repub- lican.	Demo- cratie.
Amelia	7,340 5,650 8,144 6,701	3,037 2,757 3,012 3,361	1,048 1,088 1,277 1,442	590 540 453 750	748 671 970 916	None. None. 20

Mr. GALLINGER. What is the date of that election?

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will put the dates in with the tables that I will publish.

Let me call your attention to this: In the State of Virginia there are four counties, Amelia, Greenville, Nottoway, and Sussex, in which there were 2,334 Democratic voters in 1884. In 1887 there was not a single Democratic vote in three of these counties and only 20 in the other. Now, what has become of those votes? Why, according to the Republican logic, there has been a most outrageous suppression of the free health of a free result. In the world the Democratic voters in the country of the free health of a free result. free ballot of a free people. In other words, the Democrats in Virginia did not have the power to cast their ballots for the men of their choice, if your reasoning is to hold good.

Now let us compare the votes of some other Northern and Southern States-the fourteen Southern States of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland, Missouri, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and Fiorida, with the fourteen Northern States of Nevada, Rhode Island, California, Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, Colorado, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Minnesota, and Ohio-and we reach the following:

The four border States of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia cast, out of 744,070 voting population, 633,270 votes, or 85 per cent. of voting population.

The four Southern States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida cast 563,467 votes out of a voting population of 883,676,

The four Southern States of Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky cast 808,891 votes out of a voting population of 1,204,942, or 67 per cent. of voting population.

The four Southwestern States of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Texas cast 998,093 votes out of a voting population of 1,321,347, or 751 per cent. of voting population.

But, sir, another thing upon the subject of the colored man. If he is so dear to your heart-and I want to say that I am not here to protest any undue affection for him, for I am not going to hurt your feelings by attempting to take your place and stand in with him-but upon the subject of the colored man let me make a suggestion which is pertinent to this question: Why do not some of you elect a colored man to Congress and make a living example of his fitness to frame laws for the people of this country? [Applause on the Democratic side.] Now, there are a number of Republican States of this Union that have quite a large negro vote, notably I might mention New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and you know as well as I do that there New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and you know as well as 1 do that there would not be a very strong probability of those States going Republican except for the large number of colored voters in them. Yet in those States which have from 3,000 up to 23,000 colored voters, have you ever sent one of them to Congress? The colored people have been free in the United States since 1863 or 1865, at least. They have been full-fledged citizens ever since 1868, and yet out of all the Northern States having a large number of these votes in them, having quite a large proportion of colored population, and in some States they having the power to keep the Republican party in or turn it out, I ask if you know of a single instance of the election from any Northern State of a colored man to Congress, or of any man who had a tinge of colored blood in his veins?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Will the gentleman from South Carolina give me a single Congressional district in any of the Northern States which he has mentioned where the colored vote is 20 per cent. of the vote of the district?

Mr. HEMPHILL. That is exactly it, and I wanted the gentleman to state that. Whenever the colored man in a district has not enough votes to put his own color in he never gets in. [Applause on the Democratic side.] If you want a colored man in office, and if he is as good as the white, as you say, why do not the white men unite and vote for him to give him a place?

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Can the gentleman give a single instance in any Northern State where the colored man has aspired to come to

Mr. HEMPHILL. No, sir; I have never known of a colored man in a district in the Northern States who has had the assurance to presume to suppose that they would give him the office even if he did aspire to it—not one.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Do you know as a matter of fact that the white men take care of the interests of the colored men in the

Mr. HEMPHILL. Oh, yes. I know they do. Just as we do in

A MEMBER. And do you not know that they elect them to office?
Mr. CHEADLE. Will the gentleman yield to a question?
Mr. ROWELL. Colored men have been elected to the State Legislature in Illinois.

Mr. HEMPHILL. The gentleman from Illinois says that there have been colored men elected to the State Legislature in Illinois, and another gentleman says also in Ohio.

Mr. CHEADLE. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. HEMPHILL. No, I can not now; one at a time and I will an-

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. You say the people of the North have never voted for a colored man for any office. I want to show you—Mr. HEMPHILL. I do not say that they have not.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Illinois. Colored men have been elected to the State Legislature.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Why, we elect them in South Carolina. It common a thing to do so that we do not think of mentioning that. elect them as Republicans and elect them as Democrats, and the first time I was ever in the State Legislature my two colleagues from the same county were colored men.

I do not say, Mr. Speaker, that colored men throughout the North have not occasionally crept into the Legislature; but of the fact that they do go to the Legislature of South Carolina I know of my own knowledge, and I know that this has always been true since 1868. not been a meeting of the General Assembly of the State of South Carolina in twenty years that has not contained colored men, both Democrats and Republicans. That can be easily verified by any gentleman who thinks that the colored man down there is not getting his full share of representation.

Mr. Speaker, if a stranger had happened in this Hall and heard the speeches made by my friends from Ohio and Illinois the other day he would have supposed that their affection for the colored man was so great that they could not sleep at nights unless they had their arms wrapped around his neck and his head in their bosoms.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I think it ought to be extended on account of the interruptions.

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask to be recognized in order that I may give the time accorded to me to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from South Carolina may be allowed to conclude his remarks, as he has been interrupted so much.

Mr. CRISP. I yield ten minutes more to the gentleman from South Carolina

Mr. TIMOTHY J. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I had asked unanimous consent that he be allowed ten minutes on account of interrup-

The SPEAKER protempore. The gentleman from Georgia has yielded the gentleman from South Carolina ten minutes more.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I was stating when my time expired that to have listened to those speeches a stranger would have drawn a peculiar picture. Now, I have taken occasion to learn to some extent how colored people are treated in the North, and though I have not time to go through the whole thing, I have a statement relating to the way they are treated in Chicago, Ill., the State from which my friends Mr. ROWELL and Mr. MASON come. Here is an interview with colored men in a paper printed at Chicago, the Herald, of December 12, 1887, of two or three columns, and in it it is declared that the colored men have not as many rights in many ways in the city of Chicago and the State of Illinois as they have amongst the people of Atlanta and other Southern cities

Mr. GUENTHER. That is a very poor source of information.

Mr. ADAMS. Does he specify?
Mr. HEMPHILL. Yes; he specifies.
Mr. ADAMS. It is all untrue.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, we will see whether it is or not.
Mr. GALLINGER. The Herald is a Democratic paper.
Mr. HEMPHILL. That is all right, and therefore it is truthful. Mr. Barnett, a colored lawyer, of Chicago, says that a colored boy can not get into a trade union, and can not learn to be a brick-mason, carpenter, or any other trade where any skill is required to make a living.

Mr. ADAMS. All American boys, white or black, find the same difficulty in learning trades.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Then Chicago is worse than I thought it was. It is bad enough to treat a poor darkey that way, but when you treat were board chought to theat a poor darkey that way, but when you treat everybody that way it is worse than I thought.

Mr. ADAMS. But the difficulty is not confined to Chicago. It is so in all large American cities. American boys do not have a fair chance to become apprentices and learn trades.

Mr. HEMPHILL. The Harald cave editorial trades.

Mr. HEMPHILL. The Herald says editorially:

Mr. HEMPHILL. The Herald says editorially:

The Herald once more lays before its readers an exhibit of the quiet brutality with which the colored man is treated in Chicago. Probably his life here is as happy as elsewhere in Northern cities. The canting politician who weeps over the wrongs of Eliza Pinkston raises his hands in horror whenever he hears that a white Southerner will not accord social equality to the negroes. This same philanthropist, if he keep astore or restaurant, will not hire colored salesmen in his store or serve colored patrons in his restaurant. The restrictions that surround a respectable colored man and his wife are well-nigh incredible. To realize or conceive those limitations a white man must put himself in close companionship with the victim of the proscription. Theaters, restaurants, barber shops, and even churches are practically closed at all places north of Van Buren street. No trade or trade union is open. Money, therefore, is earned toilsomely, and it does not bring the advantages of a white man's cash. Difficult of acquirement, the medium of traffic is not a medium after it is obtained. The other day a white buildog killed a cat, as many a dog has done. The society to prevent white buildogs from killing cats now has the responsible wrong-doers in its grasp and promises to improve public morals before it shall let go the case. But the society for the prevention of needless cruelty to colored men and women in Chicago would be more to the end of justice. For every dog that kills a cat there are a hundred white men who enforce heartless exactions or ostracisms on worthy negroes. It is the belief of careful observers that a black man's feelings are hurt oftener in Chicago than in Atlanta or New Orleans.

Now, here is another case up at Marion, Ill.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is in Mr. Townshend's district.
Mr. HEMPHILL. That is all right; and it shows that sometimes the Democrats are as bad as the Republicans in their treatment of the I have just read to you an interview showing how they were treated in Chicago. I will read to you what was done with them up at Marion, Ill. Here was a man who had a tobacco factory, and he carried a number of colored men up there to work in that factory; and what do you suppose the white people did?

His conduct greatly enraged the white workmen and they sent notice to the colored men warning them to leave town within ten days or receive summary punishment, and they threatened that if these colored men were not put out of that factory they would not only burn the factory but would burn the homes which the colored men were living

That they did in Chicago

Mr. ADAMS and others. Not in Chicago. Mr. HEMPHILL. Not in Chicago, but in Illinois. Our friends on the other side seem to be a little disturbed on this subject. Now, I want to read what a Southern Republican says about all these pretenses of affection for the colored man on the part of the Northern politicians and stump orators. There is a prominent Republican down in Georgia by the name of Governor Bullock, and he says that "the harangues of Northern politicians about the oppression of the negro in the South are rot," pure and unadulterated rot. He says, further, that the manipulation of the politics of the South is another thing, and not pure and unadulterated patriotism.

I take now another Northern Republican State, Rhode Island—how do you think they show their affection for the darkey there? If a colored man in Rhode Island insures his life and happens unfortunately to die, his heirs can get but two-thirds of his insurance money, while the heirs of a white man get the whole of it. That is an actual fact, or was until a few months ago when the Legislature took action on it.

[Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. GUENTHER. Read the law.
Mr. HEMPHILL. Here it is in black and white, and it shows that the Legislature of the State of Rhode Island became suddenly so much aroused upon the subject of the rights of the darkey that they actually went to work and passed a law to prevent the insurance companies from swindling him out of one-third of the money that would be due to his family in case of his death. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side. Take the State of Kansas, "bleeding Kansas." You know there was a bill introduced into the Legislature of Georgia called the Glenn bill, which was intended to prevent the colored people and the white people from sending their children to the same school. The bill was people from sending their children to the same school. The bill was the subject of a good deal of unfavorable comment in the North, and in a certain town in Kansas, Fort Scott, I believe, the negroes did not have any better sense than to suppose that their vociferous friends meant what they said, so they undertook to send their children to the white schools, but in every single instance they were turned out. There was one poor little girl who did not have enough colored blood in her to show what race she belonged to, and the teacher received her and taught her for one day, but the moment it was discovered that she was tinged with African blood they turned her out, and she had to go and seek an education in some other way. and seek an education in some other way.

The account continues:

The matter has been carried into the courts, which appear bound to decide in favor of mixed schools; but it is evident that the great body of the whites will not accept this policy, the opposition being so strong that the local Republican organ protests earnestly against any attempt to enforce it.

Mr. FUNSTON. I deny your assertion. [Cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, you may deny it, but that does not hurt it.

Mr. FUNSTON. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. HEMPHILL. I will not yield to the gentleman now.

Mr. FUNSTON. Well, I say you make a false charge.

Mr. HEMPHILL. It is not worth while to get excited and let your passions run away with you.

Several Members on the Republican side. What do you read from? Mr. HEMPHILL. I read from the New York Nation. [Jeers and groans on the Republican side.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. That thing happened at Fort Scott, within 20 miles of where I live, and in the district of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Funston].

Mr. HEMPHILL. Here is a gentleman [Mr. Stone, of Missouri] who says he knows that this did occur at Fort Scott.

Mr. FUNSTON. Where is the gentleman from, please tell me? Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I live within 20 miles of Fort Scott.

Mr. FUNSTON. I represent Fort Scott.

Mr. HEMPHILL (to Mr. Funston). Now keep quiet. [Laughter]. Mr. FUNSTON. I say the colored people established their schools.

[Jeers on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HEMPHILL. Take another State, the State of Ohio, from which one of the most distinguished Republicans in the country comes, Hon. JOHN SHERMAN. The colored people you know have been free at the South for the last twenty-five or thirty years, though they may not have heard of it up in Ohio. In that State they used to have upon their statute-books what they called the "black laws." Very recently the idea came to the Legislature of Ohio that they ought to repeal these, and one of these black laws was designed to keep the colored children white schools. out of the white schools.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. A law passed by a Democratic Legislature. [Laughter on the Republican side.]
Mr. HEMPHILL. That may be; I do not know; but, anyhow, the Republicans have been in power there often enough and long enough to have repealed that law, if they wished to do so. In that State an attempt was made to put the colored children into the white schools; and what do you suppose was done about it? Why, there was a public meeting held of some 400 people in the town of Oxford, in the county of Butler, a county in which there are 41,400—

Mr. WILLIAMS (interrupting). A Democratic county which gives over 2,400 majority. [Laughter, and cries of "Sit down!" "Regular order!"] order !

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, that is all right; that just proves what I said awhile ago, that so far as the North is concerned the Democrats and the Republicans feel the same way with reference to the negro.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Butler County is called the South Carolina of Mr. WILLIAMS. hio. [Laughter.] Mr. HEMPHILL.

That is a compliment for my State which I did not expect from Ohio.

But let us see what our friends are talking about.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCreary). The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from South Carolina to the fact that his time has expired.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Well, I think it would be very unfair for our friends on the other side, after they have taken my time, to cut me off now. There are some things which I would like to tell them. I do not propose to occupy more than a few moments.

Mr. CHEADLE. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's

Mr. CHEADLE. I ask unanitime be extended for ten minutes.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. And that the same amount of time be allowed on this side.

A MEMBER. Your side has already had an extension.

Mr. HEMPHILL. When the contestant spoke yesterday you gave him fifteen minutes additional.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to extending the time of the gentleman from South Corolina [Mr. HEMPHILL] for ten minutes? The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have a very few words nore to say. Though I have a great deal of material here, I will not more to say. go into it all. I ask that in my remaining time I may not be interrupted.

Now, in this town in the county of Butler, in the State of Ohio, there were 41,435 white people and 1,140 colored. A meeting was held there to discuss this question, and this paper says that-

To the shame of some of these men it must be stated that they were Republicans, blinded by a fanaticism that can not but result in harm to this beautiful little town.

So it was not altogether the Democrats who took part in this movement. Well, they went to work and held a public meeting, and they instructed the board of education to separate the colored men's children from the white men's children. The proceedings continue:

In compliance with the above request the superintendent be, and is hereby, instructed to assign the colored people to the north building to-morrow.

That was the instruction which they gave when the first public meeting was held. Later there was another public meeting, to return thanks that they had gotten rid of the "darkies." In calling the meeting to order the chairman—

Asked the boys to be as quiet as possible-

The "boys" being spoken of, you understand, in a political sense.

Asked the boys to be as quiet as possible; that while they had cause to feel jubilant they could at the proper time give vent to their feelings.

All that he asked was that they should keep quiet while the meet-

One of the leaders in that meeting said that he would go security for the board of education, or the school board, that they should not suffer any pecuniary harm for having turned these colored children out in violation of the law. And what did he say when he was called upon to speak?

The colored people have the right of suffrage; more than this they can not expect. As for their social qualifications there are few of us here ready for that question.

Another speaker expressed himself as-

Highly satisfied to know that the children had been driven from the schools.

Another speaker said-

So soon as the colored man begins to push himself forward and dictate to his superiors in point of intellect and morality, then he awakens that great and powerful feeling of prejudice which has always existed in the heart of the white man against the negro.

That is the sentiment of the great State of Ohio as expressed by her leading citizens in a public meeting held for the purpose of returning thanks that the negro had been forcibly driven out of the public schools in violation of the law of the State. [Applause on the Democratic

Mr. GALLINGER. Does the gentleman know that the State of Ohio elected a negro as a member of their electoral college at the last election?

Mr. HEMPHILL. Now, Mr. Speaker, occasionally when there is an election in some of these States the negro does slip into an office that has no salary connected with it; there is no doubt about that [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] But a negro can not live on glory any more than a white man can.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the gentleman thinks that an answer, I am satisfied.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Ido; and I will tell the gentleman another thing. I was up in the State of New York during the last campaign doing what I could for the cause of virtue and honesty. In a town which I visited there was quite a number of colored people; and out of thirty-four or thirty-five vice-presidents who were nominated for a large political meeting they gave one of those colored men the position of vice-president one night. That, I was told, was the single, solitary recognition that the colored people of that section of the country had received from any political party, and that came from the Democrats. Now, I know that our Republican friends do occasionally name a colored man for an office of this kind, and have his name read out from the desk as being one of the Presidential electors, and all that kind of thing. But there is no money in that, and what the colored men complain of in the North, as shown by these letters to which I have referred, is that they are not given a fair chance to earn an honest living. I might multiply these instances to almost any extent from the material now before me, all tending to show how the negro is treated in the public schools, churches, theaters, hotels, restaurants, and other public places throughput many Northern States, but I will not consume the time of the The cases I have cited fitly illustrate the general feeling on this subject as shown by actual occurrences among the people.

Let me only add the closing sentences of an editorial on this subject taken from the Detroit Journal of November 22, 1888, as follows:

taken from the Detroit Journal of November 22, 1888, as follows:

When, by intelligence and refinement and achievement in the various callings and occupations of life, the colored race has wiped out the memory of its degradation in slavery, it will walk on the same plane of equality with the white man; but, it is to be feared, not before. In the mean time the North, with unconscious and cynical hypocrisy will continue to scorn the Southern people for their contemptuous treatment of the negro, and so far as they find it necessary to "keep the negro in his place" will also continue imitating them. No preaching of the gospel, no learned disquisition on the equality of all men before God and the Constitution, no satire or ridicule of the inconsistency will abolish these prejudices.

And the following extract from a letter written by a Northern preacher, now residing at the South, and recently published in the Christian Union, formerly edited by Henry Ward Beecher:

Christian Union, formerly edited by Henry Ward Beecher:
Since coming to live in the South I am persuaded of what I before suspected—that the social condition of the negro in the South is infinitely higher and far more expressive of a Christian humanity than in the North. Here he has separate railroad cars, churches, and schools, and this is in accord with his universal preference, so far as I have been able to discover. In these he feels a proprietorship and independence. No one dares to insult or molest him. He prefers to associate with his own people. In the North the respect for the colored man is mainly one of sentiment, and flourishes best when he is out of sight. He is admitted to the conveyances and schools and churches of the whites, but he is in a thousand ways made to feel that he is tolerated and not welcomed. There is nothing plainer to me than that in the matter of race prejudice the balance as to quality is largely in favor of the South. There is among the Southern people a warm, intelligent interest in the future of the negro that has no existence among the sentimentalists of the North. In fact, the North knows as little about the actual condition of the negro in the South as it does of the real heart of the Southern people. I am well satisfied that partisan papers and stump orators of the North have, for political capital, willfully and maliciously traduced the South.

Our friends have spoken a great deal about a free ballot and a fair count. I know no people more interested in having a free ballot and a fair count and some solution of this negro question than we of the South. These people are right there in our midst. They are there and will remain there. "Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish," we must go together.

But I say, Mr. Speaker, it does not lie in the mouths of the people who treat this race in the way our friends here have treated them to attempt to give us advice, and particularly on the question of honesty at the elections, until they have gone and done some missionary work amongst their own people living in their own communities.

All this talk about the rights and wrongs of the negro, and this effort to place him into advanced positions, can bear no good results.

When the speakers do not believe what they say, and many I fear do not, it is simply hypocritical, and when they do believe their own statements, it amounts only to an ill-advised effort to force from the negro what the Almighty has never put into him, and that is the ability to rule the Anglo-Saxon race. We of the South are not only willing but anxious to give him justice. We believe that it is wisest, that it is the only fair way to treat him, and that it is the only mode of treatment in which we can maintain our own self-respect and command the respect of the good people of the other portions of this country. We will gladly take him by the hand and lift him up, and do the best we can for him; but we are not willing that he should take us by the hand, pull us down, and do the worst he can for us.

One of the best ways of judging of the treatment of the colored race, or any other, is to consider the efforts made for its elevation in the way of public schools and other institutions that tend to the advancement of a people. It is generally believed that the colored people in South Carolina do not pay exceeding one-tenth of the total taxes, and yetlast year the number of colored pupils attending school in South Carolina was 103,334, and the number of whites was 90,100. During the same period there was over fifteen hundred colored teachers employed in the public schools of the State. In a public address delivered by Rev. Dr. A. D. Mays, a Northern gentleman who has devoted himself largely to the educational interests in the South for a number of years, he made the following remarkable statement:

following remarkable statement:

I undertake to say that no people in human history has made an effort so remarkable, all circumstances considered, as the people of the South during the past fifteen years, in what they have already done for the schooling of their children. In many of their cities their schools will compare (avorably with those of other parts of the country. Their reviving colleges and academies are mainly in the hands of able and devoted teachers. Their schools for girls are improving, and there is a great deal of interest in the higher education of women. Their teachers, as a body, are doing more good work for less pay than any class of their profession in our country, and not unfrequently are making sacrifices which amount to absolute heroism in their devotion to their work. I have just come from the State of South Carolina, where I have seen the largest audience-rooms in a score of her principal towns and cities crowded with their best people to listen to addresses on public education. And, generally, there is no topic of public speech or private conversation that now seems more generally interesting and even electric, through great portions of these States, than this. Last year the Southern States paid no less than $17,000,000 for the deucation of their children and youth of both races; probably five er six millions for the schooling of people who were held as property twenty-five years ago. And when one has seen the actual condition of the Southern people, as I have witnessed it, he can understand that $17,000,000 down there represent countless millions in our wealthy, prosperous, and powerful North.

A great deal has been said about suppression of votes in South Caro-

A great deal has been said about suppression of votes in South Carolina; about fraud being perpetrated by election officers; about 25,000 voters in one district being deprived of their right to vote, and yet the fact stands out uncontradicted that not a single one of these 25,000 men appealed from the decision of the registrar or managers of election, and not one of the men who are alleged to have perpetrated this enormous wrong has been arrested or brought to trial in the United States court where Judge Bond presides, and he is one of the strongest Republicans in the United States.

These same charges have been brought up against us in the past. The Government sent down lawyers from Pennsylvania and Ohio and from Georgia to convict men of crimes with which they are charged, and in one instance the jury was assembled and by solemn resolution, before the case was put on trial, these jurors swore among themselves they would convict these defendants of the crime with which they were charged; and yet notwithstanding that, notwithstanding the ability of the lawyers, notwithstanding the judge was a Republican, when the case was presented there were no facts which could be found to sustain a conviction, and notwithstanding what the jury had sworn to do they were unable to render a verdict of guilty.

It will be the same thing again, gentlemen. These officers have not been guilty of the crime they are charged with. If they are, there are the courts of the United States and of the State, which are open to the 25,000 people who are said to have been deprived of their rights and privileges. I say it is a poor showing for the colored people to say 25,000 of them have been deprived of their rights and privileges as American stitutes and yet they have not taken one single sten to bring American citizens, and yet they have not taken one single step to bring the perpetrators of that wrong against them to justice. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, my effort has been to show that the registration and election laws of South Carolina are not snares, but that they are reasonable and just; that our election officers are not criminals, as has been charged, and that if there be any race prejudice the same thing exists in Northern States, and that as citizens of the several States we ought in justice and fairness to judge each other in charity and not in harshness.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's time has expired. Mr. HEMPHILL. The only thing further I wish to ask of the House is that I may have the privilege of inserting some figures which I have in relation to this question.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. LODGE. I will yield half my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. COOPER. Before the gentleman from Wisconsin proceeds I would like permission to make a statement. I will say that I did not consume the entire hour to which I was entitled on yesterday, but concluded my remarks having exhausted all of the hour but five minutes, which time, however, I did not reserve. I supposed this side would have the benefit of the time and that it was not necessary to reserve it, but I should be glad to have an understanding now, so that I may have the benefit of the remaining minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio did not use all of his time. There were five minutes of it yet remaining.

Mr. CRISP. But I do not understand, Mr. Speaker, that that time belongs to the gentleman. The addition of that time would entirely change the arrangement heretofore made. We have agreed upon a

Mr. COOPER. I am not making any proposition in reference to it at all. I am only stating that I consumed but fifty-five minutes of the time, and if I am entitled to the remainder I should like to be permitted to dispose of it as I please. I did not reserve the time for the reason that I have stated.

Mr. CRISP. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon changing the agreement heretofore entered into.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will announce that when the debate began this morning the contestant had one hour and twelve minutes, and the contestee one hour and twenty-five minutes, of the time remaining for debate. The Chair understands the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] has the floor now for the time yielded to him by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge].

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Speaker, looking at the map of the Congressional districts of South Carolina, one's eye can not fail to be arrested by the peculiar outlines of the Seventh, with its strange curves and curious angles. The straggling and vagrant boundary seems to have been wandering in search of every point of the compass, but an examination of the political character of that part of the State, furnishes a ready explanation for its extraordinary shape. Turning to the census report one quickly discovers that every effort has been made to gather into this particular district that section of the State which is settled almost exclusively by colored voters. The limits of the district have little reference to the county or township subdivisions. It comprises only three entire counties, but includes portions of six other counties, and even divides townships. It is known in South Carolina politics as the "Black district" of the State. The registered vote of the district indicates a colored majority of 25,000. The entire vote is 40,588, and the entire colored vote, prior to registration, was 32,893.

The district has been since apportionment a conceded Republican district. It was formed to incorporate as far as possible the almost solid Republican precincts of the State; but greed for office and a fixed determination to suppress the colored vote led the Democratic managers of that Congressional district to perpetrate the crimes which bring this case before the House.

This was rendered comparatively easy by the passage of the South Carolina election law, a law which outrages every principle of honesty and right, tramples under foot the Constitution of the United States, and stifles the voice of the legal Republican voters of that district. The law provided that all voters should register at the general registra-tion in the months of May and June, 1882. It provides only for subsequent registration by such voters as thereafter attain their majority; and for the reissue of registration certificates only to voters whose registration certificates have been lost or destroyed. Its provisions were designed to allow all election officers and managers to be of one political party. It excludes from the voting-places all persons excepting the managers and clerks of election and the voter. It provides eight different ballot-boxes, to be located as near each other as the managers determine, and their relative positions changed as often as they please. It therefore leaves the control of all the steps preliminary to ballot, of all the arrangements for election and the election itself, as well as the count of the ballots, and the return, entirely and exclusively in the hands of the dominant political party. While it provides that the count shall be publicly made, it is held to be a compliance with the law if the public is excluded and kept at such a distance as to be beyond hearing and only in sight of the performance.

Such in brief is the election law which inspired and stimulated the contestee to make the successful attempt of wiping out an enormous opposing majority and securing the certificate of election to a seat on It is a matter susceptible of easy demonstration, if gentlemen will indulge me with their attention, that this is one of the most outrageous wrongs ever perpetrated upon the sanctity of our elections or sought to be foisted upon the credulity of this House. It was accomplished by three different methods: first, by preventing registration; second, preventing registered voters from voting; third, reversing the result of the ballot in the count and return.

William Elliott, the Democratic candidate, was given the certificate of election. His majority according to the returns is 532.

I can not trespass on your time to quote extendedly from the eight hundred pages of testimony in this case. Indeed, it is hardly necessary. The case is strongly proven when fairly stated. The enactment of the law itself was plainly for the purpose of disfranchising the colored voters of the State. The officers evidently understood what was expected of them from the first. PREVENTING REGISTRATION.

Registration offices were opened in localities where it would most inconvenience the largest possible number of colored voters to appear for registration. They were forced to travel long distances in order to present themselves to the proper officer; then compelled to return day after day awaiting his pleasure; to stand from morning till night before this indifferent, leisurely scoundrel, while he furnished the proper certificate to the Democrat, the white man, promptly and without delay. In proof of this listen to this evidence from the record:

Henry Singleton (colored) was one of a large number of witnesses who testify that they offered their votes for Robert Smalls, but were rejected because they had been cheated out of registration. He applied at the first registration in 1882, for two entire days at one place, where his persistent supplication was not rewarded with even a response from the official. He followed the officer to another place of registration and there importuned him for three days, informing him that he had to walk 8 miles back and forth. He was refused.

Ben McIlwain (colored), another, spent two days in an effort to get his certificate. He says:

I tried as hard as I could. I called his attention for a long time; he was doing nothing but tapping with his pencil. He did not give any reason for not registering me.

On cross-examination he says:

He registered four or five white people to one colored man,

Solomon Laws (colored), another, applied for registration for two days at one place and one day at another. He stood for hours and called out his name, but the officer would not pay any attention to him. He was within 4 or 5 feet of the officer.

Frank Seymour (colored), another, spent two days and a half at one place and one day at a second. He got within 2 feet of the officer. He remained from 9 o'clock a. m. till 4 p. m. Many received certificates who were not so near. He failed altogether.

Moses Brittan (colored), another, sought registration in 1882. He stood for two days each at Gordon's Mill and Sumter Court-House near enough to touch the officer with outstretched hand from opening till closing of the office. He was ignored, and is therefore disfranchished under this law.

E. D. Peterson (colored), another, applied at the first general registration for nine succeeding days. He sought the office of the register; approached so near that functionary as to reach the table at which he worked. He says: "I asked him to please register me; he always said, 'All right; directly.' He was registering people all the time, but registered them that came up after me."

Richard Thompson (colored), another witness, secured his certificate in 1882, but lost it and applied seasonably to the proper officer in 1886. That worthy varied the performance with a little lying, and explained to the applicant that it would be quite unnecessary for him to have a new certificate; he was so well known that he could vote anyway. When he offered his ballot it was promptly rejected because he had no certificate of registration.

These and many other witnesses swear that they made every possible effort to secure registration and were persistently and unlawfully refused by a Democratic official; that they afterward offered their votes for General Smalls and were rejected by Democratic managers of election because they were not registered.

This is a fair illustration of the manner in which colored Republicans have been disfranchised in South Carolina by the thousands. step farther into this case and take a better view of the system.

With all the barriers, obstacles, and hindrances to registration there was still a great majority to be disposed of in this Congressional diswas still a gleat majority to be disposed of it has congressional district. The party friends of the gentleman now occupying General Smalls's seat on this floor planned to despoil that majority of their district upon election day. This was to be accomplished in various ways, each, if possible, more dishonest than the others. The purpose of the inventors of this election scheme now became strikingly mani-

PREVENTING REGISTERED VOTERS FROM VOTING.

The provision respecting residence and registration offered, as it was The provision respecting residence and registration orient, as it was plainly designed to, unlimited scope for artifice and jugglery on the part of the Democratic managers of the elections. In no instance did they neglect their opportunities. If a colored voter had moved into a different house upon the same farm in the same voting precinct it was held to be a change of residence and his vote rejected. If, without moving his family from the house, he had gone out to work by the day or month temporarily it was decided a change of residence. If the name of the farm or plantation on which he resided when registered could be made the subject of variation his vote was promptly excluded, though it was conceded that his residence had not moved a foot since his registration.

As a sample of this sort of work I cite a few of the hundreds of witnesses who swore in this case that they duly presented their registra-tion certificates at the polls, and offered their votes for Robert Smalls, but were rejected for the reasons stated.

The certificate of Edward Harrison (colored) was regular, and stated his residence as "Bloom Hill, Manchester township." Bloom Hill is the name of the plantation owned by one Owens. Edward Harrison the name of the plantation owned by one Owens.

had lived there for twenty years. Thirteen years ago he bought the little piece of Bloom Hill which he then occupied, and where he has continuously resided since. He was rejected because his residence was not Bloom Hill, and had only been formerly a part of Bloom Hill.

Wade Hampton's name did not save him. He is a colored man. He was duly registered in 1882 as residing at "Lawrence Dow Place, in Manchester township or parish." His vote was rejected by Bob Owens, a manager. The witness says:

He objected because I had moved out of the house I was in. I voted at the Cleveland and Blaine election on the same certificate. I have not moved since 1882 from the place of residence marked on that certificate.

Richard Singleton (colored) was registered at the general registration in 1882, and the following certificate issued to him, which he still has in his possession:

[Registration certificate No. 4167, Sumter County, Sumter township or parish; election precinct, Sumter No. 1.]

The bearer, Richard Singleton, is a qualified voter in the above precinct, and resides at estate of Jno. Moore's land in Sumter township or parish, and is twenty-four years of age and is entitled to vote at said precinct.

Registered on 21st day of June, A. D. 1882.

P. P. GAILLARD, Supervisor of Registral

He attended Sumter precinct and offered his vote for General Smalls. It was refused by John Schwien and Keels, the Democratic managers of the election, for the following reasons, as given by the

They said the certificate was not right. They asked me what place I was living at, to which I replied on Singleton Moore's place, which had been the place of John Moore, who is dead. When I obtained my certificate John Moore was dead, but Singleton Moore had charge of the place. It is generally known as John Moore's place. I voted at the election before this on the same certificate. I was then living at the same place. The managers did not state that the reason for rejecting my vote was because I had changed my residence. I stated to them that Singleton Moore and John Moore's place is the same. All they (the managers) stated after looking at the paper (was) that "It is not right; pass out."

In further demonstration of the noble, high-minded, and delicate sense of "Southern honor" displayed in making the law a "hocus-pocus science that smiles in the face" of the colored Republican while it steals his vote, mark still another case:

Gabriel Wright (colored) sworn, says:
"I am fifty-six years of age; live in the township of Sumter, and am a farmer.
I attended Sumter precinct to vote for General Smalls. The manager asked me for my certificate, and I had to go home and get it. After coming back Scleverin (manager) objected to me."

The following is a copy of the registration certificate:

[Registration certificate No. 5025, Sumter township or parish; election pre-cinct No. 1.]

The bearer, Gabriel Wright, is a qualified voter in the above precinct, and resides at his own land, and is fifty-one years of age, and is entitled to vote at said

Registered on the 30th day of June, 1882.

P. P. GAILLARD, Supervisor of Registration.

Continuing, witness said:

At the time I registered I was living at Sumter on my own land. When I offered to vote I was living at the same place. About two years ago Mr. Barnett bought the place, but I did not move from it till last Christmas (long after the election).

This witness had not changed his residence, and the managers well understood that he had not, but rejected his vote because he had sold, though he had not moved from, his land,

But, sir, the proof is ample that the same managers guilty of these abuses permitted Democrats to vote without let or hindrance, without even requiring the production of certificates or halting them with a single question. T. J. Turney (colored), sworn, says:

I reside in Sumter; am a farmer; attended Sumter precinct at the last general election; remained there from opening to closing of polls. I kept a pollist of those that voted and those that were rejected. The list of the voters I kept is not very correct because they admitted the voters into a house that I was not permitted to go in, but the list of rejected voters is correct, owing to the fact that every rejected voter gave me his name upon being rejected. One hundred and eighty-four were rejected. They belonged to the Republican party. I saw persons voting who did not present their certificates. They were Democrats.

J. R. Smith (colored), the supervisor of Lynchburgh precinct, was a sore annoyance to the Democratic election managers. Sworn as a witness, he says:

I live in Lynchburgh precinct; attended at the last election (1886) from 6 a. m. until 6 p. m., as a supervisor. Of my own knowledge I know of about 100 who had no certificates, and of 94 who had certificates that were not allowed to vote. A majority of the rejected voters belong to the Republican party. I kept a poll-list. At the commencement they had the registration books before them; in the course of time a manager got up, had a conversation with another one, the registration books were removed from the table to the counter; when a white man presented himself to vote they would not refer to the books; only done so when a colored man came, and would ask the colored man a good many questions, and if they missed their residence would not allow them to vote. I am satisfied that all the ones that voted before they moved the registration books were legal, but those that came in afterwards I could not tell. The books were removed and I could not tell whether they had a right to vote or not, and I asked them to let me look two or three times, but they would not let me look.

Comment is unnecessary.

Comment is unnecessary.

The record in this case proves beyond denial the rejection of 278 duly registered and legally qualified voters in the Seventh district of South Carolina at the Congressional election of 1886 who appeared and offered their votes for Robert Smalls, the contestant. He has not taken the testimony of the thousands of Republican voters throughout that district, barred of their rights in the same shameless, lawless manner. He has furnished enough and more than enough to expose fully the plan of campaign in that section and give him his seat on this floor.

An easier method and one apparently very generally practiced in certain solid Republican precincts is that employed at Biggin's Church precinct, Richland County. None but Democratic election managers were appointed. They had no interest in the vote of a Republican precinct where there was a Republican candidate whose defeat had been ordered. At Biggin's Church, on a political division, the Republicans cast about 350 votes, the Democrats 10 or 11. Consequently, when election morning came the gentlemen appointed to conduct the State election opened the State poll, but the managers for the Congressional ballot-box did not appear at all.

The testimony of some of the witnesses with reference to this matter is interesting and important.

is interesting and important.

E. H. Reid (colored), sworn, says:

"I reside at Monck's Corner, Berkeley County; occupation, school-teacher. On the last general election day [1886] I was at Biggin's Church precinct; arrived there at 8 o'clock a. m., and remained there until about half past 2. During the time I was present there was no Congressional poll open. I did not vote for Congressman, though I was entitled to. There were from 345 to 350 voters present, all Republicans except 10 or 11."

Thomas H. Wallace (colored), sworn, says:

"I reside at Monck's Corner; occupation, storekeeper. On 2d of November [1886] I was at Biggin's Church polling precinct at 5 a. m., and remained there all day, and till the close of the polls for the State and county offices. Congressional poll did not open. There were no managers there; no votes were cast for member of Congress. There were 350 voters present. About 339 would have voted for Robert Smalls, and the others would have voted for Elliott. I have this means of knowing how the individual voters would have voted at that election; I am Republican precinct chairman of Biggin's Church precinct, and I have been for eleven years, and must have an idea how many votes would be east for the Democratic and Republican candidates for Congress; every election I have been at that precinct with the Republican tickets, and no Democratic candidates have ever received more than II votes. No change in political sentiment has taken place at all; the Democrats have gained no strength since 1876 at that precinct. In 1884 the colored men voted the Republican ticket, the whites the Democratic ticket. On the last election day the Republican voters present did not all vote in the State and county boxes on account of the eight boxes and changing of the boxes by the managers from time to time during the election, and as they could not read they thought there was no use to vote. I saw them change the boxes just after I voted."

This same plan was carried out at many other precincts. Sometimes it partially failed, or wholly miscarried, through inadvertence on the part of one or two of the Democratic managers of elections or through the carelessness of the commissioners in accidentally appointing an honest man as one of the managers. But the canvassing board can be relied on in all such cases to take care of any little oversight of that

REVERSING THE VOTES AS CAST ON THE COUNT AND RETURN.

At Gadsden precinct, in Richland County, Democratic managers for the Congressional poll would not serve. After waiting about three hours, the Federal supervisor swore in three managers, who held the election.

Their proceeding and the result of the election is shown by the testimony of Preston Richardson (colored), one of the acting managers.

He says:

I reside at Grove Wood, Gadsden precinet; am a farmer; arrived at Gadsden precinct last election day at 5 o'clock in the morning, and remained till the polls closed, and at night the votes were counted. The Congressional polls did not open till 10 o'clock, because the managers appointed by commissioners were not present. Two of them were there during the day; Mr. John H. Adams, at 6.30 o'clock; Mr. Scott came there in the afternoon and voted at county and State election boxes, in the other end of the same building in a different room. Mr. Adams said he was there on time to open the polls as one of the regularly appointed managers of election, but the others did not appear and no polls would be opened. An election was held by myself, William Reynolds, and Scissishiver. Opened at 10 o'clock. The box was set at the window, and each voted at the close of the poll we proceeded to count the ballot. The ballots and box were in the custody of the managers, and then we sent them to Samuel Green, Republican Congressional district chairman. The box was nailed up and a strip of paper put over the hole and sealed. Four hundred and fifty-one ballots were found in the box when counted. They were counted for Robert Smalls. No ballots were cast for any other candidate.

This box, intact, with the seal unbroken, was presented to the officer

This box, intact, with the seal unbroken, was presented to the officer of this House as evidence when the testimony in this case was taken. One of the other acting managers, S. J. Shiver (colored), sworn, says:

I live at Gadsden precinct. On last general election I was at Gadsden polling precinct from 5 a. m. till close of polls and votes were counted. Polls opened about 10 a. m. A. P. Richardson, myself, and Reynolds acted as managers, appointed by Republican supervisor. Polls were not opened at 7 o'clock because the regular managers were not there. Mr. John Adams was there, but did not act, he said he would act, but the rest were not there, and he would not act himself. At close of polls ballots were counted and placed in box. We counted, I think, 452 votes for Robert Smalls. All persons who presented their registration tickets, and the tickets were signed for the place where they lived, and they had not moved, were allowed to vote. In 1884 the total vote was something over 500.

There is not a syllable of testimony anywhere in the record suggesting that any illegal votes were received by the acting managers, nor that any legal votes were rejected, nor that a single voter was deprived of his privilege to vote at the Congressional poll because it was not opened until 10 instead of at 7 o'clock, nor that an honest count and true return were not made of the vote as cast.

The canvassing board rejected the 451 votes cast for Smalls at this

At Sandy Island precinct, Georgetown County, only one of the manaers served. He chanced to be a Republican. The two Democrats regers served. He chanced to be a Republican. fused to act. The election was orderly; only legal votes were received. The count was honest and the return regular.

J. J. McCottrie, supervisor for this precinct, sworn, says:

Qualified and served as supervisor for this precinct, Sworn, says:

Qualified and served as supervisor of election at Sandy Island precinct.

Opened polls at 7 a. m. Charles Lance served as manager; the other managers were not there. Gabrel Lance served as clerk. Before epening the polls the manager opened the box and allowed public view of inside of it. He administered the oath and required each voter to show his registration certificate before he allowed him to vote. He had the registration book of that precinct. The polls remained epen till 6 in the evening. I kept the poll-list; 33 votes were cast; Robert Smalls received 33; William Elliott none. I witnessed the counting of the vote. I saw the manager sign a statement of the returns. He put it in the box, sealed the box, and carried it home. I assisted the manager in counting the vote; there was no other Federal supervisorat the polls that day. The box was locked before the voting began.

This box was rejected by the county board because the two Democratic managers did not serve.

Cedar Creek precinct, Georgetown County, was rejected by the can-vassing board because one of the managers did not qualify. The three were present; two were duly sworn. No charge is made that the election was not fair and return legal. Smalls received 18, Elliott none.

Griers precinct, Georgetown County: Two of the regularly appointed managers qualified and served. One refused and J. H. Alston was sworn in and served instead. This is made the sole excuse for throwing out the entire vote of the precinct. Every word of testimony as to this precinct in record proves the fairness and regularity of the election and return. At this precinct Robert Smalls received 65 votes, El-

Santee precinct vote was rejected by the county canvassing board because two of the Democratic managers refused to serve. The election was conducted by the third regularly appointed manager, assisted by a sworn clerk and supervisor. The polls were opened, kept open, and closed at the hours fixed by law. Several witnesses swear that only registered and legally qualified voters were permitted to vote, each of whom presented a certificate and was duly sworn before depositing his ballot. There was no railing around the approach to the box, as directed by statute. But the witnesses swear that the voters approached singly and voted without being spoken to or directed by any other person. The contestee claims that a few votes were cast by voters who had changed their residences, but there is no evidence that a voter had made an actual change of residence. The vote was counted. The count balanced with the poll-list. The returns were properly made out and personally delivered to the board of commissioners. This precinct gave Smalls 212, Elliott 4. It was too large a vote to allow a Republican whose defeat had been decreed in advance in that district, and was forthwith rejected, professedly because of the absence of the two Democratic managers

The law of the State directs the construction of a railing about the approach to the ballot-box with an opening at each end for the voters' entrance and exit, fixes the time for opening and closing the polls, and directs the appointment of three managers to conduct the election.

But the statute nowhere declares that a failure to observe these directions shall vitiate the proceedings and void the election; it is therefore merely directory and not mandatory

Irregularities are generally to be disregarded unless the statute expressly declares that they shall be fatal to an election, or unless they are such in themselves as to change or render doubtful the result.—McGrary Elections, 2d ed., page 196.

The high privilege of suffrage nowhere in this country should be made dependent on the indifference and carelessness of some election Sicer in the discharge or neglect of some unimportant duty.

Election statutes are to be tested like other statutes, but with a leaning to liberality in view of the great public purposes which they accomplish; and except where they specifically provide that a thing shall be done in the manner indicated, and not otherwise, their provision designed merely for the information and guidance of the officers, must be regarded as directory only, and the election will not be defeated by a failure to comply with them, providing the irregularity has not hindered any who were entitled from exercising the right of suffrage, or rendered doubtful the evidences from which the result was to be declared. In a leading case the following irregularities were held not to vitiate the election: The accidental substitution of another book for the Holy Evangelists in the administration of an oath, both parties being ignorant of the error at the time; the holding of the election by persons who were not officers defure, but who had colorable authority, and acted de facto in good faith; the failure of the board of inspectors to appoint clerks of the election; the closing of the outer door of the room where the election was held at sundown, and then permitting the persons within the room to vote; it not appearing that legal voters were excluded by closing the door, or illegal allowed to vote; and the failure of the inspectors or clerks to take the prescribed oath of office. And it was said, in the same case, that any irregularity in conducting an election which does not deprive a legal voter of his vote, or admit a disqualified voter to vote, or cast uncertainty on the result, and has not been occasioned by the agency of a party seeking to derive a benefit from it, should be overlooked in a proceeding to try the right to an office depending on such election. This rule is an eminently proper one, and it furnishes a very satisfactory test as to what is essential and what not in election laws. And where a party contests an election on the ground of these or any similar irregularities, he ought to aver a

There is no proof or charge of fraud at any of these precincts or in the returns made by the acting managers. They were rejected because of the failure of the party friends of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Elliott] to do their duty. The votes of these five precincts should be accepted by this House. They gave Mr. Smalls 771 majority. In the absence of the Democratic managers of the Congressional election at Biggin's Church, Gadsden, Sandy Island, Cedar Creek, Grier's, and Santee precincts, and in the unfailing presence of the Democratic managers of the State and county elections at each of these precincts, is plainly uncovered a preconcerted and well-arranged plan to steal this Congressional district. Further proof of this is found on almost every page of the record in the large numbers of witnesses shown to have voted at the State boxes upon the same state of facts, presenting the same certificates of registration and residence, upon which they were speedily rejected by the managers at the Congressional ballot-box. The way had been boldly blazed out prior to the election along which these officials were to pursue their unlawful course.

A little different plan was devised to dispose of 267 of General Smalls's votes cast at the Brick Episcopal Church precinct in Berkeley County. The supervisor of registration of this as in all other counties is a Democrat. The managers and clerks of election at Brick Episcopal Church were all Democrats. The county board of canvassers were all Democrats.

The town of Mount Pleasant, in this same county, is in the First Congressional district, and the Democratic supervisor of registration for the county made out a list of registered voters for Mount Pleasant precinct and Brick Episcopal Church precinct in the same book. Mount Pleasant is a village, and the voters are nearly all white men and Democrats. Brick Episcopal Church precinct is in the country, and the voters are nearly all colored men and Republicans. At the election November 2, 1886, Mount Pleasant polled 61 votes; Brick Episcopal Church 270. In order to insure the legality of the Mount Pleasant vote and in order to furnish an excuse for rejecting the Brick Episcopal Church vote the one book containing the two lists of registered voters was retained by the Democratic managers for Mount Pleasant and none furnished the Brick Episcopal Church.

Even the Democratic managers at the church were obliged to swear that the election was orderly and regular; that the voters all presented registration certificates and were sworn, and that no one voted who was not registered (on the book up at Mount Pleasant) and qualified to vote. The count and return was made pursuant to law. Robert Smalls received 267 votes, William Elliott 3.

The Democratic canvassing board rejected the precinct because there was no list of registered voters at the polling-place.

A mass of evidence was introduced by the contestee in this case to sustain the rejection of a large vote from the Brick Church precinct on St. Helena Island, in Beaufort County. The ground assigned for throwing out this precinct is intimidation and riot, rendering it necessary to close the polls.

A. E. W. Fripp, the Democratic manager who conducted the elec-tion, testified as to the character of the interruptions, as follows:

I have lived on St. Helena Island since 1882. We have about eighteen white and over nine hundred colored voters. The white men on the island are principally merchants and Democrats. I do not know of a single man who has ever left the island or quit his mercantile business on account of politics. I do not know of any person who was prevented from voting by threats or violence at the poll where I was a manager at the last (1886) election.

Jackson W. Brown (colored), clerk and supervisor at this precinct, testifies with reference to what transpired there:

I arrived at the polls at daylight and never left till all the votes were counted. There was no disturbance at the polls. Chance Green's testimony that George Rivers and Hastings Gantt went into the polls together, and that Gantt began to quarrel about Rivers voting the Democrat ticket, is not true; there was nothing of the kind. The poll was closed twice during the day, about five minutes each time—first on account of the voters having so much noise on the stoop; second, on account of more than one wishing to come in at the same time. After the constable was appointed to let them in by turns the noise all ceased and went all peaceable. The noise I speak of was laughing and talking. I acted as clerk, but was not at any time disturbed on account of the noise.

Chance Green (colored), the individual mentioned by this witness, furnishes the gentlemen upon the other side of this case with the great body of their evidence for rejecting this precinct. He possesses a luxuriant oriental imagination. He names many colored men present at this precinct on that day burning with a desire to vote the Democratic ticket, but who were prevented by the threats and violence by colored Republicans, and by the lavish use of money by these unscrupulous, wealthy ex-slaves. It is true that the men named by Chance Green deny on their oaths that they ever thought of voting the Democratic ticket, but that is a little circumstance that does not embarrass the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. ELLIOTT] nor his friend Chance Green.

As an illustration of the facile and extensive play of Chance Green's exuberant fancy I quote the following paragraph from his testimony, cited by the committee in their report. Winding up a thrilling description of the horrors of this awful riot, beginning with a weak joke cracked by one colored man and ending in a mild laugh at it from the bystanders, which closed the poll and suspended business at that precinct for several seconds he continues:

Just after he opened the poll again Frank Jenkins got the Democratic ticket fro a me going up to the poll, and Cyrus Jenkins went to him and asked him, "What are you going to do with that ticket?" He said, "I am going to vote it," Cyrus said, "Not to-day; we Republicans intention not to let you Dead.

ocrats vote here to-day," and Sharper Rivers, that man sitting over yonder, he is one of the men said so; and then Frank Jenkins went off and a great crowd followed him, and when he got up on the platform Cyrus Jenkins went up to him and jerked the ticket out of his hand and tore it up, and pulled him down off the platform and said to him, "Frank Jenkins, do you think we are funning? We do not intend to let you vote." And Sharper Rivers said, "No, don't let him vote," and Rivers had a good stick in his hand, too, and I was afraid of his stick myself. Then Frank Jenkins came to me and got another ticket and went to vote it, and then he went home, because they told him if he staid there they would beat him on the road.

Concerning this interesting little episode, in which he is made so conspicuous a figure, Mr. Frank Jenkins (colored) testified:

spicuous a figure, Mr. Frank Jenkins (colored) testified:

I was not at the Federal poll held at Dr. Peters's office, on St. Helena Island, November 2, 1886. I was out in the road; not at the poll. I know Chance Green. I did not meet him in the morning on election day; I met him in the evening. He did not give me an election ticket. I had no use for a ticket. I had no register paper. I did not ask him for an Elliott ticket that day. I had no register ticket and I could not vote without one. I did not attempt to go to the polls. I did not cross the side of the ditch. Cyrus Jenkins never pulled me off the platform. I was not on the platform. I never saw Sharper Rivers that day. I never heard such an expression used as beating anybody. It is false that I went home for fear I would be beaten on the road for supporting William Elliott for Congress. I could not support him nor Mr. Smalls. If I had had my registration certificate I would have voted for Mr. Smalls.

This precinct, thrown out for intimidation and riot on such testimony as Green's, cast 503 votes for Robert Smalls and 45 for William Elliott.

Several witnesses besides Chance Green were produced by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. ELLIOTT] to prove that a policy of general intimidation over all Beaufort County was pursued by Robert Smalls and his party friends. While it may not explain the source and inspiration of that evidence, yet gentlemen who have read their testimony and that contradicting it will have acquired such an interest in some of the more important of contestee's [Mr. ELLIOTT'S] witnesses upon this point as to feel some concern as to their subsequent history.

Five or six of these witnesses are paraded in the committee's report, and have been quoted by every gentleman who has spoken on that side. I thank the chairman of the committee [Mr. Crisp] for going outside the record and furnishing some testimony as to the present situation of politics and persons in that district. It fully warrants me in giving this House some facts respecting these half dozen of their most important witnesses

Mr. J. C. Mardenborough (colored), who furnished pages of original and striking evidence, was afterwards appointed a railway postal clerk on the Charleston and Jackson Railway.

Mr. F. D. J. Lawrence (colored), whose testimony if not so original was still very voluminous and valuable to the contestee, received an appointment from the authorities of the State as a trial justice, a position worth some money and of unlimited power in that State to an unscrupulous man.

A. B. Colonel (colored) is still doing business at the old stand as constable to a Democratic trial justice. They have come to agree on politics

Felix Bonner (colored), a sturdy witness who handled facts in such a reckless manner as to charm the contestee's friends, has been given a place in the custom-house at Coosaw, S. C., since testifying in the case.

Z. E. Sawtelle did not get a good place, or at least there is no record of it. He died shortly after testifying. And the oft-quoted and never-to-be-forgotten Chance Green, after his heavy work as a witness for contestee [Mr. Elliott], finds sweet and profitable repose in the Treasury Department under this Administration, and he may be beaming upon me at this moment from that dark cloud in the gallery for aught I know. Whether these witnesses and probably many others secured their places through the Civil Service Commission upon merit, or through the influence of some individual for some service rendered, I do not know. There they are and there we will leave them-at least for the present.

The next feature of the performance in the Seventh district to which I ask your attention is counting votes for contestee not cast for him at all. This was accomplished by the old trick of stuffing the box and then drawing out the votes actually cast for Smalls as "excess" and counting the illegal ballots for Eliiott. General Smalls selects three of the precincts where this was done and proves it clearly and emphatically.

The first is Pocotaligo precinct in Beaufort County. Here, as usual, the managers and clerk were all Democrats. The poll-list shows that 143 men voted. When the vote was counted it disclosed an excess of 148 ballots. The count was conducted by the Democratic managers. The disposal of the surplus ballots was managed by the same gentlemen.

The process is described by S. J. Bampfield (colored), from whose testimony I quote:

testimony I quote:

Q. Did you witness the count? And if so, state whatever facts came to your knowledge or observation in reference to it.

A. I did; in the afternoon my suspicions were aroused by the apparent nervousness of the managers, especially Mr. Frampton, the chairman, and the circulation by them of certain rumors to the effect that the votes in the box were tie, and that certain Republicans who were loud-mouthed for Smalls, the Republican candidate, were secretly voting for William Elliott, the Democratic candidate, As I crossed the piazza to enter the room where the voting was going on I overheard a conversation between Mr. John Frampton, the chairman of the board, and Mr. H. W. Richardson, collector of the port of Beaufort, as to how to dispose of the excessive votes in the box. Soon after Mr. Frampton announced that the room would have to be cleared and that the counting would proceed. I asked him if any citizens would be permitted to witness the count; he said that I might stand at the open door, but that I couldn't remain in the room. He did, however, permit Mr. H. W. Richardson, collector of the port of Beaufort; the paymaster in the United States Navy, James L. Morrison; a boat-hand in the custom-house; and others, who I think were State constables, to remain in the room. The open door in which I stood was not more than 4 feet from the table on which the box was placed, so that I could witness the count.

Before opening the box Mr. Frampten directed that the light, which was but an apology then, should be removed from the table on which it stood by the box to the mantel-piece. His position was, one hand on the box, the other directing the removal of the lamp; reminded one more of a necromancer about to perform a feat of legerdemain than an officer performing a sworn duty. He finally opened the box very carefully and proceeded to take out the ballots. After taking out 143 ballots, laying them one upon another, face down, corresponding with the number of names on the poll-list, he stated that there were more ballots in the box, and that he would have to return the 143 ballots to the box and that some one with his back to the box should withdraw the excess and destroy them, in which opinion Mr. Henry Mew evidently concurred. I called his attention to the fact that he couldn't know the excess of the ballots in the box, until all of the ballots were counted, and that, therefore, he did not know how many ballots to destroy. They both still insisted that that was the proper manner to dispose of the excess. The paymaster suggested that the two was the counted. All the Democrats present except the supervisor. Mr. Hammond, and Mr.

All the Democrats present except the supervisor, Mr. Hammond, and Mr. Richardson, were opposed to counting all the ballots in the box, and thus to expose a glaring fraud. After considerable discussion Mr. Richardson came to my rescue, stating that I was right, that the law required that all the ballots should be counted, to which the managers reluctantly consented. Upon counting the remaining ballots in the box there were found to be 148. All the ballots were then returned to the box, and Mr. Frampton, turning his back to the box, drew out the 148 which were in excess, which were destroyed. It was then found that of the ballots remaining in the box there were 87 for Elliott and 56 for Smalls. The ballots that were taken out—the 143—were laid on the table, were mostly clean and lightly folded, so that they lay comparatively smooth on the table, indicating that they were never voted singly. During the removal of those ballots from the box I noticed that they were apparently folded together in a large bunch, and called the managers' attention to the law about ballots being folded together, and noticed that subsequent to that Mr. Frampton's hands were put lower down in the box, so that I couldn'tsee what he was doing. He destroyed two Elliott ballots folded together after I had spoken to him.

The names of the Democratic managers and the Democratic clerk who conducted this performance, are John Frampton, Henry Mew, J. W. Hill, and M. C. Hammond. Neither they nor any other of the partisan friends of contestee [Mr. Elliott] were called as witnesses. They sent their return to the canvassing board giving Elliott 87 and Smalls 56 votes. One hundred and eighteen legally qualified voters at this received waven they worted for Smalls. at this precinct swear they voted for Smalls.

The second precinct offered by contestant in illustration of this practice is Providence precinct, Sumter County. As usual the managers were all Democrats. They returned 119 votes for Elliott and none for When the polls closed there were 119 names on the poll-list. Smalls. When the ballots were counted 199 were found in the box.

Robert Mahoney, a supervisor, explains in his testimony how easily Democratic managers of election in South Carolina can dispose of a few Republican votes.

Q. Where were you at the close of the poll that day?
A. At the polls in the house.
Q. After the polls were closed what was done by the managers of election?
A. The votes were counted by the managers. I saw Mr. Kingman, one of the managers, count the votes and give Smalls 39 in the count, and Elliott 160 votes, after which the votes were returned to the box, and a boy drew out of the box from the number all of Smalls's ballots and other votes besides what they gave to Elliott all that was left, 119 votes.
Q. How did it happen that all the ballots for Smalls were drawn out of the box?

A. Because Smalls's ballots were placed on top of the box, and the boy drew

R. H. Richardson (colored), a constable at that precinct, testified in reference to this affair. I quote from his evidence

I was at Providence poll by my watch from 6 a. m. until the polls closed that evening and until the votes were counted. After the closing of the poll John Kingman proceeded to canvass the votes; he placed the votes cast for Smalls on one side of the box outside, and those cast for Mr. Elliott on the other. When he saw that there were more votes in the box than the poll-list called for he placed Mr. Elliott's vote in the bottom of the box, then pushed the Smalls vote on top of those, and had a boy to draw every Smalls vote out without stirring them up. The other man, Mr. C. L. Williamson, refused to sign the Democratio return—he was the Democratic supervisor—claiming that it was not fairly done; there were 39 Smalls ballots, not one Elliott, thrown out, and no Smalls ballot was left in the box.

This testimony all stands without a contradiction. There is no certain proof as to just what the legal vote of this precinct was, and the glaring fraud perpetrated by the officers clearly voids the election at this precinct.

Green Pond, Colleton County, the third precinct in this chapter of frauds, is simply a repetition of Pocotaligo with variations. The managers and officials were all Democrats. After closing the polls they excluded the public from all view of the ballot-box for ten minutes while they juggled with it in the back room of a store. Then they counted the vote and credited Elliott with 160 and Smalls with 35 votes. One hundred and thirty-four witnesses, whose testimony covers nearly sixty pages of this record, swear they voted at that precinct for Robert Smalls for Congress. True, some of them were too ignorant to read their ballots, and under the badgering cross-examination of contestee's lawyers are betrayed into some apparent contradictions, but no fair-minded man can read all the evidence and escape the conviction that 99 of Smalls's legal votes were exchanged for 99 illegal Elliott votes during the ten minutes the managers were in the back room alone with the ballot-box.

In some precincts of the Seventh district they have made no advance at all ever the old methods. Notable examples of this slow development are found in the evidence relating to Adams Run precinct, Colleton County, and Fort Motte precinct, in Orangeburgh County. Here there seems to have been a lack of special talent and they resorted to the old-fashioned Southern plan of simply stealing the ballot-boxes after the election was over.

However, secondary evidence of the result at these two precincts establishes the fact that Smalls received 177 votes at Adams Run and Elliott 37; and that at Fort Mottee Smalls received 236 votes and Elliott 58.

RESULTS OF THE SYSTEM.

A careful examination of the evidence of this case under the law must make it plain to any unbiased man that Smalls is justly entitled to 2,401 more votes than were given him by the board, and that Elliott's vote should be increased 151 and reduced 280-a net reduction of 129. This monstrous wrong was consummated by preventing the registration of men entitled register; compelling the colored voters to go long distances; refusing to see them as they stood before the registration office in respectful waiting day after day; refusing to hear them as they plead and begged to save their citizenship. It was consummated by preventing registered voters from voting, usually rejecting the vote without any explanation or offering an excuse so unreasonable and arbitrary as to clearly prove their determination to disfranchise the colored Republicans; plying the colored voter with smart questions and receiving the white Democrat's vote without even a certificate; appointing Democratic managers to conduct the election who refuse to appear at the polling-places where there are large Republican majorities; purposely neglecting to supply strong Republican precincts with their lists of registered voters, and then rejecting the entire precinct because the lists were not supplied. It was consummated by reversing the result on the count and return; rejecting the vote of entire precincts upon silly pretexts of riot, based on the wicked lies of witnesses who afterwards secure fat offices; stuffing the boxes with illegal Democratic votes, then rejecting the Republican votes as excess; and finally, by boldly stealing the ballot-boxes of Republican precincts. Stop a moment and think of the application of this system and how Stop a moment and think of the application of this system and how easy it is to accomplish the result contemplated by its projectors. Sometimes the colored voter making his way along the torthous, winding course prescribed, preliminary to voting and in preparation for it, wearies before he reaches the polling-place, for at every turn those whose sworn duty it is to assist him, and who perform that service with fidelity to all Democrats, purposely and persistently mislead the Republican and rejoice over the consequent blunders which bar his way to the ballot-box. And when after many failures, quick to learn even in this hard school, he is finally possessed of the necessary credentials and reaches the august presence of the Democratic managers of election, ready to deposit his ballot, standing before them alone, with no political or personal friend present to counsel him, if he is not cheated into placing his ballot in the wrong box, and actually lodges it where it belongs, it will certainly be rejected in the count because it is "soiled or mutilated," or not "properly folded," or be drawn from the box as "excess." Or if the count shows a sufficient Republican majority to make it worth while the entire poll will be rejected because a "quorum" of Democratic managers did not conduct the election, or were not "properly sworn," or some technicality was purposely not observed in making out the return. One thing is absolutely certain, in the "New South" the way is always prepared in advance to keep the Republican vote down and to keep it down under color of law.

Here, then, in the sworn testimony of this case, in the cunningly devised, infamously executed election laws of this State is laid bare to the world the last conspiracy of a too often disloyal people against their Constitution and their country. It is not open rebellion this time, but a sly, covert nullification of the highest law of the land. It incurs none of the risks of armed assault, escapes the personal dangers and swift public indignation of organized violence and intimidation. It is outrage embellished and refined. It is lawlessness systematized and, if possible, legalized.

It has accomplished the same results all over the Southern States which it so easily secured in the Seventh district of South Carolina. In States where the law is just and fair, the villainy is perpetrated in its construction and enforcement. Though the system varies in form it does not in operation and results. From the bloodhound and the raw-hide, the bludgeon and the shotgun, to the South Carolina election law and its wicked execution, is but a little step. The transition was easy and natural. It was not so noisy and it was cheaper. It had everything to commend it to an intelligent and unscrupulous minority.

Its results must be eminently satisfactory to the political leaders of the South. Confused, baffled, discouraged, cheated, the colored vote of the South has quietly and speedily disappeared from the returns. There has been no clash of arms, no New Iberias, no Hamburgs, no vexatious newspaper reports, no aunoying investigations—silently, but-fatally to the colored Republican vote, the new election methods of the South, or the election methods of the "New South," have done their perfect work. In the State of South Carolina alone, 78,046 Republican votes have disappeared from the returns since 1876.

So long as it was a policy of intimidation and violence, and even occasional murder, it was not so dangerous. It carried with itits own ultimate cure. It would in time yield to the influences of civilization; go down beneath the overpowering weight of decent, humane public condemnation. But no sooner was it accepted that kukluxism could not always survive than the skilled, adroit, political leaders of the South devised a system which, with unscrupulous officials, would wipe out the constitutional amendments effectually. They gave it solemn legislative sanction, followed by shameless, odious, atrocious execution. They stole the sacred livery of the law to clothe and mask disloyal violators of the Federal Constitution. They made the Democratic party of the South accessory to the crime. They debauched and degraded the State, broke the oaths taken when the flag of secession went down in the wreck of rebellion, smirched the little remnant of honor which they carried back with them from Appomattox.

What has it yielded? Through it they have ruled States, they have controlled in national politics, they have acquired undue representation, they have greatly wronged the North. But they have done infinitely worse and more than all this. They have written in enduring forms in their statutes, in the records of their courts, made a part of their political history, worked into the thought and life of people by the millions—old and young, wise and ignorant, white and black—the pernicious, monstrous, damning creed that law is the legitimate weapon of the wrong-doers that the desires of the individual are more sacred than the honor of the country; that violation of the Constitution is commendable; that the ballot, the American citizen's ballot—his defense, his power, his shield, his sword, his hope, his prophecy—is the lawful spoil of any desperate political opponent. [Applause on Republican side.]

This is what they have done and are doing every hour. This is the enormous crime which they are committing against this people and posterity. In the midst of ignorant millions just acquiring a primary knowledge of the duties of citizenship, it is appalling to contemplate the awful consequences sure to flow from this sweeping destruction of all political integrity from this twisted, deformed conception of the law and its sublime office to humanity.

But a little time has passed since the South indignantly denied that

But a little time has passed since the South indignantly denied that they suppressed the Republican vote or cheated in its count. The North, ready to take the most comfortable, quieting view of troublesome questions, silenced every reference to it with the cry of "The bloody shirt!" Now they are shocked by the public announcement from the South that this is a "white man's government," and startled to find the doctrine defended where it should be denounced and abominated. It is the inevitable course of crime. The wrong doers succeed. They grow reckless; they are suspected; they deny; they protest their innocence. They are caught in the act, confronted with the proofs, driven to bay. Then they grow desperate, defiant. Then they admit the crime; they boldly plead self-defense; they impudently plead justification.

With one voice the press of the South to-day seems anxious to convince the country that there has never been any attempt to deny or conceal the fact that the negro vote was suppressed. They strive and vie with each other in announcing themselves as bold and courageous in their defiance of the law, as determined, unyielding violators of the Constitution, and they even openly demand public acquiescence and justification.

Sir, I believe the time has come when the truth should be plainly spoken. For nearly a quarter of a century the North has yielded, acquiesced, submitted, and patiently waited. From the hour of defeat the South has been the recipient, the thankless, sullen, defiant recipient of beneficence and liberality at the hands of the North. In victory they levied no tribute, demanded no satisfaction. They assumed and have paid the bulk of the war debt. They have poured out national treasure and individual wealth to build up the broken and shattered South. Calamity has never befallen them but that the generous hand of the North sustained them in their need.

Nothing like it can be found in all history. The South went unpunished for their treason, and have complained that the North alone is benefited by pension appropriations. They laid down their arms, not their opinions, and went back to teach their children that the South was right. They were restored to political power and used it to wipe out the constitutional amendments and punish the North.

Granting all that the South claims—that the war robbed them of their wealth by emancipation and threw upon them the burden of millions of ignorant citizens; granting all this, what plausible excuse can they offer for the outrage and wrong committed? What reasonable defense can they make for the present situation in the South?

"We are doing just what you would do under the same circumstances" has become the common and ready retort to every protest from the North. It is possible that we do not understand each other.

If you mean that any other portion of this country not trammeled by your prejudices, not embittered by your experiences, confronted by the same problem, would deal with it as you have—if you think there is anything in the existing conditions to exonerate or palliate your conduct, you seriously, gravely err. Your action may be explained, may be condoned; it can never be justified.

may be condoned; it can never be justified.

Make the Northwest, if you will, a battle-field for four years, deprive its people of all their chattels. leave them only their lands, and place in their midst four million ignorant, undeveloped Negroes with no property and no training except that of tilling the soil, you would not from that hour on find the strength and intelligence of the Northwest devoting their energies and their power to terrorizing and repressing the vote of the weak and the ignorant; you would not find the people of the Northwest a quarter of a century later living in their past, complaining of broken fortunes, comparing what is with what was. Long before that broken fortunes, comparing what is with what was. Long before that all trace of war would have disappeared; the idle labor would have been utilized to rebuild the country and restore its fortunes, schools and teachers provided, the ignorant educated and elevated.

What was Dakota ten years ago? What constitutes its wealth, except the land and the labor bestowed upon it by a law-abiding people?

A wild unbroken prairie transformed into a great and prosperous State, farms with comfortable homes, schools in every district, thriving towns and cities always in sight. The flood of foreign immigration speaking a different language, born under other skies, loving another flag, and another history, welcomed, taught, assimilated, and transformed into the hardiest, highest type of American citizenship.

The colored people born upon American soil, speaking the English language, loving this country, knowing no other, idolizing the Southern people, most of them of Southern blood; this people who had been trained to do all the manual labor of the South, who understood its soil, its climate, its products, who had made the sunny South what it was in "the halcyon days before the war;" this people who had been faithful servants to proud masters for centuries, who had been the companious, playfellows, nurses, and guardians of their children, who had remained at their posts while a war was waged for their freedom; this people with their deep affections, their strong attachments, their fine emotional nature, and their impressionable character, anxious to learn, willing to be led-this people, though unlettered, though laboring under the disadvantages of a race suddenly released from bondage, nevertheless offered material that might in a generation of time have been molded into American citizens of which any section of this country might be proud.

No, gentlemen, there is nothing threatening or portentous in the Negro problem to-day, either for you or the rest of the country, ex-cepting as you make it so. The difficulty does not lie with him, but with you instead, in the blind prejudice and stubborn antagorfism, ever opposed to his development politically and socially as a citizen.

You say, in justification, that the Negro is ignorant, inferior, inca pable of growth. Is he not willing to learn? Are you willing that he should? If you are anxious that he should learn, why have you hindered rather than helped him? Why have you ostracized Northern teachers, who make such sacrifices to educate the colored people?

Do you encourage them in the acquisition of property? them what their labor is worth in cash, or does a system of rental and store-pay prevail, which is designed to always keep them poor? Do you sell them land at a fair price? Do you aid them to build and own homes?

You say the Negro is not progressive. Secretly do you not fear that he is? Is it against the dull and submissive that you feel the keenest resentment—direct your hardest blows? Or are they aimed at those who, like Robert Smalls, have shown intellect, courage, and determination to lift their people to a higher level and maintain their rights as freemen ?

Blinded by passion and prejudice you may refuse to accept it, but the historian will place the responsibility of any evil consequences that may flow from this war against the colored race where it belongs. Admitting that the rebellious States had heavy burdens to carry, the disinterested student of facts will find no problem presented by the situation that could not have been solved successfully by earnest, honest endeavor.

If the colored people had been fairly treated, if they had received kindly recognition, if they had been provided with schools and books and teachers, if they had been given an opportunity to make homes for themselves, if their labor had been properly rewarded, who doubts that the progress they would have made in twenty-five years would have astonished the world?

The fact that, in spite of all effort to retard or suppress the negro, he has made much progress should awaken the South to an appreciation of the folly of the course they are pursuing.

The next census will show the colored race in a majority in five, possibly seven States. They are shaking off the spell of cringing submission stamped on them through two centuries of slavery. They are climbing higher and higher. Every hour of self-dependence sharpens their faculties, broadens their understanding, adds to the sum of their knowledge, develops their spirit of independence and strengthens their Wait a little while, not long will they wear the shackles of this second bondage; not long will they submit to the despotic control of an arrogant minority. The majority will ultimately control in every quarter and corner of this Government. What then would you say if there should come to that majority in your section the natural desire to pay you back in kind? What then could you answer if they turned upon you crying:

The villainy you taught us we will execute, and it shall go hard, but we will better the instruction.

[Applause on the Republican side.] Oh, men of the South, sharers in our common heritage of self-government and personal liberty, in the name of a late past crowded with bitterness and anguish for us all I entreat you to stop. For the sake of your own peace and honor go no further in this infamous business.

You can not justify it, you can not defend it, you can not sustain it!

The hour is at hand when the people of this whole country, by an overwhelming majority, will make it their first business to secure and preserve the representative character of this Government. The South can not any longer afford to oppose that principle. [Applause on the Republican side.]

To-day an opportunity is presented the Democratic party to place itself on record against the election methods of the South; to rebuke here and now the outrages committed in this district; to answer with plainness and patriotism the great question which has come to mean something to the thoughtful loyal men of this country. In the closing days of your administration of this Government, the last hours of your control of this House, give this colored man, this former slave, this leader among his people, who has spent nearly all the earnings of his life since freedom contesting for the rights of which he has been cheated: give to General Robert Smalls, whose distinguished services for the Union and against rebellion, whose skill as a political organizer of his people and courage as a defender of the civil rights of his race early marked him for persecution and defamation; give to Bob Smalls, who as a slave, seized with high military courage and judgment the critical moment to capture with his own hands a Southern transport steamer, turn her prow to the North, run her past Confederate forts and under rebel batteries into the Union lines and turn her over to the Union Government-a daring achievement that will live in history after all who hear me are dead and many of us forgotten; give to this old man, this old soldier, the seat on this floor to which he was honestly elected November 2, 1886. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The Republican party here has nothing to gain or lose by the decision in this case. But feeling for this man as I do, knowing what it means to him, knowing how he has suffered, I could, if it would avail, lie down and beg for that justice to which every man in this House knows he is entitled. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, it is always a pleasure to me to listen to my friend from South Carolina [Mr. HEMPHILL], because he is always interesting, always honest, and always pleasant in what he says. The illustrations that he has been using have been amusing, but the argument is not a new one; it is the old, old answer to a difficult question that "you are another." It is the argument that because one wrong exists in one place we may meet it and balance it by saying that another wrong exists somewhere else.

Two wrongs, Mr. Speaker, never made a right, and they never will. Because the fundamental right of the black citizen of the United States is torn up by the roots in South Carolina, it is no answer to say as a justification of it that there are here and there instances of race prejudice against him in the North. I do not stand up here to falsify the facts of history or assert that the conduct of the North towards the black man in all the years that have gone has been without fault or without mistake.

I know very well that there was a time when the North bowed to the dictates of the South and did wrong to the black man in its own way just as much as the South did. I know that there was a time, and an accursed time, in my own State, when "Massachusetts, God forgive her, was a' kneeling with the rest," when she mobbed Garrison in the streets of Boston and sent Anthony Burns back at your bidding into slavery. But she atoned for all that, Mr. Speaker, in the blood of her best and bravest, shed on every battle-field of the rebell-ion, and the flower of her youth led the black man to fight for his country in the uniform of the United States. You can not now turn about and cry out against the "black laws" which were placed upon Northern statute-books in deference to your bidding. You can not face round now and try to alter the great facts of history with such retorts as these. It was the North whose armies marched into the South and gave freedom to the black men. It was a Northern man who put his signature to the emancipation proclamation. It was the Republican party which placed upon the statute-books the laws which have given to him his freedom and his rights. These are the great facts of history. You can not alter them, and the black man is a Republican history. You can not alter them, and the black and the to-day because he knows that those are the facts of history. There to-day because he knows that those are the facts of history. There may be mistakes, there may be instances of race prejudice in the North towards the black man. If there are, every right-thinking man in the North regrets them and wishes to see them stopped. But that they should exist here and there does not excuse the refusal of the right of suffrage in the Southern States of this Union to-day. It is no answer to say that because a group of men in this place or that manifest an unworthy race prejudice, therefore you are entitled in the South to deprive the black man of the rights guarantied to him by the Consti-

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of going over the details of this case. It is a typical case, and it is in that view alone that I propose to discuss it. Here is a district made up to send a Republican, this case. It is a typical case, and it is in that view alone that I propose to discuss it. Here is a district made up to send a Republican, made up of the black vote, and gerrymandered especially for that purpose. That district has been stolen. Not even in that carefully-prepared district could the negro be allowed his rights. Everybody knows the facts that I am going to state. When we pass off this floor and behind that screen, no man, North or South, would deny the facts, but here it is thought necessary on the other side of the House to demonstrate from time to time the great affection that is felt for the negro by the Democratic party. I confess that I think there is nothing more inspiriting or interesting than to see a member from the South, on a conspiriting or interesting than to see a member from the South, on a contested-election case, declaring, with tears in his eyes almost, the affection that he and his friends feel for the negro. [Laughter.] I know of nothing equally impressive unless it be the display of feeling that we have had about "trusts" during the recent tariff debate from those gentlemen who pose as the especial friends of the people. [Laughter.] The chairman of the Committee on Elections [Mr. CRISP] a few days, or rather a few weeks, ago, when he was protecting the power of the minority against the assaults of a feeble majority, declared with great heat that it was not fair for gentlemen living 3,000 miles away and reading a partisan pewspaper to pass indement moon the elections great heat that it was not fair for gentlemen fiving 3,000 miles away and reading a partisan newspaper to pass judgment upon the elections and the voting in the Southern States. I suppose that that was simply a figure of speech, because a gentleman 3,000 miles away reading a partisan newspaper would be living somewhere in the neighborhood of Mount St. Elias, or else on the shores of Baffin's Bay or among the Esquimaux. [Laughter.] The opinions of those gentlemen I do not undertake to defend. We must take it as one of those flights of fancy which this subject is sure to occasion in the well-regulated Southern wind. But when the gentlemen tells us that an election is full fair. mind. But when the gentleman tells us that an election is full, fair, and free in a State which elects ten Congressmen with a total vote only 1,000 greater than was cast in my own single district of Massachusetts I do not believe that he can convince any one that elections exist there in the way in which they exist everywhere else in this country. I was reminded, when I heard him speaking, of the very old story of the Englishman who was crossing the plains many years ago and who got off the stage at one of the way stations, went into the saloon and up to the bar, and said to the barkeeper that he would like a nice breakfast, a poached egg, a bit of steak, a little coffee, and so on. The barkeeper looked at him across the bar for a minute, then reached round, drew out his revolver, covered the intending customer with it, and said, "You'll eat hash." [Laughter.] I have not any question and said, "You'll eat hash." [Laughter.] I have not any question that in the opinion of that barkeeper that gentleman had a full, fair, and free breakfast, but I question very much whether that was the view of it taken by the traveler himself. [Laughter.]

It is a good deal better in discussing this question to be fair about it. A system of election which results in the election of many members of Congress by a vote of 1,700 without opposition is not an election as Americans understand the word in this country, and to say that it is so because everybody votes the same ticket is simply to say that human nature does not exist in those States. Party differences lie deep down in the roots of human nature, and men differ in politics as they take a conservative or a progressive view of public affairs. That natural tendency exists in the South as it exists elsewhere. The votes are not cast there because it is useless to cast them, and the reason it is useless to cast them is, to take the statement of those gentlemen themselves, that it is essential to the preservation of civilization and of all that men value to suppress the vote of ignorance and illiteracy. If the line were drawn on ignorance and illiteracy, or even if the line were drawn on property, which we disapprove as not consonant with American ideas, yet we could not, under our Constitution and our laws, find fault with it. But it is not a question of ignorance; that statement is a mere pretense. The objection, as I have heard it stated, to making an educational qualification is that it will exclude an ignorant white man as well as an ignorant negro. In other words, the line is drawn on race, on color, and on the previous condition of servitude.

Now, the desired result of keeping the black man a political serf and depriving him of his rights is reached in various ways. Sometimes it is by the ingenious construction of the election laws, as in South Carolina, where those laws are as much designed to produce a free election and provide for the protection of the franchise as the rules of thimblerigging and the statutes of three-card monte are designed to promote a fair game of cards. They are framed for a particular purpose, and they answer it well. Sometimes the suppression of the vote is attained in other ways, such as counting out; sometimes it is by stuffing ballotboxes, and sometimes, as in the recent election in Arkansas, the ruling party begin with the violent plunder of the ballot-box and end with the murder of the contestant when he seeks to establish his rights. The trouble with that system is that you can not confine it, and that it will never solve your problem. You can not teach a whole generation of people that they must be honest and decent in their lives, but that in one thing it is praiseworthy to use fraud, force, or perjury, or do anything necessary to carry an election and not affect thereby the tone of public morals. The disease is one that is sure to spread.

I have a collection of extracts from Southern newspapers, which I will print with my speech, showing that the poison has spread into your own primaries, and that there are complaints in your own caucuses of this disease. It has not accuses of this disease. this disregard for a fair vote and of fair elections. It has not stopped there, but has still gone on. We have seen that after the elections for the next Congress it was gravely proposed that governors of various I

States should withhold the certificates from members elected on the face of the returns. The secretary of state of Tennessee is now withholding certificate or putting obstacles in the way of the certificate being de livered to the man elected on the face of the returns. The governor of West Virginia has issued certificates to two Democratic Congressmen elected on the face of the returns and is withholding them from two Republican Congressmen elected on the face of the same returns. you suppose the people of the North are going to submit to such things as that? These acts are the plainest usurpation and the most absolutely revolutionary steps that can be taken. You thus have undertaken to seize the powers of this House to judge of the election of its members and to leave to the governors and secretaries of state to say what shall constitute the majority of the American Congress. It is a part of the same evil system, and there is more even than that. The only guaranty of our institutions is in the belief of the people that the elections are fair. There are millions of voters in the Northern States who do not believe to-day that there is such a thing as a fair election in certain not believe to-day that there is such a thing as a fair election in certain States of the South. This is a perilous belief. It is beside the question whether they are right or wrong in holding it. If you impair the confidence of the great masses of the voters of this country in the decision of the ballot-box the end of this system of government is not far off. It is not enough that the elections should be fair. The masses of the people must believe them to be fair and above suspicion. In the Northern States I am perfectly aware that, as in all free elective governments, there are abuses. I know there is more money spent on both sides than there ought to be.

I suppose that here and there there are cases of cheating. But these things are sporadic. They are not parts of a system. Throughout the length and breadth of the Northern States the elections as a rule are honest. Men of both parties believe in the result as declared at the polls; and all this talk that has been made about money is confined to one or two of the close States, and one party is as guilty as the other. I do not defend the use of money, for it is an evil and a danger. But the matter as it has been brought into this debate is a mere question of crimination and recrimination. You cry out that the manufacturers gave money for the support of the Republican party. The money of the manufacturers is no worse than the money of the railroad kings who ran your campaign, or the money of the Standard oil and the sugar trusts. It is just as bad with one as with the other. It is the duty of all decent men to strive to stop the improper use of money, whether it is contributed by the cotton-spinner or the iron-maker, or whether it is by the men who run saloons or who form the whisky ring. to get rid of all these evils in our Government. The general feeling in the Northern States is in favor of getting rid of all these election abuses so far as may be, and we are setting about it now. But to charge the use of money does not meet the wrong now under discussion. We must have fair elections in the South, in the North, in the East, and in the West. It has become the duty of the United States to have such election laws as will secure to the election of all Federal officers the guaranties that we have now in the great mass of the States of this Union. This is not a question of the bloody shirt nor an old war issue.

Mr. OATES. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a ques-

Mr. LODGE. I have not the time to yield. It is the issue of to-day and of this moment. It is not the cry of the war issues on which Northern men are elected, it is not the issue on which Northern districts are contested, and has not been for years.

Mr. OATES. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. LODGE. I can not yield. The gentleman can obtain time.
Mr. OATES. I want to ask the gentleman a question for informaon. [Cries of "Go on!" "Go on!" on the Republican side.]
Mr. LODGE. This cry of war issues, so far as we hear it, is confined to the Southern States. Let me say that a speech of such a character as was made by the eloquent gentleman from Virginia here yesterday would not do for a candidate for governor in Massachusetts. He would simply be laughed out of court. But no doubt the gentleman knows his home audience, and his ability is such that I suppose he judges it rightly, but I can only say that that is not the kind of speech which would do with us.

These old issues, these appeals to State jealousies and sectional prejudices, are issues the people of Massachussetts at least—and I believe that it is the feeling of the North—are only too glad to have buried out of sight forever. Massachusetts, to which allusion was made by the gentleman from Virginia, entertains no hostile feeling towards her sistent of the property of the people of the property of the people of the gentleman from Virginia, entertains no hostile feeling towards her sister States. She has no desire that her Representatives should seek to make political capital by assailing other American communities with out-worn accusations. When earthquakes shook your cities, when flood and pestilence attacked your people, when your colleges and schools have come for aid in education, Massachusetts has never been deaf to your appeal, her heart has never been steeled to the cry of distress, and, God bless her, it never will be. But she wants to see right done to all men, whether their skins are black or white. [Applause on the Republican side.] She wants to see the Constitution lived up to. She knows what her own history has been on the slavery question. There it is for all men to read. No slave since the Constitution of 1780 has ever had his foot on Massachusetts soil under Massachusetts laws. There she stands, contented to have her record pass into history for the verdict of mankind.

She asks now (and I believe she represents the feeling of the North) that we should have the same fair elections through the South that we that we should have the same fair elections through the South that we have in the North. The North means to insist upon it. We have been too careless, too tolerant, too easy-going; and this debauchery of elections, this striking at the fundamental right, is creeping on and getting dangerous. People in the North, who for the last ten years have passed it by unheeding, have within the last six months come to take an entirely new and a much more just view of the subject. It is the determination, I believe, of the Republican party and of the North to secure fair elections.

I have heard denunciations of United States bayonets and United States supervisors interfering with elections in the States whenever a just and proper election law is talked of. I am perfectly willing that there should be a United States supervisor, and, if necessary to secure a peaceful and honest election, a file of United States soldiers at every polling place in my district. I am not afraid that they would intimidate anybody. I am not afraid to have them look over the election there or see how the people in my district vote, for the voting is honest and so is the count. What is fair for one is fair for all. I have no wish to see elections protected by armed force anywhere. I deprecate and dislike it as much as any man, and I trust that the good sense of the South will render it needless. I dislike it because any force at a popular election is un-American, but the spirit which makes force needful is far more un-American than the force itself. If we must have force at the polls I prefer the force of law and order and of the United States to that of the ''long-haired promoters of civilization poking their shotguns in voters' faces,'' whom my friends on the other side so much admire. The North has no desire to see bayonets at the polls, but the North means to have the Constitution and the laws enforced in letter and spirit, and law is powerless unless on the last appeal the force of the Government is behind it.

the Government is behind it.

This case is, as I have said, a typical case. If you will do justice to Robert Smalls you will show that you are ready to deal with this whole question in a fair and enlightened spirit. The problem is not yours alone; it is ours as well. Your prosperity is our prosperity; your misfortune is our misfortune. We are all bound up indissolubly in one great Union; one can not suffer without all suffering. We ask you simply to do justice; not to draw the line upon a man because his skin is black; to have your elections free, fair, and open, so that they shall command the confidence of everybody. We ask you to join with us in making an election law which shall give that guaranty to the country, and which shall make every man know throughout the length and breadth of the land that, when the votes are counted, they are counted as they were cast, that, when the votes are counted, they are counted as they were cast, and that the poorest man and the humblest man, be he black or white, of what race you please, has secure and impregnable the right on which our institutions rest—the right of "a free ballot and a fair count." [Applause on the Republican side.]

I append the extracts from the Southern Democratic newspapers to which I have already referred:

[From the Columbia Register.];

The Register believes this solemn matter of fair elections is the most important of all public questions in the whole country, and it believes that reform, like charity, should begin at home. The plan of the Register is not for the negro. It is for society. It is, if anything, more for the white than the colored race. Cheating and swindling can not go on at elections and be kept there. Besides, the cheating and swindling in elections is a greater crime against society than in the private affairs of life. This cheating in elections and being honest after it is like forging a will in the interest of the party administering it, and then claiming the benefit of honestly administering it.

[From a published address of Lexington County Democrats.]

With mingled feelings of shame and indignation we Democrats of Lexington County come before the good people of the county with our grievances. In the recent primary election held in this county fraud the most glaring was shamelessly perpetrated by the supporters of a combination of candidates who will go down to history in the annals of Lexington County as the court-house ring. The supporters of some of the successful aspirants in that contest, forget-ful of all personal honor and ignoring all patriotic considerations, steeped themselves in political infamy by stuffing the ballot-boxes, voting fictitious names, riding from poll to poll over certain portions of the county and voting at each precinct visited, in total disregard of their decency and manhood.

[From the Charleston World.]

However, by means of the primaries, with the managers' stamp used to prepare ballots the night before for stuffing the boxes, and rapid penmen to write two names every time one voter easts his ballot, some persons have come to great apparent political prominence in this city. But all this sort of thing has squeezed the life out of the party here.

[From the Charleston News and Courier.]

The primary in Newberry to determine the choice of a candidate for State senator was followed by sweeping allegations of bribery and fraud. It was the same in Marion County, where Bingham was the defeated candidate. Charges of fraud at the primary in Lexington County were promptly and deliberately made. * * The eight-box law, necessary as it was and beneficial as its operations have been, is demoralizing to the people of the State. It must lower the younger men in particular in their own eyes to see the spirit of our institutions violated at every election. It is beneath the dignity of the State to admit that there is not statesmanship in South Carolina to face the consequences of ignorant suffrage and overcome them without political trick or subterfuge.

COLUMBUS, S. C., January 15.

[Special.]

Columbus, S. C., January 15,

In commenting on the recent address issued by E. M. Brayton, chairman of the Republican State committee, the Greenville News to-day says:

"It is not worth while to challenge ex-Collector Brayton's counterblast to the South Carolina election law. We prefer to declare boildly that most of what he says is true, and that the law he describes was and is intended to keep the control of this State with the white people, who are a minority in numbers, but who pay nineteen-twentieths of the taxes and represent ninety-nine one-hundredths of the intelligence and moral force. Then we can say to Mr. Brayton, and to the partisan Republican politicians to whom he appeals, "What are you going to do about it?" These laws are constitutional. They are the laws of the State of South Carolina, representing the will of the sovereign ruling people of the State, who will rule because they have the mental, moral, physical, and financial power to rule.

"The entire Republican party in the United States, with all the power of the Government behind it, can not make South Carolina a Republican State, because it can not make the Republican party here respectable. The gaunt and unkempt Southerner who pokes a shotgun into a voter's face to chase him from the polls is a better man than the sleek, portly Northern manufacturer who offers a poor devil of a workman the choice between voting for high protection and starvation. The most reckless red-shirt riders who ever pulled a trigger are less guilty than the wealthy hypocrites who gave and the heelers who handled the money that corrupted the ballot last November. They may send troops here, as they did before, to stand at our polls and purify the ballot with the bayonet, but for all that there will be no more good stealing in South Carolina. The crookedness in Southern elections is to save the credit and preserve the lives of the States, and to secure the safety and prosperity of the people, the churches, and the schools. They may steal our clectors, but

Mr. ROWELL. Mr. Speaker-

Mr. CRISP. Before my friend from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] proceeds, I desire to yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Tarsney]. I will yield it now if that will suit the gentleman from Illinois; and he can proceed afterward.

Mr. Tarsney. If the gentleman from Illinois desires to proceed

Mr. ROWELL. No; I prefer that the gentleman should go on

Mr. TARSNEY. Mr. Speaker, I think that I have not obtruded myself upon the attention of the House very much during this session; and I did not intend to say anything in relation to this case until I heard some of the remarks from gentlemen over here on the right. I happen to be almost an extreme Northern man, living within 90 miles of the borders of a foreign country; and when I listened to my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] and the gentleman who has just concluded [Mr. Lodge] I thought perhaps it might not be out of place for me to say something in a kindly sort of a way in relation to this case.

Mr. Speaker, I have studied this record; I have studied the report, and I am not talking from a Southern standpoint, but I am talking from the standpoint of an American citizen. When you gentlemen on the other side of the House proclaim to the world, as I heard you do yesterday and the day before and to-day, that you are the guardians of the whole colored race, I, for one, as a citizen, want to enter my protest at once. You are the guardians of the colored race, are you? You desire to take care of the Southern people? Why I want to call your attention to the fact that your party was never an abolition to call your attention to the fact that your party was never an abolition party until the abolition of slavery became an accomplished fact by the result of the proclamation issued by Mr. Lincoln. Now, deny that record if you can. You can not do it. It was not until the abolition of slavery became an accomplished fact that you gentlemen became the guardians of the colored people of this country; that is, the assumed guardians. Therefore, I say you were not abolitionists; and you are not entitled to any credit for this colored vote that you are getting.

But you say that you emancipated the slaves, do you? Yes, I think you did. What for? You did it to get 800,000 Republican votes and to break what you call to-day the "solid South." That is what you did it for. Well, you have not succeeded.

did it for. Well, you have not succeeded.

Now, you are here to-day with an election case, and you ask that a colored man, simply because of his color, shall be declared entitled to a seat on this floor. God knows the highest law that I know is the Constitution of my country, my own conscience, and the laws as I understand them. But when you tell me that this man is entitled to a seat on this floor in the face of the record that you make, I simply say You ask me to vote for a man convicted of bribery, it is not true. convicted in the courts of his own State. Now, take that record home to yourselves, and satisfy your conscience, if you can, by voting to seat this man as a member of this House.

Now, I do not desire to take up much of the time of the House today, but when you speak to me about gerrymandering districts—and I saw a map hanging up in front of the desk which was a curiosity in its way as showing how they gerrymander in South Carolina—I say when you talk about gerrymandering Congressional districts you must permit me to say that it is a practice which is not confined to one political party, nor to one section of the country. Why, bless your heart, sir, in the extreme Northern State of Michigan, from which I come, I can show you on a map a Congressional district 220 miles long and only 7 miles wide. [Laughter and applause.]

A Member. Only 7 miles in one place?
Mr. TARSNEY. Yes, sir.
A Member. Where is that?

Mr. TARSNEY. Why, it is in the Tenth district of Michigan.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Tell us why it is so-that God made the waters there

Mr. TARSNEY. God made no mistake, but the people did, when they sent people like you to represent them in the State Legislature which enacted these gerrymandered districts.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. These districts in Michigan are made

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. These districts in Michigan are made up of contiguous territory.

Mr. TARSNEY. Yes, I understand they are quite contiguous and very elongated. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. You can not divide a town or county under the law in Michigan.

Mr. TARSNEY. No, we do not divide towns or representative districts, I know; but the gerrymander is all the same.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. My district consists of four counties which lie almost in a square.

Mr. TARSNEY. That district has been gerrymandered in order that

Mr. TARSNEY. That district has been gerrymandered in order that you may hold your seat on this floor. [Laughter.]

Mr. CUTCHEON. You can not say that when he has stated his district is almost a square, and is composed of four counties.

Mr. TARSNEY. Yes, I understand it is a hollow square. ter.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Solid as a square can be under the circumstances

Mr. TARSNEY. I understand your district, too, general. [Laughter.

Mr. CUTCHEON. It is a solid district.
Mr. TARSNEY. Yes; they are careless there. They do not care ho they are electing. [Laughter.] I hope, Mr. Speaker, this will who they are electing. not be taken out of my time.

Mr. CUTCHEON. My friend seems to be agreeing with us. Mr. TARSNEY. I hope this will not be taken out of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Gentlemen will take their seats and order will be preserved in the Hall.

Mr. TARSNEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am entirely sick of this talk about a free ballot and a fair count. [Laughter.] There is altogether too much of it. You can not talk about a free ballot and a fair count in the Southern States where the laws are as rigid as in New Jersey and Michigan.

Mr. KEAN.

I beg the gentleman's pardon.
Y. You need not beg my pardon; there is no occasion Mr. TARSNEY.

[Laughter.]

I wish to say to you, and to bear testimony to it as a personal witness, that born in that State, having lived there, I have seen as much bulldozing at the polls in Michigan as I ever saw depicted on any page of paper in this House.

Mr. GUENTHER. Then why did you do it?
Mr. TARSNEY. You Republicans were the folks who did it, and yet you talk about a free ballot and a fair count! I can find you men employed in factories marched up to the polls and compelled to vote the ticket handed to them. It was a question of an empty stomach instead of a shotgun. [Laughter and applause.]

A MEMBER. It is everywhere.

Mr. TARSNEY. Yes, it is everywhere amongst you Republicans [Laughter.] I want to see the time come when every citizen, white and black, can go to the polls and vote in absolute freedom, without intimidation, without interference on the part of employers. [Applanse.

Mr. CUTCHEON. That is good doctrine.
Mr. TARSNEY. But I know it is not so in the North, and I presume it is not so in the South. [Laughter.] Oh! I want to be fair to you gentlemen. But when you come to classify and draw sectional lines between the North and the South I say you are doing that which is positively and absolutely dishonest.

Now, when you argue and ask me to vote to seat this man over here. who I am entirely satisfied was not elected, I will not do it. can take it to your own consciences, I will not take it to mine. [Applause.] Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ROWELL. I now yie'd one minute of my time to my colleague from Lilinois [Mr. Plumb].

Mr. PLUMB. I ask recognition, Mr. Speaker, simply for the purpose of requesting unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD my remarks upon this subject.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the gentleman will be permitted to do so.

There was no objection.

Mr. ROWELL. I now ask unanimous consent that any member who desires to do so may have leave to print remarks upon this case.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois. I object.
Mr. ROWELL. Mr. Speaker, in the remarks submitted by me in the opening of this discussion I confined myself strictly to the facts contained in the evidence and in the law as applicable to it. Imagine, then, my surprise when my friend from South Carolina [Mr. HEMP HILL] charged me, of all other men, with having started a tirade of abuse against the South! Imagine my further surprise when he, replay, and it has no legs to stand upon by the adjudication of any rerimanding me for conduct of which I was not guilty, spent forty min-utes in the discussion of the question entirely outside and beyond the record, and neglected to say a single word about the facts of the case now about to be decided by the votes of this body!

I want, Mr. Speaker, in the few minutes remaining to me, to call the attention of the House back to the cold, naked facts as they are shown by the record in this case. Mr. Elliott was declared to be elected by a majority of 532 votes. In order to reach that result 152 votes cast for him and 2,010 votes cast for Smalls had to be rejected. Adding the 152 votes cast for Elliott to his majority it makes 684 votes. Deduct that from 2,010 and it leaves Smalls with an actual majority of the votes cast amounting to 1,326. If, in addition to that, you take the 441 votes, the correction of the precincts where the ballotboxes were tampered with, as shown by the evidence, you increase his majority to 1,767. If you deduct from that the 100 votes and over cast for Elliott in DARGAN'S district, you make the majority nearly 1,900.

Now, then, it has been insisted by the gentlemen representing the majority of the committee that three districts or precincts in Beaufort County ought to be rejected because of intimidation. These three precincts cast 646 majority for Robert Smalls. If you take this number from the 1,326 votes, his majority of the actual votes put into the ballot-boxes, it still leaves Smalls with a majority of 580. It is however insisted that the Gadsden precinct, where the polls were not opened until an hour after the time prescribed by law, should be deducted. Take away, then the 451 votes cast at Gadsden precinct, and it still leaves Robert Smalls a majority of 129; and while not one of these votes ought to be deducted under the evidence in this case and the law governing it, there is not another vote in all the list that has the semblance of an excuse in the law or in the fact for being deducted. The 212 in Santee where there was no barricade erected is twenty times, nearly, offset by the Democratic precincts where there were no barricades erected. The law requires the counting of the votes notwithstanding the fact that there was no barricade, and there is no variableness in the decisions of the court upon that law.

This conclusion, Mr. Speaker, or this calculation, leaves Robert Smalls with 129 majority, deducts everything claimed on the other side, except the Santee precinct and the Sandy Island precinct, where they had mistaken a notice and declare that that is rejected because the notice did not make a claim; but by reading the notice they find that they are mistaken in that—I say that this deducts everything that can possibly be questioned and still leaves Smalls 129 majority. But there is just as much reason for throwing out the 646 votes in the three Beaufort precincts as there is for throwing out every Republican vote cast in South Carolina and no more.

I call the attention of this House to the fact that with the exception of one witness, no man, a voter, has come upon the witness stand and sworn that he was prevented from voting the Democratic ticket. No man has come upon the witness stand and sworn that he was compelled to vote the Republican ticket. There is the evidence of opinion; there is the evidence of loud denunciatory talk on both sides, extending back over a period of years, but that is all. It is a fact that the colored people of South Carolina do not rest very easy under the yoke of disfranchisement, which they believe has been placed upon them, nor have they been altogether patient with a colored man who would lie down upon the ground and allow his neck to be trampled upon. But when you come to the question of whether a man has been prevented from voting through fear, you have failed to find a single man, save one, who will come upon the stand and swear to it; and you have been obliged to go outside of the county to find your evidence. Now, the whole of this case is this: The law says the voter shall do every thing required of him to be done in order to constitute himself a voter; and shall go further and attempt to deposit his ballot. If he does all these things, then nothing else shall prevent the counting of his ballot. The voters here have done all required of them; but you have interposed technical objections to the conduct of the election; not objections to the conduct of the voter, but objections to the conduct of the officers of the law—the party friends of the contestee. When you reject a case on a technicality of misprision, the fault of the officer of the law, you violate every legal precedent. You can do it possibly with your possession of the courts, by the power that you have, under the highhanded manner you defy precedents of law, when you reject the vote, not for the fault of the voter, but on account of fault of the officer of the law.

There is not a precinct, not one, outside of the question of intimidation, but that has been rejected by this committee, not on account of the fault of the voter, but on account of the fault of the officer; and if this House shall vote Mr. Elliott entitled to retain his seat and Mr. Smalls not entitled to receive his rights, they will do it upon the proposition of a law that the neglect of an officer shall work to the detriment of the voter. There is no other proposition in it. The whole argument on the other side of the House, so far as that argument has touched the fact, in this case, has been based upon that false proposition of law unsustained anywhere by any creditable authority. The whole argument, I say, has been based upon that proposition of spectable court. Now, Mr. Speaker, having said this, I ask the privilege for myself of extending my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objections.

Mr. CRISP. I ask, what time is remaining to this side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Thirty-five minutes remain to the gentleman from Georgia, and five minutes remain to the gentleman from Illinois. [Cries of "Vote!" 'Vote!"]

Mr. CRISP. If the gentleman desires to take that time, he can take now. [After a pause.] The gentleman does not want to take it. Mr. Speaker, I hope it will not be found necessary to detain the House so long as thirty minutes, but I deem it proper that some replyshould be made to remarks on the other side reflecting to some extent upon my people, and necessary that I should devote a few words to the refutation of statements of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL], which I think are wholly unsustained by the record in this

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have heard a great deal from the other side of the House on the subject of elections in the South. The gentlemen over there seem to feel a great interest in this subject. They seem to feel they are especially commissioned to look into such matters, and they relish greatly partisan newspaper accounts that they see from time to time, stating that great outrages are committed in the South, and that the election officers in that part of the country do not make honest returns. Now, Mr. Speaker, speaking for myself and for the State I have the honor in part to represent, I want to say there is nothing in any practice there, there is nothing in any election law there, there is nothing that takes place preceding or during an election there respecting a free ballot and a fair count that is not as perfectly fair, as perfectly honest, and as perfectly honorable as are the laws and practices in any State in the Union.

What do you think about South Carolina?

Mr. CRISP. Now, gentlemen on the other side point to the small vote in Georgia as an evidence of intimidation there. point to one particle of evidence; they do not produce the statement of a single man; they do not point to a contest in this House from the State of Georgia where there is a particle of sworn testimony that elections are not as free and as fair there as in any State of the Union. But, sir, simply because the representatives from Georgia receive but few votes at the polls that State is selected and its representatives are singled out to be held up to the people of the North as evidence that intimidation exists throughout the South. Mr. Speaker, in Georgia we have many elections. In most States all the State, county, and Federal officers are elected at the same time; this is not the case in Georgia. We elect a governor and members of the Legislature in October. elect members of Congress in November. We elect all the county officers who are to manage our county affairs the following January. At each of these elections where there is a contest between the parties or individuals there is a numerically respectable vote polled. But at elections where a candidate has no opposition, where there is no contest, the vote is small. When there is a contest for the nomination the vote is When there is a contest before the people for county officers, there being as a general thing no party nomination, the vote is large. When there is an election where there is no opposition in a local election the vote is small.

But I say to you that the reason why it is small is the fact that there is no opposition. Gentlemen marvel at that. Gentlemen say they do not understand that. It is simply because gentlemen do not understand the situation in the South; and, my Republican friends, you do not seem to want to understand it. You see some statement in a partisan newspaper of the political situation in the South, and whenever that statement charges or intimates that the white people of the South have done anything to improperly influence the colored voters you unhesitatingly accept it as true. Wherever we present to you, as we do in this record, sworn testimony of reputable members of society, black and white, Republicans and Democrats, of the intimidation of the Democratic colored man by the Republican colored man, you lean back in your seats, complacently smile, and say you do not believe it is true. Why, Mr. Speaker, take the district in Georgia represented by my friend Mr. Barnes. The first time he was a candidate for Congress he was nominated by the Democratic party. The convention of the Republican party met for the purpose of making a nomination and adopted a resolution showing they were satisfied with the Democratic nominee, and they would nominate nobody against him.

Now, that is not hearsay; that is a fact. The result of that was all the votes that were polled were polled for Major BARNES, and he was elected. Who has got the right to complain of it if the Republican party in that district are satisfied? Take the district I have the honor to represent. Take the vote cast at the election for Congress in 1886, which is the vote that has been paraded all over the country as going are the facts about it? I was nominated by the Democratic party. The Republican party made no nomination against me. There was no candidate before the people but myself. No other officer was to be then elected. There were no local contests to bring out the voters. For nearly twenty years no Republican had gone through my State or my district to discuss political questions before the people. There have been none of those political discussions between the candidates of the parties which arouse and excite people and make each party try to excel the other in numbers at the polls.

Why is that? Mr. REED.

Mr. CRISP. The result was that in some counties in that district they did not open the polls at all.

Mr. REED. Why is it that there is no political interest in your region?

Mr. CRISP. There was not, Mr. Speaker, at that election a single vote polled against me. Now, I am very sure that no gentleman here with whom I am acquainted or who is acquainted with me—

Mr. REED (interposing). Why is it that there is no political discussion there?

Mr. CRISP (continuing). Will say that my character as a "bulldozer" is such that it would prevent a single individual from going to the polls and recording his vote against me. The trouble with you gentlemen is, that you want to believe—

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Oh, no.
Mr. CRISP. The trouble is that you want to believe that the Democratic party at the South is doing something wrong. about this: After the war, the result of which freed the colored man, you felt that he was bound to you body and soul forever. he could be used as an ignorant voter who would go blindly to the polls at your bidding, and send men here that you might use to vote as you wanted them to vote. But when you found out that the colored men in the South, the great majority of them, were not politicians, that they cared but very little which party was in power, that they were utterly indifferent to many of the great issues which excited people at the North, that they were not Republicans from principle-when you found that out, then you began at once to see that something must be done. You said, "Here is a vast mass of voters that we expected to hold indefinitely for the favors we had rendered them. These voters have ceased to sustain us. What is the reason of it? What is to be done?"

Mr. REED. That is what we would like to know.

Mr. CRISP. Then, my friends, "some busy and insinuating rogue, some cogging cozening slave, to get some office," devised the slander that has been circulated among the people of the North.

Mr. ADAMS. Are there no Republicans in sentiment in your dis-

Mr. CRISP. Why, Mr. Speaker, if I had the time—
Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. We will give you the time.
Mr. CRISP. If I had the time I could tell you of the condition of the Republican party in Georgia, and you would see and realize why the present state of affairs exists there.

Mr. ADAMS. Are they in fact Republicans, though?

Mr. CRISP. I could show you that the Republican party met in convention some years ago, composed largely of colored people with some small minority of whites, and fell out among themselves about the division of the offices of the convention, who should be president, who should be secretary, and so on, and resolved to divide and to abandon each other; and, although you may not realize it, it is literally true, that since the Federal office-holders, who were Republicans, went out of office in Georgia there has been no Republican organization there except the one which they keep up to send delegates to conventions to nominate the Republican candidates for the Presidency. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] That is about all that they publicly do, and perhaps it would not become me to state the inducement they have to do that. Pardon another personal allu-

There is a gentleman upon the floor, a gentleman of whose existence I had no knowledge up to the time I saw his remarks in the RECORD, a gentleman whom I did not know even by sight, who, I found on my a gentieman whom I did not know even by sight, who, I found on my return from home last summer (where I had gone to see a sick child), had printed in the Record during my absence, and, I presume, had delivered on the floor, a speech in which he arraigned my district and myself and the Speaker of this House upon charges and statements that were absolutely—inaccurate. I believe that is a parliamentary word. [Laughter.] I refer to a gentleman from Ohio named Kennedy, from whom my friend from South Carolina [Mr. Hemphill.] quoted here to-day. That gentleman says in a speech delivered on the 12th day of July, 1888:

One thousand seven hundred and four votes elect Mr. Crisp, Democrat, to this floor from Georgia, while 43,830 votes elect Mr. Bynun, Democrat, from Indiana; in other words, it would seem as if one Democrat in Georgia is as powerful at the ballot-box as twenty-five Democrats in Indiana.

And, as if to emphasize the infamy of this glaring and almost unspeakable outrage upon the ballot-boxes of the land, Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, who comes here after having suppressed almost the entire voting population of his own district, is, by the Democratic Speaker of this House, placed at the head of the Committee on Elections, to sit upon the election and qualification of every other member of this House. Could the irony of infamy and outrage go further than this.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is charitable to say that the gentleman from Ohio was ignorant on the subject which he was talking about. Every member of this House knows, or ought to know—I ought to acquit the gentleman from Ohio from knowing, because his statement otherwise would be malicious-every other member of this House knows that the Speaker of the House did not appoint the Committee on Elec-Every other member knows that the Committee on Elections of this Congress was elected by the Representatives on the floor.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I presume the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Kennedy] relied on the Journal of the House, and was thus led into a mis-

Mr. CRISP. I had a right to presume that he ought to know what takes place before his eyes. It appears that he does not. Now, what I want to ask you is if he does not know what takes place here where he can see it, how does he know what takes place in Georgia where perhaps he has never been? [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, I suppose the gentleman recklessly made that statement to send home to arouse and inflame the people of his district. That kind of a statement

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the gentleman permit me a moment?

Mr. CRISP. Certainly.
Mr. KENNEDY. Is it not a fact that the Speaker of this House selected first the committee himself, and that afterward when his case came for contest before this House— [Cries of "Oh, no!"]

Mr. KENNEDY. And that afterward when his case came for contest before this House, he came in and asked the House to select the committee he having first himself in his committee, he having first himself in his own room chosen it, and that the Democratic side of this Chamber simply ratified the selection which the Speaker of the House had already made. [Applause on the Republican side. Cries of "Oh, no!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CRISP. Now, Mr. Speaker, that applause is an evidence of the feeling on that side of the House on any question which comes up here touching elections in the South. Gentlemen over there have applauded a statement which every man on that side who knows anything about the history of this Congress knows is untrue. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the gentleman bear with me a moment

again?

Mr. CRISP. V Well, of course, if it bears on this question. This is

Mr. KENNEDY. A single word. I want to ask you this question: Even if it were true that the Speaker of the House of Representatives did not place you on the Committee on Elections-you who were chosen by 1,704 votes—the smallest vote that elected any man to a seat on this floor-is it not true that the Democratic members on your side of the House chose you as chairman of that committee, ratifying an infamy which I denounced on this floor and which I denounce now?

[Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I was not proposing to enter into any controversy with the gentleman from Ohio as to what the House did. My point was this: That here was a gentleman considered by his own people in Ohio a fit representative to send to Congress—a gentleman who, I am informed, has been lieutenant-governor of that great State. He comes here to the House as a representative, and either through ignorance (and ignorance of the grossest character) or through malice, he seeks to not only misrepresent me, but to misrepresent the distinguished gentleman who presides over the deliberations of this House. [Applause on the Democratic side.] That is the charge that is made against the gentleman. Why, Mr. Speaker, I have no doubt this speech was circulated over the district of the gentleman; and I have no doubt those circulated over the district of the gentleman; and I have no doubt those people believe to-day that what was stated in those remarks was true. Everybody here knows that that portion of it is inaccurate. Everybody who is at all acquainted with affairs in Georgia knows that the other portion of it is inaccurate. It seems to me that a common sense of justice would suggest to the gentleman that the people of a State when accused of crime should have the same right accorded to them that is accorded to an individual by all law and in every court on earth-that is the right to be presumed innocent until the charge is proven.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him one more question? Mr. CRISP.

I think from my experience and observation of the gentleman's conduct

Mr. KENNEDY. Just one more question.

Mr. CRISP. I had better not have any more controversy with him. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCREARY). The gentleman from Georgia declines to yield.

Mr. CRISP. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say something in conclusion about the points in this case, just a few words. Before doing so I want to say that the extreme anxiety of gentlemen on the other side of the House to do some kindness or some favor to the negro, when he does not live in their community or their own neighborhood, is understood of all men who know anything about public affairs in the past. Every man at all acquainted with the legislation of Congress knows that it was the Republican party that took away from the colored man in the District of Columbia the right to vote.

Mr. MILLIKEN. But who freed him in the District of Columbia? Mr. CRISP. The gentleman is one of those who act upon the mistaken and erroneous idea that the influence and force of past favors are greater upon the colored man than the anticipation and hope of favors that are to come,

Mr. MILLIKEN. Nothing of the kind; but when the gentleman desires to quote the record of the Republican party in its relation to the negro, he had better go back and quote the whole record, and see where he stands then.

Mr. CRISP. Well, my friend, if I should quote the whole of the record it would bring the blush of shame—
Mr. MILLIKEN. Upon your face, not ours.

Mr. CRISP. Upon the face of every patriotic member of the party for which the gentleman speaks.

Mr. MILLIKEN. If your party can stand up without the blush of

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, in the long history of parties in this country there has never been one that has made so many professions and promises which it failed to keep, and there has never been a party which committed, under the shibboleth of "God and morality," so many outrages upon the free institutions of the United States. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MILLIKEN. Well, if we had not taken great pains with your party we would not have had so many free citizens in the South today. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. CRISP. Now, Mr. Speaker, I stated, and that seemed to excite

Mr. CRISP. Now, Mr. Speaker, I stated, and that seemed to excite the ire of the gentleman from Maine—

Mr. MILLIKEN. Oh, no; I am not at all excited; you appear to be.

Mr. CRISP. That it was the Republican party that took from the colored people in the District of Columbia the right of suffrage.

Mr. MILLIKEN. What did we give them in return?

Mr. CRISP. And in doing this—

Mr. LODGE. Is that all we did? Was it taken from the white people here?

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, it was the teachings of this same party which prompted the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MASON] on the floor of the American House of Representatives to say that they believe it is a right and proper thing to station troops in the States at the polls.

Mr. LODGE. To preserve order.
Mr. CRISP. To have a fair and free election.
Mr. LODGE. Yes; we do.

Mr. LODGE. Yes; we do.
Mr. MILLIKEN. If we can not have it in any other way. We can not do it in any other way in your country.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, let me read to the House a resolution adopted by the British House of Parliament one hundred and thirty years ago, when troops were stationed at the polls in England, as the gentleman from Massachusetts now wants to have them stationed at the polls in America in order to have, as he claims, "a free and fair election:"

At an election held for member of Parliament for Westminster over one hundred and thirty years ago, by order of three magistrates a body of English troops were marched up and halted in the church-yard at St. Paul, Covent Garden, very near the polls where the balloting was proceeding. Upon being informed of this fact by the Speaker, the House of Commons passed unanimously the following resolution:

That the presence of a regular body of armed soldiers at an election of members to serve in Parliament is a high infringement of the libertles of the subject, a manifest violation of the freedom of elections, and an open defiance of the laws and constitution of this kingdom.

Applause on the Democratic side. ]

The gentleman from Massachusetts, under the teachings of the Republican party, has brought himself to believe that consistently with the Constitution under which we live, consistently with the form of government which our fathers founded, troops can be brought to the polls to secure free elections. Sir, the great men of Massachusetts in the past, if living to-day, would blush—ay, blush for that great State when one of her Representatives on this floor makes such an utterance of her Representatives on the Democratic side.]

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

The Now, sir, a word about the pending case. tions have endeavored to try this case according to the evidence. The minority of the Committee on Elections, in presenting their report to this House, have at the very outset bid defiance to all the rules of evidence and all the rules that ought to govern the action of a committee of this body in presenting a case for the consideration of the House. They begin by quoting an article from a newspaper, and assume to call that evidence. They end by reading upon the floor of the House extracts from newspapers, and they ask you to call that evidence. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] gives you his opinion as to what condition of affairs exists in South Carolina. Let me call your attention to the evidence in the case and give you the opinion of another gentleman from Massachusetts, a gentleman whose opinion—and I can say it with the utmost respect for the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] sitting here—a gentleman whose opinion on this question is far more valuable, because he now lives in the district in South Carolina where this election was held, and knows whereof he speaks. Representative from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] from newspapers gathers his facts. The other gentleman from Massachusetts tells what he sees. The Representative from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] says that fraud and outrage were committed by the white people in the Seventh district of South Carolina. The other gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Cole, testifies in this record:

That he was born at Woburn, Mass.; graduated at Harvard in 1862; moved to

South Carolina in 1863; was Government superintendent of abandoned lands during the war, and has resided twenty-one years on Ladies' Island, Beaufort County, South Carolina; that ordinarily—

And I want to call your attention specially to this-he is the only white voter on the island; that in 1886 the total vote was 206, of which 11 were cast by white men, and that contestant got 129, and contestee 77; that Ladies' Island lies between Beaufort and St. Helena Island, and is 1 mile from Beaufort; that most of the colored voters are land-owners and tax-payers, and since 1886—

That should be 1876. It is a misprinthave had a general tendency to vote the Democratic ticket in consequence of reduction of taxation by the Democrats, improvement of the public schools, and general security of their rights; that after the mass meeting at Beaufort in October, 1886, which the Ladies' Island Democratic Club attended, and of which accounts are elsewhere given, most determined efforts were made by the Republican leaders to break up this club; that a club of women was organized to beat all men voting the Democratic ticket, and that many threats were made against Democratic men and women.

Now listen to this:

That it had been announced that contestee would speak on the island the day before the election; but in consequence of many threats that he would not be allowed to speak, the meeting was abandoned, although contestee was ready and anxious to attend.

The conservative people of the island, in view of the outrageous conduct of the Republican leaders, insisted that Colonel Elliott should not go there to speak, because of the fear of bloodshed that would follow from the violence of the Republicans.

low from the violence of the Republicans.

That prior to the election the Democratic voters were in a state of fear for their personal safety, and that there would specially be trouble on election day.

That in consequence of this, deponent distributed Democratic tickets on the night before the election himself—staid all night with many of the voters at a house near the polls, so as to quiet their fears, and that all were open, and to take Republican tickets from the runners for that party. That during election day many women were near the polls, armed with sticks, making a good deal of noise and disturbance, threatening talk, cursing, threats of what ought to be done and would be done with Democrats; that a Republican runner jerked from the hand of a voter a Democratic ticket which deponent had given him; that early in the campaign deponent had good reason to believe that Democrats would carry the poll, but that in consequence of this intimidation "numbers that intended voting the Democratic ticket did not vote at all, and others voted the Republican ticket." That the Democrats were specially fearful of trouble after the polls were closed, and many left the polls on that account, and for a month after the election many did not dare go out at night, and some so continued up to the date of witness's deposition; that in every contest between the parties for ten years past some Democrat had been beaten; that it required a great deal of nerve and courage, not only on Ladies' Island, but at Beaufort and St. Helena (or Brick Church) for a colored man to admit that he was a Democrat, and that he knew that many throughout Beaufort County were prevented from voting the Democratic ticket.

Mr. JOHNSTON. of Indiana. Do you youch for that man's state.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Do you vouch for that man's statement?

Mr. CRISP. I put against the unsworn statement of Mr. LODGE, of Massachusetts, the sworn statement of Mr. Cole, of Massachusetts. The question for the House to determine is which it will accept. Will you accept the unsworn partisan statement of a Representative from Massachusetts or will you accept the unimpeached, sworn evidence of this man from Massachusetts?

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Will you answer me one question? [Cries of "Sit down!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CRISP. But, Mr. Speaker—
Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. I simply want to ask one question.
[Cries of "Sit down!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Speaker-Mr. CRISP.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Will you wouch for your witness?

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman from Indiana has found it necessary to emulate the tactics of Smalls [applause on the Democratic side], and will not allow me to proceed to make my speech.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Will the gentleman youch for the witness whose testimony he has read? [Cries of "Sit down!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman from Indiana addressed the House the and zeal with which he plead, as he claimed, for a fair and free elecand zear with which he plead, as he claimed, for a fair and free elec-tion. In view of what has taken place in that gentleman's State, I was very much amused. [Cries of "Blocks of five!"] It occurs to me that coming from a State where such methods are resorted to as those sug-gested in the celebrated "blocks-of-five letter" [loud applause on the Democratic side] it might be well for the gentleman to purify things at home before he began looking abroad. [Applause.] Mr. Speaker—
Mr. BOUTELLE, Why do you not depict?

Mr. CHEADLE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a ques-

Mr. CRISP. I will not.

Mr. CHEADLE. Then why do you talk of Indiana? It has nothing at all to do with this case. You have made a charge against the State of Indiana. [Cries of "Sit down!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CRISP. Well, Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

[Applause.] The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr.

CRISP] demands the previous question. Mr. ROWELL. On the resolution and on the substitute, I suppose? Mr. CRISP. I believe that by an order of the House heretofore made the previous question is now ordered.

Mr. ROWELL. The previous question is ordered, and I suppose the vote comes now on the substitute.

Mr. CRISP. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. ROWELL. I demand the yeas and nays also.
Mr. CRISP. I would like to have accorded to me the same privilege that was accorded to my friend from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL], but I promise now that I will put nothing in the RECORD except extracts from the evidence

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. If you will let us put in the answer to your speech we will agree to that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. HAUGEN and others objected.
Mr. OUTHWAITE. That is right. You are afraid of the record.
Mr. WASHINGTON. That is right. It is just like your conduct li through. You will not let a man either talk or print. all through.

Mr. LODGE (to Mr. CRISP). The gentleman from Indiana is entitled to that courtesy.

Mr. CRISP. He is not entitled to it. He is an interloper.

Mr. LODGE. He is entitled to the same courtesy that you are entitled to.

Mr. CRISP. He is an interloper.

[Cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will now report the substitute.

Mr. BUCKALEW. Before that is done, Mr. Speaker, I ask the attention of the Chair for one moment—

Mr. ROWELL (interposing). I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISF] may have leave to extend his remarks, and I hope that nobody on this side will object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. ROWELL. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for any member of the House to publish remarks on this case.

Mr. COBB and others objected.

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to print remarks in answer to the fling which the gentleman has made at the State of Indiana.

Mr. O'FERRALL. I object.

[Loud cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. JOHNSTON, of Indiana. Who objects?
Mr. O'FERRALL (rising). I object, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. OWEN. Mr. Speaker, is it too late to enter an objection now against the consent given for the chairman of the committee [Mr. CRISP] to extend his remarks in the RECORD?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. OWEN. Then there is a hereafter on unanimous consents.
Mr. LANE. I call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the substitute.
Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to listen to me for one moment. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] asked permission Mr. CRISP. I desire to have the attention of the House— [Cries to extend his remarks and objection was made unless permission should of "Regular order!" on the Republican side.] It is hardly just to me be given also to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Johnston].

Mr. REED. Wait a moment. Hear me through.

Mr. REED. Wait a moment.

Mr. BIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I want the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] to have an opportunity to make his explanation, and I hope the House will give it to him.

Mr. REED. Permission was given me to speak, and I want to finish what I have to say. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.] Thereupon the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Row-ELL] requested that permission be given to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Crisp] and no one on this side objected. Now I ask the House, with a proper sense of fairness, to give the same privilege to the gentle-man from Indiana [Mr. Johnston], whose State has been attacked, and I want to know if there is any gentleman on the other side who feels that his course would be honorable in making objection after per-

"Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CRISP. I have no objection myself to the request of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] misapprehends the situation entirely. The House extended to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] unanimous consent to extend him remarks, and I merely asked to be put on the same feating with him remarks, and I merely asked to be put on the same footing with him, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Johnston] was not included in the proposition at all.

Mr. REED. But the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Johnston] had made an objection, and it was with the distinct understanding that he was to have the same privilege that the objection was withdrawn. [Cries of "No!" "No!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSTON] had made that condition.

Mr. ROWELL. I call for the reading of the substitute. The question now is on the substitute

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That William Elliott was not elected, and is not entitled to a seat in the Fiftieth Congress from the Seventh South Carolina district.

Resolved, That Robert Smalls was elected, and is entitled to a seat in the Fiftieth Congress from the Seventh South Carolina district.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the question on those resolutions. [Cries of "No!" "No!"] Very well; I demand the yeas and nays on agreeing to the resolutions.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, February 14, 1889.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D. The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

FRANK D. WORCESTER-VETO MESSAGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

I return without approval Senate bill No. 3451, entitled "An act granting a pension to Frank D. Worcester."

The beneficiary named in this bill served in the volunteer army from February 4, 1863, to January 27, 1864, a period of less than one year, when he was discharged upon the certificate of a surgeon, alleging as his disability "manifest mental imbecility and incontinence of urine—disease originated previous to enlistment."

In 1880, sixteen years after his discharge, a claim for pension was filed in his behalf by his father as his guardian, in which it was alleged that his mind—nat-urally not strong—became diseased in the Army by reason of excitement and urally not strong—became diseased in the Army by reason of excitement and exposure.

He was adjudged insane in 1872 and sent to an insane hospital, where he remained about six years, when he was discharged as a harmless incurable. His mental condition has remained about the same since that time.

Upon the declared inability to furnish testimony to rebut the record of mental disease prior to enlistment, the claim for pension was rejected in 1883.

In 1857 the case was reopened and a thorough examination was made as to soundness prior to enlistment and the origin and continuance of mental unsoundness. soundness Soundness.

Upon this examination evidence was taken, showing that he was deficient intellectually when he joined the Army; that he was stationed where he was not much exposed, and that his duties were comparatively light; that he never was considered a boy of solid intelligence, and that he had epileptiform seizures onstatered a boy of solid intelligence, and that he had epileptiform seizures prior to enlistment.

On the other hand, no disinterested and unbiased evidence was secured tending to rebut these conditions.

The claim was thereupon again rejected. This was a proper disposition of the case unless the Government is held liable for every disability which may afflict those who served in the Union Army.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 13, 1889.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding? Mr. DAVIS. I move that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The motion was agreed to.

MICHAEL SHONG-VETO MESSAGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read: To the Senate:

I return without approval Senate bill No. 2514, entitled "An act granting a pension to Michael Shong."

It appears that the beneficiary named in this bill, under the name of John M. Johns, enlisted in Company I, Fourteenth New York Volunteers, on the 17th day of May, 1861, and was discharged May 24, 1863,

In November, 1876, more than thirteen years after his discharge, under the same name of John M. Johns, he filed an application for pension, alleging a fever sore on his right leg contracted July 1, 1862, which resulted in the loss of the same name of John M. Johns, he filed an application for pension, alleging a fever sore on his right leg contracted July 1, 1862, which resulted in the loss of the leg.

His claim was rejected in November, 1882, after a thorough special examination, on the ground that the disease of the leg resulting in amputation was contracted after the soldier's discharge from the service.

The leg was amputated in February, 1865.

While there is some evidence tending to show lameness in the service and following discharge, and while one witness swears to lameness and fever sores in the service, evidence was also produced showing that the soldier returned home from the Army in good physical condition, and that the disease of his leg first manifested itself in the latter part of 1864.

It will be observed that he served in the Army nearly a year after it is alleged he contracted his disability, and that though his leg was amputated in February, 1865, he did not apply for a pension until 1876.

Moreover, the surgeon who amputated his leg testified that the soldier and his parents stated that he came out of the Army without a scratch; that on New Year's night, 1865, he became very warm at a dance; that he went outdoors and was taken with a chill and pain in his side, which subsequently settled in the leg and caused a gangrenous condition, and that upon amputating the leg the artery below the knee was found plugged by a blood clot, which caused the diseased condition of the leg and foot.

This testimony and the other facts established and the presumptions arising therefrom clearly indicate in my opinion that the claim made for a pension by this beneficiary is without merit.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following order of the House of Represent-

Ordered, That the Clerk of the House be directed to request the Senate to return to the House the House concurrent resolution providing for the printing of the annual volumes of the Astronomical Observations of the Naval Observatory for 1886, 1887, and 1888.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the request of the House will be complied with and the resolution returned.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

on the table.

Mr. CHANDLER. I present the petition of David Morrison, a citizen soldier, of Newport, N. H., praying for the passage of a law to increase the pensions of soldiers who have arrived at the age of fifty years, whose disabilities consist of the loss of one hand and one arm at or above the elbow, to $36 per month, or if the disability consists of the loss or the use of one hand and an arm at the shoulder, at the rate of $45 per month, with such necessary regulations as will insure prompt action by the Commissioner of Pensions, without medical examination.

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. TURPIE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:
A bill (H. R. 9408) granting an increase of pension to Stephen L.

Kearney A bill (H. R. 12506) granting an increase of pension to Patrick Geraghty; and

A bill (H. R. 11430) to increase the pension of Harlan E. King.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3721) to granta right of way to the Cherokee Central Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1228) granting a right of way to the Jamestown and Northern Railroad Company through the Devil's Lake Indian reservation, in the Territory of Dakota, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9909) to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians upon the Oneida reservation, in Wisconsin, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes, reported it adversely, and moved its indefinite postponement.

Mr. SAWYER. Let it go on the Calendar.

Mr. DAWES. At the request of the Senator from Wisconsin I consent that the bill may be placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred an amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. MANDERSON to the agricultural appropriation bill, for continuance of experiments in the manufacture of sugar from sorghum-cane and beets, reported favorably thereon; and the amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed. He also, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred an amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. HOAR to the agricultural appropriation bill, making an appropriation of $1,600 for "one assistant librarian," reported favorably thereon; and the amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred an amendment intended to be proposed by himself to the agricultural appropriation bill, in regard to the apportionment among the States of seeds, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, etc., reported favorably thereon; and the amendment was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON IRRIGATION AND ARID LANDS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. STEWART on the 8th instant, reported favorably thereon; and it was considered by unanimous consent,

Resolved, That a select committee of seven Senators be appointed by the President of the Senate, to be known as "the Select Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands," whose duty it shall be to consider the subject of irrigation and the best mode of reclaiming the arid lands of the United States; and that said committee have leave to sit during recesses of the Senate, and shall report to the Senate at the meeting of Congress in December next what legislation is necessary for such irrigation and reclamation. And the committee may employ a clerk, who shall be paid $6 per diem out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore subsequently announced the appointment of Mr. Stewaet, Mr. Allison, Mr. Plumb, Mr. Hiscock, Mr. Gorman, Mr. Reagan, and Mr. Jones of Arkansas as the committee.

DISTRICT STEAM-RAILROAD HEARINGS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. FAULKNER on the 1st instant, reported favorably thereon; and the resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved. That the Committee on the District of Columbia be, and it is hereby, authorized and empowered to employ a stenographer to report hearings before said committee on the subject of steam-railroads in the District of Columbia, the expenses therefor to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (8. 3965) granting a pension to Olive Tull; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

DISMAL SWAMP CANAL.

Mr. EDMUNDS submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce be, and it is hereby, directed to take into consideration the question of the expediency of the purchase by the United States of the Dismal Swamp Canal, in the States of Virginia and North Carolina, with a view to the same being improved and made an adequate highway for commerce between the Chesapeake Bay and the principal sounds of North Carolina, and with a view to utilizing the fresh water of said canal and its feeder in a basin for the metal vessels of the Navy.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

Mr. MORGAN. I present an amendment to the resolution which is now the regular order of business in the Senate, and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The proposed amendment will be

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to amend the resolution by adding the following:

Said committee shall so frame the legislation they may recommend under this resolution that it shall not apply to any State whose constitution and laws relating to elections of Senators and Members of the House of Representatives provide ample security for the honest exercise of the right of qualified electors to vote and for the just and impartial counting and return of the votes cast at such elections, and for the just, impartial, and true ascertainment and certification of the results of such elections, and in which State these requirements have been honestly complied with.

Mr. MORGAN. I move that the amendment be printed and lie on

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered.

SPECIAL AGENT BYRNE'S REPORT.

Mr. HOAR. I submit the following resolution, and ask for its present consideration:

Resolved. That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed forthwith to transmit to the Senate certified copies of all sworn testimony in regard to alleged frauds and undervaluations in the New York custom-house taken by Special Agent Byrne, and submitted by him to the Secretary of the Treasury with his "Report of frauds in sugar at New York and Philadelphia," of November 1, 1887

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.
The Chief Clerk read the resolution.
Mr. COCKRELL. I would like to ask the Senator whether this matter is very voluminous or not? If it is, the word "forthwith" ought not to be used.

Mr. HOAR. I think not. The Secretary of the Treasury The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. HOAR. The Secretary of the Treasury was asked by a resolution to send all the information which he had on the frauds and undervaluations in the New York custom-house. He replied to that direction that that mass of information would take some months to prepare; would take a long time, as it was very voluminous. Thereupon another resolution was passed, directing the Secretary to transmit certain specified evidence, which he has transmitted and which is before the Senate.

In addition to that, the persons who are promoting this movement desire certain specific affidavits taken by a certain agent, Mr. Byrne, the copying of which, I suppose, will take a very short time, and as, I am informed, these affidavits support the view of the matter and the policy which has been adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury himself in regard to certain recent transactions which have been subjects of public discussion, I suppose he will be very glad of this request.

Mr. COCKRELL. The only question is as to the time in which he can furnish what is wanted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not object. I merely desire to ask the Sena-tor from Massachusetts if Inspector Byrne is the special agent who made the report?

Mr. HOAR. He did, and that report has already been submitted. Mr. ALLISON. This is simply to secure the affidavits or papers upon which that report was based?

Mr. HOAR. Yes. There is a very violent attack, I understand, made by the New York Evening Post upon the Secretary and upon this Special Agent Byrne. That attack is supported by some affidavits of certain discharged public officers whom the Secretary of the Treasury has recently discharged, and those affidavits, it is said, are in conflict with these affidavits which this agent reported and which the Secretary acted upon. I have not investigated this question so as to touch bottom upon it on either side. The Senator from Iowa, I suppose, in his capacity as a member of the Finance Committee, has had occasion to have had more or less of this matter brought to his attention, but I do not suppose he has investigated it to the bottom yet himself.

The resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to call up the bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I hope the Senator will withhold that motion. Some days ago I gave notice that at the conclusion of the formal morning business this morning I would ask the Senate to take up for morning business this morning I would ask the Senate to take up for consideration the bill (S. 1067) relating to imported liquors in order that I might present some views to the Senate concerning it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senator from Iowa whether he thinks that the occupation of the Senate only a few minutes in the passage of a very short bill will interfere with that notice which he has given?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. My only response to that is that on two other occasions I have yielded, and this is the third attempt I have made to get up the bill, and I would prefer to have it go on now, and the Senator can make his motion at the conclusion of my remarks.

the Senator can make his motion at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state to the Senator that this is a very important bill; it is a House bill, and there is a disagreement upon amendments to the bill. It ought to pass the Senate promptly, so as to secure final action. It is not over half a page in length.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I would like to have this taken up, and then we can let it be laid aside informally.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks upan-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 1067) relating to imported liquors. The Chair hears no objection. The bill is before the Senate, but will be informally laid aside, and the Senator from West Virginia asks for the consideration of the bill named by him.

COMPILATION OF DISTRICT LAWS.

The bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 4, after the word "appoint," to strike out the word "three" and insert "two;" in line 7, after the word "the" where it occurs the third time, to strike out "first" and insert "second;" so as to make the section read:

That the supreme court of the District of Columbia be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint two persons learned in the law as commissioners to compile, arrange, and classify, with a proper index, all statutes and parts of statutes in force in the said District, including the acts of the second session of the Fiftieth Congress, and relating to all such matters as would properly come within the scope of a civil and criminal code; and the said court shall have power to fill any vacancies occurring in said commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. 1 should like very much to see a bill like that passed, with a provision also that the codified code of the laws should be the laws of the District, and should be held to be the laws of the District unless Congress otherwise provide. Unless we so provide it will all end in smoke. We have had a codification before, a very excellent codification of the laws of the District, and it failed to become the law because Congress had not time to read it through, and on one the law because Congress had not time to read it through, and on one occasion it was defeated by the mere threat of calling for the reading of the entire codification, and the only objection pointed out was some question of temperance legislation—whether the temperance law was exactly the right law. If you appoint judges, learned men fit to codify the laws, it is simply their declaration that such appear to be the laws as they now stand, subject to repeal by Congress; then the code will amount to something. If the Senate would make some such provision, I should be very glad to vote for the bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will say to the Senator from Ohio that the difficulty we have experienced in obtaining any codification of the laws results from the fact that Congress has not been willing to consume the results from the fact that Congress has not been willing to consume the time necessary to consider and pass an act for the codification or revistime necessary to consider and pass an act for the codification of revision of the laws. It is absolutely necessary that any codification or revision should be reported back to Congress and that Congress should pass upon and adopt it to give it the force of law in this District. They have attempted to do that on several occasions, and it being necessary to consider and pass and act for the codification of revision should be reported back to Congress and that Congress should pass upon and adopt it to give it the force of law in this District. essarily a very long and voluminous bill the Senate and House have found it impossible to consider and pass the bill. The purpose, therefore, of this bill is to appoint men who have the confidence of the supreme court of the District to compile the law as it exists to-day into a volume which will be accessible to all lawyers, members of Congress, and also the business men of Washington; and this volume of existing laws of the District having the approval of the supreme court of the District, it will be accepted as embodying all the law in force at the date of the compilation.

If any one can find that it does not contain any existing provisions of law of importance, that provision can subsequently be incorporated into it. We have the practice of many of the States in which their codes have been compiled in this way, and they have stood the test of the criticism of the most learned and accurate lawyers in those States. When this is accomplished the members of Congress who have to legislate for this District will have before them the laws of the District, and can then, with the proper information in their possession, determine the propriety of a revision or the necessity for the passage of any act proposed, and at no distant day we may present for the approval of Congress a bill providing for a code which will embody the civil, municipal, and criminal law for this District.

I am anxious to have this done for another reason. This compilation will show the absurdity of the law as it exists to-day and induce Congress to take action looking to its codification. For example, the existing faw of this District authorizes the superintendent of the chimney sweeps to take the oath of office before the Chief-Justice of the United States. In several cases, such penalties as that of boring the tongue are imposed by statute for the violation of its provisions. I want to bring these absurdities into a compilation and let Congress see the condition of the law as it exists to-day. It is the only way, in my opinion, that it can be done to make Congress realize the necessity for a thorough revision and codification of the laws of this District.

The committee amendment provides that on the approval of the supreme court of the District, 5,000 copies of this compilation shall be printed by the Public Printer, and sold to any one who desires to pur chase at 10 per cent. over and above the cost.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The understanding was when I yielded to the motion to take up this bill that it would not excite discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa is entitled to call for the regular order.

to call for the regular order.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to say to the Senator from Iowa that I think this matter will be disposed of in the next two or three minutes; but I want to say to the Senator from Ohio—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa is entitled to the floor. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. If this can be disposed of at once I shall yield. Otherwise I must insist on my right to the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. I want to say to the Senator from Ohio that the present occupant of the chair and myself have twice as a subcommittee of the Committee on the District of Columbia reported to the Senate a codification of the laws of the District of Columbia, civil and criminal. It was so voluminous, however, that we were never able, and I doubt whether we ever shall be able, to get the Senate to consider any such bill. Therefore the only thing it seems to me practicable is the bill now pending, and I hope it may be passed in its pres-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 3, after the word "that," it is proposed to strike out the words "the said commissioners shall report such compilation to the next session of Congress, if practicable," and to in-

Of said compilation, when completed, upon the order of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, there shall be printed 5,000 copies at the Government Printing Office, said copies to be sold at 10 per cent, above costs

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments ere concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the title be amended by adding and for other purposes."

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. FARWELL were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had directed him to return to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (S. 314) for the relief of Henry M. Rector.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, numbered 16, 90, and 93, disagreed to the residue of the amendments of the Senate, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. For-NEY, Mr. RANDALL, and Mr. CANNON managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3865) to provide for writs of error or appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States in all cases involving the question of the jurisdiction of the courts.

IMPORTED LIQUORS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (8, 1067) relating to imported liquors.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill; which is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given that the laws of the several States relating to the sale of distilled and fermented liquors, within the limits of each State, may apply to such liquors when they have been imported in the same manner as when they have been manufactured in the United States.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Mr. President, the bill to which I now invite the attention of the Senate holds close relations with the dearest rights and interests of our people. It challenges our attention to a subject which no government can ignore without endangering its bet-ter conditions, and the prosperity, virtue, and happiness of its people. The Republican party was not unmindful of these considerations when it formulated its national platform and made its appeal to the people in a canvass which resulted in the election of its candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States

There were many declarations of principles and purposes in that platform, but it contained no paragraph or section of nobler character than the one which declared that-

The first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the purity of their homes. The Republican party cordially sympathizes with all wise and well-directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality.

The bill now before the Senate is in harmony with this declaration, and if it shall be enacted into law will be promotive of the "first conand it it shall be enacted into law will be promotive of the "first concern of all good government." The subject to which it relates is the one definite, unrelenting enemy of virtue, sobriety, and home. The supremacy of these three elements of organized society assures progress, prosperity, contentment, happiness to a people. When these elements are dominated by the enemy whose activity it is the purpose of this bill to aid the States to control, then crime, ignorance, pauperism, discontrate and unknown home audition and exist activated and contract and unknown home audition. discontent, and unhappy homes multiply and society retrogrades.

During the recent holiday season the New York Tribune published an editorial article on "The Criminal Problem," from which I make the following extract, namely:

Probably few persons realize the extent of our criminal problem. Rev. Frederick Howard Wines, secretary of the National Prison Association, gives some striking statistics in a sermon recently published. There are many intelligent persons who would be surprised to learn that the census of 1890 showed nearly 60,000 prisoners in all the prisons of every grade in the United States. Add to these more than 11,000 inmates of reformatories, who are virtually prisoners, and there is a total prison population of about 70,000 persons. The next census, Mr. Wines estimates, will show 75,000 or 80,000 inmates of prisons and probably 15,000 inmates of reformatories, making a vast army of between 90,000 and 100,000 men, women, and children confined on some criminal charge. Of those reported in the last census almost 10,000 were sentenced to imprisonment either for life or for terms of more than five years duration; but it need hardly be said that these represent only a small part of our criminal problem. They have been compared to prisoners of war; the greater army is still at large and carrying have wherever it goes.

that these represent only a small part of our crimmal problem. They have been compared to prisoners of war; the greater army is still at large and carrying havoc wherever it goes.

The cost of this incubus is enormous. It is estimated that the expense of maintaining the prisons amounts to fifteen millions a year, but this again is only a small part of the cost entailed upon the people at large by the existence of the criminal class. The maintenance of the police departments, it is estimated, costs another fifteen millions. Then there are in the United States more than two thousand courts possessing criminal jurisdiction, to say nothing of more than eighty thousand justices of the peace, a majority of whom have a limited criminal jurisdiction. How much of the cost of this vast machinery should be charged to the account of crime it would be impossible to say, but the aggregate must be enormous. Add to this the loss which honest people suffer by the depredations of criminals, for all of the latter class live upon the former, and we would have a figure which the boldest would not like to guess at. And the disproportionate increase of erime, unfortunately, is established by proof beyond dispute. The figures show a steady increase, greater than the growth of population, in every census, but as the figures previous to the census of 1850 are not believed to be accurate they are disregarded. The State prison reports of the various States, however, show that there is an increase of more than one-third in the convictions for high crimes over the increase of population from twenty years ago.

Mr. President, the facts here presented are of gravest import. What shall we do with them? We can not disregard them. The public good and the general welfare demand that we shall look these facts in the face and acquaint overselves with their portent. The on-march of crime means more than is disclosed by a mere statement of numbers. That the column of confined criminals of 70,000 in 1880 should now number 100,000 suggests that there are conditions existing in society from which we may not safely withhold our attention. Here we have a field in which "the first concern of all good government" may find opportunity for the exercise of its most conservative and potential Virtue, sobriety, and pure homes do not furnish recruits to the constantly increasing army of criminals housed in the prisons and reformatories of this country.

We must look to other causes than these for that increase of crime's army which the figures I have quoted present. Where shall we look? Have we any guide to indicate the way? If we will but turn to the resolution which I have quoted from the Republican national platform we shall not be misled. If "the first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the purity of their homes," and if these do not furnish recruits to crime's army, then the Republican party gave suggestive intimation when in that resolution it de-clared that it "cordially sympathizes with all wise and well-directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality;" for this invites us to look to the opposites of the facts and conditions named for the causes of crime and the augmentation of crime's army. When we obey this invitation and apply practical tests within our reach to the subject involved we find that we have not been misled, and it is not difficult to find States in our Union where the needed tests are present and conclusive. If there are States in which crime is not increasing we may well direct our investigations to them and ascertain why in this respect they differ from the other States. There are such States, and I am well pleased to name Iowa as one of them. I am proud to be able to state to the Senate and to the country that the State which I have the honor in part to represent in this body makes no contribution to the increase of crime in the United States.

Mr. President, this statement is not an unwarranted assumption. Its truth will stand the test of the severest scrutiny. The condition of society which it presents is so exceptional in its character that I determined not to state it until I had in possession the official data to support it. Hence I applied to the office of secretary of state of Iowa for information in respect to the criminal conditions existing in the State, and received in response comparative data for the years 1886, 1887, and 1888. From these official data it appears that the total number of convictions for crime in 1886 was 1,645; for 1887, 1,520; for

The report for 1888 was for a few weeks short of the entire year, owing to a change in the law governing the date of returns. But if a full average of the percentage of convictions for the time not embraced in the report, the total number of convictions for 1888 will not exceed These figures include all classes and grades of crime, those for which imprisonment in the penitentiaries and county jails was imposed as well as those for which fines alone were asse Another feature of the report is interesting, suggestive, and instructive. It is presented in said report as follows, namely:

Sent to the penitentiary in 1887, 306; in 1888, 199; decrease, 110. Sent to county jails in 1887, 261; in 1888, 127; decrease, 134.

Another interesting fact in this connection may be here stated, and it is that in only forty-eight of the ninety-nine counties of Iowa were there any convictions for crime in 1888 to which sentences of confine-ment in jail were applied, so that nearly one-half of the county jails had no criminal occupants during that year; and when we consider that the population of Iowa is now estimated to be 2,000,000, and that the criminal convictions of all classes and grades were only 1,000, and that this is but one criminal conviction for each 2,000 of population during the entire year, we may well pause and inquire what cause has induced these splendid results. In this regard I am glad to be able to state that official information is at hand to resolve this inquiry for us.

On December 7, 1887, Governor Larrabee, of Iowa, addressed a circular letter to the several district and superior court judges of the State requesting of them suggestions in respect of the laws of the State, and also propounded the following question, namely:

Would you, after having for several years observed the operation of the present prohibitory law, advise its repeal, and, if so, what would you propose to place in its stead?

To this circular forty judges responded. Of this number twenty-nine advised against the repeal of the law, eight were indefinite in their answers, and only three advised repeal; and it may be well for me to present quotations from some of the letters sent by the judges in response to the governor's circular. Judge Traverse, of the second district,

We will have but little trouble, since the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States to enforce the prohibitory liquor law. We would have had the saloons down long ago if the Federal courts had not stretched their protecting hands over the heads of such fellows as "Stormy Jordan." As it is, there is only one county, Wapello, out of the eight counties comprising this district, where open saloons are in operation. My experience is that wherever saloons are closed crime is diminished. The temperance sentiment in this part of the State is growing, and I think that the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Kansas case upholding the law will result in a growth of temperance sentiment all over the nation. It is the most civilizing and Christianizing event that has happened within the age. In my judgment our prohibitory law should be left just as it is.

Judge Stuart, of the same district, said:

Permit me to say that I would not advise the repeal of the prohibitory law.

Judge Harvey, of the third district, said:

You ask as to the effect of the prohibitory liquor law in this district, and particularly upon crime and criminal expenses. The law is well enforced in this district. I am not aware that there is a saloon in the district. It has reduced crime at least one-half, and the criminal expenses in like ratio. I would not and do not favor the repeal of the law.

Judge Lewis, of the fourth district, said:

I think the prohibitory law all right, and should not be repealed. * * * The law is as well enforced as any other, and has decreased criminal expenses at least two-thirds.

Judge Ayers, of the fifth district, said:

I have no doubt but that the prohibitory law has reduced criminal offenses and the expense of courts in this district very largely, and I certainly should not advise its repeal.

Judge Lewis, of the sixth district, said:

I would not recommend the repeal of the prohibitory liquor law, as I believe that if it has the same attention that other criminal laws of the State, and others receive the same attention that it does, which should be the case, it will end the saloon and promote a temperance sentiment and sobriety, and in every way a better state of things in society.

Judge Johnson, of the same district, said:

There can be no doubt that the effect of the prohibitory law has been to reduce crime and criminal expenses in this district. I would not advise its repeal.

Judge Kavanaugh, of the ninth district, said:

In regard to your second query, I would say that the prohibitory law has to a certain extent impaired this community commercially; but, on the other hand, it has decreased crime over 50 per cent, and added largely to individual happi-

Judge Conrad, of the same district, said:

As to the operation of the law, my observation is, that it has largely diminished crime in this district, and very much lessened the cost of maintaining the Judge Weaver, of the eleventh district, said:

As to the prohibitory statutes, I have to report their very general observance in this district. There are one or two counties in which grand juries are a little slow to indict, but as a whole the law is well enforced. I have also to say that crime generally is very much lessened. * * The criminal expenses in nearly every county are being reduced to a very low sum.

Judge Granger, of the thirteenth district, said:

You inquire as to our criminal business, and how it is affected by the enforcement of the law. At the beginning of the year, before the attempt at enforcement, in one county the entire term was occupied with criminal business, and much left undone. In the other two counties most of the term was consumed in the trial of criminal cases, and nearly every case the result of a saloon influence or drunkenness. To-day there is but one criminal case pending in the three counties, and that is an old case growing out of whisky sales. Our grand juries have comparatively nothing to do. So far as I know, but one man in jail, and he for violating an injunction in a liquor case. Our criminal expenses since the closing of the saloons have been comparatively nominal.

Judge Thomas, of the fourteenth district, said:

As to the effect of the prohibitory law in this district, I am satisfied that it is reducing crime, and, as a consequence, criminal expenses. In this district the law is as well enforced as any of the other criminal laws of the State. In my judgment it would be a grave mistake to attempt to repeal the law, or to substitute local option, or high license in its place.

Judge Carr, of the same district, said:

The present prohibitory law is, in my judgment, a success. * * is being well enforced in this district, and we have no open saloons.

Judge Deemer, of the fifteenth district, said:

The prohibitory law is working nicely in every county in this district, except in Pottawattamie, and I think there it is having a good effect and gaining ground rapidly. It is a noticeable fact that there the criminal docket is much larger, in proportion to the number of inhabitants, than in the other counties. In many of the counties the jall is getting to be almost an unnecessary building, and in the last three counties I have visited there was not an occupant. The effects of the prohibitory law upon crime has been very marked, but as I have kept no data I can not give you any comparative figures. No; I do not advise the repeal of the prohibitory law.

Indee Carson of the same district, who had been a member of the Judge Carson, of the same district, who had been a member of the State senate prior to his election as a judge, said:

When in the senate I favored local option, but I am satisfied that the statute should stand. My belief is that the effect has been very favorable in the reduction of criminal offenses, especially those growing out of brawls and quarrel-

Judge Loofborrow, of the same district, said:

I would not advise the repeal of the prohibitory laws, for I believe, on the whole, the effect is beneficial. The criminal record is certainly much reduced.

Judge Thornell, of the same district, said:

You speak of the repeal of the prohibitory law. I should regard its repeal as a calamity, and have no suggestions to offer in its stead.

Judge Macomber, of the sixteenth district, said:

I believe it is a good law and tends mightily to uphold moral ideas. I am opposed to any looking back. The Supreme Court of the United States places its recent decision upon the well-known fact that intoxicating liquors cause crime, paupers, and disorder.

Judge Griffin, of the eighteenth district, said:

In answer to your letter I beg to say that the prohibitory law seems to work well in this district. I have no suggestions to make as to additional legislation at this time.

Judge Stoneman, of the superior court of Cedar Rapids, said:

The repeal of the prohibitory law now is not desirable.

Judge Wilson, of the superior court of Creston, said:

Judge Wilson, of the superior court of Creston, said:

You ask me as to the workings of the prohibitory law in this part of the State. I was not in favor of the law, thinking that public sentiment was not strong enough to make it a success, and that high license would work better. I have carefully watched its workings, and am convinced that I was wrong. Whatever was the sentiment at its passage, I am satisfied that nine-tenths of our citizens would vote against its repeal to-day. I have counted the cases on the mayor's dockets of Creston with the following result, namely: From January 1, 1882, to January 1, 1883, 133 cases; from January 1, 1883, to March 17, 1884, 149 cases; from March 1, 1884, to March 15, 1885, 160 cases; from March 17, 1886, 169 cases; from March 17, 1886, to March 17, 1886, 169 cases; from march 17, 1887, 23 cases, and from March 17 to December 10, 23 cases. Comment is unnecessary. No, sir; I am not in favor of repealing the law, and should be very sorry to see it attempted. I am not aware that any cases for drunkenness have been brought before our justices of the peace, and I think the record above given includes all such cases since my term of office.

I was hore remark that the last two periods included in this state.

I may here remark that the last two periods included in this statement show the results which have been realized from the enforcement of the prohibitory liquor law during the earlier periods named, reaching from January 1, 1881, to March 17, 1886.

Judge Bank, of the superior court of Keokuk, said:

I have not examined as to criminal expenses in this district so as to be able to speak of the effect of the prohibitory law in that respect. At the September term, 1887, of the district court at Kockuk, there was not a criminal case before the court. This was the first and only term of that court in my recollection that there was no criminal business transacted in the court.

Mr. President, these extracts are not idle vaporings of enthusiasts and fanatics. On the contrary, they are the deliberate utterances of the judges named in respect of their personal and official experiences in the administration of the criminal laws of the State of Iowa, and I assert that the conditions described by them have steadily improved during the year that has passed since the letters from which I have quoted were written. This being the case, I feel that I am justified in asserting that the data it has been my pleasure to submit to the Senate establish two facts, namely: First, that crime is rapidly diminishing in the State of Iowa; second, that this very desirable result is in great degree due to the character of the laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors within the State. But in making this claim for the State of Iowa I would not be understood as disregarding other most creditable conditions existing within the Commonwealth. Amongst these, and of commanding presence, is the educational system of the State. Some of the features of this most interesting field of State movement are well worth brief notice here. From a recent publication in the State I extract the following, namely:

An examination of the annual report made by the State superintendent of public schools in Iowa shows a gratifying condition of affairs, and that educational facilities in this Commonwealth are all the time improving. The whole number of male teachers now employed in the State is 5,595, and of female teachers, 19,578. This is a decrease of 412 males, but an increase of 1,373 females over last year. The average compensation of male teachers is $36.44 per month, and of female teachers, $30.05 per month. The school population of the State, or children between the age of five and twenty-one, is divided as follows: Males, 225,741; females, 313,507.

The number of school-houses is given as 12,752, divided as follows: Frame buildings, 11,712; brick, 771; stone, 239; log houses, 30. The total value of the school-houses of the State is placed at $12,007,340, which is an increase of nearly a million dollars during the last year. These school-houses contain apparatus valued at $326,957, and they contain 63,169 volumes in their libraries. During the past year there were 132,575 trees set on the school grounds. This is the first year that instruction has been required to be given as to the nature of alog-holic liquors, and 13,946 schools report that temperance has been taught as re-quired by law.

This relates solely to the common-school system of the State, in support of which there was expended last year nearly $6,000,000, the greater part of which is derived from taxes, the rate of which is determined by the voters in the several school districts at the annual school meetings held in each in the month of March.

In addition to the common schools there are forty-nine universities, colleges, and academies in the State, and a number of normal and county high schools; and each county has a teachers' normal institute, and all teachers are required to attend these for a stated time each year. The permanent school fund of the State amounts to $4,008,217, yielding an annual revenue of $242,710, which is equitably apportioned to the several counties.

Mr. President, these are but a few of the many interesting features of the educational system of Iowa, and now it may be asked, what has come from all this cost and effort? If the inquirer will turn to the census of 1880 he will discover that the percentage of illiteracy in Iowa was only 2.4, and I am informed that the latest data collected in this regard disclose that the rate is now reduced to 1.2 per cent. places Iowa at the head of the educational column, not only of this country, but of the world, and it seems to me that a State with such a record as I have presented for Iowa in respect of the reduction of crime and the promotion of educational results may hopefully ask Congress to remove the judicially constructed obstruction which alone stands in her way in that rightful exercise of her police powers by which she can effectively suppress crime within her borders.

But of course Iowa does not ask this for herself alone; for this could not be granted, for it belongs to all of the States, each being the judge for itself as to the manner and extent in and to which its police powers shall be exercised. We are forced to recognize the fact that crime is increasing in this country. The facts given in the article which I quoted in the early part of my remarks can not be brushed out of the way by a general denial. They doubtless will forcefully confront us in the results of the census of 1890. We may then be forced to admit that we have been too slow in our movements for the suppression of crime. We need not stop now to ask how this can be done. I have given an instance illustrative of how it can be done in harmony with the doctrine that-

The first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people and the purity of their homes.

And the facts involved in that illustration show that it was not created by mere unreasoning enthusiasts and fanatics, but by a people who know how to prevent the increase of crime and to reduce illiteracy to an insignificant minimum, and who invite inspection of all their movements in respect of government, its results, and established conditions. If other States are not willing to follow the example presented by the case I have cited, is there any good reason why it should not have opportunity to perfect its own purposes? What stands in its way? In my judgment a judicial fiction. What is it? Why, in part that any article imported into the United States under the customs laws thereof may be sold in the original package in any State, and that this right of sale is superior to the police powers of the States. That this anomalous judicial creation should have been obtruded into our system of government in view of the admitted fact that the States our system of government in view of the admitted fact that the States reserved to themselves full possession of their police powers is a most unfortunate incident in our progress. But inasmuch as it exists, the practical inquiry is, how can it be rendered least forceful in its effects? So far as it relates to that parent of poverty and crime which some of the States have attempted to exterminate the bill now before the Senate presents to us an answer. The bill reads as follows, namely:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given that the laws of the several States relating to the sale of distilled and fermented liquors within the limits of each State may apply to such liquors when they have been imported in the same manner as when they have been manufactured in the United States.

Mr. President, is this bill obnoxious to constitutional objection? It seems to me that it can be demonstrated that it is not. purpose of the bill? To enable the States to more perfectly exercise their police powers, Is the enactment of the bill necessary to effect this purpose? Because of the judicial obtrusion to which I have referred conflicting answers have been given to this question. By some it is suggested that the legislation enacted by the States for the suppression or regulation of the traffic in intoxicating liquors can not be enforced in respect of such liquors as may be introduced into the country under the customs laws of the United States; that an importer of liquors may receive them and sell them in the original packages, State laws to the contrary notwithstanding; that the customs laws enacted in pursuance of the power of Congress to regulate commerce with foreign countries are paramount to the laws of the States, and that nothing short of the consent of Congress can subordinate the former to the operation of the latter.

By others it is asserted that laws enacted by the States in the exercise of their police powers are within their several jurisdictions paramount to the customs laws of the United States. The utterances of the several members of the Supreme Court in the license cases, 5 Howard, 504, give strong support to this position. Chief-Justice Taney

If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic or from prohibiting it altogether if it thinks proper.

This is a pretty broad and definite statement of the doctrine that State legislation, enacted to effect the purpose defined by the Chief-Justice, is superior to the customs laws of the United States in the matter of imported ardent spirits. For how could the admitted right of the State to prohibit the traffic in ardent spirits be made effective if its citizens could defend their violations of the local law by interposing a superior protection provided by the revenue laws of the United States?

In the same cases Mr. Justice McLean said:

In the same cases Mr. Justice McLean said:

A State regulates its domestic commerce, contracts, the transmission of estates, real and personal, and acts upon internal matters which relate to its moral and political welfare. Over these subjects the Federal Government has no power. They appertain to the State sovereignty as exclusively as powers exclusively delegated appertain to the General Government. * * * The acknowledged police power of a State extends often to the destruction of property. A nuisance may be abated. Everything prejudicial to the health or morals of a city may be removed. * * * A discretion on this subject must be exercised somewhere, and it can be exercised nowhere but under State authority. The State may regulate the sale of foreign spirits, and such regulation is valid, though it may reduce the quantity consumed. This is admitted. And how can this discretion be controlled? The powers of the General Government do not extend to it. It is in every respect a local regulation and relates exclusively to the internal police of the State.

If this doctrine be true, and the discretion involved rests wholly with

If this doctrine be true, and the discretion involved rests wholly with the State, how is the United States, or any other power foreign to the State, in the regard stated, to interpose and determine the extent to which the local law or regulation may go in effecting its purpose? Suppose the law of the State be of such character and force as to reduce the consumption of imported liquors one-half, does not this affect the market, and to that extent destroy the market on which the importer depends for his trade and profit? No one will doubt this. Well, if the State may go to that extent in the exercise of its admitted discretion, Well, if the what power shall say that it may not reform its action and dispose of the remaining half also? The discretion resting with the State, the powers of the General Government not extending to it, is not the subject resolved into a problem which the State alone can solve? And does not this aspect of the case give peculiar force to the question stated by Mr. Justice Woodbury, in the opinion which he filed in the cases cited, which he put in these words:

How can they-

be sovereign within their respective spheres without power to regulate all their internal commerce, as well as police, and direct how, when, and where it shall be conducted in articles connected either with public morals, or public safety, or public prosperity?

Upon these subjects the General Government can not act within the States. No one disputes this proposition. Mr. Justice Grier enforced this doctrine with marked emphasis in the opinion he read in the license cases, and from which the following extract is taken. He said:

this doctrine with marked emphasis in the opinion he read in the license cases, and from which the following extract is taken. He said:

The true question presented by these cases, and one which I am not disposed to evade, is whether the States have a right to prohibit the sale and consumption of an article of commerce which they believe to be pernicious in its effects and the cause of disease, paperism, and crime. I do not consider the question of the exclusiveness of the power of Congress to regulate commerce as necessarily connected with the decision of this point.

It has been frequently decided by this court "that the powers which relate to merely municipal regulations, or what may more properly be called internal police, are not surrendered by the States, or restrained by the United States; and that consequently, in relation to these, the authority of a State is complete, unqualified, and conclusive." Without attempting to define what are the peculiar subjects or limits of this power, it may safely be affirmed that every law for the restraint and punishment of crime, for the preservation of the public peace, health, and morals, must come within this category.

As subjects of legislation, they are from their very nature of primary importance; they lie at the foundation of social existence; they are for the protection of life and liberty, and necessarily compel all laws on subjects of secondary importance, which relate only to property, convenience, or luxury, to recede, when they come in conflict or collision. "Salus populi suprema est lex."

If the right to control these subjects be "complete, unqualified, and exclusive" in the State Legislatures, no regulations of secondary importance can supersede or restrain their operations on any ground of prerogative or supremacy. The exigencies of the social compact require that such laws be executed before and above all others.

It is for this reason that quarantine laws, which protect the public health, compel mere commercial relations to submit to their control.

In presenting the quotations thus far made from the opinions in the license cases, I have followed the order in which they are to be found in the opinion of the Supreme Court as delivered by Mr. Justice Harlan on the 15th of December, 1887, in the several cases which came to that court on appeal from the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas, and on writ of error from the supreme court of that The quotations in one or two instances are a little more extended than those made by Mr. Justice Harlan in the opinion of the Supreme Court as delivered by him as stated, but these extensions only serve to more fully support the conclusions of the court as announced by him.

Mr. President, the Supreme Court of the United States in the Kansas cases gave most admirable and sturdy expression to the doctrines which recognize and support the supremacy of the police powers of the Since the decisions in the license cases and in other like cases, the Constitution of the United States has been amended in several important particulars. Not the least important of these amendments is the fourteenth, the first section of which provides as follows, namely:

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; norshall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

In the Kansas cases this amendment was interposed by the parties proceeded against for violations of the prohibitory law of that State as a protection against its extreme effect. It did not avail, and the Supreme Court said:

In Bartemyer vs. Iowa (18 Wall., 129) it was said that prior to the adoption of the fourteenth amendment, State enactments regulating or prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors raised no question under the Constitution of the United States, and that such legislation was left to the discretion of the respective States, subject to no other limitations than those imposed by their own constitutions or by the general principles supposed to limit all legislative power. Referring to the contention that the right to sell intoxicating liquors was secured by the fourteenth amendment, the court said that "so far as such a right exists it is not one of the rights growing out of citizenship of the United States." In Beer Company vs. Massachusetts (97 United States, 33) it was said that, as a measure of police regulation looking to the preservation of public morals, a State law prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors is not repugnant to any clause of the Constitution of the United States.

Finally, in Foster vs. Kansas (112 United States, 206) the court said that the question as to the constitutional power of a State to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors was no longer an open one in this court. These cases rest upon the acknowledged right of the States of the Union to control their purely internal affairs, and, in so doing, to protect the lealth, morals, and safety of their people by regulations that do not interfere with the execution of the powers of the General Government, or violate the rights secured by the Constitution of the United States. The power to establish such regulations, as was said in Gibbons vs. Ogden (9 Wheaton, 203), reaches everything within the territory of a State not surrendered to the National Government.

Here it is contended by some that a difficulty arises in respect of the traffic in intoxicating liquors in those States where prohibitory laws have been enacted. It is said that such traffic may be carried on to a certain extent in spite of the laws of the States. How can this be, in view of the judicial expressions that have been cited relative to the supreme character of the police powers of the States? Why, it is said that the Constitution declares that Congress shall have power—

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States— And-to regulate commerce with foreign nations-

And that Congress in the execution of these powers has enacted customs laws which serve the double purpose of laying duties from which to supply money for the objects named and of regulating commerce with foreign nations, the full operation of which can not be obstructed by the legislative action of the States. Therefore, it is claimed that whosoever will may import from foreign countries, into any State, intoxicating liquors, and hold and sell them in the original packages, in spite of the local prohibitory laws. If this be true, then we have disclosed to us the best possible reason for the passage of the bill now under consideration. If the States are thus obstructed in the exercise of their police powers, why shall not Congress remove the impediment? It is said, in answer to this question, that Congress has not the constitutional power to grant relief to the States in this respect. Why not? Because it is alleged that the Constitution declares that—

All taxes, duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United

And that the uniformity enjoined would be interfered with by allowing the laws of the States to be operative on imported liquors. A sufficient answer to this objection is that the provision of the Constitution quoted applies as well to each method of raising money as to any one or more, singly or combined. It applies to special or general taxes or excises imposed by the internal-revenue laws with just as much force as it does to duties on imports provided in the customs laws. No one will dispute this statement. Well, what interpretation has Congress given to its power in the matter of making exceptions in aid of the enforcement of the police regulations of the States in the enactment of the internal-revenue law? Section 3243 of the Revised Statutes of the United States gives a very complete answer to this question. The section reads as fol-lows, namely:

The payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws for carrying on any trade or business shall not be held to exempt any person from any penalty or punishment provided by the laws of any State for carrying on the same within such State, or in any manner to authorize the commencement or continuance of such trade or business contrary to the laws of such State or in places prohibited by municipal law; nor shall the payment of any such tax prohibit any State from placing a duty or tax on the same trade or business, for State or other purposes.

This section of the Revised Statutes subjects the entire liquor traffic, both as to manufacture and sale, to the operation and effect of the laws of the several States. No tax paid by persons engaged in that traffic, under the internal-revenue laws, can be interposed as a defense in prosecutions for violations of the laws of the States. This position is supported by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in McGuire vs. The Commonwealth, 3 Wallace, pages 395 and 396, from which I quote as follows, namely:

The court below decided that the license received under the act of Congress gave to the defendant no right to keep or sell intoxicating liquors in violation of

The court below decided that the license received under the act of Congress gave to the defendant no right to keep or sell intoxicating liquors in violation of the State law.

Whatever might be the effect of this license as to the rights under it, in the absence of other provisions of the act of Congress, a question not involved in the case, and, therefore, not material to be noticed, it is quite clear that it conferred no right or authority on the defendant below, and hence furnished no defense to the indictment under the law of the State.

The sixty-seventh section of the act of Congress enacts "that no license hereinbefore provided for, if granted, shall be construed to authorize the commencement or continuation of any trade, business, occupation, or employment therein mentioned, within any State or Territory of the United States, in which it is or shall be in violation of the laws of any State or Territory."

In view of this provision, it is in vain to attempt to give force or effect to the license against the State law; and hence the authority derived from it, upon which the defendant relied for defense in the court below, fails.

The decision was against an authority set up under an act of Congress, and the case is, therefore, rightfully here under the twenty-fifth section of the judiciary act. But as we are of opinion the decision of the court below was right, the judgment must be affirmed.

In license tax cases United States vs. Vassar et al. 5 Wallace, the

In license tax cases, United States vs. Vassar et al., 5 Wallace, the court was even more explicit than in the case I have just cited. I quote from pages 474 and 475 as follows, namely:

Upon the whole we conclude—

1. That licenses under the act of 1864 and the amendatory acts conveyed to the licensee no authority to carry on the licensed business within a State.

2. That the requirement of payment for such licenses is only a mode of imposing taxes on the licensed business, and that the prohibition, under penalties, against carrying on the business without license is only a mode of enforcing the payment of such taxes.

3. That the provisions of the acts of Congress requiring such licenses and imposing penalties for not taking out and paying for them are not contrary to the Constitution or to public policy.

4. That the provisions in the act of 1856 for the imposing of special taxes in lieu of requiring payment for licenses, removes whatever ambiguity existed in the previous laws and are in harmony with the Constitution and public policy.

policy.

5. That the recognition by the acts of Congress of the power and right of the State to tax, control, or regulate any business within its limits is entirely consistent with an intention on the part of Congress to tax such business for na-

Now, apply to this latter statement the language of Chief-Justice Taney in the license cases, in which he said-

If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic or from prohibiting it altogether if it thinks proper—

And we have a complete recognition of constitutional warrant for the support of the bill now under consideration. But it has been suggested in reply to this, that while it may be true in respect to internal-revenue taxes the rule is different when applied to customs duties. To this suggestion I will give some attention before concluding my re-

Mr. President, there is another very striking illustration of the constitutionality of this bill in our legislative and judicial history. The "act to incorporate the subscribers to the Bank of the United States" became a law on the 10th day of April, 1816; "An act to impose a tax on all banks or branches thereof in the State of Maryland, not chartered by the Legislature," was passed by the General Assembly of that State on the 11th day of February, 1818. Out of this legislation grew the celebrated case of McCulloch vs. The State of Maryland et al. (4 Wheaton, 316). The case presented the questions of the constitutional power of Congress to incorporate the United States Bank, and of the authority of the State of Maryland to impose a tax on an institution so created. It came to the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to the court of appeals of the State of Maryland. The case, both as respects the ability of the arguments presented and the comprehensive grasp of the questions involved, and the masterful manner of their treatment displayed in the opinion of the court, announced by Chief-Justice Marshall, stands as one of the most notable in the history and progress of our national jurisprudence. The result was an affirmation of the constitutional power of Congress to incorporate the Bank of the United States and of the unconstitutionality of the act of the General Assembly of Maryland, whereby the State sought to impose a tax on the bank. No provision had been placed in the act chartering the bank giving authority to the States to impose a tax on the institution, as the law of Maryland attempted to do.

In 1863 Congress enacted a law for the organization of national banks, in which no provision was made for State taxation. But a power to amend, alter, or repeal the act was reserved to Congress. In 1864 this power was exercised, and amongst other things a section was provided I which is now section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and it reads as follows, namely:

and it reads as follows, namely:

Nothing herein shall prevent all the shares in any association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the State within which the association is located; but the Legislature of each State may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national-banking associations located within the State, subject only to the two restrictions that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State, and that the shares of any national-banking association owned by non-residents of any State shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located and not elsewhere. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from either State, county, or municipal taxes to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

The national-banking associations to which this section applies are just as much instrumentalities of the Government as were the Bank of the United States and its branches. The same power that Congress exthe United States and its branches. The same power that Congress exercised in creating the former it used in chartering the others. The Bank of the United States and its branches could not be taxed by the States. The national-banking associations can be so taxed. This has been decided again and again by the Supreme Court of the United States. Why is this? Why can national banks be taxed beyond the real estate held by them when the Bank of the United States and its branches could not be? Simply because Congress has provided that the former may be taxed by the States, and did not so declare in respect of the latter. But for this provision of law the national banks would be exempt from State and municipal taxation just as the United States be exempt from State and municipal taxation just as the United States The consent of Congress was not given to the States to tax Bank was. the United States Bank; it is given to them to tax the national banks.

Mr. President, if this action of Congress can make so great difference in the matter of the taxation of banks created by it, why may not the bill now under consideration be enacted into a law and subject imported liquors to the operation of State laws? If this power may be constitutionally exercised by Congress in respect of taxes imposed by the internal-revenue laws and the subjection of national banks to State and municipal taxation, why may it not be extended to the case and subject presented by the bill we are now considering? An internalrevenue law is an act of Congress. The law chartering the national banks is an act of Congress. The law imposing duties on imported ardent spirits is an act of Congress. If Congress may rightfully enact the provisions to which I have directed attention in respect of internal revenue and national banks, why may it not legislate in the manner proposed by this bill? The provision of the Constitution which declares can not be interposed as a valid objection to the passage of this bill. It will hardly be claimed that this constitutional rule of uniformity was adopted for the purpose of assuring to the subjects of foreign powers and the promoters of foreign industries greater rights and privi-leges in the United States than can be possessed by our own citizens. This feature of the case is well presented in the views of the minority of the Committee on the Judiciary of this body in support of this bill, and from which I make the following extract, namely:

All duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United Stat

and from which I make the following extract, namely:

An importer of ardent spirits, or of any other article of foreign production, is entitled to no greater protection under the Constitution than is the dealer in like articles of domestic manufacture. The man who manufactures ardent spirits in a State where it is lawful so to do is not in a condition inferior in matter of constitutional right to the person who imports such spirits from abroad. The one pays an internal-revenue tax, the other pays a tax levied by the customs laws; and what Congress may constitutionally say about one it may repeat as to the other. It has said that no payment of internal-revenue tax shall exempt the manufacturer or dealer in domestic spirits from the operation of the laws of the several States. This the courts have said is constitutional.

The bill under consideration proposes to enact a like declaration relative to the importer of foreign spirits. It is not doubted that the judicial result will correspond with that reached in the other case. The attempt of the committee to establish a distinction between the dealers in the foreign article by importation and those engaged in the field of domestic commerce can not be made successful. There is nothing in the Constitution assuring superior advantages to foreign commerce over that which is domestic. Nor is there anything in the bill submitted by the Senate to the committee which suggests a violation of the rule of uniformity prescribed by the Constitution. It proposes no new departure in the legislation of Congress. The legislative precedents cited justify its terms. They have stood the test of judicial scrutiny and have been approved.

If the views thus expressed be not correct, and if the rule of uni-

If the views thus expressed be not correct, and if the rule of uniformity which applies to internal-revenue taxes is different from that which obtains in respect of customs duties, then indeed does our Constitution discriminate against our own citizens and their industries in favor of the subjects of foreign powers and their pursuits. Such a monstrous doctrine as this will not be approved by the people of this country; and in order to make the issue as clear and definite as possible, the minority, after expressing the views I have quoted, said:

But in order to conform the bill more nearly to the precedent contained in the internal-revenue law an amendment is herewith presented to the Senate, and its adoption recommended.

The amendment proposed is as follows, namely:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following, namely:

"That the payment of any tax, duty, impost, or excise upon, or in respect of, the importation into the United States of any fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquids or liquors shall not be held to exempt the importer thereof, or any other person, or any such property from any penalty, forfeiture, or proceeding that now is or hereafter may be provided for by the laws of any State applicable equally to all property of the same nature, respecting the manufacture, sale, furnishing, or possession of liquids or liquors; nor shall the payment of any such tax, duty, impost, or excise be held to prohibit or preclude any State from imposing a tax or duty on any such liquids or liquors or from making regulations in respect of the same, in common with and in respect of other such liquids or liquors not imported, or from enforcing its laws operating equally in respect of property imported and property not imported, against any such importer or person or against any such property, whether the same be in the original package of importation or not."

Mr. President, this amendment did not originate in doubt of the constitutional character of the original bill, but simply in the desire to present the measure in exact accord with a legislative precedent which has received the judicial approval of the Supreme Court of the United States. In either form it is but a recognition of the duty of Congress to avoid even a seeming purpose to obstruct, in the slightest degree, the effective operation of the police powers of the States. The extent to which those powers shall be exercised rests in the discretion of the States. This is the true doctrine, and it has the support of the most distinguished jurists our country has produced, who have asserted it in both judicial utterances and elementary writings. Most of the dissents from this doctrine which have appeared in the courts and elsewhere have been predicated on a case which had nothing whatever to do with the subject to which this bill relates. I refer to the case of Brown vs. Maryland, 12 Wheaton, 447. The subject-matter of that case had no relation whatever to the police power of the State. The subject-matter had no connection with anything within the field where the police power of the State is supreme.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BERRY in the chair).

The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to Congressional elections.

Mr. EVARTS. I ask that the order of business be informally laid aside, so that the Senator from Iowa may conclude his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside until the Senator from Iowa concludes his remarks. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Iowa will pro-

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. The issue presented and determined was whether the State could impose a tax on an importer of dry goods and make its payment a condition-precedent to his exercise of the right to The court held that the State could not do so, and that the State law under which that tax was imposed was unconstitutional. That is all there was of it. The case did not relate to the subject of the police powers; and the use that has been made of that case has been wholly misleading and wholly unwarrantable.

Mr. President, this bill will need to be further amended to meet a recent judicial interference with the effective exercise by the States of the police powers which they have never surrendered to the United States. The State of Iowa in the right exercise of her police powers, with a purpose to protect and promote the health, morals, and better condition of her people, enacted a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for use as beverages within her borders. It is the law to which I referred in the earlier part of my remarks, and concerning the operation and effect of which I gave the numerous quotations from the reports of many of the judges of the State. That law has as one of its sections the following, namely:

If any express company, railway company, or any agent or person in the employ of any express company or railway company, or if any common carrier, or any person in the employ of any common carrier, or any person, knowingly bring within this State for any person or persons or corporation, or shall knowingly transport or convey between points or from one place to another in this State for any other person or persons or corporation, any intoxicating liquors without first having been furnished a certificate from and under the seal of the county auditor of the county to which said liquor is to be transported or is consigned for transportation, or within which it is to be conveyed from place to place, certifying that the consignee or person to whom said liquor is to be transported, conveyed, or delivered is authorized to sell such intoxicating liquors in such county, such company, corporation, or person so offending, and each of ported, conveyed, or delivered is authorized to sell such intoxicating liquors in such county, such company, corporation, or person so offending, and each of them, and any agent of such company, corporation, or person so offending, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in the sum of $100 for each offense, and pay costs of prosecution, and the costs shall include a reasonable attorney fee, to be assessed by the court, which shall be paid into the county fund, and stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs of prosecution are paid. The offense herein defined shall be held to be complete, and shall be held to have been committed in any county of the State through or to which said intoxicating liquors are transported, or in which the same is unloaded for transportation, or in which said liquors are conveyed from place to place or delivered. It shall be the duty of the several county auditors of this State to issue the certificate herein contemplated to any person having such permit, and the certificate herein contemplated to any person having such permit, and the certificate herein contemplated to any person having such permit, and the certificate so issued shall be truly dated when issued, and shall specify the date at which the permit expires, as shown by the county records.

Under this section occurred the case of Geogree A. Rowman and Fred.

Under this section occurred the case of George A. Bowman and Fred. W. Bowman rs. The Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company, which went on writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the decision in which by a divided court constitutes the recent judicial interference with the police powers of the States of which I have made mention. The facts presented by the record of the case are succinctly stated in the dissenting opinion presented by Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Gray on March 19, 1888, and from which I quote as follows, namely:

It appears upon the face of the declaration that the plaintiffs—one of whom is a citizen of Iowa—made application to the board of supervisors of Marshall County, in that State, for permission under the statute to buy and sell in that county intoxicating liquors for medicinal, culinary, mechanical, and sacramental purposes, and that their application was rejected. They then resorted to the expedient of buying 5,000 barrels of beer in Chicago and tendering them to the railroad company for transportation to the same county without furnishing the certificate required by the laws of Iowa. The refusal of the company to transport this beer into Iowa in violation of her laws is the basis of the present suit. The plaintiffs claim damages upon the ground that they could have sold this beer in that State at a price in advance of what it cost them. As they do not allege that the beer was to be delivered in Iowa to a person authorized by her laws to sell it there, no wrong was done of which the plaintiffs can complain, unless it be their right not only to have their beer carried into the State but to sell it there in defiance of her laws.

This is a fair statement of the facts involved in the case. The court by a majority of its members, held that the law of Iowa was invalid for the reason that it was a regulation of interstate commerce and an infringement of the exclusive power of Congress to d . that thing.

I will not detain the Senate by an elaboration of the reasons stated by the court in support of its most peculiar conclusion. A brief extract from the opinion will answer my purpose. The court said:

from the opinion will answer my purpose. The court said:

It may be said, however, that the right of the State to restrict or prohibit sales of intoxicating liquor within its limits, conceded to exist as a part of its police power, implies the right to prohibit its importation, because the latter is necessary to the effectual exercise of the former. The argument is that a prohibition of the sale can not be made effective, except by preventing the introduction of the subject of the sale; that if its entrance into the State is permitted, the traffic in it can not be suppressed. But the right to prohibit sales, so far as conceded to the States, arises only after the act of transportation has terminated, because the sales which the State may forbid are of things within its jurisdiction. Its power over them does not begin to operate until they are brought within the territorial limits which circumscribe it. It might be very convenient and useful in the execution of the policy of prohibition within the State to extend the powers of the State beyond its territorial limits. But such extra-territorial powers can not be assumed upon such an implication. On the contrary, the nature of the case contradicts their existence. For if they belong to one State, they belong to all, and can not be exercised severally and independently. The attempt would necessarily produce that conflict and confusion which it was the very purpose of the Constitution by its delegations of national power to prevent.

It is enough to say that the power to regulate or forbid the sale of a commodity after it has been brought into the State does not carry with it the right and power to prevent its introduction by transportation from another State.

It is just such reasoning as this that has tended to confuse the general understanding in respect of subjects that are within the domain of the police powers of the States and those that are not. The members of the court from whose opinion I have made this quotation, with one exception, cited approvingly in the opinion delivered in the Kansas cases the language employed in the license cases by Mr. Justice Grier, as follows, namely:

The true question presented by these cases, and one which I am not disposed to evade, is whether the States have a right to prohibit the sale and consumption of an article of commerce which they believe to be pernicious in its effects and the cause of disease, pauperism, and crime. * * Without attempting to define what are the peculiar subjects or limits of this power, it may be safely affirmed that every law for the restraint or punishment of crime, for the preservation of the public peace, health, and morals, must come within this category. * * It is not necessary for the sake of justifying the State legislation now under consideration to array the appalling statistics of misery, pauperism, and crime which have their origin in the use or abuse of ardent spirits. The police power, which is exclusively in the States, is alone competent to the correction of these great evils, and all measures of restraint or prohibition necessary to effect the purpose are within the scope of that authority.

How can this be true if the police powers of the States are subordinate to the commercial powers of Congress? The mere statement of the proposition discloses its absurdity, and if it were not embodied in a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States one would be tempted to call it disingenuous. The justices of that court who joined in the dissenting opinion filed therein seem to have had a keen appreciation of the unfortunate predicament in which the court had placed itself, and exposed it as follows, namely:

and exposed it as follows, namely:

If, therefore, as the court now decides, the Constitution gives the right to transport intoxicating liquors into Iowa from another State, and if that right carries with it, as one of its essential ingredients, authority, in the consigner, to sell or exchange such articles, after they are so brought in, and while in his possession, in the original packages, it is manifest that the regulation forbidding sales of intoxicating liquors, within the State, for other than medicinal, mechanical, culinary, or sacramental purposes, and then only under a permit from a board of supervisors, will be of little practical value. In this view any one—even a citizen of Iowa—desiring to sell intoxicating liquors in that State, need only arrange to have them delivered to him from some point in another State, in packages of varying sizes, as may suit customers. Or, he may erect his manufacturing establishment, or warehouse, just across the Iowa line, in some State having a different public policy, and thence, with wagons, transport liquors into Iowa, in original packages. If the State arraigns him for a violation of her laws, he may claim—and, under the principles of the present decision, it may become difficult to dispute the claim—that, although such laws were enacted solely to protect the health and morals of the people, and to promote peace and good order among them, and although they are fairly adapted to accomplish those objects, yet the Constitution of the United States, without any action upon the part of Congress, secures to him the right to bring or receive from other States intoxicating liquors in original packages, and to sell them, while held by him in such packages, to all choosing to buy them. Thus, the mere silence of Congress upon the subject of trade among the States in intoxicating liquors is made to operate as a license to persons doing business in one State to jeopard the health, morals, and good order of another State, by flooding the latter with intoxicating liquors, against

But as, by the express terms of that instrument, the powers not delegated to the United States, nor prohibited to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people, and as, by the repeated adjudications of this court, the States have not surrendered, but have reserved the power to protect, by police regulations, the health, morals, and safety of their people, Congress may not prescribe any rule to govern commerce among the States which prevents the proper and reasonable exercise of this reserved power. Even if Congress, under the power to regulate commerce, had authority to declare what shall or what shall not be subjects of commerce among the States, that power would not fairly imply authority to compel a State to admit within her limits that which in fact is, or which, upon reasonable grounds, she may declare to be, destructive of the health, morals, and peace of her people. The purpose of committing to Congress the regulation of commerce was to insure equality of commercial facilities, by preventing one State from building up her own trade at the expense of sister States. But that purpose is not defeated when a State employs appropriate means to prevent the introduction into her limits of what she lawfully forbids her own people from making. It certainly was not meant to give citizens of other States greater rights in lowa than Iowa's own people have.

This was not only a severe exposure of the unfortunate predicament in which the court placed itself, but it was also a judicial prognostic of what did soon happen after the promulgation of the decision in the Bowman case. Soon after that decision was published the following special dispatch from Sioux City, Iowa, appeared in the Iowa State Reg-

Since the saloons were closed in this city over a year ago liquor has been plentifully supplied from Covington, Nebr., just across the river; and to supply this trade no less than twenty transportation companies were incorporated under the laws of the State, the object, as set forth in the articles of incorporation, being the transportation of goods and merchandise between Covington and Sioux City. Each of these companies have officers, and are doing a thriving business, delivering beer in any quantity from bottle to barrel, claiming interstate law protected them in the traffic.

That such things can be is not a credit to our country. such practices are common in respect of both foreign and domestic commerce. They are the only serious obstacles in the way of a perfect success in the State of Iowa in the suppression of the unlawful liquor traffic in that State. The people of that State have accomplished great results in caring for the virtue and sobriety and the purity of the homes of the population of the Commonwealth, and they protest against the doctrine of the decision in the Bowman case, which invites the citizens of other States to practice arts which tend to the undoing of the great work that has been accomplished. They are proud of what they have

I have, in the early part of my remarks, stated what good fruits the temperance movement has produced. With the aid which the bill now before the Senate, amended as I have suggested, would give if enacted into a law, the people of Iowa will present a case in the field of effort to suppress the evils of intemperance which will rejoice the hearts of the American people. And when the census of 1890 shall present to the people of all of the States the sad story which its criminal statistics will unfold, lowa and Kansas, and other States which have tested the efficacy of resolute police regulations for the suppression of the evils of the traffic in intoxicating liquors, will have their column of progress re-enforced by other Commonwealths.

I have told in part the story of Iowa's efforts in the reduction of crime. The chapter which she will write on that subject in the census of 1890 will entice others to follow her ways. All she asks of Congress is the aid that will come to her from enacting the pending bill, amended as I have suggested, into a law. She does not ask this because of any belief that the Constitution of the United States rightly construed would impose the necessity for such legislation, but because it seems to be the only practicable way now presented for summer that the contraction of the United States rightly construed would be only practicable way now presented for summer that the contraction of the United States rightly construed would be only practicable way now presented for summer that the contraction of the United States rightly construed would be only practicable way now presented for summer that the contraction of the United States rightly construed to the contraction of the United States rightly construed to the contraction of the United States rightly construed to the contraction of the United States rightly construed to the contraction of the United States rightly construed to the United States r only practicable way now presented for surmounting the judicial obstacles that have been interposed to the efficient enforcement of the reserve police powers of the States. It may not be done during the present Congress, but in the one which is to follow it may not be unreasonable to expect that the country will be convinced that-

The Republican party cordially sympathizes with all wise and well-directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality, and that a bill to effect the purpose of the one now before the Senate, so modified as to include the amendments I have suggested, will be enacted into a law.

OFFICERS OF MARINE CORPS.

Mr. McPHERSON. I ask that Order of Business 986, being the bill (S. 2049) to equalize the grades of officers of the Marine Corps, may be recommitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

KENTUCKY RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3921) to authorize the Kentucky Union Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Kentucky River, reported it with amendments.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask consent of the Senate to have the bill just reported from the Committee on Commerce considered now. It is authorizing the construction of a railroad bridge, and if it shall not be passed at this session of Congress heavy loss will be entailed upon this company because of the advanced condition of the work of that road. Mr. COKE. I must decline to yield for that purpose.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the legislative, etc., appropriation bill may be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the House of Representatives. The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. Allison, Mr. Dawes, and Mr. Cockrell were appointed.

AMENDMENTS TO GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. DAWES submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 13th instant approved and signed the following acts:

the 13th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 3824) to provide for an American register for the steamyacht Nautilus, of New York, N. Y.;

An act (S. 2318) to extend to the port of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., the privileges of inland transportation in bond;

An act (S. 3804) for the relief of the occupants of the town of Flagstaff, county of Yavapai, Territory of Arizona;

An act (S. 3869) to secure the maintenance of public order during the inauguration ceremonies of 1889, and for other purposes;

An act (S. 3830) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved February 18, 1888; ruary 18, 1888;

An act (S. 3765) for the relief of Harriet Young; An act (S. 1153) for the relief of Charles Wagemann;

An act (S. 2764) granting an increase of pension to James McGowan; An act (S. 3052) granting an increase of pension to George W. Durfee:

An act (S. 3135) granting an increase of pension to Eliza J. Alexander;

An act (S. 3628) granting an increase of pension to Emma Biddle; and

An act (S. 1320) granting a pension to Catherine M. Lee.

The message also announced that the bill (S. 3538) granting a pension to Mary Saeger, having been presented to the President on the 1st instant, and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which it originated within the ten days prescribed by the Constitution and the same of the constitution and the same of the stitution, had become a law without his signature.

COMMITTEE SERVICE

Mr. HARRIS. I am requested by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Vance] to ask that he be excused from further service upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and I make that request. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered if there be no objection.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Chair fill the vacancy occasioned by the excusing the Senator from North Carolina from service upon that committee.

The motion was agreed to by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair appoints as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of the Senator from North Carolina, the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Gray].

REPORT ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. BLAIR submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That 10,000 copies of the report of the Committee on Woman Suffrage on Senate resolution 11 be printed for the use of the Senate, 1,000 of which shall be for the use of the committee, and the same number of views of the minority when the same are submitted.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. Towles, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 1804) to authorize the Cheyenne Street Railroad Company to build its road on and across the Fort D. A. Russell military reserva-

A bill (S. 2714) for the relief of Thomas Lannigan;
A bill (S. 3116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wynne;
A bill (S. 3428) granting a pension to Mary C. Thompson;
A bill (S. 3640) to amend the laws relating to the selection and service of jurors in the supreme court of the District of Columbia;
A bill (S. 3663) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the

A bill (S. 3003) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between the city of Leavenworth, in the State of Kansas, and Platte County, in the State of Missouri;

A bill (S. 3786) to change the date for the commencement of the March terms of the district court for the northern district of Georgia;

A bill (H. R. 855) for the relief of Jacob Cramer; A bill (H. R. 1407) to authorize the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render final judgment upon the claim of the Old Settler or Western Cherokee Indians;

A bill (H. R. 3060) granting right of way to the Pima Land and Water Company across Fort Lowell military reservation, in Arizona, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 3112) for the relief of Phineas T. Richardson;

A bill (H. R. 6404) for the relief of Charles F. Swain, master of bark Philena; and

A bill (H. R. 11779) for the relief of J. Harry Adams.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to Congressional

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I listened yesterday evening with pleasure to the amiable and even-tempered statement of the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] with reference to the resolution now before the Senate and to the investigation recently made of matters in Washington County, Texas, and I would have been glad to have said nothing had the remarks of the Senator not been supplemented by the adoption of the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections and the publication of that document in the Congressional Record as part of his remarks

Under ordinary circumstances the Senators who compose the Committee on Privileges and Elections are gentlemen upon whose judgment and discretion and sense of justice I should be perfectly willing to rest any rights I or my constituents might have or claim, but in this matter of the investigation in Washington County I am not willing that the report of that committee, highly as I esteem the honorable states who compose it, honorable and conscientious gentlemen as I admit them to be, should go to the country unchalleged. That report, I say upon my responsibility as a man and a Senator, is unjust, is one-sided, is partisan, and is colored by partisan political feeling to the extent that the justice and impartiality which should characterize it as a report from a high committee of this Senate have been utterly lost sight of.

I say further, Mr. President, that if this committee had been prosecutors, instead of judges, if the proceeding had been a political prosecution and not a judicial hearing, all the testimony, every incident, every circumstance, every condition inculpatory could not have been more thoroughly congregated and summed up and marshaled than they have been in this report, while all the testimony exculpatory, which modifies, which explains, which extenuates, or which justifies, has been with equal assiduity thoroughly excluded from it. And yet this is the report of an honorable committee of the Senate upon a proceeding presumed to have been judicial in its character.

As I remarked awhile ago, there is no claim of right that I would not be willing to submit to these same gentlemen on the judicial bench in a matter removed from politics. I have that confidence in their learning, their ability, their honor, and their integrity; but let the Senate remember, and let the country remember, when reading this report, that this is a political report.

This proceeding for the investigation of disturbances in Washington County, Texas, was commenced upon the memorial of three persons—Stephen A. Hackworth, James L. Moore, and Carl Schutze—who alleged that they were citizens of that county, and, among other things, that they were driven from their homes and exiled because of being Republicans. The conclusions of the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections were based substantially and mainly upon the testimony of these three persons. If you will strike out from this record the testimony of Stephen Hackworth, of James L. Moore, and of Carl Schutze. you fatally wound the case made on the part of the committee against the people of Washington County, Texas.

Let anybody read this report, let them examine it from beginning to end, and if they can find any observation of the committee upon it which speaks disparagingly or which mentions a doubt as to the credibility of the testimony of either one of these three persons, he will find something that I have overlooked. Yet I have here in this volume the testimony of 27 witnesses which was lying before that committee when this report was made, all or nearly all of whom testify that Hackworth and Schutze are men of infamous character and unworthy of credit, and as to Moore, the third one, some of them say that he had been a good man, but they generally concur in the opinion that he had become as bad as Schutze and Hackworth.

These are the memorialists who bring this case here. Their memorial is printed in this testimony, and I invoke the attention of Senators to the testimony and ask them to read it and understand it. No man can read it without rising from its perusal convinced that these three persons, who indict as they do the State of Texas and Washington County, are men who ought not to have been noticed in the Senate of the United States

In saying that I do not pretend to aver that there have not been violations of law in Washington County. I admit it. There have been violations of law there; that is to say, in 1886. I do not condone them. I do not apologize for them. I condemn them as strongly as any gentleman on this floor can do. No man can feel greater regret than I do that they should have occurred. But I do not regret these violations of law nor condemn them more strongly than do the people of Washington County and the State of Texas, nor does anybody else here; and the effort in this report to fasten responsibility for these crimes upon that people I do say is not sustained by the testimony, except by that of the infamous trio who bring this memorial here and some of their vilest

This report of the committee has been laid before the country in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of this morning. This will necessitate my placing through the same medium before the country the exculpatory testimony, and I propose to do it. I shall show by the testimony in this volume the bad character and want of credibility of the memo-

They allege that they are exiles from home, the victims of persecution because of their Republicanism. I shall prove the falsehood of the allegation, and that they left voluntarily, and if they were driven away that they left a country where they were regarded as moral lepers, unfit for decent association, and they left in order to avoid the effect of their own record and character, although they were as safe in Washington County from personal violence as any other men in it.

I shall prove by testimony in this volume that Washington County is a county which casts some 5,500 or 5,600 votes; that about a third of the population is German; that less than a third is white American, and the balance negroes; and that this county of Washington is a reliably Republican county upon State and National issues. It has voted for every Republican President since the war up to this time by a good round majority. It has voted for every Republican candidate for governor by a decided majority. It has voted for every Republican candidate for Congress by a good majority.

Notwithstanding this, I shall show from this record that these memorialists, Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore, having made themselves leaders of the negroes and of the Republicans generally, obtained pos session of the offices directly after the war and held them until 1884, and plundered the tax-payers through the forms of law to such an extent that the Republicans and Democrats all joined in a People's ticket without reference to politics, without reference to party, and expelled them from office and placed honest men in power, some of them Democrats and some Republicans. All the time they were doing this, in 1884, and 1886, as in 1888, these same Republicans, black and white, German and native American, voted the Republican State and National ticket, giving large majorities to both in Washington County. The ecord shows this, and the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections simply fails to show it or mention it.

I shall prove by the testimony in this record, which I propose to lay before the Senate, that these men, Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore, the memorialists, have made false statements in their memorials, to which they have sworn, in every material allegation made.

I shall show that they are men without character, without property, without anchorage in that community; that when they were expelled from office—Hackworth, covered all over with indictments for all sorts of official malfeasance-deprived of that source of livelihood they had to leave there on account of the baseness of their characters and go elsewhere in order to make a living; and that they went because of that compulsion, and not because of any danger to them in remaining in Washington County, or because they were Republicans.

Mr. President, I invite the perusal of this testimony by Senators.

They can come to but one conclusion from it, and that is that these memorialists, leading the vice and ignorance of that county, were making war upon everything that was decent, everything that was honest, everything that was law-abiding; that they were making war upon the property interests of the county; and that the people were com-the property interests of the county; and that the people were compelled and driven, regardless of party, into the formation of the non-partisan People's ticket in order to get rid of them.

I shall show by the testimony I will produce from this volume that the disturbances at the ballot-boxes, three of them, I believe, Flewellen, Lott's Store, and Graball, were committed by men for whom the results of Washington County can not be justly held responsible, men people of Washington County can not be justly held responsible, men whom every effort, so far as this testimony shows, has been made to discover, but who have not been discovered, men who raided the ballot-box in the night, and whom public sentiment in Washington County thoroughly condemned.

I ask the close attention of the Senate to this evidence. It does not appear in the report submitted by the honorable Senator from New York as the organ of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but it is here; and when this testimony comes to be considered, I make the assertion that the witnesses whose testimony I will lay before the Senate are the men of property, the men of character, the men of intelligence, the men of influence in Washington County, while the great majority of those on the other side will be found of the opposite character. In any country in the world when the witnesses on both sides could be known the testimony which I will lay before the Senate would utterly overwhelm the testimony relied upon by the report of the honorable Committee on Privileges and Elections.

I call the attention of the Senate to another fact, which is that while a member of Congress was voted for in 1886 in the election in which the disturbances occurred there was no contention over the vote cast for that official. The whole trouble arose out of the contention over county officers. The fact that a member of Congress was voted for, I think it was admitted by the Senator from New York yesterday tainly it is shown without any conflict in testimony-excited no interest whatever in the election. Technically because a member of Congress was voted for in this election it may be said that there was Federal jurisdiction over the subject, not, however, in the Senate but in the House, which judges of the elections, qualifications, and returns of its members. There is no jurisdiction over the subject either in the House or in the Senate, because the motive which prompted the disturbances of the ballot in Washington County nobody has ever for a moment attributed to any interest felt in the election for a member of Congress, and no complaint, no contest, no claim has ever been made with or against the member of Congress thus elected. The disturbance investigated was local in Washington, purely domestic, having mr reference to anything outside of Washington County.

Mr. President, I do not propose to discuss the constitutional question. It is worse than useless to do that here. I simply propose to lay before the Senate testimony (which the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections does not pleas before the committee on Privileges and Elections does not pleas before the committee. on Privileges and Elections does not place before the country as it does other testimony) exculpatory of the people of Washington County; and before commencing that I will send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read the counter-memorial of citizens of Washington County.

It is found on page 298 of the testimony taken by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Berry in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

At a meeting of citizens of Washington County, Texas, held in the city of Brenham on the 8th day of February, 1857, which meeting was composed of both Republicans and Democrats, the following memorial to your honorable bodies touching the petition of S. A. Hackworth, J. L. Moore, and Carl Schutze, which has lately been referred to the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections for investigation, was unanimously adopted.

Inasmuch as the Senate has assumed jurisdiction to inquire into the administration of the local affairs of Washington County, Texas, we respectfully request that the committee having charge of said matter be sent to this county, where a full investigation can be had by an examination of all the winesses and an inspection of the county records.

The civil authorities of Washington County and its citizens generally are charged with the commission of grave offenses against the penal laws, including murder, election frauds, and other crimes.

Confident that a fair investigation will result in a triumphant vindication of the good name of this county and its civil authorities, and feeling assured that your honorable bodies will not be made the instruments of fastening upon innocent parties the foul aspersions brought against them by disappointed and desperate political adventurers, without a fair opportunity to be heard in their just defense, we submit the following counter-memorial, which we pray may be considered in connection with that of said Hackworth, Moore, and Schutze.

Upon analysis the petition of said parties will be found to consist or the most part of vague general charges against parties neither named nor identified, and without specification of times, places, or circumstances, such as to fairly entitle it to consideration at the hands of an intelligent body, or to require the parties supposed to be assailed to answer; but your memorialists carnestly hope and believe that more will not be required of them tha

It is not true that there was any conspiracy to hang the negroes, usurp the offices, or to banish citizens from the county.

The remainder of the petition is devoted to, first, alleged personal grievances of the petitioners themselves; s cond, to alleged offenses against other persons en account of their political sentiments and affiliations; third, to alleged offenses in connection with the election of November 2, 1886; and fourth, to the alleged refusal of the local civil authorities to protect the lives and property of petitioners and others, and their alleged complicity in the crimes and offenses of their party associates. The purpose of this memorial will be to meet these issues.

The matters of personal grievance are constant.

these issues.

The matters of personal grievances complained of by said petitioners are, many of them, untrue, and others are grossly exaggerated, and so far as they have any foundation in fact are the direct and legitimate result of the odium in which the parties are held, not because of their political sentiments, but because of their own personal misconduct as individuals.

It is not true that the petitioners are now refugees from their homes on account of political persecutions, as alleged by them.

There has been for a long time a strong feeling on the part of the good and law-abiding citizens of Washington County against the petitioners on account of their corrupt political methods, their dishonest administration of the affairs of the county, and their incendiary appeals to race prejudice in order to array the colored voters against the white.

For many years the tax-payers of this county have been plundered by these men and others who have been elected to office by the vote of ignorant colored men.

men and others who have been elected to office by the voice of agrorance men.

The petitioner, S. A. Hackworth, was for several years a justice of the peace in said county, and presiding member of the police court, which had the management of the county affairs. This court made improvident and extortionate contracts for the erection of bridges and other works with one M. M. Hackworth, who was the father of said S. A. Hackworth, and perpetrated many other wrongs upon the tax-payers in the illegal and extravagant use and conversion of funds belonging to the county. Reference is made to the veport of the grand jury at the February term, 1874, of the district court of Washington County, which is hereto attached and made a part of this memorial (A) to show that the father of Hack worth profited from his son's official position. Indictments were frequently returned against Hackworth, both in the State and Federal courts, but he has always escaped conviction. Certified copies of the records from the courts are attached, which show that these indictments were generally quashed or dismissed (B).

attached, which show that these indictments were generally quashed or dismissed (B).

R. A. Harvin and C. C. Leib, who were both elected, the one as tax-collector and the other as treasurer, on the Republican ticket by the efforts of the petitioners, made default in large sums of money. Both were indicted; the indictments against Harvin were quashed, but Leib was convicted after a change of venue, and is now serving a five years' term in the penitentiary.

Hackworth, by vexatious and petty prosecutions, extortion in fees, in taking money to suppress prosecutions, and in many other ways while justice of the peace; Schutze, by corrupt administration of his office, and oppressive use thereof in prosecutions of petty offenses to extort fees; and Moore, by his arbitrary manner and bitter canvasses, rendered themselves odious and obnoxious personally to many people.

The good people of Washington County, growing tired of the continuous mismanagement of public affairs, united irrespective of parties, and at the election of 1894 the Republicans were defeated for the county offices by the combined vote of Republicans and Democrats voting a People's ticket. Many colored men voted the People's ticket. Hackworth, Moore, and Schutze conducted a most bitter and outrageous canvass for the county offices in 1886; while Schutze alone was a candidate, Moore and Hackworth, as it is charged, were promised positions as deputies. Schutze made vile and infamous attacks on good citizens through his newspaper, and Hackworth, Moore, and other leaders sought to array the negroes against the whites by appealing to caste prejudice and denouncing the white men supporting the People's ticket for denying them social equality. Appeals were made with the bitterness of despair.

Moore had more than ten years previously failed in business as a merchant, at which time he was a Democrat; he entered the Republican party for office, was employed as deputy county clerk, was elected district clerk in 1876, and was sheriff in 1882 and 1883. In 1884 he was defeated, and when the fall of 1886 came on he was without employment, destitute of means, and badly in debt. He had made an improvident purchase of a homestead, and was utterly unable to pay a balance of purchase-money thereon.

It is not true as alleged by him, that he "owned real and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $6,000; was comfortably situated, and earning a comfortable living for his family."

He sold his homestead for its full value, and removed to Los Angeles, Cal. Hackworth has been a political agitator and leader of the negroes ever since about 1869; not for their elevation and good, but for his own party dared not put him up again; he has since been an office broker rather than a dealer in real estate. He is now and always has been insolvent. It is not true that he "owned real and personal property in said city of Brenham to the value of $4,000; was comfortably situated, the income from his business securing an assured support for himself and family." The affidavit of the widow of his brother, John M. Hack worth (C), who was postmaster at Brenham, and after several weeks of imprisonment was released after being made to disgorge.

He was elected county attorney of Washington County on the Republican ticket, and was a candidate for re-election, but had become so offensive that he was defeated by his Democratic opponent in 1830.

He became so obnoxious to the colored citizens of the county for his corrupt and oppressive use of his office that his Democratic opponent defeated him in precincts where a large majority of the voters were colored. He is insolvent and worthless. His newspaper, the Staats Zeitung, had a precarious existence, and was mortgaged for all that it was worth. His habits are low and dissolute. He is a moral leper. It may be true that he left Brenham as alleged by him, but it is denied that he was compelled to leave, and that there was any attack upon him as he was leaving. He was in Brenham long after the election, and on several occasions used insulting language against good citizens who had opposed him during the campaign. He was in Brenham on the day his petition to Congress was published here.

Certificates of the tax-collector of Washington County, attached hereto, show how these parties appeared on the tax-rolls. (D, E, F.)

It will thus be seen that these men were personally odious and offensive, and if they received the indignities which they allege they received, which is denied, it was due to their personal characters, and not to the fact that they were Republicans.

Republicans.

It is not true, as stated or implied in said petition, that the hanging of the parties named therein was done on account of the political affiliation of said parties or "to prevent Republicans from securing their political rights and privileges in said county."

At Flewellen's Store, an election precinct in the Washington justices' precinct, on the night of the election, as the count of the vote was progressing, W. D. Bolton, a white man, about twenty-eight years of age, married, son of the People's candidate for county commissioner in that precinct, was shot down and killed by a colored man named Polk Hill as he was entering the door of the room. A certified copy of the evidence taken at the coroner's inquest, which is attached hereto (G), will show that Bolton was not disguised, as charged, and while one witness says he had a pistol in his hand others stated that he was unarmed and came in a quiet manner. No one accompanied Bolton; he lived near by. Every one fled from the scene of murder except one person, who, after Bolton expired (which was almost immediately), went for assistance. At the inquest the next day the ballots were noticed lying scattered on the floor.

The negroes, Alfred Jones, Shad Felder, and Stewart Jones, and five others, who were present with arms, were arrested and brought to Brenham and put in jail. Polk Hill, who did the shooting, escaped, but was afterward arrested. There was very great excitement throughout the county over the killing of Bolton, and especially in the Washington precinct, where he lived. It was ascertained that Alfred Jones and Shad Felder had, upon the advice of two white Republicans, gone through the neighborhood on the day of the election and raised an armed squad of negroes to guard the ballot-box, and that Stewart Jones was about to shoot at the other white men present, who were officers of the election, but was prevented.

The commissioners' court of Washington County fearing, on account of the excited condition of affairs arising from the killing jail.

After the arrest of the said Polk Hill and his incarceration in the Milam Counts jail, it was thought by the authorities that it would be safe to bring those in the said Harris County jail back. But soon after they were brought back Alfred Jones, Shad Felder, and Stewart Jones were taken from jail by a mob and hung. It is learned that the jailer, J. F. Estis, was induced to open the outer door, by a ruse (see his affidavit attached hereto, H). He was shoved behind the door, something thrown over his head, and gnarded by two men. He recognized no one; but they were disguised, as mobs usually are.

That the prisoners were voluntarily surrendered is false. There is no kuklux or other secret organization for the perpetration of political or other outrages in Washington County, or in the State of Texas, so far as we know or believe.

lieve.

Bolton was alone, unarmed, and not disguised at the time he was killed. The killing was an atrocious murder, committed by an ignorant and brutal negro, who if not instigated was made the instrument by white men who were supporting the Republican ticket and were professed Republicans.

That a mob should have hung all the negroes who were present at the polls armed under the circumstances could not have been a great matter of surprise in any State in the Union. That the three negroes were hung to suppress their testimony, as charged, is not true; for the testimony taken at the inquest over Bolton shows that the only witness who testified that Bolton was armed was spared by the mob, although a prisoner in the jail at the time the others were taken out. All of these negroes had been offered bail by the civil authorities. They were told that their cases were ballable, and asked to procure it; but it is said that on the advice of their counsel they refused it.

III.

III.

It is not true as stated in said petition that at the election held November 2, 1886, in Washington County, "a perfect reign of terror existed in said county, caused by armed bands of white ruffians who, by violence and by the destruction of ballot-boxes at Graball, Flewellen's, and Lott's Store election precincts, prevented the free and fair expression of suffrage by the citizens of said county, whereby men in whose interest these crimes were committed were declared elected who were not in fact elected, and by the most shameless and unblushing frauds the election was made a farce."

The election held in this county on November 2, 1886, was peaceable and quiet. There were two tickets in the field for county offices, the Republican and the People's ticket, the latter being composed of and supported by both Republicans and Democrats. It was an issue of good citizens of both parties on the one hand, who wanted an honest administration of county affairs, and political adventurers on the other, who were making strenuous efforts to recover the control of the county, which they had lost two years before.

Interest in the race centered on the office of county judge, the most important office in the county. Lafayette Kirk was the People's candidate, and Carl Schutze, one of the petitioners, was the Republican candidate. Schutze was unpopular with the negroes, but great efforts were made on the part of Moore and Hackworth and other leaders to draw the color line for the negro support, and to attract as great a German vote for Schutze as possible on account of his nationality.

It is denied, however, that the return of the votes cast at all of these precincts would have changed the result as to a single office. Indeed, such was the vote at Grabail that it may be fairly presumed that the seizure of the box there was done in the interest of Schutze. He was defeated at that box by his Democratic opponent, A. G. Haynes, for county attorney, in 1880. Judge Kirk, who was elected county judge in 1884, received 130 votes ou edived a majority of the voice cast thereat, and at a precinct where Schutze was most unpopular among the colored voters.

IV.

It is denied that petitioners made application to the local civil authorities to protect their lives and property or the lives and property of others; and that there was any complicity whatever on the part of the local authorities in the alleged crimes and offenses of their party associates.

There will be found attached hereto the certificate of Hon. J. B. McFarland (I), indge of the twenty-first judicial district, composed of the counties of Washington, Lee, and Burleson, and whose residence is at Brenham, that no application was made to him beginer of the petitioners for protection. Judge McFarland, etc., and because the county of the county of the washington, Lee, and Burleson, and whose residence is at Brenham, that no application was made to him beginer of the petitioners for protection. Judge McFarland, etc., and the protection of the county of the washington precinet on the occasion of an alarm a few days after the election, on application to the governor of this State, by a telegram sent in good faith by Mr. J. H. Roberts, a conservative and prudent edition of that precinet. No such acts as are charged were committed by said State The election precinets—Graball, Lott's Store, and Flewellen's Store—are from 15 to 20 miles from the county seat at Brenham, and are situated in Washington, usatice precinct, the old town of Washington, on the Brazos River, giving name to the precinet. Navasota is across the river, in Grimes County, some 6 or 8 miles, and is on the Central Ratiroad. It is a river ceutry, and has a large negro population; the negroes largely outnumber the whites. During the excitement following the killing of Bolton many rumors were current in the committee company being ordered from Navasota, as we believe.

It is further denied that the citizens of the county is any manner terrorized had the importance of which may only occur pending examination of wit-

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, against the memorial of Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore I present this counter-memorial, signed by the very best citizens of Washington County of all political parties, denying the material allegations of the memorial, showing, wherein the people of Washington County are inculpated by the averments of the memorialists, that it is false, showing that the people of Washington County bore the inflictions which these memorialists placed upon them for a long time and most patiently until relief came to them through the medium of the ballot.

This counter-memorial presents a full, thorough, and complete answer to every material allegation of the memorial presented here, and the only question is as to which is true, the memorial signed by Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore, or the counter-memorial signed and the truth of it vouched for by about two hundred of the best citizens of Washington County, irrespective of party.

Now I propose to submit to the Senate and to the country the testimony in support of this counter-memorial. That in support of the original memorial has already been submitted by the Committee on Privileges and Elections. That committee failed absolutely to place before the Senate and the country in their report the exculpatory testimony upon which these good citizens of Washington County rely for the vindication of the good name of the county.

I request the Secretary to read the testimony of William Cawse, on page 302.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM CAWSE.

William Cawse, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

What is your age?

I am forty-five years of age. What is your business? I am a farmer. Where do you reside?

Q. What is your business?
A. I am a farmer.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. In Washington County, Texas.
Q. Were you one of the officers of election in November, 1886?
A. Yes, sir, last November.
Q. Were you summoned as a witness here?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By which side?
A. By the Hackworth side, I suppose; the Republican side.
Mr. Teller. There can not be any side about it. He is a witness on one side as much as the other.
Q. What office did you hold on the day of the election?
A. I was one of the clerks of the election,
Q. At what box?
A. At Flewellen box.
Q. Were you there all day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How was the election, quiet?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any disturbance?
A. No, sir; not during the day.
Q. I mean during the day.
A. No, sir; there was none.
Q. What did you have to do with the counting of the votes?
A. I was marking and tallying the votes on the tally-sheet.
Q. What time did you begin to count them?
A. At about a quarter or twenty minutes after 6.
Q. How long did you continue tallying?
A. Until half past II.
Q. State what occurred then.
A. Well, everything was quiet up to half past II, when there came a knock at the door, and Mr. Rogers, who was lying on the bed, called out, "Come in," and the door opened. I do not know whether it was opened from the inside or the outside: I did not pay much attention to that, and some one stepped to the door and I still had my eyes on the tally-sheet and didn't pay any attention to the knock at first.
Q. In what direction were you facing?
A. I was fronting the door where the knock came,
Q. That is, you could look towards it without turning around?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Proceed in your statement.
A. In the course of a few seconds, a minute, perhaps, a gun fired, which made every one in the room scatter. I started to run out of the door at my back, which I was sitting close to, and as I got to the door I saw the barrel of a gun pointed in and I immediately turned back again.

By Mr. TELLER:

Q. You ran out of the back door?
A. The door at my back.
Q. Out of the door where these men came in?
A. No, sir. Every one had left the room then except Mr. Rogers, who was lying on the bed and the freedmen who were under the bed, and as quick as I could I got out of the other door. I did not see the man lying on the floor until I turned to go out. I did not see Mr. Bolton fall, or anything of that kind. From there I went home. I live about 300 yards from there.

By Mr. Eustis:

Dy Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. You turned back and went out of the other door?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the man who was killed?

A. Yes, sir; I saw him lying on the floor after I had started to run. I did not ee him fall.

see him fall.

Q. What part of the room was he in when you saw him when he was killed?

A. His head was lying along the threshhold of the door with his feet inside.

He looked like he might have made a step or two inside of the door when he

He looked like he might have made a step or two inside of the door when he was shot down.

Q. Had you seen him before?
The WITNESS. Do you mean that evening?
Mr. EUSTIS. Yes.
A. No, sir. I just saw a man enter the door. I do not know whether it was the man who was shot or not. I did not see him fall, but I suppose it was the same man.

same man.
Q. Did you know Bolton?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You say you had not seen him before?
A. Not until he opened the door; not that evening.
Q. How long was it between the time when he opened the door and the time when he was shot?
A. I don't suppose it was a minute; it could not have been, it was done so quick after the door opened.
Q. Do you know whether he was masked?
A. I do not; I didn't see any mask. He had on one of those water-proof coats.

A. I do not; I dual to coats.

Q. Did you see his face?

A. I do not remember seeing his face that night at all. I didn't pay any attention to it. We were so badly scared that we were for getting out of the room as quick as we could. I was expecting to get a shot every moment after I saw that muzzle of the gun stuck in the door. I never paid any attention to anybody and never went back there until the next morning.

Q. Were you in that room from the time you commenced counting until the shooting occurred?

A. No, sir; I didn't see any armed men, masked men, come into that room?
A. No, sir; I didn't see any arms or any masks.
Q. Did you see any men who were masked and in disguise come into that room?

A. No more than I saw the water-proof overcoat; that is all I saw about it.
Q. Did you hear anybody order anybody else to throw up their hands?
A. No, sir, I did not hear any one speak.
Q. You did not see any arms or pistols?
A. No, sir.
Q. As you ran out, did you see anybody with a gun in his hand?
A. I ran out of the other door, and I did not see the man who was behind the gun, and it was dark outside; the moon had been gone down about half an hour. I just saw the barrel of the gun.

Mr. COKE. Now, I ask the Secretary to turn to page 310 and read the testimony of Robert Wright.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF ROBERT WRIGHT.

Robert Wright, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:
Q. What is your name?
A. Robert Wright.
Q. How old are you?
A. I am a little over twenty-two years of age.
Q. What is your business?
A. I have been a farmer.
Q. Where do you live?
A. I live in Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. Ever since I was born, mostly.
Q. At what poll do you vote?
A. I voted at Flewellen polling place the last election.
Q. Did you hold any office at this last election?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What office?
A. I was one of the clerks, I believe, or a judge. I numbered the tickets and put them in the box, and called the names off the tickets. I suppose I was a clerk.
By Mr. Teller:

By Mr. TELLER:

Q. Well, you were a clerk, were you not? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. How was that election on the 2d of November, 1886; quiet and orderly?

A. Yes, sir; it was quiet up to that night; very quiet.

Q. What time did you begin counting the votes?

A. The polls closed at 6 o'clock, and just as soon as we could move to the house in the yard we commenced; it took us to move there and get a light about fifteen minutes.

Q. How many votes did you count?

A. About 60 or 65.

Q. Was there much scratching done there?

A. Yes, sir; there was a right smart of scratching for some of the candidates.

Q. Do you know about how the vote stood as regards Mr. Schutze and Judge Kirk?

A. I think between Mr. Schutz and Judge Victoria.

Kirk?
A. I think between Mr. Schutz and Judge Kirk it was about even. I heard them say that just before the trouble commenced that it was about even.
Q. You mean of these 65 votes?
A. There was about 60 or 65 counted, somewhere along there; I do not know exactly.

Q. You mean that they were about even on those 60 or 65 votes?

Q. You mean that they were about even on those 60 or 65 votes?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. State what occurred about half past 11 o'clock with reference to the killing of Bolton. Where were you sitting in the room, or were you sitting in the room at the time?

A. Yes, sir, I was sitting in the room at the time.
Q. Did you hear a knocking?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At what time was that?
A. That was at the back door, which was used more for friends than the front of the house. There is always more passing in there all the time, in at that back door, than at the front door. There is a gate and a path coming up to the side of that door where we generally lead up and hitch our horses, and that was used more for friends than the other door was.
Q. Were you looking towards the back door?
A. No, sir.
Q. Which way were you looking or facing?
A. I was facing the middle door of the adjoining room.
Q. You were facing the middle door?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You could see the front door also?
A. I could if I had turned to look, but I could not see it the way I was looking. By just turning my eyes I could have seen the front door without turning my head.
Q. Now state what occurred, of your own knowledge, at the time this knocking commenced and afterwards.
A. Well, I heard a knock, and Mr. Rogers, the gentleman who lives there, the proprietor of the house, he said, "Come in," and I heard somebody get up, and I think he opened the door, when you heard the knocking?

and I think he opened the door, and just as the door was opened the shot was fired.

Q. Did you look towards the door when you heard the knocking?

A. No, sir; I never looked towards the door when the knock came.

Q. Did you look towards the door when you heard some one come in?

A. No, sir; I never looked until the gun went off, or the shot was fired.

Q. What did you see then?

A. I got up then and looked, and I saw a man lying there.

Q. Did you recognize who it was?

A. I did not at that time.

Q. Did you see any mask on his face?

A. No, sir.

Q. Any disguise on his face?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any arms in his hands or near him?

A. No, sir; I didn't see anything near him at all, and no arms at all.

Q. Were you there from the time they commenced counting the vote until this killing occurred?

A. Except one time I went out.

this killing occurred?

A. Except one time I went out.
Q. How long were you away?
A. About three or four minutes, I reckon.
Q. While you were there did you hear anything, or during these minutes you were away did you hear anything, of any armed men coming in there and ordering the people in that room to throw up their hands?

A. No, sir.
Q. You saw no men, disguised or not, come in there with pistols in their hands and order these officers of the election to throw up their hands?

A. No, sir.

A. No, sir.
Q. Did you see anybody with arms there at all in that room?
A. I seen shotguns there, and I seen some freedmen there that evening with guns, and I seen guns on the front gallery; that was the time when I went out there.

there.
Q. How many guns did you see there?
A. There were three, I believe; yes, three guns.
Q. Do you know who they belonged to?
A. No, sir; I had seen parties with them there, but I didn't know whether they belonged to them.
Q. Who did you see with a gun?
A. I saw Polk Hill with one, and Handy Hays with one, and the other one I have forgotten now, but I think it was John Glass who had the other one.
Q. Were they colored men?
A. Yes, sir; all colored men.
Q. What time did you see those arms there?
A. It was about sundown.
Q. Did you see them afterwards?
A. That was when I first saw them, at sundown; I saw those men with them.

A. At the time I went out on the gallery.
Q. When did you see them afterwards?
A. At the time I went out on the gallery.
Q. What time was that?
A. About 8 or 9 o'clock.

By Mr. TELLER

Who was the other man that you saw besides Polk Hill and Handy

Hays?

A. I think it was John Glass, but I am not certain whether it was him or not.

By Mr. Eusris:

What did you do as soon as you heard this firing?
I jumped up and looked around, and then I went out of the door.
You looked around where?
I looked around the room. I looked towards the back door.

A. I looked around the room. I looked towards the back door.
Q. Do you know who was there at the time of the shooting?
The WITNESS. Do you mean who was in the house?
Mr. EUSTIS. Yes; in the room.
A. The officers of the election were in the room, and I think Shad Felder, Felix Kenlow, and Handy Hays; I think they were in the house, besides Mr. Rogers, who was there, too, lying on the bed.
Q. Did you see any more persons in the room at the time Bolton was killed than you had just previously?
A. No, sir.
Q. You did not?
A. No, sir.
Q. When did you first hear that the man who was killed was Bolton?
A. When I went out I thought it was him. I stepped over him to go out and thought it was him, but was not certain, because he was shot in the face, and there was blood all over his face, and a person couldn't exactly tell whether it was him or not.

was him or not.

Q. Were you keeping a tally-sheet?
A. No, sir. I was calling off the names off the tickets,
Q. Do you know what became of the ballots?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know what became of the ballot-box?
A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what became of the tally-sheet? A. No, sir.

Mr. COKE. I ask that the Secretary now turn to page 317, the testimony of John A. Vernon; and I will call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the witnesses whose testimony has been just read expressly negative the ideas claimed in the report to be true that Bolton, who was killed at the Flewellen box, was armed or disguised. The people of Washington County in their memorial say that he was not armed; that he was not disguised; that he went in to see how the votes were being counted and what the result was, as any other citizen would, and that when he went in he was shot down. The testimony of these witnesses sustains the allegations of the counter-memorial. I now ask that the testimony of John A. Vernon be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF JOHN A. VERNON.

John A. Vernon, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:

John A. Vernon, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:
Q. What is your full name?
A. John Alexander Vernon.
Q. How old are you?
A. I am fifty-seven years old.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a farmer.
Q. Do you hold any position?
A. Yes, sir; I am a magistrate and justice of the peace.
Q. In what county in Texas?
A. Washington County.
Q. How long have you lived in Washington County, Texas?
A. Fifty-two years.
Q. Did you hold an inquest upon the body of Bolton?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you hold it?
A. It was on the 3d of November.
Q. At what time did you begin it?
A. In the morning.
Q. Where did you hold it?
A. At Flewellen's store; at his dwelling, rather.
Q. Where was the body?
A. It was in the dwelling.
Q. It was in the room where the killing was done?
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. Yes, sir; it was in the room where the killing was done.
A. There were quite a number.
A. There were quite a number.
A. State to the committee what was the condition of the body; was there any mask on his face?
A. No, sir; none whatever.
A. Was there any disguise of any kind?
A. Nothing, sir. He had on one of these old yellow slickers that we wear there in the South.

Mr. COKE. I ask that the Secretary go now to page 318, the proceedings of the corporar's inquest in record to the killing of W. D. Bolton.

Mr. COKE. I ask that the Secretary go now to page 318, the proceedings of the coroner's inquest in regard to the killing of W. D. Bolton, The Secretary read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CORONER'S INQUEST IN REGARD TO THE KILLING OF W. D. BOLTON.

COUNTY OF WASHINGTON, State of Texas:

County of Washington, Slate of Texas:

An inquest taken the 3d day of November. A. D.1886, at R. T. Flewellen's residence, in said county of Washington, before J. A. Vernon, justice of peace of said county, upon the view of the dead body of W. D. Bolton, by William Ford, J. T. Lott, M. A. McCalip, S. H. Hatfield, John Alexander, S. T. Aubrey, good and lawful jurors of said county, who, being in due form sworn, say that the said W. D. Bolton came to his death at about 11 o'clock p.m. by a shotgun wound in the hands of Poke Hill, and further believe that Shad Felder, William Davis, John Glass, FelixlKenlow, Stewart Jones, and Ande Hays, and Stephen Jackson were accessories to the killing of deceased; and further believe that deceased came to his death by the advice of Ed. Lockett.

No. 1.-Testimony of William Davis (duly sworn).

No. 1.—Testimony of William Davis (duly sworn).

I, William Davis, was sitting near the house of R. T. Flewellen, by a tree, and heard two reports of a shotgun and a noise in the house. Going up to the house, I saw Peke Hill coming out of the door of said house, saying: "I have killed two men, and my gun is empty; Davis, give me your gun." There was here five men with shotguns, with the names of John Glass, Felix Kenlow, Poke Hill, Stewart Jones, Ande Hays, all colored men. Stephen Jackson told us, "if we want a gun to go and get mine." This happened on the 2d day of November, 1886.

WM. (his x mark) DAVIS.

No. 2.—Testimony of Alfred Jones (sworn).

Mr. Ed. Lockett told me, "It is our duty to guard this box at R. T. Fiewellen's place," and through the advice of Mr. Ed Lockett, John Glass, Ande Hays, Felix Kenlow, Poke Hill, and William Davis came here with shotguns. I did not hear of any threats to intimidate any persons on the ground on the 2d day of November, 1886.

ALFRED (his x mark) JONES.

No. 3.—Testimony of A. H. Rogers (duly sworn).

The first I know of it was about 11 o'clock p. m., while I was lying on my bed in the room where the election was held. To my best recollection I saw Poke Hill, Ande Hays, and Felix Kenlow and Stewart Jones in the said room, but I did not see any guns in the room. I saw Poke Hill going out several times prior to the shooting, but never after the shooting, on the 2d day of November, 1886.

No. 4.—Testimony of John Glass (duly sworn).

I saw William Davis, Felix Kenlow, Poke Hill, Stewart Jones, Ande Hays with shotguns on the place of R. T. Flewellen's. The report of the shotgun woke me up, and I did not see anybody after the Shooting, which happened about 11 o'clock p. m. on the 2d day of November, 1886.

JOHN (his x mark) GLASS.

No. 5.- Testimony of Ande Hays (duly sworn).

No. 5.—Testimony of Ande Hays (duly sworn).

I was in the room where the election was held, my gun was sitting on the gallery of the house; when the door south in room opened deceased, after being invited to come in, was shot directly after Poke Hill went out of the north door, his gun being out on the gallery; deceased came in quietly and said nothing about the box and was not disguised. The shooting took place on the 2d day of November, 18%. There was in the room Shad Felder, Felix Kenlow, Poke Hill, and Stewart Jones; I believe that Poke Hill is the man who done the shooting. Gunshet was fired in the north door; deceased killed in the south door. I am satisfied that Poke Hill was the man, as he was standing in the door.

ANDE (his x mark) HAYS.

No. 6.- Testimony of Dick Robertson (duly sworn).

No. 6.—Testimony of Dick Robertson (awy sworn).

I was the presiding officer of the ballot-box on the R. T. Flewellen place on the 2d day of November, 1886. We were counting the votes when the shooting took place. Some one knocked on the door, and after being asked to come in deceased was let in. The same time the door opened, Poke Hill, who was sitting in the room, got up and went to the opposite door, and a shotgun was fired by a gingercake-colored person. I feel satisfied that a darkey of the description of Poke Hill did the shooting, unless somebody was standing behind the door; he had fully time to pick up a shotgun. The election was going on quietly and I deemed it not necessary to have any guards whatever on the ground. At the time of the shooting there were in the room present Lewis Pennington, Shad Felder, Tom Jones, Felix Kenlow, and Ande Hays.

J. R. ROBERTSON.

J. R. ROBERTSON.

No. 7.-Testimony of William Cawse.

I was one of the clerks of election held on the place of R. T. Flewellen. There was in the room at the time of the shooting Felix Kenlow, Ande Hays, Lewis Pennington, Shad Felder. The same time that the south door opened, Poke Hill left his seat and ran to the north doorand opened the same door, and directly a shot was fired and deceased fell to the floor. The election was quiet, and it was not necessary to have any guards.

No. 8.—Testimony of Felix Kenlow (duly sworn).

No. 8.—Testimony of retix Remow (dwy swork).

I was sitting in the room looking on. Poke Hill, who got up and ran to the opposite door, picked up his shotgun which was out on the gallery, I saw him, cocked the gun and shot the deceased, and I knew it was Poke Hill who did the shooting; he told me himself that he had killed a man, and laughed when he said it. I was lying under the bed and could see plainly. There was present in the room Ande Hays, Stewart Jones, William Cawse, Poke Hill, and the officers of the election. The shooting took place about 11 or 12 o'clock p. m. in the room of the house of R.T. Flewellen. The election was quiet and orderly.

FELIX (his x mark) KENLOW.

No. 9.- Testimony of Lewis Pennington (duly sworn).

I was one of the judges of the election held on the 2d day of November, 1886. The election was going on quietly and orderly; I was busy counting votes when somebody knocked on the door; the same time Polk Hill got up from his seat and ran to the door. I do not know who did the shooting, which took place about 11 o'clock p. m. Outside the officers of the election there were present in the room Shad Felder, Andy Hays, Felix Kenlow, and Poke Hill went out of the door.

LEWIS (his x mark) PENNINGTON.

No. 10.- Testimony of Tom Jones (duly sworn).

I was one of the clerks of the election, sitting at the table with my back toward the south door. I saw Poke Hill go to the north door before the south door opened. As soon as the door opened, I turned my face, and saw a white man coming in the door with uplifted hands holding a pistol, and as soon as I saw the person I went out of the same door. I know that Polk Hill had a gun on the ground. There was present outside of the officers, Shad Felder, Andy Hays, Folk Hill. The shooting took place on the 2d day of November, 1886, in the house of R.T. Flewellen. T. M. JONES.

Statement of Lewis Pennington, being re-examined.

I did not see anybody coming in the door disguised with a pistol in hand. I was sitting close to the fire-place in plain view of the two doors.

LEWIS (his x mark) PENNINGTON.

No. 11.—Testimony of Ephraim Jones (duly sworn).

I was taking supper to Jones and along with it a shotgun to guard the polls; then I went out and went to sleep on John Glass's overcoat and I never woke up till I heard two reports of a shotgun. I ran off around the house and made for home. There had shotguns in possession, William Davis, Felix Kenlow, Poke Hill, Andy Hays, for the protection of the box under the advice of Shad Felder. The election was going on quietly. The shooting was done at about II o'clock p.m., in the house of R.T. Flewellen, on the 2d day of November, 1886. EPHRAIM JONES.

No. 12.-Testimony of Stephen Jackson (duly sworn).

I was on the election ground on the 2d day of November, 1886, and Alfred Jones and Poke Hill asked me for a pistol, but I declined it, but let Poke Hill have my shotgun loaded to keep the polls guarded. My gun was returned me, both barrels empty, by Sallie Jones, wife of Oliver Jones.

EPHRAIM (his x mark) JONES.

This is to certify that this is a true and correct statement of the testimony P. KÜHNEL, Recorder.

THE STATE OF TEXAS, County of Washington:

I, C. F. Herbst, clerk of the district court of Washington County, Texas, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original inquest papers in case of W. D. Bolton, deceased, now on file in said court.

Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Brenham, this the 5th day of February, A. D. 1887.

[SEAL.]

C. F. HERBST, Clerk.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary now to turn to page 329, to the testimony of Benjamin Y. Aubrey.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF BENJAMIN Y. AUBREY.

Benjamin Y. Aubrey, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

Mr. COKE. I desire, before going on to this testimony, to call the attention of the Senate to the testimony at the coroner's inquest, and to ask the Senate to bear in mind that the charge made in the report of the committee is that the three negroes who were hung at Brenham were hung in order to get rid of their testimony against persons who violated the election laws at this Flewellen box. That is the charge made in the report of the committee, that the negroes were hung, not in consequence of the excitement resulting from the killing of young Bolton, but because it was necessary to hang them in order to get rid of their testimony, to prevent it from being brought out against parties who were violating the law at the Flewellen box.

I call attention to the fact that one of the negroes who testified, and the only one who testified before the coroner that Bolton was masked and that he had arms in his hands when he went to Flewellen that night, was one of the negroes in the jail at Brenham, and that he was not one of the three who were taken out and hanged. In other words, this only witness who testified before the coroner that Bolton was masked and armed was among the eight negroes in jail at Brenham when three of the eight were taken by the mob and hanged and he was not one of them. This I take to be a conclusive refutation of the theory of this report that these negroes were hanged, not in consequence of the excitement occasioned by the killing of Bolton, but in order to get rid of their testimony against the men who destroyed the ballot-box at Flewellen.

I ask the Secretary to proceed with the reading of the testimony of Benjamin Y. Aubrey.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. What is your age?
A. I am forty-five years of age.
Q. Where do you live?
A. I live in Washington County, Texas, 20 miles east of Brenham, the county

Q. What is your business?
A. I live in Washington County, Texas, 20 miles east of Brenham, the county geat.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a farmer.
Q. Where do you vote?
A. At Graball precinct, in my neighborhood.
Q. Were you one of the election officers at the last election.
A. Yes, sir; I was presiding officer of the box at Graball.
Q. What time did you begin to count the vote there?
A. I don't know exactly. I suppose we commenced at about 7 o'clock, directly after we closed the polls.
Q. How many votes did you count?
A. We counted 225.
Q. How many votes were polled altogether; do you know?
A. There were 341 polled.
Q. How did the county stand with regard to Judge Kirk and Mr. Schutze on those 225 votes that were counted?
A. Well, Judge Kirk at the end of the count was 116 and Mr. Schutze was 105.
Q. Is that a strong Republican poll?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. A good many colored people vote there?
A. Yes, sir; there is five to one.
Q. And you say of those 225 votes counted, Judge Kirk had 116 and Mr. Schutze 105?
A. Yes, sir; the election passed off quietly.
Q. No intimidation?
A. No, sir; none at all, as I saw.
Q. Were you there all day?
A. Yes, sir; I was there all day. I opened the polls and closed them, and there was no disturbance whatever that I knew of. I heard there was some disturbance outside concerning some gentlemen that were there officiating, that didn't live there, who lived in Brenham.
Q. Evidence has been given here that this box was raided, as they call it?
A. Yes, sir; it was.
Q. What time was that?
A. The box was captured about 11 o'clock or a little after.
Q. Eleven o'clock at night?
A. Yes, sir; it done by masked men?
A. Yes, sir.

12, a few minutes before 12, and I lived about a mile and half from the voting place.

Q. Was it done by masked men?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see them?
A. Yes, sir, I saw two of them. Two of them came in the room where we were counting the votes, and there was a third one, but he didn't come into the room, he stood in the door, and never came any further than the door. But two of them came in the room.
Q. Have you ever formed any impression as to who those two men were?
A. I could not positively say who they were; I could not tell from the way they were masked. That is, I could not swear to them who they were.
Q. I know, but I speak of your impression?
A. Well, the only suspicious looking characters that I saw about there that day were two men from Brenham who were trying to control the vote.
Q. Who were they?
A. The name of one of them was Lockett, and the other was Gilder; Ed Lock-

Q. Who were they?

A. The name of one of them was Lockett, and the other was Gilder; Ed Lockett and Lonny Gilder. They were officiating around there that day, pretty much all day.

By Mr. TELLER:

Q. You say Lockett was one; who was the other? A. Ed. Lockett and Lonny Gilder. They were trying to influence some peonle to vote.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. To vote which ticket?
A. They were trying to influence them to vote their way.
Q. Which way is that?
A. They were Republicans.
Q. What is the character of those men; their general reputation?
A. I am not very well acquainted with either of them, but from what I could learn about them they are sort of hangers-on around the county-seat at Brenham. They are not competent to fill an office, or the people haven't confidence in them to put them in, but it seems that they promised them a divide in their salary if they will officiate around and control the ignorant people enough to get their ticket through.

By Mr. TELLER:

Q. You are telling something you have heard; you do not pretend to know

A. I only hear this. I saw them there officiating around.
Q. But you heard they had agreed to divide with them; you do not know it?
A. No, sir; I have only heard that.
Q. You do not pretend you know anything about that?
A. No, sir; I do not know it, but that is what I have heard, I know they sere there officiating around that day.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Did you hear anybody say that two of those masked men were Lockett and Gilder?

By Mr. Eusris:

Q. Did you hear anybody say that two of those masked men were Lockett and Glider?

A. No, sir; I never heard any one say so; but, as I say, they were editeisting around there all day, and I understood afterwards they were at Mr. Flewellen's, which is the next voting box from our precinct, and the next morning as soon as I could get to Brenham to make the report of what had happened at our box, before I got out of the vehicle that I drove there in, these two men were the first two men who met me that I knew, and they asked me what was the news down in our part of the neighborhood, and I told them what was the news, that the box had been captured and a young man had been killed at the other voting place, and they asked me several questions concerning the election and then left me, and I never have seen or heard of them since, and it seemed as though they must be guilty of something or they would not have left the country.

Q. Had you any intimation whatever that this box would be raided?

A. No, sir; I did not; it was all a surprise to me. At the time the box was taken there was a negro that was on the ground that day with a lunch-stand that I was well acquainted with, and I had sent out for him to bring us in some coffee, and there were two of them came in with it, and one staid in there while the other stepped back to get some sugar to sweeten the coffee, and about the time that he passed out at the door this party came in. We had had the door fastened previous to these black people coming in with the hot coffee, and whon we unfastened the door to left them in, as this one went out to get the sugar, he had forgotten it, this party of masked men slepped in, and I was not looking towards the house of our neighborhood physician, whe we were contributed to make my escape into the back room with the box, and one of them hollered, "Look out," and as I looked around the end of a pistol touched me on the end of the nose, and he taken the box and also grabbed the tickets that were strung. We strung these through with them without much trouble. Of course each ticket was laid separate to itself until I got to the number of five, and then they were counted as five tickets.

Q. What time did this raid occur?

A. It occurred about II o'clock, or maybe a little later,
Q. You did not recognize any of these men?

A. No, sir; I could not say positively who they were.
Q. Did you tell anybody who you thought they were?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, what did you say?

A. I made the remark several times that it looked reasonable that these two men I spoke of were the parties who robbed the box.
Q. Do you mean Lockett?

A. Yes, sir; Lockett and Gilder. I didn't see the cause of anybody else taking it. Everything went off quiet and peaceable up to that time. I will state, if it is not out of order, that in the neighborhood where we live it is very peaceable and quiet until just before the election comes off, and then it is an uproar all night long with parties trying to control the black people's vote. Just a few days previous to the election they were up every night, holding what we call "owl meetings," making speeches and trying to influence the black people to vote for a class of officers who have been in power ever since the close of the war. I have been living in that neighborhood ever since the close of the war, and living right within a mile of where I am living at present, and those owl meetings during this last election commenced a week or ten days previous to the election, and they were trying to control the black people in their voting. Two years previous to the last election we had a citizens' meeting called, and we nominated what was called the People's ticket, and all the responsible and reliable black people in our neighborhood voted that People's ticket.

Q. That was in 184?

A. Yes, sir; and the men that ran on the People's ticket were elected.

Q. How do you account for the black people woting the People's ticket?

A. Well, sir, a great many of them—one of them in particular, that owns land and is a mechanic by pro ducting affairs in the country in which we lived. We had had a black man as commissioner eversince the close of the war until this People's ticket was nominated, and then we elected a white man named Bolton, who owns a little farm there, and the roads from where we live to the county-seat, Brenham, were almost in a condition so that it was impossible to travel over them until Bolton was elected commissioner, and when Bolton was elected commissioner he had the roads worked and bridges put across the creeks and ravines (we call them ravines in Texas, but I believe they call them gullies in the old States); he had bridges put across those creeks and streams so that people could travel backwards and forwards. In two years he done all this. This negro was telling me all about this, and he said he spent a day and a night in search of this blackman, the Republican, who was the opponent of Bolton as commissioner in the next election, to try to see if he could not influence him to withdraw his name and not run against such a man as Bolton was; that he had no interests at stake, and that Bolton had; and that he would be of some benefit to the community in which we live, and the freedman would not. And he said this Mr. Brown, as he called him, the colored man, he said that he knew that Bolton was a gentleman and all that, but he said when it came to law matters he knew as much as Bolton did, and he was going to run through.

  A. If there was I never saw them.

- Q. Had there been anybody around the room during the evening amongst you?

  A. Yes; Mr. Baldridge, a merchant at that place, came into the room before the box was taken and asked how the vote was running. He was the only one I remember coming in except the black people that I spoke of.

  Q. Was anybody else running for office in that precinct besides Judge Kirk and Mr. Schutze?

  A. Oh, yes, sir.

  Q. A large number of other people?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. How was the vote on the others?

  A. To the best of my recollection, some of them were ahead and some of them behind on the People's ticket.

  Q. Is that a Republican precinct?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Pretty strongly Republican, is it not?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. What proportion do you say are Democrats, or those who vote the People's ticket there usually?

  A. As I say, the black people are five to one in that precinct, but at the last election and the one previous to this last election they were tolerably well divided.

  O. What become of this tally-sheet which you say you had made out as far as

- Q. What became of this tally-sheet which you say you had made out as far as you had gone?
  A. I carried it to Brenham and returned it to the county clerk.
  Q. You did not have the box or ballots; all you had was the tally-sheet?
  A. That was all.
  Q. Did you have the whole of the tally-sheet or only a part of it?
  A. I don't remember whether I carried it all or not; when the box was captured I just picked up what was left on the table, rolled it up altogether, and tied a string around it and carried it to Brenham and deposited it with the clerk.

- clerk.
  Q. When these men captured the box, when you gave it up to them, what did they do with it?
  A. They just returned out of the door; I do not know what they did with it; I never have seen it since.
  Q. One of the men staid in the door and the others came in?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What did the man in the doorway do?
  A. Nothing that I know of.
  Q. Was he armed?
  A. I could not say.
  Q. Was he masked?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. How?
  A. He had a white cloth over his face; I never noticed about the balance of his body how he was dressed.
- A. He had a white cloth over his face; I never noticed about the balance of his body how he was dressed.
  Q. You could not state how he was dressed?
  A. No, sir.
  Q. How were the men who came into the room dressed?
  A. They had a white cloth over their faces, and they had hats on their heads.
  Q. What kind of hats did they have on?
  A. Well, now, I can't tell you what kind of hats. I tell you I was kind of excited myself. I can't tell you what kind of hats they had on; neither can I tell you what kind of clothes they had on.
  Q. You can not tell anything about their clothing?
  A. No, sir; I could not positively tell what kind of clothing they had on.
  Q. Where were the ballots that had not been counted?
  A. In the box.

Q. You can not tell anything about A. No, sir; I could not positively tell wh Q. Where were the ballots that had not a. A. In the box.
Q. Did they take them out?
A. They carried the box off with them.
Q. What did they do with the box?
A. I don't know.
Q. Did you ever find it?
A. No, sir; I never did. Mr. COKE. I desire to call attention to the testimony of this witness, Benjamin Y. Aubrey. If this testimony is mentioned in the report of the committee I do not remember it. This witness testifies with reference to the Graball box, which was raided. When asked

How many votes were polled altogether; do you know?

He says:

- There were 341 polled.
  Q. How did the count stand with regard to Judge Kirk and Mr. Schutze on those 225 votes that were counted?

He savs:

Well, Judge Kirk at the end of the count was 116 and Mr. Schutze was 105,

Judge Kirk and Schutze were the contestants, and were the two candidates who were exciting the largest amount of interest among the people, and Judge Kirk is the man whose acts in going to this box that night are sought to be made by the committee the basis for the inferences that the raiding was done on the box through his influence and for his benefit. Judge Kirk and Mr. Schutze were running for the office of county judge, the principal office in the contest. They were the important men in the contest. They were the candidates who were creating all the excitement in the county, and at this Graball box, which was raided at the end of the count, Judge Kirk had received 116 votes and Mr. Schutze 105 votes; and yet, notwithstanding this, the report of the committee draws the conclusion and indulges the presumption that this box was raided for the benefit of Judge Kirk!

Mr. HARRIS. There being a majority in his favor?

Mr. COKE. The box had given a majority in favor of Judge Kirk, the candidate on the People's ticket, against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket, against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket, against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the candidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the Condidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the Condidate of the People's ticket against Mr. Schutze, the Condidate of the People's the People's the Condidate of the People's the People's the Condidate of the People's the People of th didate on the other, on the Republican ticket, so far as counted when raided; and yet the committee ask the Senate and the country to believe that the box was raided and the ballots destroyed for the purpose of defeating the Republican ticket!

I ask the Secretary now to turn to page 335, the testimony of John Ireland, and read it.

The PRESIDENT protempore. The Secretary will read as requested. The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF JOHN IRELAND.

Governor John Ireland, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as fol-

By Mr. Eustis:

- Q. What position do you now hold?
  A. I hold no official position at present.
  Q. What position have you held?
  A. For the last four years, until the 8th of last January, I have been governor

- A. For the last four years, until the still of last samuary, I have been governor of the State in November and December, 1886?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. You know the subject-matter of this investigation in regard to the condition of affairs in Washington County?
  A. I believe I do.
  Q. And the disturbances which have occurred there and the excitement which has existed?
- Q. And the disturbances which has existed?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Please state to the committee whatever you desire with reference to the condition of affairs in that county. In the first place, what sort of a community is that? Is it a law-abiding community?
  A. I have known more or less of Washington County and her people for the last thirty-five years. There is a large negro element in Washington County, and quite a large majority of the voting population of that county are negroes, and they have had more or less disturbance in Washington County ever since the passage of the reconstruction laws.

- By Mr. Spooner:

  Q. What was that statement? I did not quite understand you.

  A. I said that quite a large majority of the voting population of Washington County are Republicans; that is to say, they are engroes, and they are claimed as Republicans generally, without reference to any particular vote; and I further said that since the passage of the reconstruction laws, since 1867, they have had more or less disturbance in Washington County. In 1868 or 1869, probably the latter part of 1868, there was a military company stationed there under command of Major Smith, of the Army, and he burned the town.

  Q. What town?

  A. The town of Brenham, and also imprisoned a good many of their people, One notable case now that I remember was that of Major McGeary, who was then publishing a paper there. In their local affairs their revenues have been wasted and stolen until the last two or three years, when the methods resorted to by those in authority in that county became so revolting to even the better portion of the Republican party, that they formed what was called the People's party, and succeeded in electing men to office who conducted their local affairs honestly. I have learned (from rumor, of course) that there have been one or two ballot-boxes destroyed in the county; I never knew by whom, because I had no official notification of it. I also learned from general history and the press of the country of the killing of Bolton at the election in November last and of the lynching of the three negroes. I know nothing personally of specific local acts of persons. Washington County is about 8) miles from the capital of the State. I have seen the memorial presented to the Senate by persons from Washington County, and some allusion is made in that to the State government refusing to protect these gentlemen. I do not now remember the exact language, because it has been some time since I read it, but whatever allusion is made in it to that point is not true; it is untrue. The implication is of course that the Government refuse

By Mr. EUSTIS :

- Q. Right on that point, not to interrupt your testimony, I will ask you a question. Did you ever receive any letter or application from Mr. Hackworth?

  A. No, sir.

  - I mean with reference to these troubles?
  - Or applying to you for any relief whatever? No, sir.

  - Applying to you as executive of the State of Texas? No, sir.

- Q. Applying to you as execusive to the state.

  A. No, sir.

  Q. Now you may proceed,
  A. I have nothing myself further that I desire to state, but I am ready to answer any question which may be asked me.

  Q. Have you had occasion to travel much throughout the State?
  A. Yes, sir; I have traveled over the State more or less for several years.
  Q. I will ask you whether you do not find it to be the case that the negro population, where the negroes are in the majority, are generally quiet and orderly except where they are excited by white leaders upon this race question?

  A. The negroes of Texas are a confiding people, and are perfectly quiet when left to themselves. The only disturbance among the negroes, so far as my observation has gone, except those who have been excited by the white men, have been cases of violence against negroes who desired to vote the Democratic ticket. No negro in the negro districts of that State has been safe until the last year or two who openly espoused the Democratic cause or voted the Democratic ticket. And where they are not persuaded, or driven, or scared to deeds of violence and outbreaks by white men they are no trouble in the country; they are left alone to vote as they please and do as they please as long as they let society alone.

- alone.

  Q. What is generally the object of those white leaders—
  Mr. Sponner. Is that going into the affairs of Washington County?
  Mr. Eusris. I think so.
  Q. What interest have those white leaders in creating this race antagonism and animosity between the whites and blacks?
  A. It is generally for the purpose of creating a following for themselves, a following that they can not obtain in any other way.

Q. A following for what purpose?
A. For political purposes.
Q. Do you mean to obtain office for themselves?
A. Yes, sir; for themselves and for their friends, and to keep themselves prominently before the country, and it is understood, too, that they feel they have a strong coadjutor at this capital to whom they may appeal in case of adversity and disaster.

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. To what do you allude—to the United States Senate? A. I allude to the Senate; yes, sir.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. Is it not known there that they are very fond of playing the role of politi-

Q. Is it not known there that they are very fond of playing the role of political martyrs?
A. Yes, sir; it is understood there, sir, as it is all over the South, in case of Republican success in national administration, that they may present themselves as martyrs to procure office and recognition.
Q. As victims of political persecution?
A. Yes, sir; as victims of political persecution.
Q. I suppose the colored people generally are rather an ignorant class?
A. As a general thing they are ignorant, but, as I said, confiding, docile, and quiet when left slowed.

quiet when left alone.

A. As a general thing they are ignorant, but, as I said, confiding, docile, and quiet when left alone.

Q. Are they easily excited in political contests?

A. They are; by men who aspire to be their leaders and in whom they have any confidence at all they are very easily roused to most any measure.

Q. They are prone to believe anything that those leaders tell them in regard to the white people or Democrats?

A. Yes, sir; in regard to the elements, or the laws of nature, or anything else. It was told to them in the last canvass that the Democratic party was responsible for the earthquakes throughout the South and for the drought; that Mr. Cleveland's administration was responsible for their getting but 7 cents a pound for cotton; that was all they got for their votton, and they were told it was in consequence of the Democratic administration, and such things as that.

Q. How long have you been in public life?

A. I have been in public life more or less for twenty-five years.

Q. Has it not been an extremely difficult position for the executive of the State, for instance in some portions of it where there is a large nogro majority, to prevent this excitement and these conflicts between the white and black races?

A. It is utterly impossible for the governor of a State, and especially a State like Texas, which has a large territory, to personally direct local affairs in the counties. No State government can be administered without local aid, because the local government is the machinery by which the State government is carried on.

on.

Q. Have you ever heard of any discrimination made, for instance, as regards the administration of justice between either Democrats or Republicans, or white or colored people?

The Witness. In Texas?

Mr. Eustis. Yes.

A. No, sir; on the contrary, I have been an active practitioner at the bar and an active lawyer all my life, or for thirty to thirty-five years, and have defended numbers and numbers of them, and they have never failed to ask me to give them a white jury to try them.

Q. You are speaking now of the negroes?

A. Yes, sir; of the negroes. So far as the Republicans are concerned, the leading Republicans in Texas, I believe they are all my friends, so far as I know them. I do not know a single leading Republican in Texas.

Mr. Spooner. What has that to do with this inquiry?

The WITNESS. It is in answer to the Senator's question about discrimination so far as politics are concerned.

By Mr. Spooner.

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. You mean the leading Republicans are your friends, or that the leading white Republicans are your friends?

A. I mean the leading white Republicans and many of the leading negro Republicans.

Mr. SPOONER. That is not at all unlikely.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. The reason I asked you the question was that one witness, Mr. Schutze, has testified that in Washington County it was impossible for a Republican to get justice administered by a court of justice. I want to know from you, as executive of the State, whether you believe there is the slightest foundation for that statement?

executive of the State, whether you believe there is the slightest foundation for that statement?

A. I do not believe there is, and I will tell you why. Beyond my personal knowledge of these affairs, which negatives that idea, the courts in Washington County, the district court, which is the court of general jurisdiction, corresponding to what is called circuits or parish courts in your State, is presided over by a leading Republican and has been for years. Judge McFarland is one of the leading Republicans of Texas, and the juries there are selected by a commission appointed by the presiding judge. At each term of the district court the judge selects the jury commissioners, and these commissioners in turn select the juries that are to try cases at the succeeding term. And speaking now with special reference to that district, Washington County, it is impossible that any discrimination could be made against Republicans in the trial of cases there.

Q. How long has Judge McFarland been judge of the district court there?

A. I do not recollect, but a good many years; several years, I think. His term is about expiring, and he may have been holding that position two terms. He has been there as judge for five or six years, according to my recollection.

Q. Of what class of cases has his court jurisdiction?

A. His court has jurisdiction of all indictments found for felony, and in all felony cases. Cases of lower grade, all misdemeanors, are tried by the county court and before magistrates.

Q. Has not this court jurisdiction of any offense that is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary?

A. Oh, yes, sir; all felonies are either penitentiary or death cases.

By Mr. Spooner:

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. That is the test of whether it is a felony or not under your statute?

A. Yes, sir; punishment in the penitentiary is the tet; punishment in the penitentiary or death. All cases under that are misdemeanors, and a mere fine and imprisonment is the penalty in cases of misdemeanor.

Q. Under your statement what would be the offense of raiding upon a ballot-box, of armed men going to polling places?

A. The i.legal destruction of a ballot is punishable by a fine not exceeding

A. 7

Q. What court would have jurisdiction of that offense?

A. The district court. It has jurisdiction of any case where the fine may go over a certain amount. Such cases are to be tried by the district court.

Mr. COKE. I desire to call attention to the testimony of Governor Ireland just read, wherein he says:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

I wish the Senate to remember these things, to remember the statement of Governor Ireland in connection with the memorial of Hackworth and Schutze and Moore, that they could not get justice in Washington County and that justice was not administered in Washington County to Republicans. It is a Republican county, giving from 600 to 800 majority for the Republican ticket for President and for the Republican ticket for governor. It has a Republican district judge, who appoints the jury commissioners, who in turn select the jurors. It has a Republican county attorney, a Republican district attorney, And yet these three memorialists come here and say it is impossible for a Republican to get justice in Washington County and that they had to flee from Washington County because they were Republicans, and the report of the honorable Committee on Privileges and Elections, presented to the Senate and with their imprimatur sent out to the country, indorses this statement of Hackworth and Schutze and Moore in the face of the law and the facts as I have stated them.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 348 of the report, to the testimony of J. H. Roberts, and read that. The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF J. H. ROBERTS.

J. H. Roberts, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:

What is your full name?
John H. Roberts.
How old are you?
I am forty years old.
Where do you live?
In Washington County, State of Texas.
How long have you lived there?
Forty years.

Q. How long have you lived there?
A. Forty years.
Q. Where do you vote?
A. I vote in that county.
Q. At what polling place?
A. At Graball.
Q. Were you about the polls during the last election?
A. I was there only for a very short time. In the evening on the day of election I hitched up my hack and went by my father's, who lives about a mile from where I reside, and took him down there, and we remained there about one-half hour and voted and left.

By Mr. EVARTS:

Q. You say you went there in the evening?
A. I mean in the afternoon; in the daytime, not in the night.

A. I mean in the afternoon; in the daytime, not in the night.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. Do you know anything about how this People's ticket was gotten up?

A. Yes, sir, I have some idea. It was just on account of the corruption and venality, the rascality and thieving of the Republican party in that county.

Q. It was gotten up by the good citizens?

A. Yes, sir; gotten up by the good citizens of our county, sir. The Republican party became so corrupt that the better element of the Republican party just quit them and came together with the good citizens of the other side and put a ticket in the field.

Q. How was it with the colored people?

A. A great many of the colored people affiliated with and voted for the Citizens' ticket.

Q. Men who were Republicans?

A. Yes, sir; that had been Republicans before.

Q. Then I understand you to say that under Republican rule in that county the administration had been such as to dissatisfy all the people?

A. Yes, sir; that is my statement, sir.

Q. And the cause of great complaint among them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this was a ticket gotten up regardless of political party lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the cause of this dissatisfaction; the defalcations of officials?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what you know about that.

A. I will state this: That to my certain knowledge, in that county, without a single exception, there has not been a Republican in that county who has held a money office but what has been accused (that is, since the war, understand me) of defaulting and stealing public moneys; not a single one.

Q. Have the taxes been pretty high?

A. Yes, sir, the taxes have been very high, and our county scrip was down there at one time to about 40 cents on the dollar.

Q. Were any improvements going on?

A. None at that time; none at all until this Citizens' ticket elected a lot of officers and put them in, and then the county; that is the first we had got since the war.

Q. What do you know about the citizens' meeting held after the election?

The WITNESS. Held after the el he war.

Q. What do you know about the citizens' meeting held after the election?

The WITNESS. Held after the election in that county?

Mr. EUSTIS. Yes.

A. I was not present at that.

Q. In your neighborhood, I mean?

A. In my neighborhood? Yes; I know a good deal about that.

Q. State what you know about the sending of telegrams for troops.

A. I have a telegram here that I sent off [producing the telegram].

- Q. You say there was a meeting held? A. Yes, sir; there was a meeting held. Q. Where was it held? A. It was held at the Baptist Church, in the neighborhood. By Mr. TELLER:

- Q. Was it held at Graball? A. No, sir; not at Graball, but about 2 miles from Graball. By Mr. EUSTIS:

- By Mr. Eustis:

  Q. What was the meeting for?

  A. After the killing of Bolton out at this voting precinct of Flewellen the country was under a good deal of excitement, and there was a report came into the neighborhood there that the negroes—this was on Sunday after the killing of Bolton. Bolton, you understand, was killed on the night after the election.

  Q. You mean he was killed on the night of the election?

  A. Yes, sir; he was killed on the night of the election, and on the next Sunday the negroes had preaching out there in the neighborhood, and they were so thoroughly stirred up and excited about the arrest of these parties, you know, that had been accused of killing Bolton that they would not go in the house to hear the preacher at all. They sat outside caucusing among themselves, and they made some threats and said if those negroes were not turned loose by Thursday that they intended to rise and release the negroes and massacre the white people. That was the news that was brought to the white people of the neighborhood. The news was brought in the neighborhood and a meeting of the people called. In that end of the county the niggers outnumber us about six to one, and we were completely at their mercy, and held a meeting and decided on calling for help, and that was the origin of that dispatch.

  Q. Were you secretary of the meeting?

  A. Yes, sir; I was secretary of the meeting.

  Q. Is this the dispatch you sent [handing a dispatch to the witness]?

  A. Yes; that is the dispatch.

  Mr. Evares. That telegram had better go in evidence.

  "Courtney, November 8, 1886, 5 p. m."

"COURTNEY, November 8, 1886, 5 p. m.

"Send to Lott's Store, immediately, fifty men armed, on horseback. We apprehend an insurrection from the negroes.

"J. H. ROBERTS, "Secretary Citizens' Meeting."

By Mr. EUSTIS:

- Q. State whether your request for those troops was complied with by the sheriff.

- sheriff.

  A. Yes, sir; it was. He came down with about sixteen or eighteen men.
  Q. How long did they stay there?
  A. They remained there until the next day. They got there in the night, and they remained in the neighborhood until the next day about 2 o'clock, I suppose, and then dispersed and went back to Brenham.
  Q. Did the excitement subside after that?
  A. Yes, sir; it subsided.
  Q. Was there a great deal of excitement among the negroes there at the time?
  A. Yes, sir; that report, as I tell you, was brought to us by a negro direct from that meeting.
  Q. What was the general impression as to the cause of the hanging of those negroes?

- Q. What was the general impression as to the cause of the hanging of those negroes?
  The Witness. Do you mean the hanging of those negroes that were in jail?
  Mr. Eustis, Yes.
  A. Well, it was thought that they killed Bolton; assassinated him there at the voting precinct; that was the general impression.
  Q. Did you ever hear that they were hung because they were supposed to be important witnesses?
  A. No, sir; I did not. I never heard anything of the kind.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Hackworth?
  A. I am not personally acquainted with him.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Moore?
  A. Yes, sir; slightly.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Schutze?
  A. No, sir; I am not personally acquainted with him, either.
  Q. What is the general character and reputation of those men in that community? nity?

  A. It is just as bad as it is possible for a man's character to be.
- Mr. COKE. I desire to call attention to the fact that here is an in-AIR. COKE. I desire to call attention to the fact that here is an intelligent witness, forty years old, living in Washington County, who has lived there all his life, who states that it was generally understood that the three negroes who were taken by the mob out of the jail in Brenham and hanged were taken out and hanged because of the fact that they had participated in the killing of Bolton.

  Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to inquire to what witness he refers now? I was out when the reading began.

  Mr. COKE. J. H. Roberts, whose testimony is found on page 348.
- Mr. COKE. J. H. Roberts, whose testimony is found on page 348.
  Mr. SPOONER. Thank you.
- Mr. COKE. He says:
- A. Well, it was thought that they killed Bolton; assassinated him there at the voting precinct; that was the general impression.

  Q. Did you ever hear that they were hung because they were supposed to be
- important witnes
- A. No, sir; I did not. I never heard anything of the kind.
- I think, Mr. President, that the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections will be searched in vain for any such testimony as that, and I desire it borne in mind that there is the testimony of vathat, and I desire it borne in mind that there is the testimony of various other witnesses—good men—in this volume which I will read, to the same effect, that they had never heard the allegation that these negroes were hung in order to get rid of their testimony, but that they were hung by the masked mob because they were supposed to have aided in the killing of Bolton, and yet it is stated as a fact, it is solemnly reported as a fact, by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, without stating that there was any controversy or contest about it, that these people were hung in order to get rid of their testimony.
- I now ask that the Secretary turn to the testimony of Hugh M.
- Lewis, on page 362.
- The Secretary read as follows:
  - TESTIMONY OF HUGH M. LEWIS.
- Hugh M. Lewis, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:
- Q. What is your full name? A. Hugh M. Lewis.

- Q. How old are you?
  A. I am a little over forty years.
  Q. Where do you live?
  A. Al Breenham, Washington County, Texas.
  Q. How long have you lived there?
  A. I awa shorn there.
  Q. Do you hold any office?
  Q. Do you hold any office?
  A. Since April 17, 1876, nearly eleven years.
  Q. What are your politics?
  A. I awa born there.
  Q. How long have you held that office?
  A. Since April 17, 1876, nearly eleven years.
  Q. What are your politics?
  A. I am a Democrat.
  Q. How long have you been a Democrat?
  A. Ever since I have been voting.
  Q. How long have you been a Democrat?
  A. Ever since I have been voting.
  Q. How have an election every two years, and I have been elected each election. I was first elected in February, 1875, the first time for two years and six months, and I have been elected five times in succession?
  A. I think so. The terms are two years, and my first term was two years and six months, and I have been elected three times since.
  Q. You have been elected at the last clection?
  A. In antional affairs, yes, sir.
  Q. Were you elected at the last clection?
  A. In antional affairs, yes, sir.
  Q. Were you elected at the last clection?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. At those elections, when you have been a candidate, have you had a Republican opponent?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Then you must have gotten quite a Kepublican vote?
  A. I always did.
  Q. A white and colored vote?
  A. Yes, sir.; white and colored.
  Q. You say you were a candidate on the People's ticket at the last election?
  A. Yes, sir.; white and colored with the sir sir the sir three races as a Democration of the property of the Wittense. At the last election?
  A. Yes, sir.; the last election?
  A. Yes, sir.; the last election?
  A. Yes, sir.; the all was made by different people of the county to select people to run for office; that was in 1884;
  Q. It was made up regardless of polities?
  A. Yes, sir.; the all was made by different people of the county to select people?
  A. Yes, sir.; would think at least half the call was signed by Republicans; that is my guess at it; you can tell by looking o
- Ocated.

  Q. When?

  A. I think from some time in 1871 to 1875; I am not positive, but that is my recollection about it.

  Q. What was the general opinion in the community as to his administration of that office?

- of that office?

  The WITNESS. Do you mean how he administered the office himself?

  Mr. Eustis. Yes.

  A. Well, it was very unsatisfactory to the people, sir.

  Q. Did he have anything to do with approving contracts?

  A. Yes, sir; as presiding justice he was, you might say, the chief justice of the county, and presided over the police court, you might say; he was presiding office.

- the county, and presided over the police court, you might say; he was presiding officer.

  Q. Do you know anything about certain contracts that he approved as presiding justice?

  A. I know something that the record shows.

  Q. What does that show?

  The WITNESS. About roads or bridges?

  Mr. EUSTIS. Both.

  A. It showed that he made contracts with his father for the erection of bridges.

  That is, that court appointed a road overseer for the county and he made these contracts, and they were subject to the approval of that court, and as a member of the court he approved the contracts made by the road overseer and others, some of which the citizens considered as very outrageous.

  Q. Those contracts were made with his father?

  A. Not all of them. Some were with his father and some with a gentleman I understood to be his brother-in-law.

  Q. But you say they were considered outrageous contracts?

  A. Yes, sir; and the citizens enjoined the payment of money on them.

  Q. They were outrageous for what reason?

  A. Because of the exorbitant prices paid for the work done.

  Q. Do you say they were enjoined from paying them?

  A. Not the bridge contracts, but some of the road contracts were.

  By Mr. Evarts:

- By Mr. EVARTS:
- Q. Were they enjoined by a court?

  A. They were enjoined by a suit that the citizens brought in the district court.
- By Mr. EUSTIS: Q. What was the result of the whole matter; was there a settlement made?
  A. It was finally compromised at about 30 cents on the dollar, and about that amount was paid. It was a very considerable amount below what the contract price was, at any rate.

Q. Your recollection is it was about 30 cents on the dollar? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. EVARTS:

Q. Did you say it was 50 per cent?
A. No, sir; about 30,
Q. Thirty per cent?
A. Yes, sir; about 30 cents on the dollar; 30 per cent.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. How was it with regard to contracts for bridges; do you know anything about that?

about that?

A. Yes, sir; he made some contracts for bridges with his father that were considered outrageous. For instance, they allowed his father $688, and they drew on that contract $796 and some cents, somewhere within $100 above what was allowed; he drew about $98 more than the contract price. The record shows that the judge drew part of that money and gave an order for part of it.

Q. What else do you know about those contracts? Can you recall any others where there was any ground of complaint against his administration of the office?

where there was any ground of complaint against his administration of the office?

A. It is hard to remember them all, to go right along over them. The citizens of the county sued and enjoined the payment of the money, all that were not paid, and they went through the courts, and I think it staid in the court for quite a while, and finally was compromised at 30 cents on the dollar.

Q. Do you know whether Mr Hackworth was indicted?

A. He was indicted about six times. I think.

Q. For acts done while he was in office?

A. Yes, sir: I think so.

Q. Do you know what they were for?

A. I think, perhaps, one indictment was for malfeasance, and the others for exorbitant charges.

Q. For extortion, was it?

A. Yes, sir: that was it; extortion; I get that fact from the district clerk's office; that is not a record in my office.

Mr. Evarrs. Have you the whole of the record here?

Mr. Evarrs. I have here authenicated copies of the report of the grand jury, which I offer in evidence.

Mr. Evarrs. I understand they were all quashed.

Mr. Jodon. They were all dismissed except one; only one was tried.

Mr. Evarrs. One was tried and he was acquitted, and the rest were dismissed. I will let in part if you will let in the whole. Which record is that, the one that was tried?

The WITNESS. It shows the disposition of all those papers, I think.

Mr. Evers. I will offer these in evidence, the report of the grand jury and the one that was tried?

The WITNESS, It shows the disposition of all those papers, I think.

Mr. Eustis. I will offer these in evidence, the report of the grand jury and the record of the indictments.

The following are the papers put in evidence by Mr. Eustis:

FERRUARY 23 1874.

In District Court, Washington County, Texas:

The grand jury this day came into open court, and through T. G. Davidson, district attorney, presented the following report, which, after being read by said district attorney by request of said grand jury, it is ordered that said report be entered and spread upon the minutes of this court, in accordance with the request of the said grand jury, and is as follows:

THE STATE OF TEXAS, Washington County:

The State of Texas, Washington County:

The undersigned, grand jurors for the present term of the district court of said county, respectfully represent that they have examined as fully as they could the administration of the county's finances during the past-tweive months, and they present the following facts as showing a culpable mismanagement and misappropriation of county money:

On page 181 of the order-book of the county court, it appears that $250 was ordered paid to W. W. Hackworth for building a bridge across Kountz Creek. The order recites that the bridge was built in accordance with contract, but the contract guaranties that the bridge was built in accordance with contract, but the contract guaranties that the bridge shall last five years, when in fact it did not last five months.

On page 107 is an order to pay W. W. Hackworth $1,400 for building three bridges at and near the town of Independence—one across Hersten branch, one across Independence and John Seward's place. The two first named are small spring runs, and the work done by Hackworth over them would have been reasonably well paid for with $100. The only one of the three branches named the bridging of which could have involved much expense is the bra ch near John Seward's place, and that branch Mr. Contractor Hackworth did not bridge at all. Why Mr. Hackworth should have asked for $1,400 for the work done on the two Independence Spring branches we are unable to determine, except it was upon the principle that if a man wants anything and don't ask for it he won't get it. The amount paid is excessive and should be recovered back by suit if necessary, and so should the money paid for the Kountz Creek bridge.

On page 183 it appears that $20 a month was paid for the board of Carrie Hill, a pauper. In some other cases it seems that paupers were boarded as low as $3 a month. Why Carrie Hill should have been supported by the county in better style, and more money spent for her than other paupers, the records of the honorable county court fail to ex cents each.

On page 250 is an order to pay W. W. Hackworth $1,000 for building a bridge across New Year's Creek on the Lower Independence road. Upon investigation, we are satisfied that the price paid is at least $700 in excess of a reasonable price for such a bridge.

On page 247, $1,050 is ordered paid for care, attention, and feeding prisoners in fall from November 20, 1873, to January 27, 1874. We have not examined the bul of fare furnished to the prisoners, but it occurs to us that, considering the number of prisoners confined there, and the character of the supplies usually provided for prisoners, $525 a month must be an exorbitant allowance.

We submit the foregoing as some of the items of recklessness and profligacy in the expenditure of moneys collected from the people for public uses.

The remedies for such wrongs is, it seems, in our own hands; but we suggest that proper steps be taken for the vigorous prosecution of the parties, and the recovery back by the county of the moneys thus illegally expended.

Thanking the honorable court for its constant courtesy and the district attorney for his attention and assistance in the discharge of our duties, and asking that this report may be spread upon the minutes of this court of record and to be printed in the Brenham Banner.

We are, very respectfully,

JAMES N. MANN, Foreman,
J. N. COX.

District Clerk, Washington County, Texas.

Then follows another:

THE STATE OF TEXAS, County of Washington:

Be it remembered that on this the 5th day of February, A. D. 1872, there was begun and holden a district court in and for the county of Washington, at the court-house thereof, in the town of Brenham, it being the regular term of said

Present: J. B. McFarland, judge; Lyddleton Smith, sheriff; J. J. Stockbridge, Names of grand jury: M. O'Brien, Sam. Eldridge, D. Harris, Abram Meyers, Richard Green, Randle Atkinson, Jerry Hannah, Henry Dawson, Richard Foster, J. V. Buster, J. D. Hardin, S. M. Williams, G. W. Sargeant, B. F. Tally, Andrew Robinson, B. S. Harrison, E. T. Wallace, John Ewing, and W. P. Dever.

MONDAY, February 26, 1872.

The grand jury, there being a quorum of that body present, comes into open court and presents the following indictments, to wit:

1564. State of Texas vs. Stephen A. Hackworth. Misfeasance in office.

1566. The State of Texas vs. Stephen A. Hackworth. Malfeasance in office.

1568. The State of Texas vs. Stephen A. Hackworth. Misfeasance in office.

And so on.

These indictments, I believe, were all quashed, except one on which Hackworth was tried and acquitted. The indictments were quashed on account of some legal informality or some legal technicality. I believe it was held by the court that the statute under which the indictments were found did not embrace the particular offense

This is the man, Stephen A. Hackworth, said to be the best man of the three-Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore, who have arraigned the State of Texas here upon the indictment contained in their memorial; this man Hackworth, who was made the subject of a special report by the grand jury when he was county judge of Washington County, which has just been read here, a grand jury selected by jury commissioners, which jury commissioners were appointed by a Republican judge, and this in a Republican county that gives from seven to eight or nine hundred Republican majority for the State and National Republican tickets.

This man was county judge in that county. It was against him and Schutze and Moore—these memorialists, whose memorial is the basis of this investigation, and this prosecution—that the people of Washington County, the better portion of the negroes, nearly all of the Germans, and all the American whites combined regardless of party affiliations in what is known as the "People's ticket." It was against this trio of worthies that this combination was made and to beat them out of office, because they were plundering the people, as is shown by the report of the grand jury and by these indictments, so that they could stand them no longer, and the good German people and the good negroes in Washington County, Republicans as they were, joined the better class of white people, the native American whites, and ousted them from office, and after that was done the occupation of these men was

They had fallen so low in character that they could do nothing in Washington County, and therefore they had to go elsewhere to make a living, and they voluntarily exiled themselves; and in order to get up a little notoriety and get per diem as witnesses, they come on here to Washington, file this memorial, and institute this prosecution against the State of Texas.

These records show the character of the men, and I repeat what I have said before to-day, that the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections is founded mainly upon the testimony of this man Hackworth and his co-memorialists, Schutze and Moore, and if their testimony was stricken out there would be nothing left for the report to stand upon, and yet that report is placed in the Congression al REGORD and franked to the country, slanderous as it is of a great State and of the good people in it, and spread broadcast.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 368, beginning with the question of Mr. Eustis and proceed with the reading.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Have you your records with you showing about these contracts?
A. I have some of them with me. I have here the minutes of the county commissioners' court or police court from January, 1871, to April 18, 1876. Do you want to see the orders complained of in that grand jury report?

Mr. Eustis. Yes.

The Witness. Here is one of them. [Producing a paper,]
Mr. Eustis. Read it, please.
Mr. Evarts. Haven't you something later than that? It is rather remote from our transaction of 1886.

Mr. Eustis. It is a consecutive history of the administration of Mr. Hackworth. It will not take long to read it.
Mr. Evarts. Are we to try these contracts? Do they prove themselves in any way to be improper, or what is it?
Mr. Eustis. It is in connection with the grand jury report.
Mr. Eustis. It is in connection with the grand jury report.
Mr. Eustis. It is in connection with the grand jury report.
Mr. Eustis. It is not already put into the record?
Mr. Eustis. It was the same he was dismissed and acquitted on.
The Witness. No, sir; I do not understand it so.

By Mr. Eustis:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. I want you to state from this record what took place, as you understand, under Mr. Hackworth's administration of his office, that goes to the effect of impeaching his standing as an official.

A. By the drawing of $100 worth of scrip more than the court allowed is one thing to show it. The making of these road contracts for $100 a mile when those roads were repaired in less than a month, and some 10 or 12 miles of it; that would go to show it. That was the reason the citizens enjoined the payment of it.

Mr. Evarts. These documents we can dispose of. We can see what they are, and it comes to an end. There does not seem to be a very important element of the state of feeling in 1876 about these particular transactions that we are look-the state of feeling in 1876 about these particular transactions that we are 100aing into.

Mr. Eustis. These petitioners here claim that they were banished from this community. They claim they were good citizens and were banished simply because they were Hepublicans. We show that their official conduct while in office was calculated to create a strong prejudice against them.

Mr. Evarts. I am willing in general to go into their character, but I do not propose to go into a trial of these contracts made in 1871 if I can help it. These other papers are in, although very remote, but still you can tell what happened. We can not try these contracts. What has it to do with being banished in 1886? They lived there twelve years afterwards.

Mr. Eustis. We denythat there was any banishment. We want to show that these people, on account of their own conduct, were so odious that they themselves did not think they ought to live in that community.

Mr. Evarts. But they did not drive them off in 1871 or 1874.

Mr. Evstis. They never drove them off at all, as we claim. I do not think it is necessary to go into the matter except generally.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. What do you say about these contracts at a hundred dollars a mile?
A. The road overseer made the contracts, and the commissioners' court, which was presided over by Mr. Hackworth, approved them. They were paid $100 a mile for repairing roads, and some of them were for 10 or 12 miles of oread.

Mr. Evarts. Just take out one and show us.

Q. What is the objection to that contract you speak of?

A. That the price was exorbitant. The work was done within about a onth.

Q. For how much less could it have been done?

A. They compromised at 30 cents on the dollar finally, and I suppose it could are been done for that amount or about that.

Q. With whom was that contract made, do you know?

A. With different parties; a dozen or more of them. They were all enjoined

A. What other official act do you know of or remember?
A. I do not remember.
Q. You have mentioned the overdrawing of money on one contract?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you have mentioned this $100-a-mile business?

Q. What other ometal act do you know of or remember?
A. I do not remember.
Q. You have mentioned the overdrawing of money on one-contract?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you have mentioned this $100-a-mile business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What others do you remember?
A. There are other things complained of by the grand jury. You are inquiring about Mr. Hackworth only?
Q. Only about Mr. Hackworth?
A. Not about other Republicans.
Q. Was his general administration of that office considered to be against the people of that county?
A. Yes, sir; it was.
Q. And they considered that he was acting in the interests of whom?
A. Of himself, his family, and political friends.
Q. And not in the interest of the people at large?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know anything about Mr. Hackworth's being driven out of the country?
A. No, sir; I do not; if he was driven out I do not know it.
Q. Do you believe he was driven out?
A. No, sir; I do not. if not believe it was necessary for him to leave at all unless he wanted to.
Q. Had he not incurred the odium of honest people in that county interested in good government, the property-owners?
A. Yes, sir; quite a number of them.
Q. What has been his business?
The WINNESS. Since he has been out of office?
Mr. EUSTIS, Yes; for the last few years.
A. He has advertised as a real-estate agent.
Q. Has he had any business?
A. Very little in the country court then that I know of. I do not remember a single transaction, although there may possibly have been some. I think he is principally engaged in colonizing the lower part of the State down there. I do not know a great deal about his private business.
Q. What do you mean by colonizing; do you mean colonizing negroes?
A. I do not know except from hearsay; but it is understood that he was colonizing the lower country down there with freedmen from that section of the country.
Q. What do you know about the defaleations of Republican officials there since you have been clerk of the court?

country.
Q. What do you know about the defaleations of Republican officials there since you have been clerk of the court?
A. Well, several of them have defaulted.

Q. Who are they?
A. Harvin for one, and Leib for another.
Q. Who else?

A. Harvin for one, and the second of the sec

A. I think Dr. Smith, the former tax-collector, compromised with the county for a claim that he was short on.

Q. Do you know whether these Republicans ran Harvin for sheriff after he was known to be a defaulter?

A. Yes, sir; he ran for sheriff in 1884, I think it was, on the Republican oket.

Q. After it was known that he was a defaulter to the county?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the law of Texas with regard to the filing of stubs with regard to

Q. What is the law of Texas with regard to the filing of stubs with regard to the county taxes?

A. The law requires one report to be made to the comptroller, one report to the county clerk, and the stubs are required to be filed in the county clerk's office. I think they are made out in triplicate now, and that one set may be kept for the tax-collector.

Q. Did the Republican officials comply with that law?

A. Not always.

Q. Did they fail to comply with it at any time?

A. Yes, sir; Mr. Harvin did.

Q. How long was he in office?

A. I don't remember, but I think he was there from 1876 up to the time he was indicted; I don't remember how long, but I think two or three terms.

Q. Was that intended as a check upon the collector?

A. Yes, sir.

was indicted; I don't remember now long, but I think two or three terms.
Q. Was that intended as a check upon the collector?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And without that check he could appropriate that money to his own use?
A. Yes, sir; he would be found out eventually, I suppose, but that was the object of it.

I desire to call attention to the fact that this witness, Hugh M. Lewis, answers that he had held office, and is now and has been the county clerk of Washington County since 1875. He is a Democrat, and has been elected in a strong Republican county five times in succession. I know Mr. Hugh M. Lewis well. He is a man who in any community in any State in this Union would be a popular, an influential, and a highly-esteemed man. You have heard his testimony. He has been indorsed in five successive elections, although a Democrat, by the Republicans and by the people of Washington County, a strong Republican county; and for that reason I call especial attention to his testimony, in which he speaks of Hackworth and Schutze and Moore, and he says they were not required to leave Washington County, that they were as safe there as he was, and that their exile is voluntary.

He states that the character of these men is bad, very bad. His testimony is full. He produces the records of the court showing the indictments against Hackworth, showing the report of the grand jury against him. The testimony is in every regard satisfactory, and shows that the good people of Washington County are being held responsible here by these bad men who presented the memorial, unjustly and without cause. Before passing to the testimony of Henry Muller, while the testimony of Mr. Hugh M. Lewis is fresh in the mind of the Senate, I desire to call attention to what the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections says with reference to these memorialists. It says:

THE PETITIONERS RESPECTABLE AND SUBSTANTIAL CITIZENS AT HOME.

The committee is unable to attach any importance to the efforts, in the testimony, to disparage the characters and lives of these petitioners.

But for the political agitations, the fierce passions, the violent and cruel and bloody incidents which mark the election of Washington County and its sequel, the committee is persuaded that the people of Brenham, where the petitioners had long been residents, would have found no occasion for any reflections upon them other than such as belonged to the heat of political contests for place and influence between opposing parties.

That is a statement of this report franked to the country, scattered broadcast in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in full view of the fact, and without mention of the fact, that out of some twenty-seven witnesses here who were summoned by the people of Washington County, about twenty of them declared them to be bad men, their characters and reputations to be bad.

I will except Mr. Moore, one of the memorialists, and will not claim that the same proportion of witnesses denounced him as a bad man that do the others, but enough of the best men in Washington County denounced J. L. Moore as a bad man and his character as being bad in the community where he lived to be ample in any court of justice in the world to condemn him.

I call attention to the statement in this report, because it is of a piece with the rest of the report on every other point in this investigation. The statement with reference to the character of these men is not a particle further from what the weight and bulk and mass of the testimony proves and establishes than is its other statements on other material points.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 380 and read the testimony of Henry Muller.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF HENRY MULLER.

Henry Muller, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

  Q. What local ticket did your paper support in 1886—the last elections. I advised the people to vote for the best men. I supported the Hepublican ticket in 1884; I mean in State and national affairs.

  Q. What ticket in 1886 was simply formed by a petition signed by hundreds of citizens of both parties requesting the then present officers to run again for their respective offices—the county officers.

  Q. Can you state about how many signed that call?

  Q. To the ticket in 1886 was simply formed by a petition signed by hundreds of citizens of both parties

- yes, sir.

  Q. What is the general reputation of C. Schutze in that community?

  A. It is very low.

  Q. What are the reasons, if you know, why he enjoys that reputation?

  A. I do not know much of my own personal experience.

  Q. I speak of what you have heard said, the general impression in the community.

  A. Not on account of his politics; I have never known an act of that kind.
  Q. How long has that been so?
  A. That has been so ever since I have been in Texas, where I live.
  Q. So that a Republican who attends to his business and works and votes for his party, who himself is a man of good standing and not obnoxious to the community, I understand you to say, is on precisely the same footing as a Democratic citizen would be?

Q. So far as your observation extends, are not the people in that community a law-abiding, peaceable people?

A. Yes, sir; they are.
Q. People who want good government?
A. Yes, sir; they are that.
Q. Is not one of the causes of prejudice against these gentlemen you have mentioned their attempt to control and unite the negro people and the negro vote against the white people and the white vote?

A. That is understood so.
Q. Is not that very dangerous to the peace of the community?
A. It is at times.
Q. And that is deprecated, is it not, by the good people of that community, Democrats and Republicans?
A. I would say that the uniting of the colored vote is not so much deprecated as the uniting of the colored vote to support men whom people do not respect or like.

I desire to call attention to the testimony of this witness, Henry Muller, who says he is a Republican, a consistent Republican; who says he has been a Republican for twenty-seven years; who hean; who says he has been a nepublican for twenty-seven years, who says that he fought in the Union Army during the war; who says that he is drawing a pension now as a Union soldier. He says he was in the Army from the beginning to the close of the war, and a little after. He served five years in the volunteer service, and after that he served in the regular Army. He says he has always supported the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President; that he has always supported the Republican nominees for governor and for State officers, but that he went heartily into this movement in behalf of the People's ticket in order to save the county of Washington from spoliation by the people who were led by these men, Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore.

the people who were led by these men, Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore.

He says of Hackworth that he used his power as a leader for his own interest. He says he has always managed to control the colored vote for his own ends. He says the character of Hackworth in the neighborhood in which he lives is very bad, and he says that Mr. Schutze is a very low, vile man. When asked if any man from the mere fact that he is a Republican is at all molested in that county, that is in Washington County, he says:

Q. Either in his social relations or his business relations or any other relations?

Here is a Union soldier, a pensioner of the Government, who testifies as I have read you, and I take the report of the honorable Committee on Privileges and Elections and I look in vain for any intimation from that committee that any such testimony has ever been given before it.

Mr. President, I propose to make the testimony taken in this case argue it. I desire to say but little in it. I simply desire to call attention to sworn testimony, testimony which was before the Committee on Privileges and Florians testimony which was before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, testimony which that committee have utterly ignored at the time they were sending to the country what purported to be a fair statement of the result of the investigation.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Texas if he will yield to me in order that I may move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business?

Mr. COKE. I will yield.
Mr. HARRIS. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, February 15, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, February 14, 1889.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXTRA COMPENSATION, EMPLOYÉS SIXTH AUDITOR'S OFFICE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, with a letter from the Sixth Auditor, a petition of employés in his bureau asking compensation for extra services from July 1, 1887, to September 30, 1888; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

GEORGE H. BECKWITH VS. THE UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting findings of fact in the case of George H. Beckwith vs. The United States; which was referred to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3865) to provide for writs of error or appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States in all cases involving the question of the jurisdiction of the courts below; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, a bill in exactly the same terms as this has already been unanimously reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House, and this was unanimously reported from the Senate Judiciary Committee. It is a short bill, but quite an important one; and in view of the importance of the subject involved I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Let it be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Beit enacted, etc., That in all cases where a final judgment or decree shall be rendered in a circuit court of the United States in which there shall have been a question involving the jurisdiction of the court, the party against whom the judgment or decree is rendered shall be entitled to an appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States to review such judgment or decree without reference to the amount of the same; but in cases where the decree or judgment does not exceed the sum of $5,000 the Supreme Court shall not review any question raised upon the record except such question of jurisdiction; such writ of error or appeal shall be taken and allowed under the same provisions of law as apply to other writs of error or appeals except as provided in the next following section.

SEC. 2. That in cases of judgments or decrees mentioned in the first section of this act, and heretofore rendered, where the period of limitation for taking writs of error or appeals in other cases has not expired, appeals or writs of error may be sued out at any time within one year after the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection, and the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HEIRS OF REAR-ADMIRAL CHARLES H. BALDWIN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the joint resolution (S. R. 125) authorizing the heirs of Rear-Admi. al Charles H. Baldwin, United States Navy, to receive a snuff-box set in diamonds from the Czar of Russia; which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

CLAIMS OF CALIFORNIA ON ACCOUNT OF INDIAN HOSTILITIES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3439) authorizing the Secretary of War to ascertain the amount of money which has been expended and the obligations assumed by the State of California growing out of Indian hostilities therein and upon the borders thereof not heretofore reimbursed by the United States.

Mr. THOMPSON, of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of that bill. It is a short bill, and simply authorizes the Secretary of War to make a report in regard to the claims of the State on account of these expenditures assumed by the State

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LANDES. I object.

Mr. HERMANN. I hope the gentleman will withdraw that objection. This bill has been favorably considered and reported. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky, the chairman of the Committee on War Claims, to state the facts in reference to it.

The SPEAKER But the interior has been week.

The SPEAKER. But objection has been made.

Mr. HERMANN. Then I ask unanimous consent that this bill be allowed to remain upon the Speaker's table for the present.

The SPEAKER. Without objection that order will be made.

RETURN OF BILL TO THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the following communication from the Senate:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 13, 1889. Ordered, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representa-tives to return to the Senate the bill of the Senate, 314, for the relief of Henry M. Rector.

The SPEAKER. Without objection this request will be complied

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. YARDLEY, for five days, on account of important business

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FORNEY. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to submit a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as 1010WS:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, having considered the same, beg leave to report that they recommend concurrence in the amendments of the Senate numbered 16, 90, and 93.

They recommend non-concurrence in the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 44, 45, 46, 47, 44, 95, 95, 15, 15, 25, 25, 36, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 63, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 91, 92, 94, 45, 96, and 97.

Mr. FORNEY I may be the adoption of the report

Mr. FORNEY. I move the adoption of the report.
Mr. BUCHANAN. There certainly ought to be some statement as to the amendments recommended to be concurred in. The House is entitled to some knowledge as to what it is acting upon.

Mr. FORNEY. The amendments amount to very little, involving the sum of $50,000 or $60,000 in the aggregate as increased by the Senate. But we were not satisfied that we ought to agree, and simply nonconcur in the amendments and ask a conference. Then the conferees of the House will be able to determine the ground of the increase.

Mr. BUCHANAN. But I refer to those amendments wherein the committee recommend concurrence.

Mr. FORNEY. Let them be read.
Mr. WEAVER. Is there any new Is there any new legislation?

Mr. FORNEY. None whatever.
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendments in which concurrence is recommended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment numbered 16, page 6, after the word "dollars," insert "or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Amendment numbered 90, page 72, line 19, strike out "the" and insert "for the "

Amendment numbered 93, page 80, line 1, strike out "of" where it first oc-

Mr. FORNEY. The amendments, the gentleman will see, are purely clerical.

Mr. BUCHANAN. The gentleman could have stated that these were merely formal amendments.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Mr. FORNEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORNEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House request a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes on this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced as the managers on the part of the House Mr. FORNEY, Mr. RANDALL, and Mr. CANNON.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a privileged report. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and to ask the adoption of the accompanying report, and request a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, together with the amendments of the Senate thereto, having considered the same, beg leave to report as follows: They recommend concurrence in the amendments of the Senate thereto, 13. They recommend non-concurrence in the amendments numbered 2, 3, and 13. They recommend non-concurrence in the amendments numbered 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 11. and 12.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the rep Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Is this a report from the committee of con-

The SPEAKER. It is not. It is a privileged report from the Committee on Appropriations, and the gentleman makes the report and asks for a conference.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to ask the gentleman from Texas what items he asks non-concurrence in.

Mr. SAYERS. The first item we ask non-concurrence in is the first amendment, which is:

That the sums appropriated by this act shall be available until expended, and to be expended under the direct supervision of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, created by the fortifications appropriation act approved September 22, 1888, and in the manner prescribed by said act.

We also ask non-concurrence in the fourth amendment, in which the Senate struck out:

For needful casemates and cable galleries to render it possible to operate submarine mines; for continuing torpedo experiments and for practical instruction of engineer troops in the details of the service, 330.

We also move to non-concur in the amendments numbered 5, 6, and 7, which are subdivisions of the fourth amendment. They are as follows:

(5) For needful casemates and cable galleries to render it possible to operate submarine mines, $250,000.
(6) For continuing torpedo experiments and for practical instruction of engineer troops in the details of service, $30,000.
(7) For the purchase of movable submarine torpedoes, propelled and controlled at will by power transmitted from shore stations, $200,000.

In the eighth amendment the Senate strikes out that provision of the House bill which relates to the test of experimental guns-

Procured under the act of September 22, 1888, namely, for one 10-inch wire-wound gun, steel, $28,000; for one 12-inch gun, steel-hooped, $39,500.

We also move to non-concur in the Senate amendment numbered 9. which provides-

For the purchase of machine guns, musket caliber, of American manufacture, $20,000.

A provision of that kind has already passed the House in the Army bill. We also ask to non-concur in the eleventh amendment-

For the manufacture of forty caissons and ten combined battery wagons and forges for 3.2-inch field guns, $43,274.

And also in the twelfth amendment-

For procuring the necessary instruments and other materials and for the proper installation of instruments for conducting the annual heavy artillery practice of the Army, $20,000.

We also move to concur in the thirteenth amendment, which provides that all material purchased under this act shall be of American

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The gentleman will state it. The SPEAKER.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman, as I understand, is entitled, as a matter of privilege given to the Committee on Appropriations, to report this bill at any time. Has he the right to insist upon action upon the report at any time?

The SPEAKER. He has not, except in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then I make the point of order that it shall be considered in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Then that order will be made.

DIVISION OF RESERVATION OF SIOUX INDIANS.

Mr. PEEL. I desire to call up, as a matter of privilege, the bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes. It is a bill that was considered a few evenings ago, and the previous question was ordered upon the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois, with an amendment thereto by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The SPEAKER. It is not privileged, then.

Mr. PEEL. It is not privileged, then
Mr. PEEL. It is on the passage of the bill.
Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, the bill was considered under a special order a few evenings ago, and an amendment was offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON], and to that an amendment was offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINEIDGE], and the previous question was ordered on the amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up for consideration the bill the title of which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLOUNT. Before the bill is taken up I desire to understand whether it is likely to take any time, or whether there will be a yea-

Mr. PEEL. It is the understanding that we shall only take a vote.

If it requires that I will withdraw it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is under the impression that this order was made by unanimous consent, and that some debate was provided for in the order.

Mr. PEEL. That, however, by agreement, has been withdrawn. Mr. PAYSON. That was the arrangement by unanimous consent in the House when this bill was under consideration. Since that time I have said to the gentleman from Arkansas, the chairman of the committee, that I will be content with a simple vote upon the two propositions; first on the proposition made by the gentleman from Kentucky, as modified by myself. If that shall be carried it will end the matter.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope unanimous consent will be given to change the order

Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas. What is the bill? The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The title was again reported.

Mr. HOOKER. Is that a Senate or a House bill?
Mr. PEEL. That is the bill that was considered the other night. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to modifying the order so as not to provide for debate, the previous order having made that provision? The Chair hears none.

Mr. PEEL. I ask unanimous consent to state the amendments so that the House may understand them.

That amendment applies to the disposition of the land acquired under the bill. The amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE] is to let settlers have it free. The amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON] is to let the honorably discharged soldiers and sailors have it free, the same proposition which was voted upon in the Oklahoma bill. I hope both amendments will be voted down.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment. This order was made by consent, and the business is in some confusion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Breckinginge, of Kentucky, moved to strike out the proviso set out in lines 8 to 18 of section 21.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proviso.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided. That each settler under and in accordance with the provisions of said homestead acts shall pay to the United States, for the land so taken by him, in addition to the fees provided by law, the sum of $1.25 per acre for all lands disposed of within the first three years after the taking effect of this act, and the sum of 75 cents per acre for all lands disposed of within the next two years following thereafter, and 50 cents per acre for the residue of the lands then undisposed of, and shall be entitled to a patent therefor according to said homestead laws, and after the full payment of said sums.

Mr. PAYSON. That amendment was accepted by the gentleman from Kentucky, including the next proviso, ending with the word "acra" The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the additional proviso. The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That all lands undisposed of under this act at the expiration of ten years from the taking effect of this act shall be paid for by the United States at 50 cents per acre.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposing to strike out all that has been read by the Clerk.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 51, noes 58.

So the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The following amendment is proposed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

The following amendment is proposed by the gentleman from Thinds [24].

"Strike out, in line 25, page 24, the words 'except to said sums' and insert:

"For it is expressly provided that the rights of honorably discharged Union soldiers and sailors in the late civil war to make homes on the public lands under the existing homestead laws shall not in any degree be impaired by the passage of this bill, and the right of all such honorably discharged Union soldiers or sailors to make homestead entry and perfect the same by occupancy under the existing homestead law shall extend to any and all land which shall be opened to any settlement by the provisions of this bill."

The expection was put on agreeing to the amendment; and the Speaker

The question was put on agreeing to the amendment; and the Speaker declared that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. PAYSON. I call for division.
The House divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 81.
Mr. CHEADLE. No quorum.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that point.

The SPEAKER appointed as tellers Mr. CHEADLE and Mr. PEEL. The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 52, noes 112. So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PEEL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up a matter of privilege

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I desire to call up a privileged matter.

ADMISSION OF DAKOTA, ETC.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the conference report on the bill S. 185, which was submitted on Saturday last and printed in the RECORD. It is a bill to provide for the admission of the State of South Dakota into the Union, and for the organization of the Territory of North Dakota.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the conference report.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to raise the question of consideration upon

The SPEAKER. Unless the reading of the report is dispensed with, the proper time to raise the question of consideration is after the report has been read. It has been printed in the RECORD, however, and unless some gentleman desires to have it read, the question can be taken without the reading. Is the reading of the report demanded?

Mr. SPRINGER. It had better be read.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Accompanying the report there is a request for further instruction.

The SPEAKER. That will come after the report. The instructions are no part of the report.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, we have only thirteen legislative days left, including this, and it does seem to me that this bill ought not to be put forward at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks to have the report read. The matter is not debatable.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, is this matter debatable?

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration is not debatable.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, is this matter debatable.

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration is not debatable.

The Clerk read the report.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House proceed now to consider this report?

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to call up the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 105, noes 23.

So the House decided to consider the report.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now move that the House further insist on its amendments to the Senate bill-

The SPEAKER. The House must first dispose of this report.

Mr. SPRINGER. The report simply states the fact that the conferees have failed to agree.

The SPEAKER. Still the House must dispose of the report before it takes any further action. The question is upon agreeing to the report.

Several Members. Let it be read.

The SPEAKER. It has just been read. It simply states that the conferees have not been able to agree.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now move that the House further insist upon its amendments to the Senate bill and agree to the conference re-

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Pending that, I move that the House recede from its amendments, in accordance with the resolution offered by me the other day.

The SPEAKER. The motion to recede has priority over the motion to insist. But the Clerk will read the resolution of the gentleman. The Chair does not know whether the entire resolution has precedence.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House instruct the new conferees to recede

The SPEAKER. The only motions now in order are that the House insist, and that the House recede. After these motions are disposed of, if a further conference should be ordered by the House, it will be in order under the practice of the House to entertain a motion for instructions. The gentleman's motion now is that the House recede from its amendments. That is in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. The adoption of that motion would leave the South Dakota bill just as it came from the Senate, with the amendments that the Senate has put upon it. Therefore I hope that motion will be

The SPEAKER. This question is debatable; but the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] is first entitled to the floor, if he desires to occupy it.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I desire to state briefly the proposition as it stands before the House now.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. After the House shall have voted to further insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference it will then be in order, as I understand, to offer any

The SPEAKER. The Chair would so hold. The proposition for instructions is not now pending.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from New York, as I understand, does not now desire to move that the House recede absolutely from its amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has made that motion.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I have made that motion. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I now?

The SPEAKER. Under the rules the gentleman is entitled to one

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state briefly the position of the question as it is now presented to the House. The bill as passed the House embraced the proposition for an enabling act for New Mexico and also for a resubmission of the question of division to the people of both Dakotas. It also provided that the Territory of Montana may come in by proclamation of the President. A motion was made to provide for the admission of Washington Territory by proclamation, which motion was lost, as was also the proposition to provide for the admission of North Dakota by proclamation. tion made by me to recede involves the dropping out of this omnibus bill of New Mexico, receding from the proposition for a new vote upon the question of division—eliminating that from the bill—and providing further that the Territories of Washington, Montana, and North Dakota may come in, all by proclamation of the President or all by future act of Congress. The proposition made by me is that we shall recede from the pending omnibus bill as passed by the House in respect of those matters

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman allow me an inquiry? Will these three Territories—Montana, Washington, and North Dakota—come in by proclamation or by act of Congress if your motion to recede should prevail?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. In whichever way the House may di-ct. Now, Mr. Speaker—— Mr. COX. My colleague will allow me to state that I desire to propose a substitute for the instructions moved by him, so as to strike out all the matter proposed and to bring in these Territories by proclamation only

Mr. BAKER, of New York. In a moment I will yield to my friend to enable him to offer an amendment or substitute to that effect.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman's motion to recede should prevail, will not that action pass the Senate bill?

Mr. SPRINGER. Of course.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. That is true; but it involves some consecsions on the vert of the Senate conference.

Mr. BAKER, of the Senate conferees.

Mr. STRUBLE. On what points, may I inquire?

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Some minor details. We propose to have Washington, Montana, and North Dakota come in under proclamation, with an exception, perhaps, in the case of North Dakota. The disposition of the conferees is to yield to either of the two propositions, and have all three Territories come in under proclamation, or all three by future act of Congress. My colleague from New York [Mr. Cox] proposes to amend the instructions; and we shall have no serious objection to that. But Washington and Montana, bear in mind-

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. How can there be any amendment of the instructions if we adopt the motion to recede? The effect of that motion, as I understand, will be that there will be no further

Mr. BAKER, of New York. That is a matter for future considera-

Mr. COX. I should like the Chair to state the effect of agreeing to the motion to recede. When do the gentlemen's instructions become ertinent? If we recede does not that pass the Senate bill?
The SPEAKER. Of course, if the House should recede from its amendments no instructions are necessary.

Mr. SPRINGER. It would pass the Senate bill.

Mr. COX. As I have said, the effect of agreeing to the motion to recede is to pass the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. It passes the Senate bill.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. The Senate bill does not embrace North Dakota, Washington, or Montana.

Then you do not want to make the motion to recede. Mr. BAKER, of New York. No. I do not want to pass the Senate

If we insist on our amendments it goes back to the conference committee in order that they may report an amendment bringing in Washington, Montana, and North Dakota.

The SPEAKER. If the House recedes from its amendment to the Senate bill, the Senate bill is passed and becomes the law when approved by the President. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. BÄKER, of New York. My amendment, then, is not now in

The SPEAKER. It is not in order now if it is an instruction. It will be in order as soon as the House determines to insist and agree to the further conference

Mr. SPRINGER. Then withdraw your amendment.
Mr. BAKER, of New York. I withdraw my amendment.
The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the House will insist on its amendments to the Senate bill and request a further conference.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The SPEAKER. Now the amendment of the gentleman from New York will be in order.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. My amendment will come in as an instruction, and I ask that it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House instruct the new conferees to recede from the amendments to the Senate bill 185 in the following respects:

1. That the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed new State thereof may be excluded from the bill.

2. That the bill may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President, under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota, with provisions for a new election of State officers, and without a new vote on the question of division.

3. Further providing that the prepared State of State of

A. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis, i. e.:

(a) All of them under proclamation by the President; or

(b) All of them by formal acts of admission.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. In addition to the observations already made by me I wish to say, Mr. Speaker, there are some questions relating to the election of delegates, apportionment, date of admission, and resubmission of the South Dakota constitution which can be provided for by the conferees in their report. The material points are stated in the resolution which has just been read.

The main point of course is, as the House will see, there is eliminated from the bill New Mexico. It is evident there can be no agreement for New Mexico under an enabling act. As to South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington there is no difference of opinion. As to New Mexico there is wide difference on both sides of the House. Personally, I do not have any serious objection to considering New Mexico in this bill; but the differences are so marked we have agreed it shall be brought up in a separate bill for future consideration. Therefore under this instruction the conferees will eliminate from the bill New Mexico, and it will provide for the admission of Washington, Montana, and North Dakota by proclamation or by future legislation. As to the matter of details there will be no difficulty. If this be carried out by the House, it will give to the Union four new States before the end of the year.

I yield the floor to my colleague, [Mr. Cox].

Mr. PAYSON. Before the gentleman takes his seat I would like to ask him a question.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Certainly.
Mr. PAYSON. I should like to inquire wherein there exists any necessity for a resubmission of the Sioux Falls constitution to the people of that Territory? For it looks to me as if we were simply continuing the same old policy of delay, delay, delay, without any end.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Not at all.

Mr. PAYSON. I do not see what else it means.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. It is absolutely necessary to resubmit it because there are some amendments which are necessary—as to the division lines, for instance.

Mr. PAYSON. That could all be provided for by the act of Con-

Mr. BAKER, of New York. It is deemed necessary that there should be a resubmission on both sides.

Mr. PAYSON. There is one gentleman on this side, at least, who does not agree to that.

my time, and yield the remainder of it to my colleague from New York [Mr. Cox].

Mr. CoX. Mr. Speaker, I shall propose at the proper time to offer a substitute for the instructions proposed by my colleague [Mr. BAKER]. The amendment which I propose is substantially the proposition of my colleague, except that I insert a new election for both State and Federal My substitute also strikes out that much of the provision as to North Dakota, Montana, and Washington, which alternatively requires either proclamation or formal action hereafter by Congress. My substi-tute provides that their admission be allowed under a proclamation alone of the President. As to the other matters not contained in the instructions referred to, such as fixing the day of the convention, the number of members, the boundaries of the districts, matters connected with school lands, and subjects of that immaterial character, I would leave them to the sound judgment of the conferees

Now, I will not take up much time in discussing this matter. I have already talked a good deal about it. I gave my views when this question was presented before, and when I addressed the House at that time I indicated that I would look perhaps to the Senate for certain legislation, in case we could not get here all that was desirable.

Let us thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Springer] for giving us this amounts it at the senate that was desirable.

ing us this opportunity to act promptly. We are almost within a fort-night of the end of this Congress, but there is yet time, if fortunately we seize it, to prepare these Territories so that they may come in at the next Congress by the action of this one.

It would seem that on three points the Senate and House differ. House declared for New Mexico. The Senate opposes. clared for a submission of the question of division of Dakota. The Senate opposes such submission. The Senate favors, with a view to prevent delay, a proclamation by the President to bring in these Territories and a resubmission, with which the House should be satisfied. To reconcile these disagreements is the object of my substitute. On these several points it is hoped that there may be a concurrence of the two branches, so that some law or finality shall be assured during the present session. There should not be undue delay nor hasty agreement. The subject-matter calls for moderation, discretion, and dignity.

As to the first point of difference, I am well satisfied, as I have stated in remarks heretofore, that New Mexico, if admitted as a State, would be "republican," not merely in form, but in partisanship.

She prepared a constitution in 1876. The bill of admission passed both branches. It was lost through disagreement on amendments, just as she may now fail of admission. Any exclusion of the Territory on political grounds, whatever may be our party bias, is to be deprecated. It is therefore an act of great self-abnegation on the part of the Republicans of this House and of the Senate to reject New Mexico on grounds which I think are unsubstantial.

If I am right in my judgment, and I have good foundation for it, it would now seem impossible to make New Mexico Democratic. Her last two Legislatures were heavily Republican, and at present there are over two-thirds Republican majority in each branch. The election of our friend Mr. Joseph—the Delegate—in 1884, was owing to a split in the Republican party. But the two Republican candidates had a majority over Mr. Joseph of 2,851. The same vigilant gentleman was elected in 1886 owing to a bad nomination of the Republicans. His popularity was tested by his election in 1888, and it was owing to the fact that he championed the rights of the Territory to admission.

These facts, in addition to other data, show, à priori, that New Mexico will be Republican, and if the Republican Senate insists that she shall not be admitted, I would not make my insistence too emphatic against their wishes. And, therefore, since it is impossible to agree with the Senate on that point, I would yield it. I would yield it, because I would not nullify, by the failure of this bill, the good work as to the other Territories already done by both Senate and House.

To conclude as to New Mexico, Mr. Speaker, allow me to say that in former remarks I presented all the points possible in my judgment for her admission. I know, and so advise gentlemen on both sides of the House, that New Mexico will not be admitted by the action of the Senate now. They stand on that.

Mr. DUNN. And we should stand on it.

Mr. COX. And so we all stand, but other Territories unhappily

As to the question of the division of Dakota, all who have taken the pains to inquire know how absolutely foregone is that conclusion. For myself I would not vote for Dakota nor for this bill, unless she were divided—not even to conform to the wishes of every one of her people, whether expressed separately by North and South Dakota or by the Territory as a whole. My reasons have already been given, and they are insuperable.

I would, therefore, yield to the Senate in that regard. The vote on the division is not a matter of great consequence, in view of the fact that it will not delay admission, and division is beyond peradventure.

As to the third idea, of admitting these Territories by proclamation of the President, I am entirely content, as I have said before. There are precedents as well as reasons for such action; and in view of long nes not agree to that.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I desire now to reserve ten minutes of I would follow them as to the other Territories which have provided. constitutions, and whose constitutions, if they do not remain as the will of the people, may be resubmitted under such conditions as the conference made provide.

Therefore, with a view of testing what the good sense and patriotism of both parties and both branches of Congress may accomplish, I offer the substitute to the instructions of my colleague from New York [Mr. BAKER

As to the question of division, we also know now, though some did not know it last session or at the beginning of this session, but every man who cares to inform himself now knows that there is no question left in Dakota as to the wisdom and propriety of dividing that Territory. Time, circumstances, political questions, the last election, and other things have inexorably decided that there shall be a division of the Territory.

As to the matter of bringing in North and South Dakota promptly by proclamation, including Montana and Washington, after their constitutions have been submitted or under their present constitutions or under resubmission of their constitutions to the people, why ought we not to be content with that arrangement? There are precedents for such ac-There is the case of Colorado. It is a prompt way of deciding questions that have hovered over Congress for many years. They ought to be settled. No question of "republican form" is possible. It is absurd to question the certainty of their institution as "republican" States in every conveivable definition of the word "republican," except its partisan meaning. The proclamation will conform to the constitutional requirement as well as to the expressed will of the people.

As I have said here before, these Territories have the requisite resources and population. They have all the intelligence and wisdom to conduct their own business as States. Now is a fit time, I think-the best time of all others-to complete the work which has been begun under the auspices of my distinguished friend, the chairman of the committee. I say it is a good time, because we never saw the United States of America in such a condition as now to contemplate and master its

Mr. Speaker, the country should congratulate itself, or Congress at least should, on the fact that we are permitted to look after our own domain, interests, and Government without foreign complications.

The black cloud that hovered over Hayti and over this House yesterday has happily rolled by. [Laughter.] Grim-visaged War, which the other day was impending with Germany, hath smoothed his wrinkled

My constituents of Teutonic origin can drink their beer and pursue their thritty occupations undisturbed by the chatter of the quadruma-bus activities of the remote Samoan Islands. We hope that in that mote Pacific group the inhabitants may continue to eat their breadmit in peace, while the monkeys swing with independent though prehensile grip to the cocoanut trees that make Pago Pago so alluring to commerce.

We may also congratulate ourselves that the great fishery question, which bid fair to add new horrors to the Arctic, remains in restful quietude-cool as the borean ice.

We are left, therefore, Mr. Speaker, to pursue the problems con-nected with immigration and the formation into States of our splendid domain, which is to be filled by our enterprising native and adopted

It is a matter, however, that has no felicitation along with it, that our gro ing Territories have not received that welcome invitation to statehood which their population, resources, and desires demand. That they have been bowing with cap in hand before Congress, or, rather, before our Committee on Territories, for several years is a matter of regret. It is worse. It is a matter of peril. It is a matter of discontent and unhappiness to them and a peril to public liberty.

I do not say that the honorable chairman of that Committee on Territories [Mr. SPRINGER] has been derelict in urging organism for Oklahoma or statehood for other Territories.

A MEMBER. He is a bad man.

Mr. COX. Oh. no; he is not a bad man. [Laughter.] Why, the gentleman from Illinois has labored in season and out of season over our vast realm and our Territories. He has looked after these Territories in the Northwest. All credit to him. He has been vigilant; he has been active; and still with all his digging around the young plants our Territorial and Stately growth in the West has had no result except a little flower which we have seen in his buttonhole; and now even that is gone. [Laughter.] All his work is fruitless, utterly fruitless

Let us decorate our friend from Illinois with something more substantial than flowers. Let him have some fruits as the result of his labor, Therefore I propose to end this matter by a substitute to the original instruction, which I will send up to be read at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the House instruct the new conferees to recede from the amendments to the Senate bill 1×5 in the following respects:

1. That the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed new State thereof may be excluded from the bill.

may be excluded from the bill.

2. That the bil may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President, under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota, with provisions for a new election of State officers, and without a new vote on the question of division.

3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis, and all of them under proclamation by the President.

Further, that all such matters as relate to the election of delegates and apportionment of the districts in which members to the convention are to be elected, the date of holding the convention, and the date of the resubmission of the South Dakota constitution, and the location of the temporary seat of government in South Dakota, and such other matters as are not included in the instructions above recited to be referred to the committee of conference for their discretion.

Mr. BAKER of New York. I have no objection to that, and will

Mr. COX. Iwant to insert, after the word "State," "and also Federal elections."

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I accept that.

Mr. COX. One word more, and then I will yield a portion of my time. As I have remarked heretofore, and I desire to give additional emphasis to it, I do not believe now that we should make the admission of New Mexico dependent upon Dakota, or vice versa.

This is not just to either Territory. Let each one of these Territories stand on its own merits in every regard. [Cries of "That's right!" on the Republican side. ] By taking this ground now we shall save great trouble, complexity, and anxiety when we legislate to bring in other Territories hereafter.

A fortnight only remains of the present Congress, and these Territorial matters are still in chaos. Better had we attempted nothing nothing whatever-than to fail now; and rather than fail now, I am willing, substantially, to come into accord with members of both branches that some practical and conclusive result may follow our ef-

I now yield to the honorable gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE] Mr. STRUBLE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say, as a member of the Committee on Territories of this House, that I am glad of the present indications of success in this great and important measure, and I am glad that the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER], a member of the committee of conference, is willing to accept the proposition ma e by his colleague from New York [Mr. Cox]. Here is an opportunity to lay aside all partisan considerations and deal with this great question of the admission of these Territories in a spirit of true patriotism. Here is an opportunity afforded both sides to rise above questions of party politics and reach out a hand towards these great Territories and welcome them into the Union. Partisan consideration aside, patriotism to the front! Let us unite together as Republicans and Democrats in adopting this proposition, which is far removed from the low and sometimes disgraceful considerations of partisanship.

One word in relation to New Mexico. I opposed the proposition to admit that Territory as a State. I did so, well knowing the fact to which the gentleman from New York has referred, namely, her disposition to vote the Republican ticket. I did not and do not believe that, in respect to important and essential requisitions, New Mexico is entitled to present admission. I think her admission should be deferred a little while longer; but I think and I believe that the policy of the next Congress will be to deal with that Territory in a spirit of fairness and in a spirit of proper liberality, with the view of doing in her case that which is patriotic and non-partisan. I hope, in conclusion, then, that we may unite here and now in support of this proposition of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox].

Mr. SPINOLA. I want a little time.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I yield five minutes to my colleague from New York [Mr. SPINOLA].

Mr. SPINOLA. I do not know that I am on the same side as my friend.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. That is all right.

Mr. SPINOLA. Mr. Speaker, I have listened with some attention so as to hear if any of the gentlemen in favor of this proposition would assign a reason why New Mexico should not occupy the same position as Montana and Washington. I have heard no reason given except that, for certain political reasons, it is premature to admit New Mexico at this time. To-day we are enjoying a sort of a love feast by setting aside political questions; at least I judge so from the course of the discussion up to this time. I want it to be distinctly understood that I will vote for no measure unless New Mexico is put upon the same footing with Montana and Washington, and that is where I believe this side of the House ought to stand, as I do not agree that it is good statesmanship to oppose the admission of New Mexico on account of the religious opinions of a large majority of its inhabitants.

It is all very well to talk about what the next Congress will do, but my experience has taught me to believe that when the next Congress comes into power this side of the House may look for but very few favors, and they will get no considerat on whatever for any measure which will have the least shadow of a tendency towards strengthening the Democratic party in this country. The admission of New Mexico they are opposed to, they say, because it has some proclivity toward Republicanism. If it has, let it be Republican, but place it upon the same basis as, and give it the same privileges that you propose to concede to, Montana and Washington. There is no good objection to putting it there that I can see, and I have heard no reason given on the other side why it should not occupy that position before this House.

If we on this side are to concede everything here-which we are about doing, because we are about bringing in three or four Republican States to put the Senate of the United States where the Democratic party can not regain control of it in the next quarter of a century-let us at least insist upon this one point: there will be no more Territories to come in to make new States, and therefore we shall have to fight the battle upon common ground and shall have to carry some of the Republican States and bring in Democratic Senators from them instead of bringing then in from new States.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That is a fair field.

Mr. SPINOLA. Oh, it is a fair field for your side and I do not blame you for trying to occupy it. [Laughter.] I would do it myself if I was in your place. But, Mr. Speaker, for the reasons I have stated, I shall vote against this proposition unless New Mexico is granted the same privileges as Montana and Washington.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I want to say, in reply to my distinguished friend and colleague from New York [Mr. Spinola], that I have been and am very much of the same disposition that he has expressed. I feel very friendly towards New Mexico; but this proposi-tion to eliminate it from the pending bill is in the nature of a concession. I do not believe that my friend from New York is willing to keep four Territories out of the Union because perchance there is not a unanimons sentiment in favor of New Mexico. We are all alike in favor of the admission into the Union of States in the shortest possible time; we desire that every foot of our territory shall come into the Union under proper conditions. I believe that in the next Congress we shall bring into the Union four other States—New Mexico, Wyoming, Idaho, and Arizona. A bill has been reported from the Committee on Territories for Idaho, Arizona, and Wyoming. New Mexico may come in; but I am opposed to the idea of bunching Territories. I want each Territory and each State to come in upon its own merits; I desire that they shall be considered independently of each other; and I do not believe there is any disposition on the floor of Congress to keep out one State because another can not come in without due consideration. I am proud of the spirit manifested on both sides of the House and so ably reflected by my honored colleague [Mr. Cox].

Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to yield two minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR], and then I propose to move the previous ques-

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, personally I am in favor of the admission of any Territory that has the requisite population. I have paid no attention and hereafter shall give no weight to any argument directed to establish the proposition that the people are not capable of self-gov-ernment. I believe that the way to do with men against whom any such imputation is made is not to exclude them, but to admit them to the full rights of citizenship and to membership in this Union, trusting that this will lead them to ability to maintain their rights and perform their duties as citizens.

I should be glad as an individual to have the opportunity of voting for the admission of New Mexico on the same footi g as the other States. I believe that the Republican party fifteen years ago made no mistake when they voted for the admission of New Mexico into the Union; and I believe that had New Mexico been then admitted, she would to-d y have not merely the population necessary to admission into the Union, but a population of 400,000 or 500,000. I believe, however, that the admission of New Mexico is impossible under the present circumstances. The only way in which we can hope to secure justice to Dakota, which has been long delayed, is to provide for the adoption of the substitute recommended by the gentleman from New York. I believe it is the duty of this House to accept that; and then we can admit these Territories upon a non-partisan basis.

I want to say further, Mr. Speaker, that if the Republican party in the next Congress should fail to admit New Mexico, they will find that in the Northwestern States where the people believe in the capacity of man for self-government, it will injure the Republican party. They will lose votes i they fail to admit New Mexico. I would prefer that each of these States should be admitted in a separate bill and on its own merits, but under the circumstances I shall vote for the proposition of the gentleman from New York which provides for the admission of South Dakota and for the organization of the Territories of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington, and accomplishes an act of long delayed justice.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I now demand the previous question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the gentleman will not do that, Mr. BAKER, of New York. Of course I do not want to interfere with the time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER].
Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman can reserve the remainder of his time and allow me to take the floor.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Certainly.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] has thirty-five minutes remaining.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I reserve that time.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state briefly the differences that arose in the conference committee between the conferees on the part of the Senate and those on the part of the House, or at least the majority of them. The Senate conferees proposed as a basis of agreement on this bill that the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed State of New Mexico should be excluded from the bill, and that the proposed State of South Dakota should be admitted with the Sioux Falls constitution, provision being made for a new election of State officers, as provided in these instructions, without any further vote in the Territory upon the question of division. The other matters, it was believed on both sides, could be arranged without any instruction whatever from the House. On the other hand, the conferees representing the House stated in the conference that they were willing to submit the question of the exclusion of New Mexico from this bill to a vote of the two Houses of Congress and would be governed by that instruction, but that they would insist upon a vote being taken in Da-kota on the question of division. In a spirit of compromise we proposed to recede from that portion of our amendment which requires a majority of all the votes cast in both North and South Dakota to authorize division; we propose that the vote be taken in all the Territory, and that a majority of the votes cast in the whole be sufficient to decide the question whether there should be division or not.

Mr. HOOKER. Let me make an inquiry of the gentleman from II-linois.

Mr. SPRINGER. Certainly.
Mr. HOOKER. Are you in favor of receding from that portion of the agreement made as to New Mexico?

Mr. SPRINGER. I am not.
Mr. HOOKER. What is the position of the committee on that sub-

Mr. SPRINGER. They insist on retaining New Mexico in the bill or leaving it to be determined by the two Houses. We are only the instrument of the two Houses, and will be bound by their instruction. The majority of the conferees on the part of the House were in favor of retaining New Mexico in the bill.

I am of the opinion that all these questions could be arranged without instructions. The conferees, however, thought there should be a vote in South Dakota on the question of the relocation of the temporary seat of gove nment, as agreed to by the House and suggested by the Delegate from Dakota [Mr. GIFFORD].

The majority of the House conferees were in favor of the admission of South Dakota into the Union according to the amendment submit-ted by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Perkins] and agreed to by the House almost without division. That amendment required there should be resubmission of the question of division.

As to the question of excluding New Mexico, I desire to ask the tention of the House, and especially of the other side of the House the history of the efforts of New Mexico to be admitted as a State the Union and to her c aims to admission.

In 1850 the Territory of New Mexico adopted a constitution, el a Representative to Congress, and the Legislature elected two Un...a States Senators, who came to Washington and asked to be admitted. Congress admitted only a Delegate on the floor of this House, refusing to admit the Senators or to pass a bill for the admission of the Territory as a State into the Union.

In 1874, at the first session of the Forty-third Congress, when Stephen B. Elkins was Delegate from that Territory, he introduced a bill for the admission of New Mexico into the Union as a State. That Lill was referred to the Committee on Territories of the House, and Mr. Mc-Kee, from the Committee on Territories, submitted a unanimous report from that committee, May, 1874, first session of the Forty-third Congress, that Congress being nearly two-thirds Republican in both branches; and that report was adopted in committee without any minority or dissenting views being submitted.

I wish to call the attention of my Republican friends to that report, because it was the basis of action in that Congress. It states:

New Mexico is three times as large as Ohio, larger than all New England and New York, and one hundred and sixteen times larger than Rhode Island.

It has a population of 135,000 aside from the Pueblos or village Indians, who from time immemorial have been agriculturists and among the best citizens of our Territory, and who now number little short of 10,000, making a total population of over 140,000 people, mostly a quiet pastoral people and as truly loyal to the Government under which they live as any people under the sun; that at the time of taking the last census there were in this Territory 100,000 people living in the many various mining districts remote from the mass of the settlements.

On March 3, when that Congress was about to adjourn finally, a final vote in the House was taken on that question.

I want further to call attention to the fact that at that session of Congress an act was passed to enable Colorado to be admitted as a State into the Union. The bill for New Mexico and the bill for Colorado were running along together through this House and through the Senate. The Colorado bill was passed, but the New Mexico bill failed. At that time Colorado did not have to exceed 60,000 population, and it was estimated a year and a half later the population was 100,000. New Mexico, still being in the shackles of Territorial government, had only increased from 135,000 to 175,000, while Colorado, clothed in the habiliments of statehood had increased from 60,000 to over 500,000. Every gentleman acquainted with these two Territories, and their climate and soil, knows there is more room in New Mexico, more resources upon which to build a State, than in Colorado,

The bill which was introduced at that time, and unanimously reported, passed this House by a very large majority, there being 164 in the affirmative to 54 in the negative. That was a Republican House the affirmative to 54 in the negative. That was a Republican House of Representatives. Some of the gentlemen who voted for that bill at the time mentioned are also members of the present Congress, and I notice amongst them the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BUTLER], the member from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], whom I see before me now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. HARMER], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL], and amongst them were other gentlemen who at that time were members of the House but who are now in the Senate, as Mr. FARWELL, of Illinois, the Senator from Maine, Mr. FRYE, and the Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. SAWYER. Also amongst those who were then members of this House, and voted ay, but are now out of Congress, I find the then Representative from Michigan, Mr. O. D. Conger, the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Charles Foster, and Hon. William Lawrence, of Ohio, well known to all of you as Comptroller of the Treasury afterwards. There were a number of other gentlemen distinguished since, who voted for that bill. It went to the Senate and was passed at the second session of that Congress by a vote

Senate and was passed at the second session of that Congress by a vote of 32 in the affirmative to only 11 in the negative. Every Republican Senator, I believe, voted for it at that time.

But that bill having passed the House at the first session, and providing for the elections in the succeeding summer, it was necessary to amend it by providing a new day for the election of members of the convention as well as the time for holding the convention. The Senate put the formal amendments on the bill, and it came back here and remained on the Speaker's table until the night of the 3d of March, in the election bours of the Congress when it received a vote of two thirds the closing hours of the Congress, when it required a vote of two-thirds to take it from the Speaker's table and pass it. The Colorado bill was taken from the table and passed the House by a vote of 164 in the affirmative to 76 in the negative. Two-thirds having voted in the affirmative the amendments of the Senate to the Colorado bill were therefore agreed to, and the bill passed, and Colorado came into the Union by virtue of that vote passed in the closing hours of the Forty-third Two or three changes of votes would have changed the re-Congress. sult of that vote.

The next question came up in regard to New Mexico, and a motion was made to suspend the rules, take that bill from the Speaker's table, and pass it. The vote on that motion shows 154 in the affirmative to 87 in the negative, and hence it lacked only 7 votes of being twothirds and passing the bill at that time. I see that nearly every Re-5 publican member of the House at the time voted in the affirmative.

Mr. COX. And all the Democrats the other way?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; not all.

Mr. COX. Well, very many.
Mr. SPRINGER. Quite a number voted in the negative, but, as I Mr. SPRINGER. Quite a number voted in the negative, but, as I have said, it came within 7 votes of having the necessary two-thirds to pass the bill. A number of Democrats voted for it, and many against it, as is shown by an examination of the record. I find among the yeas on the passage of the bill every Republican member from the State of Illinois at that time was present in his seat and voted in the affirmative, including my distinguished colleague [Mr. CANNON].

That was the position of the Republican party fourteen years ago in regard to the admission of the Territory of New Mexico. Since that time there has been a wonderful development in the Territory; there have been nearly 1,200 miles of railroad built; the common-school system has been adopted and a compulsory system of education put in force. School-houses and churches have sprung up in all parts of the country, and her resources have been largely developed, while her population has gone up to 175,000. If New Mexico had then been admitted into the Un on as a State it is my judgment that her resources would have still further increased and that the population in the Territory to day would be at least a half million of souls.

Now, why do you want to keep New Mexico out any longer? If she was equipped for statehood in the judgment of the Republican party in both branches of Congress fourteen years ago, when there was not a mile of railroad built in the broad limits of that great Territory, when it was an "outlying province" in fact as well as in theory, why is it that New Mexico is not entitled to admission now, with the vast in-crease of her population and resources? It is my opinion that if this bill passes and includes New Mexico, it will vastly stimulate the building of railroads and encourage the rapid settlement of that great Territory. Why should we, then, as representatives of the great American people, say to New Mexico she is not entitled to statehood, when at the same time we have before us a bill allowing statehood to North Dakota, Montana, and Washington, the two latter having less population according to the census than New Mexico.

Mr. Speaker, I do not insist upon the retention of New Mexico on this bill in any spirit of partisanship. I am willing to concede and do concede that the question as to the future politics of that Territory is one of doubt and uncertainty, and will be governed, as well as the votes in the other Territories, by circumstances as they may arise hereafter. But I believe that the best statesmanship requires the admission of the Territory now with the others mentioned here, and if I could have my way I would go still further and include, rather than exclude any Ter-down and that we may be permitted to go into conference again uninstructed; and I have reason to believe, at least I hope, by presenting the facts to the committee of conference as I present them to you, that they will see the impolicy of retarding the march of progress in regard to these Territories. I believe it will add materially to the resources of New Mexico and increase her wealth, as has been the result in the other Territories.

There is no reason why New Mexico should be excluded that can not be applied to other Territories of equal population. Why, I have been asked, have these four Territories been put in this bill? It was not for any partisan consideration, but because these four Territories (and if Dakota is divided, five) have a population which Congress has determined on a former occasion entitled a Territory to admission, namely, population equal to the ratio of one member of this House. All the Territories that had that population were put in this bill except the Territory of Utah, which was deemed by the committee to have such peculiar surroundings as to entitle it to have a special bill in its behalf.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Will my friend yield to me for a remark?

Mr. SPRINGER. I will not yield for a remark. I will yield for a question

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. I want to say to my colleague and to the House that I am inclined myself to vote for the admission of New Mexico into the Union as a State. But we have kept Dakota out New Mexico into the Union as a State. But we have kept Dakota out of the Union until it is now conceded here that there is sufficient population for two Representatives in Congress in that Territory. Now, the question that I want to submit to my colleague, while I agree with him in regard to the admission of New Mexico, is, whether there is any fairness here in still further keeping South Dakota out of the Union with a population sufficient to entitle her to two Representatives in Congress because we can not agree upon the admission of New That is the question.

Mr. SPRINGER. I might answer the gentleman by asking him why we should insist upon keeping New Mexico out of the Union in order that South Dakota might come in.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. If my colleague pleases, it is not myself; but I think it must be admitted that we can not agree upon the admission of New Mexico. And why keep four Territories out of the Union because we can not agree as to New Mexico?

Mr. SPRINGER. So far as South Dakota is concerned, and the admission of Dakota as a State into the Union, the question has not heretofore been one of exclusion of Dakota, but the question has been solely one of division. We have differed upon that question. The friends of division have insisted that they would prefer to stay out of the Union unless Dakota should be divided. But this bill permits division, and such a division as is acceptable to all the voters of the Territory, and that provision met with the approval of the Delegate from Dakota on this subject. Therefore I believe that we will at this session meet this question fairly with the Senate conferees, and that before the close of the session the bill will pass. I will say that the House conferees have been met with great fairness by the conferees on the part of the Senate, and that a disposition has been manifested on all hands to reach a conclusion satisfactory to both Houses and to the whole country.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield to me, not for a remark but for a question? Is it not true that the Delegates from Dakota, Montana, and Washington came here and introduced bills for the admission of their Territories as States; that they have urged them upon the committee and failed thus far to accomplish a result, and that the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. JOSEPH] has never introdued a bill for the admission of his Territory although many of us desired that it should be offered? Why should all these other Territories be dependent upon New Mexico? I think my friend from Illinois [Mr. Springer] must have studied it over just as fally as did these others, and he ought not to make the other Territories dependent upon New Mexico for admission.

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Breckinridge]. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining

The SPEAKER. There are two minutes remaining to the gentle-

Mr. SPRINGER. I reserved the remainder of my time and took the floor in my own right. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Breckingidge].
Mr. BAKER, of New York. I have yielded time to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I have no objection that he should speak now.

Mr. SYMES. I am in favor of the proposition presented by the gentleman from New York as a matter of compromise at this late day in It very seldom happens, sir, that we can get exactly what we want, no matter how interested we feel, and with what degree of positiveness we may form opinions upon important matters of legislation. The whole history of legislation, as the celebrated Mr. Clay said, "is a matter of compromise" in the end. Now, sir, the proposition ritory, Arizona, Idaho, and Wyoming.

In regard to the instructions proposed, I hope that they will be voted of New Mexico by proclamation during the coming summer, keep out the great Territories of South Dakota, Montana, and Washington, that have during the past five years been conceded from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Gulf to the Lakes, to be more fitted for admission probably than any other Territories that have ever knocked at the door of this Union for admission?

Sir, I am in favor of an enabling act for the admission of New Mexico into the Union. I voted for that when I voted for the omnibus But, sir, what are the facts? During the whole of the Fortyninth Congress, when the questions of the admission of these Territories seriatim and in omnibus bills were presented to the Territorial Committee, my friend, the Delegate from New Mexico, Mr. Joseph, and the governor of that Territory, Mr. Ross, were before the committee listening to the arguments, and Mr. Joseph was a member of the Territorial Committee, and neither he nor Governor Ross ever asked for the admission of New Mexico. Not one petition was ever presented, not one bill was ever introduced showing that the people of New Mexico then asked or desired admission into the Union; and when the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE] drew the minority report, which was signed by all the Republicans upon the committee except myself, I did not agree, sir, to many of the reasons which they gave why New Mexico should not be admitted into this Union; but I added to the report a special statement that I did not then favor the bringing in of New Mexico because the people of that Territory had not asked for admission. Sir, ever since I was a boy and read the speeches of Stephen A. Douglas I have advocated the doctrine that the people of a Terri-A. Douglas I have advocated the doctrine that the people of a Territory have a right to organize a government and come into the Union whenever they present a proper state of facts, bringing them within the precedents; but I never did advocate, and never will advocate that the people of a Territory like New Mexico, or any other, should be forced into the Union by tacking them on to a bill for political purposes when they do not desire admission.

When the Fiftight Consequence in the contract of the contrac

When the Fiftieth Congress met it appeared that the matter of admission to statehood had been worked up in New Mexico. How it had been worked up I do not know and I do not care. Suffice it to say that the people of New Mexico did then come before the Territorial Comthe people of New Mexico did then come before the Territorial Committee of the Fiftieth Congress and ask for an enabling act that they might organize a State government and present themselves for admission into the Union as a State. I voted in favor of that admission. I have voted to bring them in. I would bring them in in due time if I could; but you can not stand here consistently and contend that because the Senate, and many men upon this floor, will not agree to the admission of New Mexico by proclamation during the coming summer, when until lately she has not asked admission, and when in fact she did refuse to ask for admission during the whole of the Forty-ninth Congress—that because the Senate and some gentlemen here will not consent to that because the Senate and some gentlemen here will not consent to bring her in by proclamation under such circumstances therefore the admission of the great Territories of Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be embarrassed and delayed.

The people of those Territories have each held constitutional conventions years ago and adopted constitutions. They have been asking admission for years.

Bills have passed the Senate to admit South Dakota and Washington. All admit South Dakota ought to have been admitted long ago on the Sioux Falls constitution.

It is not right to keep these great Territories out of the Union, un-less a large majority are in favor of their admission as separate propositions, only because there is a difference of opinion as to the fitness for admission of New Mexico.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Unless my friends on the other side desire to submit further remarks, I will now move the previous question. Mr. COX. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, the principle of the omnibus bill which justified the putting of four Territories into one bill was that each Territory which had a population sufficient for one Representative and wealth sufficient to maintain the burden of a State government should be admitted into the Union. It was on that principle, and that principle only, that an omnibus bill could be justified. Now we are asked to exclude from the bill New Mexico, which has all the requisites of statehood, and to violate this principle, upon the sole ground that the Senate of the United States will not be in favor of the admission of that Territory, and this argument is made prior to the conference report being submitted to the Senate and prior to any instructions by that body to its conferees. It is our declaration in substance that we do not desire to admit New Mexico, and our justification of that declaration by laying it to the Senate, without the Senate having declared by instruction to its conferees that it agreed with us in that declaration. Therefore, the argument is not based upon the record, even if it were one that ought to influence us.

It is not at all certain that if this House, representing the people, will insist that these four Territories shall become States the Senate will nate branch of Congress and let it refuse to do what is right; and it is not becoming in us to say that we will recede from a righteous act giving statehood to two hundred thousand people on the mere guess that the Senate will order its conferees not to agree to the admission of New Mexico. It is the only Territory in this bill whose admission has Congressional approbation. In the Forty-third Congress a large majority of the Senate and the House voted that this Territory was then fit for statehood; and in the Forty-fourth Congress the Senate (which is a continuous body, not dissolved, as the House is, every two years) reaffirmed this Senatorial judgment that New Mexico ought to be admitted. It is therefore the only Territory of which it can be said that both Houses of Congress have conceded, when it was more sparsely opulated and less wealthy, that it was in a condition to be admitted into the Union.

But, Mr. Speaker, admission into the Union is of itself a very great step in advance for a Territory. It is the cause of increased and more rapid development. And of all the Territories this remark will apply more truthfully and strongly to New Mexico than to any other. In the treaty by which we obtained New Mexico there were provisions about the titles of land which still remain to plague those people and to render their titles uncertain. Perhaps the greatest curse that a new country can have inflicted upon it is an uncertainty in the titles to its lands. Where a man can not buy a clear title to his homestead, especially when just across the line he can obtain cheap lands with perfect titles, he will not settle and invest his means. We shall never fect titles, he will not settle and invest his means.

fect titles, he will not settle and invest his means. We shall never have those titles cleared up except under the sovereign power of the State in whose courts they can be settled. There are questions growing out of Indian depredations and other questions which need behind them for speedy settlement the power of a State.

We declared fourteen years ago that New Mexico ought to be admitted. We declare it now. Why shall she not be admitted? Gentlemen say, "Because if you insist upon it you keep other communities from being admitted to privileges to which they are entitled." The answer I make is, "I do not; there is no such responsibility upon me; it is not I who do it." I deny that this House, until the very last effort has been exhausted, until every possible endeavor has been made me; it is not I who do it." I deny that this House, until the very last effort has been exhausted, until every possible endeavor has been made by conference, by respectful insistence, by earnest advocacy of the measure which we think just, has the right to surrender to the Senate what we believe to be proper. It is at the last moment that the wise statesmanship which resides in practical concessions is to be found. It is a violation of our duty and an abdication of our prerogatives if we give up before it is precessory.

give up before it is necessary.

I apprehend, Mr. Speaker, if I may trench upon partisan ground, that there are other reasons than those assigned for this surrender to that there are other reasons than those assigned for this surface to the Senate. We have heard a great deal this morning about this agreement being reached in a "non-partisan spirit." I hope I have as much of the "non-partisan" as the average man, though I confess I am a partisan. I believe what I believe with all my heart; and I am in favor of doing, as far as good conscience will let me, what is necessary for the building up of my party. And I do not put on any airs and pretend to any extra piety in believing or trying to make other people believe that I am not actuated by these motives. But I notice that the gentlemen who are talking about reaching an agreement in a "non-partisan spirit" are themselves exceedingly anxious that this "non-partisan spirit" shall be exhibited to the benefit of what they desire and to the detriment of those whom they are against. I would prefer to see a little more practical compromise than the compromise that they hold out, by which they get all they want and make us give up all that we want. [Laughter and applause.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, one word more. As to the proclamation, I am in favor of letting these Territories come in by proclamation when they fulfill the requirements of the statute. I have no desire to delay them. I would like to go a step further. I would like to put in the other Territories. I would like to put in the other Territories. I would like to put into this omnibus bill, if it were possible to do it, the Territories of Wyoming, Arizona, and Idaho; I would like to make a clean sweep, by having Utah admitted as soon as may be practicable. I would like to get rid of the "carpet-bag" government of the Territories. [Applause.] I would like to get rid of the anomalous condition we are in so long as we legislate at Washington for those great Territories. I believe they would, as States-increase with a great deal more rapidity. I believe the whole system of Territorial government is a mistake—a system which has grown up by accretion out of ment is a mistake-a system which has grown up by accretion out of, perhaps, mistaken construction of very narrow provisions of the Constitution. And I believe that the rings and syndicates which can eat up those lands and control those Territories, because we are so far from them, and because we legislate in ignorance of their true condition, would find an end to their pilfering as soon as we make those Territo-

Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield to the gentlem n a moment or two more. Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I therefore, Mr. Speaker, approach this subject, not as an enemy to the Territories, not as opposed take the responsibility of holding those Territories any longer in a Territorial condition. If it be true that New Mexico ought to be admitted, if it be true that we think upon our official responsibility as representatives of the people that it ought to be admitted, it is our duty to throw the responsibility of excluding that Territory upon the co-ordinary of the responsibility of the true that we think upon our official responsibility as representatives of the people that it ought to be admitted, it is our duty to their admission, but as anxious for their admission as rapidly as possible. I trust that the House will insist until the very last possible moment upon this provision in favor of New Mexico. The responsibility will not rest upon us of keeping this and other Territories out of the Union by reason of a policy which will not admit a State that is ready to be admitted, whether such action grows out of political or religious prejudice, whether it grows out of the mere desire for political power, or whether it is based upon prejudices which find their root in religious differences. We ought to tender to the Senate in the name of a representative Union the proposition for this Territory to become a State, a Territory which they have said was competent for the duties of statehood. If the Senate does not choose to accept this tender it is not our fault.

For myself, Mr. Speaker, as to the whole political aspect of this question. I am not alarmed about it. I have no feeling of alarm as to the future.

If the party to which I belong can not win the suffrages of those Western people; if by the arguments that will be submitted to them and by their sense of what is best for them, and by the exercise of intelligence we can not carry those States, then it is the duty of my party to submit to the verdict, and we can not complain if it be against ns. Believing it important that we should get farther and farther from these Territorial and other disturbing questions; believing that until we get down to the great economic differences between parties we shall always have less strength than when we reach that issue, I we shall always have less strength than when we reach that issue, I am anxious for all these questions to be settled as quickly as possible.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will yield now for five minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McADOO].

Mr. McADOO. Mr. Speaker, I was profoundly impressed by the splendid speeches made by the Delegate from Montana [Mr. Toole] and the Delegate from Washington Territory [Mr. VOORHEES] when this question was originally up for consideration. I am as much in favor of the speedy admission of these great and growing Territories any other member mon this floor. Laconiesce in all that has been as any other member upon this floor. I acquiesce in all that has been said that when a Territory has sufficient population and possesses resources it is entitled as a matter of justice to immediate admission into the Union. But, sir, as a member of the House, and particularly as a member on this side of the House, I can not consent to yield up New Mexico to the mere refusal of the Senate until this House has exhausted every means of resistance of which we are pos

Why, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me we would stand in a poor attitude ward the citizens of that Territory. We admit the people of South akota upon a convention which was formed ex parte. We admit the toward the citizens of that Territory. We admit the p Dakota upon a convention which was formed ex parte. people of North Dakota, and I am willing to go as far, by way of extreme concession, as to admit all Territories on even terms on proclamation; but, having done that, now to come into the House and say we were only playing with New Mexico, that this House after putting New Mexico in the omnibus bill and sending it to the Senate, now when the bill is returned to us from the Senate with New Mexico struck out, to get up in this House and congratulate ourselves on accepting the Senate proposition, I say, sir, for one, is an outrage on the people of New Mexico and savors of insincerity. How can we justify our action as a non-sectional, unprejudiced, broad-minded party? If this is not a partisan measure how can we justify our action to the citizens of the great and growing Territory of New Mexico? As has been stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINBIDGE], it is the only Territory which ever had a vote of the House and the Senate in favor of its admission into the Union as a State.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me we have been only trifling with the people of this Territory of New Mexico. We offered the boon of statehood to them with a string attached, and as soon as they make an effort to comply with their constitutional duty, it is pulled out of their reach.

[Laughter and applause.]

As has been already stated, the people of New Mexico appeal to this House in favor of the admission of the Territory into the Union as a State. It is not proposed to force it upon them, as has been suggested, but they ask for it. I understand further that the Legislature of that Territory of New Mexico is in session and they have unanimously demanded their right to be admitted as a State into the Union. And the State of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SYMES], who has spoken in favor of receding, the Legislature of his State of Colorado has passed a resolution demanding the admission of New Mexico as a State into

I have not heard an argument, Mr. Speaker, I have not heard a reason given on the floor of this House during the whole of this discussion, not one, which would induce any fair-minded man to admit these other Territories into the Union and at the same time to exclude the Territory of New Mexico from the same right.

It is true there has crept in an insidious calumniation and narrowminded misrepresentation of the people of that Territory of New Mexico, which I, for one, as a Representative on this floor on this side of the House, most indignantly resent. In this great nation of ours, in this cosmopolitan land there are no sectarian or Old World racial questions; there are no special reasons why rights should be accorded to one and refused to another. The spirit of our institutions is free, catholic, and tolerant. Every branch of the Aryan race goes to make up the population of this country, and I will refuse by my vote to trifle with the rights of the citizens of New Mexico by applying to them a test which is unknown to the Constitution of the United States. Our people on all public questions are neither Saxon, Celt, Norsemen, Frank, nor Iberian, but always and everywhere American, and only American. It is only pseudo-Americans who assert to the contrary. These Spanish-Americans of New Mexico are Americans by birth, sympathy, and education, and have so testified on the field of battle. They furnished more troops to the Union Army than some of the new States.

will make splendid citizens of the coming State.

When this bill was up as an original proposition the whole of this side of the House voted, if I remember aright, together with a few gentlemen on the other side of the House, in favor of the admission of the Territory of New Mexico into the Union. We are now asked that these other Territories shall be admitted into the Union as States and that New Mexico shall be excluded. Have we not been in earnest? Have we not been honest about this matter? Was it done simply for political effect? Were gentlemen merely juggling with the rights of the people of the Territory of New Mexico which to-day has more population than any of these other Territories?

How could any member of this House, how can any citizen of this Union stand up in the Territory of New Mexico and justify the admission of North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington, and Montana, and at the same time justify the exclusion of New Mexico? I hope this House will stand by its action in favor of the admission of New Mex-

I serve notice on the Republican side of this House I shall resort to every effort to resist doing such a gross act of injustice to the people of New Mexico. They are entitled to a speedy admission as a State into this Union with the other Territories. Thank Heaven, our blessed country is free from the bigotry, intolerance, savage selfishness, and cruel racial feuds of the Old World. The wretched bigots of our day may insinuate with assumed playfulness, but their cowardly and timeserving souls dare not unmask themselves in the light of day. In these days we despise them for their duplicity, and pity them for their weak-ness. America for the Americans, and by the blessing of God and an inspired Constitution we are all, wherever born, Americans in heart as well as name. Let the masked Tories gnaw files if it pleases them.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, as this amendment of the gentleman from New York has been amended it lacks somewhat of the objectionable features I considered it to have when it was first introduced. As drawn by the gentleman in the first instance it legislated by this Congress into office men who were elected some three or four years ago by a mere fraction of the people of the Territory of Dakota. I speak knowingly on that subject, for Dakota is the oldest daughter of Minnesota, and I am pretty well acquainted with the sentiment of But the gentleman has consented to, and I am informed has written into his amendment, a provision which makes it necessary to have a new election for United States Senators and Members of Congress and of all Federal officers. And this is as it should be.

But, Mr. Speaker, there is another objection which to me is pretty radical, and it is by no means a question of party politics. man provides that we shall, without seeing the constitution or knowing what it contains, enact a law that shall practically declare the policy of the Government to be that the President of the United States may admit into the Union of States any Territory which presents a constitution to him and asks admission. The Constitution of the United States requires that the United States shall guaranty to each State a republican form of government, and I think it is the duty of Congress to see that the constitution presented is not only republican in form but such as should be approved.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Is the course proposed by the amendment without precedent?

Mr. LODGE. Not at all.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. It is not without precedent, that is true;

but the precedent has been an exception; and the question is whether we shall now make that into a rule which would be a very dangerous precedent, by authorizing the President of the United States to determine that the constitution submitted by the Territory is republican and proper in form as required by the Constitution, when there is no sufficient reason for making such an exception or establishing a rule which must become a precedent for future action in such matters. We can not tell in advance what objectionable features may be incorporated into the constitution of States petitioning for admission.

What exigency, what great emergency arises which demands that we place such a power in the hands of the President of the United States, and that we surrender to him the right and duty which the Constitution has imposed on us? There may the most important questions arise as to the admission of some new States.

Furthermore, sir, permit me to say that I am in favor of admitting Dakota as two States. I am frank to say, however, that if I were a citizen of Dakota I would not be in favor of its division. citizen of the Northwest I want all of the power there that we can ossibly get from the increase in the number of States and the two additional Senators. But I think it would be better for the people of that Territory themselves if they had but one State, and I am not certain that the sentiment of the people would not be pretty largely in that direction. But as a citizen of the Northwest I say I want just as much influence as we can have to enable us to contend with the influence of certain other sections of the country that have too long been collecting tribute of us.

Mr. HAUGEN. But would not the people of Dakota be interested in having just as much influence as they would gain by the division of the Territory and making two States?

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota. Undoubtedly Dakota would have a ioint interest with all of the Northwest. But looking merely at their own interest as a State I think they would be enabled to exert greater influence as a single State than as two.

Mr. HAUGEN. But I mean as a part of the Northwest.

Mr. W LSON, of Minnesota. Yes, sir; their interest would be in common with all of the Northwest. And, as I before have said, I have been and am in favor of division and admission as speedily as possible.

But. Mr. Speaker, it is not true that we would fail to get any legislation if we insist upon those provisions that we think to be proper. have felt for several days that there would be an attempt to induce the House to recede, because there have been messages passing between the House and the Senate, and it has been whispered that there were several members, notably the gentleman from New York, who were going to recede. I think perhaps but for this there would have been an agreement by the conference committee before this.

But, sir, we should look at the question without reference to individual preferences or party affiliations, and I am opposed to the proposition here involved for the fundamental reason that the United States Government ought to have power and retain it in itself to say when and on what constitution a State shall be admitted.

Here the hammer fell.

Mr. SPRINGER. I now yield five minutes to the Delegate from New Mexico.

Mr. JOSEPH. Mr. Speaker, New Mexico is the oldest Territory in the Union. New Mexico now, for the fourth time in her political history, comes knocking at the doors of Congress for admission as a State, and I claim that that Territory has stronger claims in the line of treaty obligations than any of the other Territories which have been admitted already or which are now upon this so-called omnibus bill.

Under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, under which the Territory of New Mexico was ceded and annexed to the United States, it was provided that New Mexico should, at an early day, and at the discretion of Congress, be admitted into the Union as a State. The people of New Mexico as early as 1850 held an election and elected a State Legislature and a Member of Congress, and the State Legislature elected two United States Senators. These Senators and that member of Congress came to the House of Congress and knocked for admission as a State; but then New Mexico was not admitted as a State but as a Territory, and the Congressman elected at that State election was admitted as the Delegate of that Territory. Again, in 1874 an enabling act similar to the one now under consideration was passed in this House by two-thirds majority in favor of the admission of New Mexico. The same bill was passed in the Senate by a two-thirds majority, and was only defeated by a mere technicality of disagreement between the two

Mr. KERR. Will the gentleman from New Mexico answer this question? Is it not true that you have not introduced the bill for the admission of New Mexico as a State into the Union until nearly the close of this session?

Mr. JOSEPH. It is true that I did not introduce a bill.
Mr. MORGAN (to Mr. JOSEPH). Is that because you did not think it was entitled to admission?

Mr. JOSEPH. It was not because our people did not want admis-on. There has been every manifestation by the people of New Mexico, thoroughly irrespective of politics, favoring the admission of New The present Legislature has unanimously adopted a memorial in favor of admission, and her expression upon that question has been seconded by the present Legislature of the State of Colorado. It is also true, as my distinguished friend, Hon. Mr. Cox, from New York, has stated, that New Mexico may be Republican in the future. But, sir, I assert that if even that should be, I would rather be a citizen of a Republican State than of a Democratic Territory. Therefore I stand here and insist and demand the rights of the people of New Mexico that they have by virtue of treaty stipulations. Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, New Mexico has more than 10,000,000 acres of the best land in the world, the titles to which are now clouded by either Spanish or Mexican land grants. We have tried repeatedly upon the floor of this House to get legislation to adjudicate these titles, but have failed. We also have upwards of $5,000,000 in the way of Indian depredation claims. My people are getting overly anxious on seeing that Congress has failed for more than forty years to provide a remedy for those defective titles and to grant an adjudication of these Indian depredation claims, and they have come to the conclusion that statehood is the only solution of our present difficulties. They now come and ask for admission into the Union. I therefore appeal to gentlemen on both sides of this House to vote for the admission of New Mexico. We now ask admission for the fourth time on this omnibus bill.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. I rise now simply to respond to what fell from the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Wilson]. He intimated that he had heard the gentleman from New York (meaning myself) had receded or was about to recede from what is known as the omnibus bill, and that thereby there was some encouragement given to the Senate to insist upon the exclusion of New Mexico. In response to that I beg to tell the gentleman and the House that I did favor the omnibus bill, but it was temporary and was so intended. I made no sort of secret of the After our effort to bring in the omnibus bill-in pursuance, if you please, of our caucus instruction—I said on page 9 of a speech that has since been printed in pamphlet that-I would have preferred that each one of these Territories should have come in by her own intrinsic vigor and virtue, and not through any interdependence or leaning upon one or more of the other Territories embraced in the bill. Perhaps in the end our legislation may run in that channel. Certainly such a channel will be more easily navigable and free from quicksands and difficulties. I can not see why South Dakota should depend on the admission of Washington, or North Dakota upon the admission of New Mexico.

I voted for the omnibus bill. Every time I spoke on the matter I said that I was willing to test this matter as to the quality of the omnibus. I served notice then if we failed on that line after conference with the Senate that I was willing to vote for these Territories separately and apart. I referred again to the matter afterwards. In a sub-sequent debate with my colleague from New York [Mr. BAKER] I said I was looking to the Senate for the final consummation of this matter; that I did not believe the House and the Senate would finally agree upon the matter of New Mexico and on other points of the omnibus bill. Further in my connection with this measure, when it was up before, I said that I would forever favor the division of Dakota. Because it was too large in population, area, and resources to come in as a unit. I said then, as I say now, that if every man, woman, and child of Dakota expressed their wish and judgment for admission as a unit I would never cast my vote for it. It was not fair to other States. I have given my reasons again and again for years, and could give them again if necessary, to show why so large a Territory should not be admitted as one State. These reasons grow with the growth of Dakota and its mani-

The gentleman from Kentucky, who is always engaging, spoke of partisauship in reference to the admission of these Territories. From the beginning of this Territorial business, as far back as 1857, I was devoted to the principle that I stand on to-day—that is, that these matters of Territorial nonage and mature statehood are higher than all your temporary and superficial Federal and State politics. Gentlemen pretend here to be uninfluenced by partisanship. It may be so. I may not be uninfluenced by party; but I hope not unduly biased. In every vote that I have given here by which States have come into the Union, including Oregon, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Colorado, and New Mexico, I have given my vote in the interest of the people of the Territory and their statehood on honorable conditions. I repudiate the idea of the gentleman from Ireland [laughter]—I mean New Jersey [Mr. McAdoo]—when he says that he does not want New Mexico to be taken out of the omnibus bill. If, sir, it were a trans-Atlantic question, I would know where to find my friend on autonomy. He would favor each establishment, race, nationality, state, or province standing upon its own intrinsic merits, rights, liberties, and insti-

If it were a question, say, of the disestablishment of church and state in Great Britain and the question came up, "Shall we disestablish in Ireland, Wales, and Scotland?" I would not put the question as to Ireland to be determined upon the relation in which Scotland or Wales stood to the Church of England. Nor would I on the question of home rule stand on the idea that until Wales was autonomous or Scotland had local self-government that Ireland should continue to be held in chains to England. [Applause on the Republican side.]
Mr. BAKER, of New York. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ROGERS].

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Baker] for yielding me time, because my views are not in harmony with his own. I have felt for some time, an inclination to express certain views upon this Territorial question, and in the five minutes so kindly given me, I propose to condense them as well as I can. I believe the time has arrived in the history of our country when this whole Territorial system ought to be wiped out. If I had control of it I should say, Adopt the constitutional amendment which shall make it impossible for Utah to come into the great sisterhood of States as an impure sister, and then wipe out the whole Territorial system by admitting all the Territories—Indian Territory as well—into the Union of the States. I believe there is no Territory in this country which is not ready, by virtue of its intelligence, of its integrity, of its wealth, of its power, of its population, to put off the swaddling clothes of Territorial government and to take on the full crinoline of a full-grown sister in the great sisterhood of American States. [Applause.] And so, Mr. Speaker, with this constitutional amendment wiping out polygamy from the face of our country, I would in one bill, if I had the power, embrace every Territory, so that we should forever abolish on the American continent the miserable carpet-bag governments in these Territories, which are a disgrace and a stigma to our civilization. These are my views of this question, and if we do not get New Mexico now, I hope that we shall get her as soon as it is possible to get her, and, along with her, every single solitary one of the Territories that have not yet been admitted into the Union of States.

Having said this much, I have only one observation to add. We have discussed during this receipt of Charges the Oklahome question.

Having said this much, I have only one observation to add. We have discussed during this session of Congress the Oklahoma question, and I want to invite the attention of the House to the fact that that Territory is ready for admission into the Union, and to the further fact that every interest of the Indian, every interest of ourselves, and every consideration of public policy, of Christianity, of wise statesmanship, and of the protection of the rights, the lives, and the property of the Indians depend upon an enabling act which shall enable those people, by a constitution framed by themselves, to protect their property rights when they come into the Union of States. So, I believe that there should be no period fixed during which they shall be subjected to a Territorial government, but that, on the contrary, through an enabling act, they should be allowed to frame their own constitution, and by it, which will be a compact with the other States of the Union, preserve which will be a compact with the other States of the Union, preserve and protect their own rights now before the unsettled parts of the Terand protect their own rights now before the unsettled parts of the Territory shall be settled up by white people whose superior intelligence and superior numbers shall enable them to deprive the Indians of the rights which they have acquired under the treaties that have been made with them heretofore. Having said this much, I have expressed, in a brief form, the views which I have entertained for some time upon the question of Territorial governments, and I again thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] for his courtesy.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I now demand the previous question. The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] to withdraw his original proposition and to accept the one offered by the other gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox].

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I do.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I do.

The SPEAKER. The question, then, is on the resolution offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] and accepted by his colleague [Mr. BAKER]. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER. The question is now on agreeing to the resolution. Mr. BUCHANAN. Let the resolution be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House instruct the new conferees to recede from the amendment to the Senate bill 185 in the following respects:

1. That the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed new State thereof may be excluded from the bill.

2. That the bill may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota, with provision for a new election of State and Federal officers and without a new vote on the question of division.

3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis, i. e., all of them under proclamations by the President.

And further, such matters as relate to the election of delegates and the apportionment of the districts from which members of the convention are to be elected, the date of holding conventions and the date of resubmission of the South Dakota constitution, and the location of the temporary seat of government in South Dakota, and such other matters as are not included in the instructions above recited, be referred to the committee of conference for their discretion.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Iask for a division of the question on that proposition.

The SPEAKER. In what way does the gentleman desire to have it divided?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I want a separate vote on the first proposition—the proposition which instructs the conferees to recede from the amendment as to New Mexico.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read that portion of the instruction.

The Clerk read as follows:

1. That the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed new State thereof may be excluded from the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman demands a division of the question, so as to take"a vote separately on the proposition which has just been read.

Mr. CUTCHEON addressed the Chair.

Mr. COX. Are these propositions separable?

The SPEAKER. They are divisible. The rule provides that wherever a measure contains several distinct propositions they may be divided. The Chair will now hear the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON

On this vote:

Mr. LEE with Mr. WASHINGTON. Mr. DARGAN with Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia, with Mr. BUTTERWORTH.

For this day:

Mr. WILKINS with Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. TOWNSHEND with Mr. WEST. Mr. OUTHWAITE with Mr. CROUSE. Mr. GRANGER with Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. BLAND with Mr. Goff.

Mr. McKinney with Mr. Bunnell. Mr. MILLIKEN with Mr. DIBBLE.

Mr. HOOKER with Mr. MORROW; Mr. MORROW would vote for Mr.

Cox's resolution of instructions, Mr. Hooker against it.

Mr. MATSON with Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts; Mr. RUSSELL would vote for Mr. Cox's resolution of instructions, and Mr. MATSON

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, I was called out of the House on business, and returned just after my name was called. If I had been present I should have voted "no."

Mr. GRIMES. I entered the Hall just after my name was called, would like to vote "no."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman, under the rule and the practice,

Mr. WHEELER. I was not in the Hall when my name was called,

Mr. Wheelers. I was not in the first when my hand was cancer, though I was in the building. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "no."

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky (having voted in the negative), said, immediately before the result was announced: I desire to change my vote from "no" to "ay."

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. Baker, of New York, and Mr. Breckingidge, of Kentucky,

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I move to reconsider the vote just taken; and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I move to reconsider.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] has moved to reconsider and to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I call for the yeas and nays upon laying on the table the motion to reconsider.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WASHINGTON with Mr. Lee, on this vote.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask for the reading of the next proposition.

The Clerk read as follows:

2. And that the bill may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota with provisions for a new election of State officers, and without a new vote on the question of division.

Mr. SPRINGER. I would like to have a separate vote on the last clause of that second instruction.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to that second instruction, which is to be voted on as a whole.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 97, noes 73. Mr. McMILLIN. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

So the second resolution of instructions was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. McMILLIN. I object.

The Clerk then read the names of those voting.

The following additional pairs were then announced: Mr. Chipman with Mr. Brumm, for the rest of the day.

Mr. HEMPHILL with Mr. BELDEN, for the rest of the day.

Mr. Wilson, of Minnesota, with Mr. Burnett, on this question. The vote was then announced as above recorded. Mr. BAKER, of New York. I move to reconsider the vote just taken; and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The question was taken on the motion to lay on the table; and on a division there were—ayes 100, noes 42.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. No quorum.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Pending that I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division there were-ayes 59, noes 99.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Now, Mr. Speaker, in the interest of the consideration of the appropriation bills, I appeal to my friends upon the other side to let us conclude this matter without further delay.

I hope gentlemen will not filibuster.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I will say frankly to my friend from New York that I do not pretend to try to filibuster upon this question, or to delay final action upon it longer than that we may this question, or to delay man action upon it longer than that we may have a full House present. I think this vote should be taken in the morning in the presence of a full House, and there will be no further objection so far as I am concerned. But the House is thin, a great many members have left the Hall. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I only want a full House present when the vote is taken.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is on the demand of the gentleman from New York for the yeas and nays on the motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I ask to have the motion stated, Mr.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I will accept the gentleman's suggestion with the modification mentioned.

Mr. STEELE. Regular order.

Mr. COX. I hope my friend will not insist upon that.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, which is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock and 30 minutes to-morrow.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I understand the gentleman from Indiana is willing to withdraw the demand for the regular order, and I again repeat my suggestion. Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. And I again repeat my proposition to the gentleman, that the modification be accepted, and then we can adjourn or take a recess as the House may determine. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky that the House take a recess until 11.30 to-mor-

The question was taken; and on a division there were-ayes 21, noes 67. Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. No quorum.

The SPEAKER appointed Mr. Breckinginge, of Kentucky, and Mr. Baker, of New York, as tellers.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. Mr. Speaker, I understand the gentle-man from Indiana will not press the demand for the regular order. If we can agree to take a vote on this question to-night and then adjourn until to-morrow morning, I am perfectly willing. Let the motion to lay on the table be now adopted, and then we can finish up the vote on the other instructions in the morning.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to suggest—
Mr. SPRINGER. It is evident that we can not conclude this bill Mr. SPRINGER. It is evident that we can not conclude this bill to-day, and I hope that the gentleman from New York will accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. If my friends on the other side will agree that they are not to have a caucus on the Dakota question, I should not be unwilling to accept the suggestion.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not see that any other business can be done, and therefore I move that the House adjourn. I make that motion because I think we can not do anything further to-day.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. CUTCHEON. If the House should now adjourn would this matter come up as unfinished business in the regular order?

The SPEAKER. It is a privileged question.

Mr. BLOUNT. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan has made a parliamentary inquiry and the Chair is answering it. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Michigan that it is unfinished business. question of the highest privilege; in other words, it is connected with the subject of a disagreement between the two Houses, and therefore is privileged.

Mr. CUTCHEON. And therefore would be the regular order.

The SPEAKER. And therefore would be the regular order.
Mr. SPRINGER. Then I move again that the House adjourn. We can not do any further business. I have not favored these dilatory

Mr. BAKER, of New York. We have got a pretty full House.

Mr. BLOUNT. It does not seem to me that there should be any difficulty about the two sides of the House agreeing upon this matter.

Mr. REED. That is right; let us vote. [Laughter.]
Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will allow me to go on with

Mr. REED. Then I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. BLOUNT. You generally do when you want to. I hope I may be allowed to proceed to make a statement. It does seem to me that we ought to be able to agree to something in this matter. [Cries of "Regular order!"]
The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, and that cuts off all debate. The question is upon the motion to take a recess until half past 11 o'clock, upon which no quorum has voted, and the Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from New York, Mr. BAKER, and the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. BRECKINRIDGE.

Mr. SPRINGER. Pending that I move that the House do now ad-ou rn.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

A division was demanded.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 70, noes 77.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let us have tellers on that. I think we can adjourn.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I demand the yeas and nays. The SPEAKER announced that tellers were ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER. If it be in order I will withdraw the motion to adjourn.

Mr. McMILLIN. I renew it.

The question was taken on the motion to adjourn; and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Tellers were demanded.

Pending the division,

Mr. BAKER, of New York, said: I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Cutcheon,

During the roll-call, Mr. BAKER, of New York, said: I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. BYNUM. I object.

The vote was read.

The following additional pairs frere announced:
Mr. Hogg with Mr. White, of New York, until further notice.
Mr. Buckalew with Mr. Dalzell, from now until Monday, February 18.

Mr. OATES with Mr. STEWART, of Vermont, from this date until the 18th instant.

Mr. SHIVELY with Mr. WADE, for the rest of the day.
Mr. HEARD with Mr. DINGLEY, for the rest of the day.
Mr. CRAIN with Mr. BIGGS, on this question.
The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.
The SPEAKER. The question now is upon the motion made by the The SPEAKER. The question now is upon the motion made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Breckineidee], that the House take a recess until half past 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow, upon which no quorum voted, and the Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from New York [Mr. Baker] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Breckineidee], who will please take their places.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 4.

Mr. Baker, of New York (pending the completion of the count by tellers). Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Breckineidee] has a proposition to make with reference to taking a vote at some hour to-morrow without further filiphyster-to taking a vote at some hour to-morrow without further filibustering.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I said to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] what I now repeat, that we are perfectly willing to have the vote taken to-morrow at any hour that may be agreed upon. I suggested half past 12; thinking it might take half an hour to read the Journal, but if the gentleman prefers I will say immediately after the reading of the Journal and the submission of the matters which shall be on the Speaker's table. I am willing that the votes shall be then taken, and there will be no disposition on this side to resort to dilatory tactics.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. The understanding is, that we shall now have unanimous consent that there shall be no obstructions or dilatory motions resorted to.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I say, in the broadest way, that, so far as I know, there is no purpose whatever on this side to make any dilatory motions or to prevent the vote being taken at the hour which may be agreed upon. Let the vote begin at, say, half past 12 o'clock to-morrow, and let the voting continue on the various propositions until they are disposed of.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the arrangement proposed, that the vote be postponed until half past 12 o'clock to-morrow—

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky (interposing). Mr. Speaker, at the suggestion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox], I propose that the hour be at a quarter to 1 o'clock to-morrow instead of half past 12.

Mr. COX. I hope the House will accept that. We shall get along faster in that way and yet save our night.

Mr. McMILLIN. There has been no disposition to delay final action upon this matter, and if an arrangement can be made to take the vote at some hour to-morrow we shall not interpose any dilatory mo-

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that further proceedings upon the pending matter be postponed——

The SPEAKER. The proposition has already been made that this subject be postponed until fifteen minutes before 1 o'clock to-morrow, the votes to be then taken without any dilatory motions. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced that the Senate insisted on its amendments, disagreed to by the House, to the bill (H. R. 11795) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate Mr. Allison, Mr.

DAWES, and Mr. COCKRELL.

It also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments a bill (H. R. 8309) to secure for the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District, requested a conference on the bill and amendments, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. SPOONER, and Mr. FARWELL.

It also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (S. 3116) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wynne.

It also returned to the House, in compliance with its request, the concurrent resolution providing for the printing of the Astronomical Observations of the Naval Observatory for 1886, 1887, and 1888.

It further announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles, requested a conference with the House on said bills and amendments, and had appointed conferees on the part of the Senate as indicated, respectively:

A bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia—conferees, Mr. HAWLEY, Mr. MANDEESON, and Mr. Cockrell; and

A bill (H. R. 12443) granting to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company the right of way through the White Earth Indian reservation, in the State of Minnesota—conferees, Mr. DAWES, Mr. SABIN, and Mr. JONES of Arkansas.

DAKOTA.

The SPEAKER appointed as managers of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (S. 185) to provide for the admission of the State of South Dakota into the Union and for the organization of the Territory of South Dakota Mr. Springer, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. Barnes of New York.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. BLAND, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for the day, on account of sickness in his family.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. FISHER, from the Committee on Eurolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly eurolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:
A bill (H. R. 855) for the relief of Jacob Cramer;

SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 15, 1889.

Prayer by Rev. JAMES M. KING, of New York City. The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. DAVIS presented the credentials of WILLIAM D. WASHBURN, chosen by the Legislature of Minnesota a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1889; which were read and ordered to be

CHARLES J. ESTEY-VETO MESSAGE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

I return without approval Senate bill No. 2665, entitled "An act granting a pension to Charles J. Estey."

A bill in precisely the same words as the bill herewith returned was approved on the 8th day of July, 1886, and under its provisions the beneficiary is now upon the pension-rolls.

It is supposed that the bill now under consideration was passed by the Congress in ignorance of the previous statute. A duplication of the act would manifestly be entirely useless.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 14, 1889.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Shall the bill pass, the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding?

Mr. SAWYER. I move that the bill with the message be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of October 4, 1888, certain information in regard to employés in arsenals and armories, etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Select Committee to Examine into the Condition of the Civil Service, and ordered to be printed.

DISTRICT CORPORATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communica-tion from the commissioners of the District of Columbia, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 7th instant, certain information concerning the assessed market value of the capital stock of corporations in the District assessed under the existing provisions of the law governing such matters, and the amount of taxes paid by such corporations; which was read.

Mr. HARRIS. I move the reference of the communication to the Committee on the District of Columbia, with the following instructions:

Resolved. That the report (with documents accompanying it) made by the commissioners of the District of Columbia in response to the resolution of the Senate directing them to furnish information concerning personal assessments against corporations in said District, the tax paid by such corporations, and whether any of said corporations have evaded the law under which assessments are levied, be printed and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, with instructions to that committee to report such legislation as may be necessary to enable the commissioners to prevent any further evasion of said law and to collect from said corporations all taxes that may be due and owing by them for the present or any past year, payment of which has been evaded.

The motion was agreed to.

HARDIN COUNTY, KENTUCKY.

The bill (H. R. 11871) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I askunanimous consent of the Senate to have that bill considered at this time. The Committee on Claims have reported a Senate bill in the same terms. This is a House bill. It involves nothing except the disadvantage to which that county of the State of Kentucky was put by reason of the pleading of the statute of limitations against it, while every other county similarly situated has already had its accounts adjusted and settlements made. The Committee on Claims reported a similar Senate bill unanimously, and I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to have this House bill considered

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be read for information.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of reference will be reconsidered if there be no objection, and the bill be read at length for information

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Chief Cierk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, is hereby authorized and required, on appeal to him made, to refund and pay back to the county of Hardin, State of Kentucky, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, any and all money collected from any and all corporations or from any other person or party whatsoever, as internal-revenue taxes on dividends on shares of stock owned by said county in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, to the extent that such taxes were deducted from any dividends due and payable to said county, any statute of limitations to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. SHERMAN. Before the bill passes I should like to know upon what ground the tax is to be refunded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will refer the Senator from Kansas to the chairman of the Committee on Claims [Mr. SPOONER], who sits by the Senator from Ohio, and state that there were several counties in the State of Kentucky which paid these taxes and they were recovered, but this county did not within the time limited by the statute present any claim or make any claim whatever, and there is simply a technical question as to the operation of the statute of limitations.

The bill has passed the House and a similar bill has been reported here by the Committee on Claims unanimously, and the only question involved, as I am sure the chairman of the Committee on Claims will state to the Senator from Ohio, is simply whether the Government will continue to hold this money that has been refunded to every other county except this one, and was not paid to this one simply because of its laches in presenting its claim within the time under the statute.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to treating the counties of Kentucky alike, but I do not see upon what ground a tax levied, unless it should be held to have been laid unlawfully, upon municipal corporations should be refunded.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not at this moment remember the precise facts the case. I inquire who made the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate bill was reported by the Senator from Arkan as [Mr. JONES].

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Senator from Arkansas made the report, and I will state to the Senator from Ohio-

Mr. SHERMAN. Let the bill go over until a later hour in the day and I will not object to considering it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will state to the Senator from Ohio that the refunding of the money in every other case was the result of judicial pro-

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Supreme Court held that the county was a part of the government of the State of Kentucky, one of its municipal corporations, I can see the point.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It was held to be a tax illegally levied and improperly collected.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the Senator from Ohio will allow the report to be read.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection. Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that he let the bill lie over until the Senator from Arkansas who made the report comes in, and then renew his request.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have no objection, unless the chairman of the Committee on Claims desires to speak upon it.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the report may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was not accompanied by a report in writing. Mr. SPOONER. Then I ask that it lie over until the Senator from Arkansas comes in. Mr. BLACKBURN. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered.

THE CENSUS.

Mr. HALE. I desire to give notice from the Committee on the Census that on Monday morning next, after the routine business, I shall ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the census bill with the amendments that have been reported from the committee to the House bill.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented resolutions adopted at a meeting of citizens of the District of Columbia, alleging discriminations against citizens in the public schools of the District of Columbia, and praying for legislation to remedy such injustice; which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. CAMERON presented a petition adopted by the Philadelphia (Pa.) Drug Exchange, together with a preamble and resolutions, praying for the abolishment of internal-revenue taxes; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of George Elliott and others, citizens of Fleming, Centre County, Pennsylvania; the petition of the Congregational Church of Ebensburgh, Cambria County, Pennsylvania; the petition of the Penn Creek Presbyterian Church, of New Texas, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania; the petition of Emanuel's Evangelical Lutheran congregation, of Williamstown, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania; the petition of the Presbyterian Church of Scrubgrass, Venango County, Pennsylvania, and the petition of 33 citizens of Nittany, Centre County,' Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. FAULKNER. I present duplications of petitions from citizens of Pullman and Lost Creek, in the State of West Virginia, praying for a prohibitory constitutional amendment. I move that the petitions lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER presented the petition of John J. Jacob and 34 others, citizens of West Virginia, favoring the passage of the bill to provide for the extirpation of contagious pleuro-pneumonia, foot-andmouth disease, and rinderpest among cattle, and to facilitate the exportation of cattle and their products; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. COCK RELL. I present a petition, signed numerously by adult residents of the United States, citizens of Maryville and other places in Nodaway County, Missouri, respectfully but earnestly petitioning the Senate of the United States not to pass any bill in regard to the observance of Sunday or any other religious institution or rite, and not to adopt any resolution for the amendment of the national Constitution that would by instruction in public schools or in any other way give preference to religious principles over the views of religion held by non-religious persons, but to keep the Government strictly secular and the separation of church and state complete.

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a memorial of 39 citizens of Almata. Whitman County, Washington Territory, remonstrating against the proposed division of Whitman County, Washington Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

He also presented the petition of T. C. Armstrong and 26 others (19 voters and 8 women), citizens of Miles City, Mont.; the petition of N. Henton and 55 others (29 voters and 27 women), citizens of Ellensburgh, Wash.; and the petition of A. H. Kellogg and 20 others (16 voters and 5 women), citizens of Whidby Island, Wash., praying for the submission to the States of a prohibitory constitutional amendment; which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CAMERON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3905) authorizing and directing the sale of certain property belonging to the United States situate in Pittsburgh, Pa., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HARRIS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 588) to authorize the commissioners of the District of Columbia to condemn land on Rock Creek for the purposes of a park, to be called Rock Creek Park, reported it with an

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11634) to provide for allotment of land in severalty to United Peorias and Miamies in Indian Territory, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11817) vesting in the vestry of Christ Church, Washington Parish, in the District of Columbia, all of the right, title, and interest of the United States of America in and to square south of square 1092 in the city of Washington, District aforesaid, reported it with amendments.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 3037) for the relief of the officers and soldiers of the Seventh Regiment Tennessee Infantry, have instructed me to report the same back to the Senate adversely, and to recommend the indefinite postponement of the bill. The report is accompanied by a report from the Secretary of War.

Mr. HARRIS. Let that bill go upon the Calendar with the adverse

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report of the committee.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3935) for the relief of George Hunter, late captain of Company A, Columbia County (Washington Territory) Volunteers, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. STEWART. I report back from the Committee on Military Affairs the bill (S. 3590) authorizing the Secretary of War to lease to the Pike's Peak Astronomical and Meteorological Society certain lands. On reference to the War Department I ascertained that the reservation referred to in the bill has been abandoned and transferred to the Interior Department, and the subject is under consideration by the Committee on Public Lands. I therefore move that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged, and that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HISCOCK, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9623) to provide for printing Government securities in the highest style of art, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 3966) to establish lights on the western end of Coney Island, New York; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 3967) granting a pension to W. A. Moore; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions

He also introduced a bill (S. 3968) granting a pension to Robert A. Stewart; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 3969) to provide and maintain a national system of farmers' institutes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SPOONER. I desire to say as to that bill that I am not prepared to state that it is a perfect bill, but it relates to a subject which affects an important interest, and I shall submit hereafter some amendments to it. I commend it to the careful and early attention of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MORGAN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3970) to increase the compensation of fourth-class postmasters; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 3971) increasing the pension of John A. Waite; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be print-d.

Mr. CAMERON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying letter from the Secretary of War, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. VOORHEES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STANFORD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

DEPUTY MARSHALS IN NORTHERN NEW YORK.

Mr. HISCOCK submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved. That the Attorney-General be, and is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate at once a list of the general deputy marshals appointed during the last six months by Walter H. Bunn, marshal for the northern district of New York, together with the residences of such deputy marshals, the dates of appointment, and the place where their respective oaths of office are filed.

AGREEMENT WITH CREEK INDIANS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further morning business that order is closed, and the Calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. DAWES. On the 6th of this month the President of the United States sent a message to Congress communicating an agreement with the Creek Indians to surrender their title to a large tract of land in the Indian Territory. This agreement must be ratified before the 1st of July or it will fail. Therefore I move that the Senate proceed at this moment with the consideration of the bill, the purpose of which is to ratify that agreement. I think there will be no depate upon the measure. It is Order of Business 2679.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (8. 3920) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Muscogee (or Creek) Nation of Indians in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs was to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 2. That the lands acquired by the United States under said agreement shall be a part of the public domain, but they shall only be disposed of in accordance with the laws regulating homestead entries, and to the persons qualified to make such homestead entries, not exceeding 160 acres to one qualified claimant. And the provisions of section 2301 of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall not apply to any lands acquired under said agreement. Any person who may enter upon any part of said lands in said agreement mentioned prior to the time that the same are opened to settlement by act of Congress shall not be permitted to occupy or to make entry of such lands or lay any claim thereto.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARDIN COUNTY, KENTUCKY.

Mr. BLACKBURN. As the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Jones], who reported a Senate bill similar to the House bill which I asked to have considered a few moments ago, is now in his seat, I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to have that bill again considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky asks unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 11871) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky, be resumed. 'Is there objection?'

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SPOONER. I will state to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHER-MAN] in regard to this bill that the county of Hardin, in Kentucky, owns stock in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company. The dividends were taxed by the Government of the United States, and the railway company withheld from that county the tax on the dividends, which was paid over to the Government by the company.

A sum was withheld from several other counties similarly situated. These counties, upon the strength of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in 17 Wallace, where it was held that municipal corporations were not subject to the power of taxation by Congress in their municipal revenues, sued the Government in the circuit court of the United States in Kentucky to recover the amount withheld from them by the railway company, and they recovered and the amounts were refunded and paid back by the Government. I find in the report of the House committee a letter from the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in which he says:

Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the cases referred to (17 Wallace, 294, 17 Wallace, 322, and 20 Wallace, 323), dividends on stock owned by States, counties, and municipalities were not taxable, and if Hardin County, Kentucky, owned stock in the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, the tax paid by the said company on such stock would be refundable but for the statute of

As I said, all the money withheld from the other counties has been refunded, and the only obstacle to the refund to Hardin County is the technical bar of the statute of limitations. The committee were of opinion that as between the United States and the county, that bar ought not to prevent its recovery. It was an illegal exaction. That is all there is of it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That is the whole case.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT protempore. Senate bill 3880, upon the same subject, favorably reported from the Committee on Claims will, if there be no objection, be indefinitely postponed.

PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. RANSOM. I desire to give notice that to-morrow morning, immediately after the regular morning business is through, I shall ask the Senate to take up Order of Business 2069, being the bill (H. R. 7643) to establish a United States land court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territory of New Mexico and in the State of Colorado, and to say that I shall re-new that motion every morning until the bill is put upon its final pas-

WILLIAM ENGLISH.

Mr. DANIEL. I move that the Senate take up for consideration House bill 3721, authorizing the President to appoint William English an officer in the regular Army of the United States.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which proposes to authorize the President to appoint William English a second lieutenant in the regular Army of the United States, and to assign him to any vacancy existing in that rank.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is making an officer of the regular Army without following the ordinary mode requiring a nomination by the President and confirmation by the Senate. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill was reported by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HAMPTON] from the Committee on Military Affairs, and the report was not in writing.

Mr. SHERMAN. There ought to be some explanation of the bill.

Mr. DANIEL. I beg leave to state for the information of the Senator that Lieut. William English was a second lieutenant of infantry in the Army of the United States, and was stationed in Kansas. He is a son of Colonel English, his father having also been a regular Army officer. He was charged before a court-martial and tried for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman in conjunction with Lieutenant Fuller, who was also an officer of the Army and in association with him. The court-martial directed that Lieutenant Fuller be reprimanded and forfeit a certain portion of his pay and be under suspension of duty for a certain time. The court-martial that tried Lieutenant Fuller for the identical offense committed in conjunction and companionship with Lieutenant English was then dissolved and another court was held, which tried Lieutenant English for the same offense for which Lieutenant Fuller had been suspended, and ordered his dismission.

The report in the case made by the House committee was adopted by the Senate committee. It is quite a full one, and shows that these two young officers behaved rather badly, having become intoxicated; but of the graver offense charged they were both found not guilty, and I will read an extract from the report that Senators may see more specifically the views of the committee on the subject.

But in the case of Lieutenant English-

Says the House report from which I read-it will be found that the court-martial made no direct finding on the charges and specifications which were read to him, but in gross violation of the rights of the accused substituted other and different charges and attempted to fit those new-vamped charges to the proof. Thus they pronounced a forced verdict, and upon it delivered a cruel and merciless judgment.

Mr. SPOONER. I think there are a number of Senators who would be glad to hear what the Senator from Virginia is stating to the Senate. It is impossible to hear him with the confusion in the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair appeals to Senators to be in order.

Mr. DANIEL .-

Such-

Says this report-

Says this report—

Such a proceeding, either in civil or martial courts, shocks not only the judgment but the common sense of mankind.

A careful examination of the extended record in the two cases against Lieutenant English and Lieutenant Fuller will show that they are precisely identical in every particular, both as to charges and specifications, and the question arises, why should the judgment of the court be so entirely different in precisely identical cases? They were two young men, with the quick blood of youth circulating rapidly in their veins. They were guilty of no conduct calculated to give undue publicity to their youthful escapade. Put the harshest judgment on their conduct, and subject it to the severest criticism, and it amounts to this and no more: Why should a military court pass judgment which would expel one of these young officers from the Army, while it permits the other to remain?

If there is any difference in the guilt of these two young men Fuller is evidently the guiltier.

The sentence in Mr. Fuller's case, after entirely exonerating him from the only grave charge against him, was "to forfeit $50 of his pay per month for six months, confinement to the limits of his post for the same time, and a reduction of three files in rank;" and in the case of English the judgment was an absolute dismissal from the Army. The court that tried Lieutenant Fuller was dissolved after the finding in the case of Lieutenant Fuller, and a new court-martial ordered to try Lieutenant English, although he had been ordered to appear and answer before the court-martial which tried Lieutenant Fuller; and the natural inference is that had Lieutenant English been tried before the same court on identically the same charges he would have received the same sentence and judgment as was pronounced in case of Lieutenant Fuller.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question.
Mr. DANIEL. Yes, sir.
Mr. SPOONER. Why was not Lieutenant English brought before the same court? Why was the court-martial that tried Lieutenant the same court? Fuller dissolved?

Mr. DANIEL. I do not see any reason assigned for that, and am unable to answer.

There is therefore no escape from the conclusion that this second court was rganized to convict.

Now let us see what were the charges against Lieutenant English.

"First, Absence without leave, to the prejudice of good order and military lieutenant."

"First, Absence without leave, and discipline.
"Second. Conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman."
It will be seen the very same charges were made against Lieutenant Fuller.
When we come to consider the specifications under these charges it will be observed that "Lieutenant English is not charged with as grave offenses as Lieutenant Fuller's."
Lieutenant Fuller's."

most of the specifications, and adds:

most of the specifications, and adds:

On the seventh specification, second charge, he was convicted in part only by striking out and substituting other and different charges than those read to the prisoner, and this charge, after being doctored and amended by the court, simply charged "that in company with Lieutenant Fuller they took refreshments at a restaurant with a prostitute;" and in order to make any conviction they were compelled to say that he was only guilty of the "substituted words," and not those embraced in original charge and specifications; and it will be remembered that the whole force of this charge rested on the truth of the allegation that Lieutenant English was well known in St. Josephas an officer of the Army, and that the reputation of the said woman was well known to the people of the restaurant. He was in fairness and justice entitled to a verdict of not guilty on this specification, and it was avoided alone by the process of substitution which had been adopted by the court in the interest of conviction.

The main difference between the specification and the substitute is that English was charged with registering himself and a prostitute as man and wife at the Pacific Hotel. Of this he was found "not guilty," and they, the court, substituted in their finding that he allowed this to be done by some one else, and that this was not the charge, nor was there proof in reference to it.

Now, Mr. President, without going further into the details of this natter, the substance of the ground upon which the committee has reported in favor of Lieutenant English is, first, the fact that an undue and cruel difference was made between him and his companion; and, second, that the punishment for an offense which is acknowledged and is not attempted to be condoned was too severe, all the circumstances considered.

I would say that I have examined carefully the entire record in this case, and while it seems to me just and right that these young officers should have received reprimend and punishment for conduct which was unbecoming officers of the Army, for which they should have been sternly and severely rebuked, it is hardly right to quench out the aspirations and to stigmatize the character of a worthy young man who had hitherto borne an excellent reputation by reason of a single act of departure from the proper course which becomes an officer and a gentleman, and all the more unjust is it when one equally guilty with himself is allowed to escape with much less punishment.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to inquire of him if this officer was a graduate of the Military Academy?

Mr. DANIEL. Both of them are graduates of the Military Academy, I understand.

Mr. BUTLER. I think Lieutenant English is not.

Mr. DANIEL. I understand he is.

I think he was appointed from civil life. Mr. BUTLER.

Mr. DANIEL. I can only state my information from the Senator who made the report. The House of Representatives has passed this bill, and the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has unanimously reported it. In my judgment it commends itself to the kindly and favorable consideration of the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am sorry to be obliged to make a correction of the statement of the Senator from Virginia. The Senate committee was not unanimous. I was one of those who voted against the report.

Mr. DANIEL. I was not speaking by the record. Of course I had Mr. HAWLEY. I tis not in accordance with the usage of the Senate, either, to go into matters that occurred in committee. I simply say that two of us avowed our opposition to the report. I think I must have misunderstood the Senator from Virginia. I do not know whether he said that the report from which he read was the report of the Senate committee or not.

Mr. DANIEL. I said it was the House report from which I was reading

Mr. HAWLEY. If it was adopted by the Senate committee, I have no recollection of it. But that is not material, because I voted against the bill and should have voted against the report of course

Mr. HAMPTON. If the Senator from Connecticut will allow me a moment, I think I can explain that. If he remembers, I was instructed by the committee at first to make an adverse report and to have the ease indefinitely postponed.

Mr. HAWLEY. That was unanimous.

Mr. HAMPTON. That was done. At the request, however, of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], who said he had some evidence and the hill was again referred. to submit, I moved a reconsideration and the bill was again referred to the Military Committee, and I was instructed to make a favorable report; and the bill having passed the House and been referred to the committee with a House report, I used that report, and in making my report here I simply reported it back favorably. That is the history of the case.

I confess, Mr. President, that at first blush I was in accord with the adverse majority; but when these other facts were brought to my attention, which were not brought up at first, I changed my opinion and I concur in what the Senator from Virginia has said so much better than I could say it. I think gross injustice was done to this young man. I am told that he has conducted himself remarkably well. His father was an old Army officer, and as the Senator from Virginia says, all his aspirations are to make an honorable record in the Army, and I for one am disposed to give him the opportunity of trying to do so.

Mr. HAWLEY. I sympathize with the kindly purpose of the Senator from South Carolina, who is always generous in all these matters; and I do not care, as against the judgment of a majority of the committee on its second consideration, to go into any detailed argument in

The court-martial charges, the evidence, the whole details of the case are very disagreeable reading in public. I venture to guess that the commanding officer dissolved the first court-martial because it did not punish the first officer named, Fuller, as he ought to have been punished in the judgment of his superior officer. Therefore it is that there appears to be a distinction between the treatment accorded to Fuller and the treatment accorded to English. A subsequent court-martial took up the English case and cashiered the officer.

I refrain from a detailed argument. I differed from a majority of the committee. I thought the committee was right when it was unanimous against the bill. I do not care to argue the question, but I express my profound regret that it is thought best to permit the President to nominate for restoration to the service a man in a case like this. I hold it to be against the discipline, the character, and the best good in all respects of the regular Army. I have never heard a more good in all respects of the regular Army. I have never heard a more vigorous protest in that direction than I have heard from officers of high standing at various times, not on this case only, but on many others

There was a time when restoration by revocation of the orders and decrees and judgments of courts-martial was common, and when Congress was very liberal about these restorations; but such was the bad fortune in restoring men believed to be incompetent and unworthy that there was a great reaction, and nothing of it was done for a long time. I admit that there must be a case occasionally in which it will seem equitable, not only generous but just, to endeavor to remedy an injustice; but I affirm that the cases in which a man has been cruelly and unjustly cashiered are very few indeed and are quite exceptional. I expect this to be so for some time, because the members of a courtmartial are not qualified, as judges in civil life of the highest standing are, to distinguish entirely between what is upon record and what they know outside the record; and there is, therefore, what you may call a prejudice against an officer, which they derive from general knowledge of him for some time and believe him to be unfit for the service. possible that we who see nothing but the bare record may think it was a pretty severe judgment under the circumstances. I do not know that that is true in this case.

I simply wish to put on record my opposition to the bill and to suggest the query whether the bill is in the usual form. It authorizes the President to appoint an officer to the Army. Is it not usual to give him authority to nominate, and we reserve to ourselves the usual constitutional power of confirming or not confirming?

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs I gave this case particular consideration. The facts and circumstances out of which the charges against the young men grew are not necessary to be entered upon here particularly. It is sufficient to say, in brief, that two young men, both graduates of the Military Academy, of good families, with honorable lives behind them, with a bright future before them, committed an escapade not uncommon to youth, mitigated by all the facts and circumstances which the condition of youth may invoke to mitigate such a transaction.

The matter provoked an investigation; a court-martial was ordered upon them on the vague and indefinite charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman." One of them, Mr. Fuller, was found guilty, and, if I recollect correctly, his sentence was merely nominal, suspension from rank and perhaps from pay for the period of six months. The commanding officer who convened that court-martial dissolved it, although the form the principal of the province of though it was originally designed to try Mr. English too, for the reason that he believed that the sentence was too light, that it should be more severe, and convened another court under those facts and circumstances severe, and convened another court under those facts and circumstances for the purpose of trying Mr. English.

This second court-martial, proceeding upon precisely the same facts, having in consideration precisely the same mitigating circumstances, condemns Mr. English, the comrade of Mr. Fuller, like him a graduate of the Military Academy, to the perpetual and indelible infamy of being cashiered and dismissed the military service.

I am inclined to think, taking all the facts and circumstances of these cases into consideration, and indeping these men charitably, as men of cases into consideration, and judging these men charitably, as men of our ages ought to judge young men charitably, that the sentence of Mr. Fuller was severe enough. It did not seem to me as a member of the committee, it does not seem to me now, that it is worth while to visit committee, it does not seem to me now, that it is worth while to visit upon the follies and perhaps the temporary and evanescent and curable recklessness of youth such a perpetual stamp of infamy as has been imposed upon the character of Mr. English.

I have very little respect for the ways and doings of most of the proceedings of frontier courts-martial. I know many of them by experience. I know how they are built up to convict, how they are dissolved when they are not sometimes sufficiently pliable to the will of the convening officer; and to my mind this was one of those cases which I have seen frequently repeated in the administration of military law upon the seen frequently repeated in the administration of military law upon the frontier.

For these reasons, after having given this matter a very careful consideration, differing from two members of the Military Committee with great regret but with no diffidence, I came to the conclusion that it did not consist with the administration of military justice by this Government to allow one young man to go on and to hold his position in honor with all the opportunities that a long military career before him can give, and remit the other young gentleman into the unending and in-delible disgrace of a perpetual sentence of this kind. Therefore I think this bill ought to be passed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I want simply to say that the form of this bill, in my opinion, is not the proper one. It is not the form in which bills are generally reported in such cases from the Committee on Military Affairs. It is a House bill, and I presume that was the reason no amendment was made. It simply says that the President is authorized to appoint a certain officer. The general form in all these cases has been that the President is authorized to nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint. I think the bill should be amended. I therefore offer an amendment: "That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint," to come in after the words "authorized to."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

The SECRETARY. After the word "to," in line 3, it is proposed to insert the words:

Nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to.

So as to read:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint William English a second lieutenant in the regular Army of the United States, and to assign him to any vacancy in said rank existing therein.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DANIEL. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, and ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. DAVIS, Mr. ANDERSON, and Mr. HAMPTON were appointed.

HEIRS OF GEORGE W. SAMPSON AND BENJAMIN HENRICKS.

Mr. COKE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4789) for the relief of the heirs of George W. Sampson and Benjamin Henricks, of Austin, Tex.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment of $1,000 to the heirs of George W. Sampson and Benjamin Henricks, of Austin, Tex., as compensation for the use of a court-room and offices for the marshal and clerk of the United States district court of the western district of Texas, from the 1st of July, 1865, to the 1st of July, 1866.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3766) for the relief of William Pfaender.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate $883.50 for the reimbursement of William Pfaender, late lieutenant-colonel of the Second Regiment Minnesota Cavalry Volunteers, for the loss of property destroyed by the burning of Government buildings at Fort Ridgely, Minn., on the 19th of January, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask unanimous consent to call up the individual pension bills, subject to objection. There are only a few of them, and it will not take twenty minutes, I guaranty, to pass them.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not object to the request of the Senator from Wisconsin, but as there are several bills that he wants to consider, and there are some of us here who have a single little matter we should be glad to have considered, I would rather he would postpone his request until those of us who have but a single bill are out of the way.

Mr. SAWYER. If Senators will permit me to call up private pension bills some time to-day I will not press the request now.

Mr. HARRIS. I will consent to the Senator's motion at any time

Mr. SAWYER. If Senators have bills they want to pass I do not wish to be in their way. I shall not press my motion now.

NAVAL ACADEMY COURSE.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9674) to regulate the course at the Naval Academy

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask that the amendments of the committee may be acted on as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments will be considered as they are reached in the reading of the text of the bill, if there is no objection.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Naval Affairs was, in section 1, line 5, after the word "cadets," to insert "then commencing their fourth year; " so as to read:

That the Academic Board of the Naval Academy shall on or before the 30th day of September in each year separate the first class of naval cadets then commencing their fourth year into two divisions, as they may have shown special aptitude for the duties of the respective corps, in the proportion which the aggregate number of vacancies occurring in the preceding fiscal year ending on the 30th day of June in the lowest grades of commissioned officers in the line of the Navy and Marine Corps of the Navy shall bear to the number of vacancies to be supplied from the Academy occurring during the same period in the lowest grade of commissioned officers of the Eagineer Corps of the Navy.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 22, after the word "graduation," to insert "at the end of their six years' course;" so as

And the cadets so assigned to the line and Marine Corps division of the first class shall thereafter pursue a course of study arranged to fit them for service in the line of the Navy, and the cadets so assigned to the Engineer Corps division of the first class shall thereafter pursue a separate course of study arranged to fit them for service in the Engineer Corps of the Navy, and the cadets shall thereafter, and until final graduation, at the end of their six years' course, take rank by merit with those in the same division, according to the merit marks.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, line 25, after the word "division," to insert "at the end of their six years' course;" and in line 31, after the word "division," to insert "at the end of their six years' course;" so as to read:

And from the final graduates of the line and Marine Corps division, at the end of their six years' course, appointments shall be made hereafter as it shall be necessary to fill vacancies in the lowest grades of commissioned officers of the line of the Navy and Marine Corps; and the vacancies in the lowest grades of the commissioned officers of the Engineer Corps of the Navy shall be filled in like manner by appointments from the final graduates of the Engineer division at the end of their six years' course.

The amendment was agreed to.

word "below," to strike out "seven" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the proviso read:

make the proviso read:

Provided, That no greater number of appointments into the said lowest grades of commissioned officers shall be made each year than shall equal the number of vacancies which shall have occurred in the same grades during the fiscal year then current; such appointments to be made from the final graduates of the year, in the order of merit as determined by the Academie Board of the Naval Academy, the assignment to be made by the Secretary of the Navy upon the recommendation of the Academie Board at the conclusion of the fiscal vear then current; but nothing contained herein or in the naval appropriation act of August 5, 1882, shall reduce the number of appointments of final graduates at the end of their six years' course below twelve in each year to the line of the Navy, and not less than two shall be appointed annually to the Engineer Corps of the Navy, nor less than one annually to the Marine Corps; and if the number of vacancies in the lowest grades aforesaid, occurring in any year shall be greater than the number of final graduates of that year, the surplus vacancies shall be filled from the final graduates of following years, as they shall become available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The nextamendment was, in section 2, line 3, before the word "years," to strike out "sixteen" and insert "fifteen;" in the same line, after the word "and," to insert "the;" and in line 4, before the word "years," to strike out "twenty-one" and insert "nineteen;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That after the 4th day of March, 1889, the minimum age of admission of cadets to the Academy shall be fifteen years and the maximum age nineteen

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to add to section 2:

Cadets shall be appointed one year in advance of the time of their admission to the Academy except in cases where by reason of death or other cause a vacancy occurs which can not be provided for by such appointment in advance.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out the last section of the bill, in the following words:

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect when the first class shall be divided under its provisions.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. Cameron, Mr. Chandler, and Mr. Blackburn were appointed.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate proceed at this time to the consideration of the bill (S. 3877) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 14, after the word ground," to insert:

and provided further. That the said company shall not be permitted to stop its cars at its terminus, or at any point within the city limits, for a longer time than is necessary to take on and let off its passengers.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to the bill as a new section:

SEC. 4. That Congress reserves the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to offer an amendment which I think the Senator from Tennessee will agree to. Mr. HARRIS. Let it be read.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read. I think every Senator will agree to it

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Where is it Mr. SHERMAN. As an additional section, Where is it to be inserted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.
The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert as a new section:

SEC. 5. That any company authorized by law to run cars propelled by horses within the District of Columbia is hereby authorized to substitute for horses electric pow r by storage or independent electrical batteries or underground wire, or by underground cables moved by steam power, on the whole or any portion of its roadway, the same to be done under the direction and with the approval of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, with authority to purchase and use any terminal grounds and facilities necessary for the purpose.

Mr. HAPPIS. I have no electricate to their analysis.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be agreed to,

if there be no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Before the subject passes away I wish simply to state that if this bill does not become a law I expect to offer this as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill. I wish to say, too, The next amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 41, after the word "nothing," to strike out "herein contained" and insert "contained herein or in the naval appropriation act of August 5, 1882;" in line 44, before the word "final," to strike out "such;" in line 45, after "graduates," to insert "at the end of their six years' course;" and in the same line, after the that all the amendment proposes to do is to authorize any street railroad company now existing and authorized by law to occupy the pubelectric wires underground, the cable wires, or the storage battery, all of which are admitted to be safe and of no danger to human life.

I have taken the liberty to show this amendment to one or two leading gentlemen connected with the street railroads in the city of Washington, and I have given them pretty fair notice, so far as one mem ber of this body can, that unless they adopt modern modes of transportation for persons in the city of Washington they must expect to have rivals authorized by Congress at the next session, while if they will themselves, by the free permit that is here granted, adopt these new methods of transportation, probably there will then be no disposition to give to other companies the power to tear up the streets of Washing-

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the purport of the amendment?
Mr. SHERMAN. It simply gives to any company now existing and authorized to run a street railroad the proper authority to adopt either of the three systems I have mentioned.

Mr. COCKRELL. Along their present lines?

Mr. SHERMAN. Along their present lines. It does not change the charter, but simply permits them, at their pleasure, to do it, and if they do not, then Congress will feel more at liberty to pass laws that will create competition here.

Mr. HARR S. I shall favor the amendment of the Senator from Ohio to this bill, and also to the appropriation bill, if this measure shall not become a law before the appropriation bill is passed. I think it important to the District that the authority given by the amendment of the Senator from Ohio should be granted to the railroad companies of the District.

Mr. CALL. As I heard the bill read, I think there is another objection to it worthy of consideration, and that is that it authorizes an increase of the stock of this company to the amount of $100,000. As I understand it, this community is already afflicted with a vast amount of watered stock and with charges upon transportation, based upon no expenditure of money.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Florida will allow me, I will state that perhaps for the first time in the legislation in respect of corporations in the District of Columbia, in the case of every railroad company that has been chartered by the Fiftieth Congress we have required the estimates of competent engineers as to the cost of constructing and equipping the road, and we have limited the amount of stock and bonds to a fair and reasonable amount allowed for the construction and the equipment. This bill authorizes an extension over new territory, and upon the estimates of the engineers the increase of stock is only equal to the cost of constructing and equipping the road authorized to be constructed.

Mr. CALL. The explanation of the Senator I think goes to a considerable extent to relieve the objection which I made. If I understand him to say that these street roads have been carefully examined as to their present value and that the capitalization of them in the shape of stock is no greater than a reasonable valuation, the objection is entirely done away with. I simply desired for myself, however, to call attention to the fact, which has been impressed upon me by repeated statements made in the Senate by members of the Committee on the District of Columbia, that there was an excessive capitalization of these

I am not prepared to say that that is true.

Mr. HARRIS. In order that the Senator from Florida may not misunderstand my statement, or that nobody else may misunderstand me, I say every bill chartering a road by the Fiftieth Congress which has been reported from the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia has limited the authority to issue stock and bonds to a fair estimate of the actual cost of construction and equipment. As to the roads previously incorporated I think the Senator is right when he says that in some of them at least the stock has been from time to time watered. With that question I am not now dealing.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Tennessee may also truthfully add that in every charter passed at this session provision has been made for the prompt payment of the capital in cash.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator is quite right.
Mr. CALL. But I understand that the bill relates to companies previously chartered.

Mr. HARRIS. The amendment of the Senator from Ohio simply gives authority to existing corporations to adopt the newer methods of motive power; that is, to adopt the storage battery, or the underground electric wire, or what is known as the cable road.

Mr. COCKRELL. It does not give any power to issue stock at all. Mr. HARRIS. It does not give any power whatever to issue stock. Mr. CALL. Do I understand the Senator to say that the bill reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, which is now about to pass, does not give power to issue additional stock?

Mr. HARRIS. It gives to the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railroad Company power to issue stock in an amount equal to the cost of extending its road over the territory on which the bill authorizes the extension; no more; and it authorizes no other company to issue one dollar's or one cent's worth of stock.

Mr. CALL. Then I will say that the statement of the Senator from Tennessee is entirely satisfactory.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the fairs from its further consideration.

Senator from Ohio will be agreed to if there be no objection. It is

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM S. ROSECRANS.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the considera-tion of the bill (S. 3560) for the relief of William S. Rosecrans.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to authorize the President to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint William S. Rosecrans, late a major-general of United States Volunteers and brigadier-general in the regular Army of the United States, to the position of brigadier-general in the Army, and to place him upon the retired-list of the Army as of that grade (the retired-list being thereby increased in number to that extent).

Mr. HOAR. I know very well the high reputation of this distinguished officer and gentleman, and the high esteem in which he is held by his comrades. I do not propose, therefore, to ask even an explanation of the reasons which moved the committee to propose this measure so far as they relate to him; but I desire to ask the Senator from Connecticut if he is of opinion that it is within the constitutional power of Congress to select a particular person by name and pass a special bill authorizing the President to appoint that officer to a certain office, and no other, in the Army?

Mr. HAWLEY. I am perfectly well aware of the gently malicious trend of the Senator from Massachusetts. He wishes to prod me with the Fitz-John Porter case

Mr. HOAR. Not with the case, but with the argument made by members of the committee.

Mr. HAWLEY. I thought myself we were right in opposing that case on that particular ground, but I did also think that we were even more than right in opposing it on the general merits of the question. As to this other question with regard to the construction of the law, I submit to the overwhelming judgment of Congress asserted more than once, and to the action of the President of the United States in confirming it; and when a distinguished gentleman named A B gets back into the Army in spite of a court-martial, I am in favor of putting another man on the retired-list who did not have a court-martial, but was a magnificent old soldier.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. EDWIN PILCHER.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to J. Edwin Pilcher, of Louisville, Ky., $905, the amount of one bond of $100 and $805 in paper money of the Republic of Texas; but he shall first surrender the securities to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

There was an amendment reported by the Committee Mr. HOAR. on Claims to the bill, an essential amendment, that the Secretary of the Treasury was to find certain facts. The amendment will be found in the last paragraph of the report of the committee. I ask that the amendment be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.
The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert, after the word "Texas,"

Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall find that said Pileher's claims are within the class of claims heretofore paid by the United States out of the Texas indemnity fund: And provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall be satisfied that said bond and money are genuine: And.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S.3681) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith, Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs, in the State of Kansas

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which the Secretary began to

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. Since calling the bill up I find that a House bill covering the same purpose exactly has been passed by that body, and I ask that the House bill be taken up in lieu of the Senate bill and put on its passage now.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the House bill and that it be substituted for the Senate bill which has been taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arkansas moves that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11777) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith, Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to an near Rayter Souries in the State of through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs, in the State of Kansas.

Mr. DAWES. Has the Senator from Arkansas compared the two bills?

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I have.
Mr. DAWES. They are substantially the same?
Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. They are substantially the same. The Senate bill provides for a limitation of three years in which the road is to be built, and the House bill provides a limitation of four years.

Mr. DAWES. I remember that.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. The Senate bill also provides that 50 miles shall be built within a year, while the House bill has no limitation of the kind.

Mr. DAWES. I now remember the differences between the two bills.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. With the exceptions stated they are identically the same.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, House bill 11777 is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and will be read at length.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill, and was interrupted by—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Senate resumes the consideration of the unfinished business, being the resolution reported by the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] directing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to revise the existing laws regulating the elections of members of Congress, etc. The Senator from Taylor Mr. Covania. of members of Congress, etc. The Senator from Texas [Mr. Coke] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I ask the indulgence of the Senate to have the regular order informally laid aside that the pending bill may be disposed of. It has been half read; it is before the Senate; it is a matter of local importance, and will only require time enough to finish the reading of the bill.

Mr. COKE. I will yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reading of the House bill 11777 will proceed.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.
Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. There is a misprint in line 1 of section the word "amended" should be "amend it." I presume that an be corrected by the clerks.

The PRESIDENT protempore. On page 4, in line 39, after the word "petition," the word "of'" should be stricken out and "to" inserted.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. Yes; that change should also be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It may be that the engrossed bill is correct, and that the errors are typographical merely.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move the amendment in both places.

The PRESIDENT protempore. The amendments will be agreed to

The PRESIDENT protempore. The amendments will be agreed to, if there be no objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments. The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. DAWES, Mr. PLATT, and Mr. JONES of Arkansas were appointed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, Senate bill 3681, similarly entitled, upon the same subject, will be indefinitely postponed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. President—
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate resumes the consideration of the resolution reported by the Senator from New York [Mr. Ev-ARTS] from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, on which the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask the Senator from Texas to yield to me for twenty minutes that I may call up the remaining pension bills on the twenty minutes that I may call up the remaining pension only on the Calendar. It will take not exceeding twenty minutes to pass them.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bills unobjected to?

Mr. SAWYER. Unobjected individual pension bills.

Mr. COKE. I think generally that those who have the floor have no right to farm it out. At the same time, it is the custom here to do things of that sort. The Senator from Wisconsin appealed to me to allow him twenty minutes to consider unobjected pension bills, and I required him that I would yield.

promised him that I would yield.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield to me long enough to have a House bill passed, to which I think there will be no objection?

Mr. SAWYER. I cannot do that. The first pension bill on the Calendar is Order of Business 2614, House bill 8406.

PENSIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to the conference.

The motion was agreed to. By unanimous consent the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. Allison, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. DAWES, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. GORMAN were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1831) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Heap Nicholson.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S.

2091) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer, with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved. That the House further insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 185) to provide for the admission of the State of South Dakota into the Union and for the organization of the Territory of North Dakota, and agrees to the further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. Springer, Mr. Baker of New York, and Mr. Barnes be the managers of the further conference on the part of the House. Resolved, That the House instructs the managers of the further conference on the part of the House to recede from the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 185) to provide for the admission of the State of South Dakota into the Union and for the organization of the Territory of North Dakota in the following re-spects:

and for the organization of the Territory of North Dakota in the following respects:

1. That the Territory of New Mexico and the proposed new State thereof may be excluded from the bill.

2. That the bill may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota, with provisions for a new election of State and Federal officers and without a new vote on the question of division.

3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis, i. e., all of them under proclamations by the President.

Further, that such matters as relate to the election of delegates and the apportionment of the districts from which members of the convention are to be elected, the date of holding conventions and the date of resubmission of the South Dakota constitution, and the location of the temporary seat of government in South Dakota, and such other matters as are not included in the instructions above recited, be referred to the committee of conference for their discretion.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAWYER. Have the pension bills on the Calendar been con-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They have all been disposed of.
Mr. SAWYER. I yield the rest of my twenty minutes to the Sena-Mr. SAWYER. I yield the rest of my twenty minutes to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas [Mr. Coke] is entitled to the floor on the unfinished business

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask the Senator from Texas to yield to me to call up a House bill which, I think, will elicit no debate.

Mr. SAWYER. I yield the rest of the twenty minutes. I have only occupied thirteen minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas is entitled to the floor. Does he yield?

Mr. COKE. I yielded to the Senator from Wisconsin for twenty minutes, and that time has not quite expired, and he has made some arrangement with the Senator from Oregon for the consumption of the remainder.

Mr. SAWYER. Yes; that is the case.
Mr. COKE. I desire to ask the Senator from Oregon if his bill will consume any time?

Mr. MITCHELL. I think it will lead to no debate. It is a House bill which was reported unanimously from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COKE. I am willing that the twenty minutes shall be consumed. If the bill can be passed before the expiration of that time I shall not object.

Mr. MITCHELL. If it leads to any lengthy debate I shall not insist on it.

Mr. COKE. Very well.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9718) for the relief of J. W. Parish & Co.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the Order of Business?
Mr. MITCHELL. The Order of Business is not given. The bill is on the table.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think that is too important a claim to be taken up in the absence of so many Senators. It ought to be called up some time when the Senate is fuller. It is an old claim.

Is the bill objected to?

Mr. MITCHELL. I shall not press my request for its consideration. CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution reported by Mr. EVARTS, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, directing that committee to revise the existing laws regulating the election of members of Congress, etc.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, yesterday I laid before the Senate a response to the memorial of three citizens of Washington County, Texas, arraigning the people of Washington County, a counter-memorial making denial of the material allegations in the memorial and setting out independent facts, and I informed the Senate that I would proceed to substantiate the counter-memorial and the allegations in it by laying before the Senate testimony which had been taken by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which testimony had not been included in the report of that committee made and laid upon the desks of members of the Senate.

I propose to pursue the same line of proceeding and to lay before the Senate additional testimony on this subject. I will commence by asking the Secretary to turn to page 391 of the record of evidence taken by the Committee on Privileges and Elections and read the testimony

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

W. W. Searcy, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. What is your full name? A. W. W. Searcy. Q. How old are you? A. I am thirty years old. Q. Where do you live?

A. I live in Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. I have lived there since January 7, 1877.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am an attorney at law; and I have been chairman of the Democratic executive committee of that county for the past six years.
Q. You know what the subject-matter of this investigation is?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In regard to these gentlemen, Messrs. Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore?
A. I know them all.
Q. You say you are chairman of the Democratic executive committee?
A. I have been for the past six years.
Q. Has there been any regular Democratic convention or organization for some years past in Washington County?
A. There has been a Democratic organization all the time for the purpose of sending delegates to the State convention. We call a county convention together whenever there is to be a State or district nomination in order to send out delegates. But for county nominations there has been no convention for the past two elections.

By Mr. Spooner:

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. You mean for 1834 and 1836?
A. Yes, sir; for 1834 and 1836. In 1836 I was myself, individually, opposed to to the citizens' meeting. I thought that the Democratic organization of the county ought to be kept up and refused to go into the citizens' meeting. Also, I did not sign the call made last autumn on the candidates, because I have always been in favor of keeping up the Democratic organizations of our county.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. What do you know about the occasion for forming this People's ticket which was formed in the fall of 1886?

A. So far as I know about the forming of that ticket, it was done in order to protect the tax-payers of the county from a lot of thieves who had lived there like vipers on their substance for the past twenty years. When I first went there Len Smith, the former tax-collector, was then settling with the commissioners' court for a default that he had made, and compromised for $1.000 with the county for his default. Then there was Hutcheson, one man who has been spoken of here, who had been indicted and convicted by the jurors of that county for squandering the funds there when he was road overseer, but whose case was reversed by the supreme court upon technicalities of the law, not because the man was not guilty, but because they said in their decision that there was no law for punishing that offense. He was tried and convicted by the jurors of our county, but the supreme court of the State reversed and dismissed the case, because they said there was no law for punishing that sort of an offense.

By Mr. EVARTS:

Q. What was the name of that one?
A. J. H. Hutcheson. After that default, and after he had been convicted, after his case was reversed and sent back, he was nominated by these same men for sheriff of that county, and was elected two or three successive terms as sheriff, and has since been sued on his bond there for sheriff for money collected and not turned over to the county.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. When you say he was nominated by these same men for sheriff of the county, to whom do you refer?

A. I refer to Hackworth and the Republican party. Then there came along Dick Harvin, who was elected collector in 1876, I believe it was; that was before I went there. When I went there I found him in the collector's office. In 1889, when I was appointed chairman of the Democratic executive committee, we all knew these people were squandering the money that they collected, and I went to work and worked up the case against Harvin, and he was indicted eleven times by the grand jury. The indictments were quashed, and then the State sued him for $10,000 as a defaulter. He was then county collector, and he resigned. He had been renominated by the Republican party, but he resigned his position as tax-collector, and withdrew from the ticket after these defaults had been brought out on him, and then two years afterwards they nominated him for sheriff of the county and ran him. Then there was Leib, who was nominated, I believe, in 1880, who stole $25,000 of the people's money, and now is in the penitentiary serving a sentence for that.

Q. These four individuals you have mentioned are Republicans?

A. Yes, sir; they are all Republicans, and they have been the principal office-holders, and they have held the moneyed offices of the county nearly all the time. Mr. Amsler, a German, succeeded Harvin in the tax-collector's office. He was the first tax-collector, Harvin was, and he held that office until he was proved to be a defaulter and forced to re-ign. Then Mr. Amsler was elected and honestly administered the affairs of the office for two ye urs and then declined to run again, and his deputy was taken up the people's movement, and he is now tax-collector of the county. Now, as to Mr. Schutze, he has no moral character there at all.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 401 and read the

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 401 and read the testimony of F. A. Engelke.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

F. A. Engelke, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. What is your name?
A. F. A. Engelke.
Q. And your age?
A. I am fifty-three years old.
Q. Where do you live?
A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. I have lived in Brenham seventeen years.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am president of the First National Bank there.
Q. How long have you been president of that bank?
A. I believe about four years.
Q. What was your business before that?
A. I had a private banking business of my own there, a private house.
Q. What are your polities?
A. I am a Republican.
Q. How long have you been a Republican?
A. Just as long as I am in the United States, and I was a Republican before I came here, too.
Q. What local ticket did you support at the last election?
A. The People's ticket.
Q. Were you one of the signers of the call to get up this People's ticket?
A. I was not a signer, but I approved it afterwards; after it was formed I approved it; I believe I signed it then.
Q. You woted for it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the reason that People's ticket was formed?
A. On account of bad administration of the Republican party.

Q. The local administration?
A. Yes, sir; the local administration. The money was stolen, and the people were not satisfied with those officers.
Q. Was there a good deal of dissatisfaction with the local administration among prominent Repulicans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Among the best men, the men of property?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And men interested in good government?
A. Oh, yes, sir; they all wanted good government.
Q. Were there many of your acquaintances who took the same view of this as yourself?

Q. And men interested in good government?
A. Oh, yes, sir; they all wanted good government.
Q. Were there many of your acquaintances who took the same view of this as yourself?
A. Yes, sir; a good many.
Q. German Republicans?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Men of prominence in the community?
A. Yes, sir, most all of them; nearly all of them went with them; they were dissatisfied.
Q. You knew you were voting for some Democrats on the local ticket?
A. Yes, sir; we did.
Q. And you, a Republican, voted for a Democrat?
A. Yes, sir; I never would vote for a Republican if I knew that a Democrat was the better man.
Q. How d.d you vote on the national ticket?
A. Mostly always the Republican ticket. The last time I don't know whether I voted at all.
Q. You say you have a good many friends who are Republicans?
A. I have.
Q. Do you know of any reason why a man should leave that community simply because he is a Republican?
A. I did not see any necessity for anybody who was a Republican leaving there; I do not know of any necessity.
Q. His personal or business relations are not interfered with on account of his politics?
A. No, sir; not at all; I do not know of any case at all.
Q. Do you know what is the general reputation and standing in that community of S. A. Hackworth?
A. His reputation is not good.
Q. Do you know anything about the reputation and standing of Mr. Schutze?
A. Hoi, it is mighty low; that is what it is.
Q. Do you know anything about the reputation and standing of Mr. J. L.
Moore?
A. No; I can not tell you much about Mr. Moore.
Mr. COKE. I call the attention of the Senate to the testimony of

Mr. COKE. I call the attention of the Senate to the testimony of this witness, Mr. F. A. Engelke, a German, a Republican, an old resident of Washington County and Brenham, a man who votes the national Republican ticket always, and who joined the movement composed of Democrats and Republicans, known as the People's ticket, in 1884, and again in 1886, for the purpose of expelling from power the men who signed the memorial and arraigned the people of Washington County before the Senate and the country. It was done, says this witness, because of the corruption and bad government of these officials. The same people composing the People's ticket went on voting the national Republican ticket, but voted with the Democrats for the purpose of getting rid of these vampires who were preying upon the best interests of Washington County and her people. I desire to call special attention to what this gentleman says with reference to the standing of these three memorialists:

Q. Do you know of any reason why a man should leave that community simply because he is a Republican?

A. I did not see any necessity for anybody who was a Republican leaving there; I do not know of any necessity.

Q. His personal or business relations are not interfered with on account of his politics?

his polities?

A. No, sir: not at all; I do not know of any case at all.

Q. Do you know what is the general reputation and standing in that community of S. A. Hackworth?

A. His reputation is not good.

Q. Do you know anything about the reputation and standing of Mr. Schutze?

A. I think it is mighty low; that is what it is.

The last witness whose testimony was read here just before the adjournment yesterday, Mr. Muller, in response to the same question, says that Mr. Schutze is a vile, low man. Every witness who has been examined has testified to the same effect about Schutze and Hackworth.

These men, Schutze and Hackworth, have been always since the war the leading spirits in Washington County, fomenting trouble, intriguing with the lowest class of the negro population, creating all the disturbance they could create, not for any public purpose, not for any public good, but for their own private ends and to get themselves into power. These are the men who come here and assail the people of Washington County and the State of Texas; and I want the Senate to listen to what the witnesses who live in the same county with them say is their character. I venture the assertion that there never have been three men whose characters have been more universally denounced as utterly abandoned than these three memorialists. Yet, Mr. President, the report of the honorable Committee on Privileges and Elections is based chiefly upon their testimony.

There is one other witness who figured and who is much quoted in the report, one Jodon, of Brenham. I ask Senators to look into the report of this testimony and they will find that while Mr. Jodon is a witness who knows everything that is necessary to be known on any point that comes up, that at the same time he appeared in the committee as a prosecutor. He alternated with members of the committee in the examination of witnesses. The proceedings before the committee show it. And he, with the other three, Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore, are the witnesses upon whose testimony the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections is chiefly based. I submit that it was an impropriety in that committee to permit this man to sit there and examine witnesses in this proceeding. It should not have been I permitted; and certainly decency forbade that the same man should be prosecutor and witness in the same cause. Yet that committee permitted it, for here is the evidence of it in the interrogatories propounded by Mr. Jodon to various witnesses.

I ask now that the Secretary turn to page 405 and read the testimony of E. Reichardt.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

E. Reichardt, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:
Q. What is your age?
A. I am fifty-three years of age.
Q. Where do you live?
A. I live in Brenham at present.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. Since 1873, I think.
Q. What is your business?
A. I have got a business in town, a furniture-house business, and other business besides. I live out 3 miles from town on my farm.
Q. What are your politics?
A. In politics I am a Democrat.
Q. How long have you been a Democrat?
A. I voted for Pierce and Buchanan, and after the war I could not vote for anybody else. I voted the Democratic ticket all the time.
Q. Do you know Mr. S. A. Hackworth?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you known him?

Yes, sir.
How long have you known him?
Since the time I was in Brenham.
What is his standing and general reputation in that community?
Well, his standing might be good with somebody; with me it is not much.
I speak of his general reputation.
It is not very great.
I do not ask you whether he is a great man; I want to know about his repion.

utation.

A. It was not very good in regard to business ways. I speak as a business man. He never pays his debts except he is forced to do it.

Q. You mean his credit is not very good in that community?

A. Nor his other standing.

Q. His credit and his other standing you say is not good?

A. Not with a good many people; it may be good with some.

Q. What is the general reputation and character of Mr. Schutze?

A. Well, it is about the same thing.

Q. Give us a little more definite idea if you can.

A. Well, I had for years no dealings with Mr. Schutze except last year when I took his paper for a year. Schutze is about the same way. He gets into anybody and tries to evade paying, and in regard to his social standing he has none.

Q. Do you know anything about Mr. Moore? A. Mr. Moore is a good man except he left Brenham without paying his debts.

debts.
Q. In old times it was said people went to Texas to avoid paying their debts.
A. Yes, sir; and a good many come there.
Q. Do you know anything about the circumstances of Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, and Mr. Moore leaving there?
A. Yes, sir; I found that out.
Q. From what you know, do you think there is any reason for their leaving?
A. No, sir; none in the world. They could have been there just as quietly and as well off as anybody. But all those parties were deeply involved in debt, and they had no source of making anything, and that was the last recourse they took. None of them was a producer, nor did he do anything to make a living.

Mr. COVE. This old Coverns banker, this citizen of Washington.

Mr. COKE. This old German banker, this citizen of Washington County, condenses this whole business with reference to these three men into a nutshell in answer to this question:

Q. From what you know, do you think there is any reason for their leaving?

A. No, sir; none in the world. They could have been there just as quietly and as well off as anybody. But all those parties were deeply involved in debt, and they had no source of making anything, and that was the last recourse they took. None of them was a producer, nor did he do anything to make a living.

The truth is that these three men were professional agitators. They had nothing in Washington County. They lived on office. They plundered the people to such an extent that in 1884 the people, as you have heard before in this testimony, without reference to party or political affiliations, combined, and Democrats and Republicans made up a People's ticket, composed of Democrats and Republicans, and elected a People's ticket, composed of Democrats and Republicans, and elected it, throwing these three memorialists out of office. When they got out of office they were like fish out of water. They tried to regain power in 1886. They failed to do it. They were run completely aground; they were stranded; they were bankrupt in fortune as well as in character; and they left there voluntarily, as this old man says, and as twenty-eight other witnesses prove whose testimony is here, and they were not driven off because they were Republicans, as they allege in their memorial.

I ask the Secretary to turn to page 409 and read the testimony of Harry Haynes

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF HARRY HAYNES,

Harry Haynes, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. Pugn:

By Mr. Pugh:

Q. Give your full name and place of residence.
A. Harry Haynes; I live at Independence, Washington County, Texas,
Q. How long have you resided there?
A. I was born there, and never have lived elsewhere.
Q. About how old are you?
A. I am thirty-seven years old.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. I am a farmer.
Q. Were yo present at Brenham when they had the citizens' meeting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was the cause of that meeting: for what purpose was it held?
A. It was held more as a conference meeting than anything else, to determine what action the people would take with reference to the result of the election that had just been held and to perfect harmony and concert of action; to tion that had just been held and to perfect harmony and concert of action; to discuss the situation generally.

Q. What were the objects that were intended to be accomplished by that meeting; were they lawful or unlawful? State the purpose of it.

A. It was lawful in every respect. We were there in the interest of law and order. It was currently reported throughout the country that there were lawless mobs or bands of people who intended to control the result of the election by force. That being the case, the law-abiding people of the country concluded that it would be best to consult together and to adopt some means to prevent any disturbance.

by force. That being the case, the law-animag people of the county concluded that it would be best to consult together and to adopt some means to prevent any disturbance.

Q. What was the character of the people who assembled there?

A. It was the most essentially representative body that I ever saw convened on any occasion or for any purpose, in Washington County. It was composed of bona fide citizens irrespective of party, nationality, color, creed, or otherwise, and there were Republicans, colored people, Democrats, Independents, and people of all political shades of opinion.

Q. They were a representative body of the people?

A. It was so regarded, and it was so strikingly so that it excited general comment in the press of the county and the adjoining counties.

Q. What expression of feeling was given by that meeting while they were in session; what was the character of the speeches, if there were any?

A. There were several speeches made which were distinguished for conservatism, the result of which was that we determined we had achieved the victory and would hold to it.

Q. What evidence did you have that there were any persons organized in the county to prevent the lawful result of the election from being recognized and enforced?

county to prevent the lawful result of the election from being recognized and enforced?

A. Well, in some parts of the county I suppose they had ocular evidence of it, but in my section of the county we had nothing more than current rumor. We were connected by telegraph and telephone with other sections of the county, and through this medium of communication we had been informed that in the eastern part of the county these insurrections, riots, rebellions, or whatever you choose to term them, were being organized. I suppose in the eastern part of the county these things came under the observation of individuals, but in my part of the county we saw nothing of the sort, except that the town in which I live, a village situated 15 miles north of Brenham, was entirely deserted by the male colored population. It was a notorious fact that for twenty-four hours not a negro man was seen in the town, nor scarcely any who were able to go away at all.

all.

Q. At what point was that?

A. At Independence. The women were very closely housed, but the men had all gone, and we have never been able to find out just exactly where they went. The supposition with us was that they had gone to the eastern part of the county to join these mobs that were being organized. We have no positive evidence, however, to that end. There were usually a good many colored people in our town, but for twenty-four or thirty-six hours we did not see a colored man there at all, and that confirmed the rumors we had received that these mobs were being organized in different parts of the county.

Q. Whether that was true or false, was the apprehension general and well founded in belief; did the people just affect to believe that, or was the apprehension of danger real?

A. I never saw people more serious in my life. If they were joking about it, hension of danger real?

A. I never saw people more serious in my life. If they were joking about it, they acted the hypocrite most consummately I must say. There was great distress among the women of the country. The men are not easily frightened, but they were distressingly serious on the subject. You asked me about the character of the speeches. I would like to go back and speak about them.

Q. My question was as to what speeches had been made at that meeting?

A. Colonel Giddings, who delivered, I suppose, the leading speech, advised the people to be prudent, discreet, and cautious, and to hold to what they had gained, but to resort to no acts of violence. That was about the character and substance of his speech.

gained, but to resort to no acts of violence. That was about the character and substance of his speech.

Q. There was no man at that meeting who was more influential with the people who attended the meeting than Colonel Giddings?

A. No, sir; he was decidedly the most influential man there, I suppose.

Q. He is a large property-holder, is he not?

A. Yes, sir; he is one of our wealthiest citizens, and a banker.

Q. What positions had he filled; what public trusts?

A. I do not know that he had ever filled any, except that he had served two or three terms in Congress.

Q. He is a large property-holder, is he not.

Q. What positions had he filled; what public trusts?

A. I do not know that he had ever filled any, except that he had served two or three terms in Congress.

Q. When had he served those people in Congress?

A. Washington County was in his old district, or was in 1874, I believe. It was the Fifth Congressional district of the State, and Washington County is still the old Fifth Congressional district, though it is in district number nine now.

Q. You say that was the character of the counsel Colonel Giddings gave at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything in the speech which you heard from Colonel Giddings calculated to excite any resort to violence or any breach of the peace?

A. Well, I can answer that question with more than ordinary confidence. If he delivered a single sentence or used a word or phrase that was calculated to stir up any bad blood it has entirely escaped my memory, and more than that, it did not create any such impression on me at the time. It was remarkably conservative, more so than any speech I have ever heard Colonel Giddings deliver, and I have heard him deliver hundreds, I suppose, in the course of my life. He is not regarded as an archangel in our part of the world; he is a man with plenty of temper, aggressive and bold, and in his public discussions is a very aggressive talker. But on this occasion he was very lamb-like and submissive, and his voice was altogether for peace, and he so stated it. I think I had better state the feelings of the man when I state this publicly. It created some surprise, the conservative spirit of the speech; I know it created some surprise.

Q. The effect of it was to allay, you say, any spirit or feeling other than that of keeping the peace, preserving order, executing the laws, and respecting the rights of everybody?

A. Yes, sir; that was the character of the speech; I know it created some surprise.

Q. Who else spoke at that meeting?

A. There were some six or seven short speeches delivered. I be thirty-six hours, I received notice before the meeting convened of a certain matter. I had heard of these outrages, insurrections, mobs, or whatever you call them—I think the word mob would convey the most accurate idea of the character of those meetings held in the eastern part of the county—and I said in that speech, when I heard of those mobs being organized in the county, that if their expressed intention was to slaughter and slay the people of the county, that my voice was for war. But when I heard these reports contradicted I said that I intended to attend that meeting upon a mission of peace. The expresses my views and the way I happened to use those words on that occasion; that having heard of these insurrections in the other parts of the county, my voice tend that meeting upon a mission of peace. I hope I make that clear to the committee. I would like for them to get it exactly right, as it has been misapprehended by witnesses who have been before the committee heretofore.

Q. Who was the next speaker after you?

A. I can not name the speakers in the order in which they were called.

Q. Did Judge Kirk speak?

A. No, sir; he was not the next speaker.

Q. Did Judge Kirk speak?

A. No, sir; he was not the next speaker.

Q. Did Judge Kirk speak?

A. That was about all. That is my recollection; if there were any other speeches made, except to just indorse the sentiments they had expressed, I have no recollection of it, except that Mr. Felder five were any other speeches made, except to just indorse the sentiments they had expressed, I have no recollection of it, except that Mr. Felder digressed to say that he thought Judge Kirk had made a very brillant campaign, and had worthly won his hone alled to produce.

Q. Now, in reference to the purpose of that meeting, did anybody in it go so far as to propose to drive any one out of the county, or to take any steps to do so, to tell any one to leave? What have you to say about that?

A. No, sir; there was nothing of that sort attempted.

Q. What do you know about

I recollect.

Q. Did you ever have any notice of a movement by any individuals or body of people in Brenham to drive these men out of the county?

A. No, sir; I never did.
Q. Or to tell them to leave?
A. No, sir; I never heard of any movement of the sort at all.
Q. Is there anything else you think of which you would like to state? Do you know the general character or standing of Mr. Moore, Mr. Schutze, or Mr. Hackworth in Washington County or in the neighborhood where they live?

A. A man could hardly live in Washington County and not be familiar with the character of this famous trio.
Q. What was that character?

A. A man could hardly live in Washington County and not be familiar with the character of this famous trio.

Q. What was that character?

A. Well, it was not at all like Cæsar's wife. They did not stand well among the masses of the people there.

Q. Why was it that they had that standing among the people where they lived; what gave them that character.

A. As far as Mr. Moore is concerned, I think his want of standing was owing altogether to his devotion to the worst element of the Republican party in that county. Some of the very best people in our county there are Republicans, but Mr. Moore's affiliation was not with that character of people in the Republican party; it was with the scapegoats and ragamuffins, and the worst element of the party there; I think his want of standing in the county there was owing to that. Mr. Schutze was a man notoriously immoral, and his character was owing to that. Mr. Schutze was a man notoriously immoral, and his character was bad, and he was in disrepute in a great many ways. I do not know that I can specify and say just exactly what, unless you would permit me to go into the details of some affairs which the committee would not probably like to hear, in regard to his marriage and final separation from his wife, and the causes of that separation, and the great indignation manifested on the part of his wife's relatives. All those things would be enough to disgrace a dog if the details were brought out. But I only know, generally, that his German fellow-citizens, irrespective of their party, have no great respect for him or confidence in the man. These things are general and I cannot specify.

Mr. Hackworth, I think, was a man of little or no standing there socially, politically, or financially. I understand that his credit was bad, and I know that he did not have the respect of the respectable people of the county, including his own relatives, his blood kin; that they denounced him in unmeasured terms, and severely, and did not hesitate to do so. These parties had all been in worth of work on the roads, besides carrying the scrip from 40 cents up to par. Thus under the two administrations the thing was so patent that it brought the whole thing into disrepute there. It argued inefficiency, dishonesty, and the misappropriation or misuse of the county funds.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I desire to say of this witness, Harry Haynes, that he is a gentleman well known to my colleague [Mr. REA-GAN], I think, as also to myself. He is a gentleman of unusual intel ligence, a man of the very highest character, born and raised in Washington County, a farmer. He has been several times a member of the Texas Legislature, and I do not know a man in Washington County or in any other county of the State whose utterances would meet and command higher respect and regard, a man who would be a good citi zen and highly esteemed man anywhere and in any country. He speaks of the public meeting which was called at Brenham at which speeches were made. This was the meeting which this trio of memorialists have represented to be one at which it was determined that they should be driven out of the county. It will be seen that Mr. Haynes expressly negatives anything of that sort. He shows conclusively that no proceeding of that sort was contemplated; that the meeting was peaceable; that the advice of the speakers was conservative notwithstanding the high excitement which existed on account of rumors of combinations of negroes who intended to make attacks upon the white

I call especial attention to this part of the testimony of Mr. Haynes: Q. What do you know about these persons being compelled to leave, or required to leave, or notified to leave?

It will be remembered that these men had sworn in their memorial that they were driven out of Washington County.

that they were driven out of Washington County.

Q. What do you know about these persons being compelled to leave, or required to leave, or notified to leave?

A. Oh, it was altogether voluntary on their part.

Q. What reason have you for saying so; why do you make that statement?

A. So far as Mr. Schutze is concerned, I do not know what motives he had, or what his intention has been heretofore. I speak now with reference to Mr. Moore and Mr. Hackworth. Last spring I was at the Pennington Hotel in the town of Brenham, and Mr. Moore drove up in front of the hotel with a load of vegetables. I believe at that time he was engaged in the market-garden business. He had been a man that I had known somewhat intimately, and I stepped on the gallery, being somewhat surprised to see him selling vegetables, and had some words with him. I asked him what he meant by that. "Well," he says, "this is the way I have to make my living." I used some expression, such as "How are the mighty fallen!" and asked him if he expected to continue that and he said, "No. Haynes; I can not see how I can make a living here, and I have made up my mind to go to California." Just what else occurred in the course of that conversation I have no recollection.

Mr. Moore did go to California, and this occurred long before these

Mr. Moore did go to California, and this occurred long before these troubles, when he said he was ordered out of the county.

Q. That was at what time?
A. That was last spring; that is, the spring before the election.

He has gone to California since, but it was in pursuance of this intention expressed to Mr. Haynes some seven or eight months previous. It was in the spring, and the election was in the fall when the disturbances occurred; and yet in the memorial presented here, Moore swears that he was driven out of Washington County to California.

Now, as to Mr. Hackworth, he says:

Now, as to Mr. Hackworth, he says:

Last summer, a year ago, in August, I was with Mr. Hackworth, and we were invited to deliver speeches down in Austin County. At that time there was a local-option contest pending in one of the magistrate's beats of Washington County, and we had been invited down there to deliver speeches in that election. On the way down we talked about a great many things, and when we got in the vicinity of Wallace, where the speeches were to take place, he began to talk about his speeches down there to a large number of negroes that he had colonized. He was agent for large tracts of land, and he expected to colonize there, and he told me on that occasion that he expected to dispose of that property and settle down in Fort Bend County or Austin County, near the line, as soon as he could dispose of his property in Brenham. So I say that as far as Mr. Moore and Mr. Hackworth are concerned, their forcible exile is in obedience to a plan long matured and quietly expressed to me. If I have violated the proprieties of a private conversation in giving this testimony before a committee, I ask the pardon of those gentlemen in doing it; but that is the way it occurred, as far as I recollect.

Vet these men have sworn that they were driven from Washington.

Yet these men have sworn that they were driven from Washington County; that they were exiled from Washington County; and he is as good a man as lives in Washington County or anywhere else, who swears both of them expressed to him seven or eight months before they left Washington County a settled, fixed intention to sell out and leave.

Now, I call attention further to what Mr. Haynes says about the standing of Mr. Moore, Mr. Schutze, and Mr. Hackworth in that community. The men who undertake to assail the people of a great State must expect to be examined, to be put under the microscope, and for it to be ascertained whether or not their allegations are worthy of belief.

Mr. Haynes speeking on that subject says: Mr. Haynes, speaking on that subject, says:

Mr. Haynes, speaking on that subject, says:

Mr. Schutze was a man notoriously immoral, and his character was bad, and he was in disrepute in a great many ways. I do not know that I can specify and say just exactly what, unless you would permit me to go into the details of some affairs which the committee would not probably like to hear, in regard to his marriage and final separation from his wife, and the causes of that separation, and the great indignation manifested on the part of his wife's relatives. All those things would be enough to disgrace a dog if the details were brought out. But I only know generally that his German fellow-citizens, irrespective of their party, have no great respect for him or confidence in the man. These things are general and I can not specify. Mr. Hackworth, I think, was a man of little or no standing there socially, politically, or financially. I understand that his credit was bad, and I know that he did not have the respect of the respectable people of the county, including his own relatives, his blood kin; that they denounced him in unmeasured terms and severely, and did not hese islate to do so. These parties had all been in the administration of affairs there during our worst days, when embezzlements and defalcations and high taxes were being thrust upon the people, and the odium that surrounds these men is worse now from the fact that they left the county with a debt of twelve or fifteen thousand dollars, with its scrip sometimes down to 40 cents and never higher than 40, with no internal improvements going on whatever; and after the administration of the affairs of the county fell into the hands of the respectable, good people of the county, in two years, with the same rate of taxation precisely, they paid off this debt of $15,000, built $12,000 worth of bridges, and had done several thousand dollars' worth of work on the roads, besides carrying the scrip from 10 cents up to per 10 cents up to par.

I would state one fact here that I should like every Senator on this floor to remember. By some twenty-seven or twenty-eight witnes Schutze is universally described as a perfectly monstrous man in his mmorality; some of them say he is a moral leper. One witness whose testimony I read last night said he was a low, vile man. Here is another witness who says "that the details of Schutze's conduct would disgrace a dog." Germans, negroes, Republicans, and Democrats all unite in denouncing him as a man of infamous character; and yet with a full knowledge of this inlamy, this man Schutze was, by the management of Hackworth, controlling the worst elements of the Republican party in Washington County, put at the head of the Republican ticket for county judge of Washington County, and he is the man who was beaten by Judge Kirk in the last election.

I do not want that fact lost sight of. This man Hackworth and his coadjutors put Schutze, this monster of immorality as he is described by the witnesses, this moral leper, at the head of the Republican ticket for the highest judicial honor in Washington County, and veted for him and fought for him. What is the record of this man Schutze? I will read from the memorial indorsed by about two hundred of the best people of Washington County:

Schutze, it is believed, came to Brenham about 1871, as alleged by him. We are informed that he was the keeper of a restaurant in the city of Austin before he came to Brenham. He was there arrested under the charge of swindling, and after several weeks of imprisonment was released after being made to dis-

That is his record before he went to Washington County, and you have heard his record after he did go there.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 427, the testimony of Frederick Fischer, which I desire to have read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF FREDERICK FISCHER.

Frederick Fischer, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Pugn:

By Mr. FUGH;
Q. Please give your name to the committee.
A. My name is Frederick Fischer.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. I live in Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. I am a butcher.
Q. How long have you lived in Brenham?
A. I have lived in Brenham since 1869.
Q. Are you a property-holder there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the extent of your possessions there; are they in real estate or that?

A. I own a farm and a house and a couple of houses in the city.
Q. A wooden or a brick house?
A. One brick house, one frame house, and about a dozen other farm houses.
Q. About what do you estimate your property there to be worth?
A. About $30,000.
Q. What party have you voted with there; what do you claim to be in politics?

A. I am a Republican.
Q. Did you take any part in the war?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which side were you on?
A. I was on the Northern side.
Q. You were a Union soldier?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did you go to Brenham?
A. In 1869.
Q. Have you been there ever since?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. Please give the committee what knowledge you have of the formation of a People's party and a People's ticket in 1834, and afterwards; why was that party formed?
A. Well, in 1884, or before that, our officers got to stealing our money.
Q. The county officers?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. The county officers?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What were they, Republicans or Democrats?
A. One of them was a Republican.
Q. Who were the county officers?
A. This man I was alluding to was Leib.
Q. What offices did he fill?
A. He was the treasurer.
Q. He got to stealing the people's and the county money?
A. Yes, sir; he stole it all.
Q. And that was the reason you got up this movement to turn that sort of men out of those offices?
A. Yes, sir. We got together and selected a set of people of both parties, honest men.

honest men. onest men.

Q. The people of both parties got together and made the ticket?

A. Yes, sir; the People's ticket.

Q. That was the reason it was called the People's ticket?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took part in that movement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You helped to make the ticket?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You helped to make the ticket A. Yes, sir.
Q. And helped to elect it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And those men were elected?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Fairly and openly?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. TELLER:

- Q. That was in 1884? A. Yes, sir; in 1884.
  - By Mr. Pugh:
- Q. It was claimed then that the People's candidates got possession of the county offices?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. When they got possession what was the condition of the county credit and

- Q. When they got possession what was the condition of the funds?

  A. We stand first class there, and the papers are good; our scrip I mean.

  Q. That is, at this time. But I mean when you first got possession of those offices by the movement of these people; what was the condition of the county credit in 1884?

  A. Oh, that fellow almost bankrupted us.

  Q. What was county scrip worth then?

  A. I don't recollect. Sixty-five cents was offered for it.

  Q. Since the people elected the county officers, what has been the result?

  A. It is dollar for dollar.

  Q. It has gone up dollar for dollar?

  A. Yes, sir.

- A. It is adonar for dollar?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Were you in Brenham when this public meeting was called and held?
  A. I got there late.
  Q. Do you know anything about the object or purpose of that meeting?
  A. What I understood was that the negroes were getting themselves together, and there was to be some trouble with them.
  Q. You really heard that?
  A. Yes, sir; that is what I understood.
  Q. And you understood that this meeting was called on account of that condition of things?
  A. Yes, sir; to protect us.
  Q. Were you in the meeting?
  A. I was there a while.
  Q. While you were there what sort of speeches did you hear; what sort of feeling was expressed?
  A. Well, I don't know, really. The feeling seemed to be pretty strong against those darkies.
  Q. Pretty strong against the darkies?

- Q. Pretty strong against the darkies?
  A. Yes, sir; on account of that movement.
  Q. Do you know anything about any movement or any combination to drive anybody out of the county?

anybody out of the county?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Potter with reference to these notices that were going around there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what conversation you had with him.

A. Mr. Potter came down to my market and showed me that note that he got, and I told him he need not be alarmed, that I did not think there was anything in it, and he says himself that he thought Frank Harvin wrote him the note.

By Mr. TELLER: Q. This was the notice that he got to leave, was it? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Pugn:

- Q. This was the notice that he got to seave, was 1?

  A. Yes, sir.

  By Mr. Pugh:

  Q. What was the general understanding and talk there; what did you gather from the conversation around about these notices that were being given?

  A. Well, it was generally believed that some of them wrote them themselves.

  Q. Who did Mr. Potter say he thought gave him his notice?

  A. He said he thought Frank Harvin wrote it for devilment.

  Q. Is Harvin an enemy of his?

  A. No, sir, he said he done it for devilment.

  Q. Do you know any fact going to show that Mr. Moore, Mr. Schutze, and Mr. Hackworth left that county on account of their belief that they were in danger, or anything of that sort?

  A. They were in no more danger than I was.

  Q. In no more danger than you were?

  A. No, sir.

  Q. Do you know their general character in the neighborhood where these parties live; do you know what their general character is there among the people where they live?

  A. Well, Mr. Schutze—

  Q. But do you think you know the general character of those men?

  A. Just about what the people thought and said.

  Q. You know from what the people said?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Now what sort of a character was that?

  A. Well, as to Mr. Schutze, nobody would hardly associate with him any more. The report is that he whipped his wife and she had to run to her friends to find protection.

  Q. He whipped his wife and she had to go to her friends for protection?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. What about his credit there?

  A. His credit was not good.

  Q. What about his associations, his moral character and standing?

  A. He has none at all.

  Q. Do you know anything about Mr. Schutze keeping a negro woman there as a sort of mistress?

  A. I do not know about that.

  Q. Was there any talk or rumor of that?

  A. There was a sort of rumor, but I do not know.

  Q. Do you know anything about Mr. Hackworth?

  A. Yes, sir; I know him.

  Q. What do you know about his general character and standing there in Brenham?

am?

A. His general character and standing was not good.
Q. Do you know or think you have any reason for saying that?
A. Well, he would not pay his debts.
Q. What was the character of his associations?
A. The character of his associations was with the lowest class of darkies.
Q. His credit was not good?

A. No six

No, sir.

From that character of Mr. Hackworth's would you believe him under oath—

Mr. TELLER. You must ask what was his reputation for truth and veracity; that is the question to put to him on that subject.
Q. Was there any other cause for his standing except his low associations and his not paying his debts? Was there any other cause for his low standing?
A. Not that I know of, in particular.

Mr. COKE. I desire to emphasize this testimony of Frederick Fischer, a good, conservative old German, living in Brenham, Washington County. He is asked:

Q. Are you a property-holder there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the extent of your possessions there; are they in real estate or

Mr. President, I desire also his estimate of the character of these three memorialists, Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore, preserved in the memory of the Senate. I desire those three men understood. They have made grave charges here against the people of Texas, and I de sire that the exact weight to which they are entitled as witnesses shall be ascertained and remembered.

Now I ask the Secretary to turn to page 433 and read the testimony of William Perry.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM PEERY.

William Perry, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Pugh:

By Mr. Pugh:

Q. What is your name?
A. William Perry.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am superintendent of a cotton-press at Brenham.
Q. How long have you lived in Brenham?
A. Nearly five years; five years the coming July.
Q. Were you at the meeting held at Eldridge Hall?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Describe the character and object of that meeting.
A. After the vote there was considerable excitement all over the county, and some farmers came in from the country and said there was a good deal of excitement among the negroes. A meeting of citizens was called; a good many farmers were there, and a good many citizens of the town, and Colonel Giddings made a little speech, and advised everybody to be quiet and not be hasty in doing anything they would regret afterwards. There seemed to be considerable excitement among them.

a little speech, and advised everybody to be quiet and not be hasty in doing anything they would regret afterwards. There seemed to be considerable excitement among them.

Q. What caused the excitement?

A. The killing of Bolton.

Q. Was there any rumor or talk of a combination among the negroes?

A. Yes, sir; it was said that the negroes were organizing on Sunday. Our meeting was held by probably Tuesday or Wednesday. On Sunday it was said that some of the negroes had made some talk out there at their churches in regard to the election and what they would do; that their talk was that their ticket had been elected, and they wanted to have their candidates put in office. That is what caused this excitement, and we called the meeting.

Q. Do you know of the general character and standing of Messrs, Hackworth, Schutze, and Moore in that community?

A. Well, I should judge—

Q. Just from what the people said, I mean?

A. From my experience and what I saw I should judge their character was not at all good, and from their associates; that is, as far as Hackworth and Schutze are concerned. Moore I know very little of any further than seeing him on the streets, and his having held office there and associating with a class of people that a person would naturally suppose were birds of a feather who went together.

Q. What was the talk, if there was any, about the influence these men were exerting upon the negro population?

A. Sir?

Q. What was the talk, if there was any talk of that sort, about the influence exerting upon the negro population?

A. Sir?

Q. What was the talk, if there was any talk of that sort, about the influence and the teachings of these men towards the colored population?

A. Of course they were recognized as the leaders of the Republican party, which in our country is the negro vote. There are good Republicans who vote for the white or People's ticket; we do not have any Democratic ticket. We have a People's ticket, and Republicans and Democrats both vote for the People's ticket.

Q. They combine?

A. Yes, sir; they combine on the People's ticket.

Q. What was the cause of that combination of Democrats and Republicans?

A. To get good men in office. The menthat the Republicans heretofore have put in office have robbed the county and stolen in every way that they could.

Q. And these men had filled these offices and had done so by the aid of the negro vote?

Q. And these men had lined these offices and had done so by the aid of the negro vote?

A. Yes, sir; that is the way it was done.
Q. It was the influence they exerted upon the negroes that enabled them to get those offices?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. COKE. I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 440, the testimony of Boling Eldridge.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF BOLING ELDRIDGE,

Boling Eldridge, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Pugh:

Q. What is your full name?
A. Boling Eldridge.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. About thirty-seven years.
Q. Were you in Brenham the day that the public meeting was held after the lection of this last year?
A. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what that meeting was called for, and what was done and said, as ell as the character of the people who attended it.

Mr. Evarrs. Is this the Eldridge Hall meeting which has been spoken of?
Mr. Pugh. Yes.

The Witness. There was a good deal of excitement about that time. I was attending to my business, and heard that a meeting was called there on account of the killing of Bolton, and other rumors that were afloat. You could hear almost anything at that time.

Q. But those rumors were afloat, were they?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What effect did they seem to have upon the people; what was the condition of feeling there?
A. The people were very much excited, so far as I could see, and held a meeting which was largely attended.
Q. What were these rumors which you speak of?
A. The rumor was that the negroes were arming themselves, and that probably there would be a fight between the races; that was about the meaning of it.
Q. And the killing of Bolton?
A. Seemed to have been the eause of it.
Q. That seemed to have been the beginning of it?
A. Yes, sir; so far as I know.
Q. What was said about the killing of Bolton being the beginning of that work, of that conviction among the negroes, or the effect of the teachings among the negroes by whites, or whatever was said about it? State as well as you renember, if you know anything.
A. I do not know much about that. It was stated that during the canvass there were speeches made that tended to excite the negroes and bring about a hard feeling between the whites and the blacks; I heard those rumors.
Q. To stir up the race feeling?
A. That is about what I heard; yes, sir. I did not attend any of the meetings, and did not here any of the speeches.
Q. Do you know anything about the move to combine the members of both parties in forming a People's party, and getting up a People's ticket?
A. Yes, sir; I recollect about the time that it organized.
Q. What year was that?
A. That was in 1884, I believe; that was the first year, I think.
Q. Why was that combination made or entered into?
A. I think, as best I know, that the people, the best people in the Republican party, were tired of the Republican administr

A. Tes, sir, I wante to put out a tester, to tan a contention and put out a tester.

Q. They succeeded in forming a People's party and got out a People's candidate against your opposition?

A. Yes, sir; they succeeded in getting the ticket out, and elected it.

Q. Then from the time that People's party was formed was there any politics, any Republicanism or Democracy in it?

A. No, sir; nothing at all.

Q. That combination was made to keep the county offices in the hands of honest, qualified men?

A. Yes, sir; that was about what it was.

Q. Were the candidates selected without regard to politics, and with reference to their qualifications chiefly?

A. They were selected because of their qualifications, I think. There were some Democrats on the ticket and some Republicans. It was a People's ticket; it was no Democratic ticket, but a ticket gotten up and selected by the people.

Q. Who elected or tried to elect that ticket, the members of both parties and all classes?

A. That is what I understand. I reckon there were a good many negroes

A. That is what I understand, I reckon there were a good many negroes who voted for it, and Republicans also,
Q. You mean a good many white Republicans?
A. Yes, sir. I understand it would not have been elected had not a good many of the white Republicans voted for it as well as Democrats. I do not know that all the Democrats voted for it,

Mr. COKE. I ask that the Secretary turn to page 447, the testimony of Hermann Fischer.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF HERMANN FISCHER.

Hermann Fischer, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. Pugh:

What is your name?

Q. What is your name?
A. Hermann Fischer.
Q. Where do you reside?
A. I reside in Brenham,
Q. What business do you do there?
A. I am a merchant.
Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?
A. About nineteen years.
Q. You are pretty generally acquainted with the people of that county and neighborhood?

A Ves sir. eighborhood?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. With the white and black people?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What have been your politics?
A. I am a Republican.
Q. What have been your politics since
A. Republican.
Q. When did you last vote the Republ
A. In 1883; the county ticket.
Q. Since that time what ticket have you.
A. The People's ticket.

I am a Republican. What have been your politics since you resided in Brenham? Republican. When did you last vote the Republican ticket?

In 1882; the county ticket. Since that time what ticket have you supported? The People's ticket. What ticket was that; a ticket to fill county offices?

Q. Since that time what ticket have you supported?
A. The People's ticket.
Q. What ticket was that; a ticket to fill county offices?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And no other than offices in the county?
A. Only the county offices.
Q. Why was it that you joined the people in making that party and in nominating that ticket; what was the cause of that?
A. We were dissatisfied with the Republican officers.
Q. The Republican government of the county, or the Republican management of the county?
A. Yes, sir; with the officers.
Q. What was the character of the people engaged in this movement to unite and elect the People's candidates to those offices.
A. They were the very best elements in the county.
Q. And that element was made up by Republicans and Democrats?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who were the opposing candidates for those county offices against the People's ticket in the last election?
A. So-called Republicans.
Q. Were all the candidates for county offices on the Republican ticket Republicans?

A. Yes, sir. Q. Then the Republicans put their ticket out by that name; it was a Republican ticket?

lican ticket?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was the People's party formed, and were these candidates nominated by them, so as to break down the Republican party; did you gentlemen think to break down the Republican party as a party, and to defeat Republican principles and Republican policy?

A. No, sir; not at all.
Q. Then there was no purpose of that sort in the People's organization?
A. No.
Q. That was not the object of nominating those candidates?
A. No.

A. No.

Q. That was not the object of nominating those candidates?

A. No.

Q. Then what was the object?

A. We wanted to get able and honest officers.

Q. For the county government?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Hackworth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I think ever since I have been in Brenham.

Q. What has been and is his standing there in that county; his general character and standing?

A. His reputation is very bad there.

Q. What is the cause of that, in your judgment? Why is it that he has that standing and that reputation and character among the people there?

A. His association with negroes.

Q. His association are with negroes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the idea, if there is governed.

standing and that reputation and character among the people there?

A. His associations are with negroes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the idea, if there is any, as to the purpose of that association; what use does he want to make of those negroes?

A. He wanted to get elected by them to office.

Q. He wanted to get possession of the county offices by their vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is your opinion and that is the general understanding?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what use does he want to make of the county offices when he gets them, and what use has he made of them when he had them?

Mr. Evarts. I suppose you mean to confine yourself to the general sentiment down there?

Q. I want your judgment and the opinion of the people there as to the cause they had for nominating these People's candidates. Why did they want Schutze and Hackworth defeated; why did they want to prevent them from getting possession of those county offices?

A. Because they had tried them before.

Q. You had some experience of what use they would make of them if they got them again?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When they had them what was the condition of the county funds and credit and the character of the county improvements?

A. Our scrip was worth about 50 to 65 cents and now it is at par.

Q. Then after they were turned out, and the people elected their candidates, how long was it before the county credit got up to par and everything in the county was in a healthy condition?

A. It was one or two years later.

Q. And that is the present condition of the county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that been made so by turning out these men and putting better men in, or what has been the cause of it?

A. Yes, sir; that was the cause.

Q. Do you know of any instances showing transactions, propositions, or offers from Mr. Hackworth that, in your judgment, were dishonest or proves what sort of a man he is, what sort of character he has; if so, give any instances you can?

A. Mr. Hackworth made me once a proposition to go out about a mile from there to an old farmer and m can?

A. Mr. Hackworth made me once a proposition to go out about a mile from there to an old farmer and make him drunk and swindle him out of his farm.
Q. What was the name of that man?
A. I think his name was Murf.
Q. Who was this man; what sort of a man was he?
A. He was an old bachelor.
Q. What was his intelligence and capacity to contract and deal for himself; what sort of sense did he have?
A. I think he did not have good sense.
Q. He was rather a weak-minded man?
A. Yes, sir.

A. I think he did not have good sense.
Q. He was rather a weak-minded man?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did Mr. Hackworth propose to you to do?
A. He asked me to join him and go along and take a bottle of whisky there and make him drunk and buy his land; swhidle him out of it.
Q. What answer did you make?
A. I declined, certainly.
Q. When was that?
A. I think that was about five or six years ago.
Q. Can you name any other transactions or acts of his in the same direction?
A. No, sir; that is about the only one I recollect. I did not have any dealings with him for several years.
Q. Who was to furnish the money to buy the farm of this old man?
A. I was to furnish the money.
Q. He wanted you to furnish the money?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What part did he propose to act?
A. To make out the deed.
Q. To make out the deed.
Q. To make the purchase?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he to make the contract if you were to furnish the money?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was to do the trading if you were to furnish the money?

Yes, sir.
Who was to do the trading if you were to furnish the money?
He was to do the trading.
Do you know Mr. Schutze?
Vos cir.

Yes, sir.
What is your understanding of his general character there among the people?

A. His character is very bad. He is not allowed in a respectable family.
Q. He is not allowed in a respectable family?
A. No, sir.
Q. What do you know about the state of feeling there about the time Bolton was killed and from that time down to the election? State if there was any excitement in the county; and, if so, the cause of it.
A. There was some excitement about there.
Q. What was the cause of it?
A. The hanging of Bolton.

B. M. Evener.

By Mr. EVARTS:

Q You mean the killing of Bolton? A. Yes, sir; I mean the killing of Bolton. By Mr. Pugn:

Q. That was the cause of the excitement?

- A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Did you hear any rumors or reports there about the negroes combining in any part of the county?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What were they combining to do?
  A. The rumor was they were arming themselves.
  Q. Was there any talk about who had influenced them to arm themselves; was there any talk about that and was anybody charged with teaching the negroes and advising them to arm for any purpose; and, if so, what?
  A. Yes, sir; and expressly Lockett and Gilder, they were the ones.
  Q. Who was this Gilder, and how was he related to Mr. Moore?
  A. He is brother-in-law to Mr. Moore.
  Q. What was Gilder's standing and character among the people?
  A. I didn't know much about him; he is a young man.

Mr. COKE. I desire Senators to understand this testimony and bear in mind that this man Hermann Fischer, who is an old resident of Washington County, a Republican who always voted the Republican ticket until the People's ticket to rescue the county government from the hands of the plunderers was formed, when asked to state what he knows about S. A. Hackworth, and Mr. Schutze, and Mr. Moore, says:

- A. Mr. Hackworth made me once a proposition to go out about a mile from there to an old farmer and make him drunk and swindle him out of his farm.

  Q. What is your understanding of his general character there among the peo-ple?
  A. His character is very bad. He is not allowed in a respectable family.

These are, as the Senate is aware, the two leading active men in instituting and carrying on this prosecution. This witness has no Southern prejudices; he has no Democratic prejudices. He is, as I believe, an honest man; he is a Republican who votes the Republican State and national tickets, but votes the People's county ticket in Washington County in order to preserve himself and his neighbors from being plundered by Hackworth and Schutze and their following.

I ask the Secretary to turn to page 455, the testimony of Joseph

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH TRISTRAM.

Joseph Tristram, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Pugh:

- By Mr. Pugh:

  Q. Please give your full name.
  A. Joseph Tristram.
  Q. Where do you reside?
  A. At Brenham.
  Q. How long have you resided there?
  A. I have been there since February, 1875.
  Q. In what business are you engaged?
  A. It am a druggist.
  Q. What is the extent of your business there?
  A. It amounts to from $18,000 to $24,000 a year.
  Q. And you are a property-holder there outside of the drug business?
  A. Yes, sir; I pay taxes to the amount of $20,000; that is, on $20,000.
  Q. Do you mean outside of the drug business?
  A. No, sir; I mean everything included.
  Q. You pay taxes on $20,000 worth of property?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Are you interested in the national bank there?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. In its stock?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Who is the president of the national bank there?
  A. Mr. F. A. Engelke.
  Q. How are you related to him?
  A. I am his son-in-law.
  Q. Were you in Brenham when that public meeting was held in Ed. Were you in Brenham when that public meeting was held in Eldridge Q. V

Hall?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you attend it?
A. Yes, sir, I was there.
Q. Now give us your knowledge of that meeting, the character of it, what it was called for, and what it did?
A. The meeting was called, and Colonel Giddings made a speech congratulating the people on the victory which had been won by the citizens' party and condoling at the same time the murder of Dewees Bolton. After that several other speakers got up and made remarks of the same kind.

- Q. What gave rise to that meeting?
  A. First, it was to praise the battle won, and secondly, to condole the killing of Dewees Bolton.
  Q. Were there any rumors of the negroes combining?
  A. Oh, certainly. There were rumors from Graball that the negroes were rising in masses and they were trembling.
  Q. Were those reports pretty generally circulated?
  A. Yes, sir; they were circulated pretty generally.
  Q. Did the people there seem to credit them?
  A. Most certainly; I believed they were true.
  Q. The killing of Bolton, in connection with the reports of that combining of the negroes, caused this feeling, this excitement?
  A. Yes, sir.

- of the negroes, caused this feeling, this excitement?

  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. And the meeting was called for the purpose of providing against danger and trouble, was it?

  Mr. Eyarts. He said it was to congratulate on the success of the People's ticket and to condole with Bolton.
  Q. But the meeting was called for the purpose of providing against danger and trouble, was it?

  A. I do not want to put it in that way. There was no protection called for. Nobody in the citizens' meeting spoke about having to act or take arms or anything of that kind.
  Q. I want your idea of the character of that meeting and the purposes of it, what it was called for?

  A. It was called just to congratulate the people of the county on the election of the officers, and to put on record the death of Dewees Bolton, and they wanted to see what action should be taken in case of an uprising by the negroes.
  Q. You wanted to see what action should be taken in case there was a rising of the negroes?

  A. Yes, sir.

- Q. You wanted to see what action should be taken in case there was a rising of the negroes?

  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Now, what sort of people attended that meeting?
  A. The very best that Washington County holds; the very best.
  Q. Does Washington County hold murderers, and law-breakers, and men who resort to mob violence, and all that sort of thing?
  A. No, sir; I have never seen anything of that kind.
  Q. That is not the character of the people in Washington County?
  A. No, sir; not as I know it.
  Q. How do the people of Washington County compare wift the people of other counties in Texas?
  A. I think they are much better there than is any other county.
  Q. Where did you come from when you went to Washington County?
  A. I was clerking in New Orleans.
  Q. Have you ever resided in any Northern State?
  A. I have resided in St. Louis for two years, and I lived in Illinois for about a year, and was in New York probably eight weeks.
  Q. What has been your politics; what party have you acted with there?
  A. My action has not been very prominent, but I have always voted for a Democratic President, and in county politics I haven't any politics at all. I never have voted the straight ticket except on the last two elections. I always took the best men of either party, and voted for them.
  Q. Did you have anything to do with the late war?
  A. No, sir; I was too young then.
  Q. You were not a soldier on either side during the war?
  O. What is your age?
- No, sir. What is your age? I am thirty-seven years old. Do you know Mr. Hackworth?

- A. I am thinly seven the control of the control of

- Q. Was it either Republican or Democratic?
  A. No.
  Q. Were there Republicans and Democrats in that meeting?
  A. Certainly; yes, sir.
  Q. The best people of either side?
  A. Yes, sir; of either party.
  Q. There are a great many Germans in that county?
  A. Yes, sir; there are.
  Q. Are you a native German?
  A. Yes, sir; I am a native of Germany.
  Q. How long is it since you left Germany?
  A. I left there in 1871, at the end of 1871.
  Q. What was the cause of this movement to make a People's party and a People's ticket to nominate the People's candidates; what was the reason for that?
  A. Because they found the county finances in a very bad fix. Under Repub-
- People's ticket to nominate the People's candidates; what was the reason for that?

  A. Because they found the county finances in a very bad fix. Under Republican rule money had been stolen, and the county was nearly about bankrupt. Scrip during the latter years was perhaps 75 to 55 cents on the dollar, and today it is at par since the Democrats got in. I know that, because my predecessor in business made $4,000 or more in a year in buying up scrip at 40 cents on the dollar, more or less; I do not know exactly the price.

  Q. After the people elected their candidate to these county offices what was the effect?

  A. The effect is that the county is in a good condition, and every man on the jury gets his scrip paid at full value.

  Q. The scrip is at par and the county credit good?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Who was this man that you bought out; what is his name?

  A. Dr. Wood.

  Q. Who was the tax-collector and sheriff at that time?

  A. I believe Dr. Smith was tax-collector, if I am not mistaken.

  Q. What about this $4,000 that was made by Dr. Wood in buying county scrip; do you know of any division of profits between the men who made that sum out of county scrip?

  A. People said it was an underhand game, but I don't know anything about it.

  Q. You have no personal knowledge about it?

  A. No, sir; no personal knowledge, only from hearsay.

  Q. What did you hear was going on between this tax-collector and the others?

  A. I do not know that; I only heard that there was something wrong about it. I have no personal knowledge about it.

  Q. Do you know anything about a suit that the tax collector afterwards brought against Dr. Wood's estate to recover a part of that $4,000.

- A. I heard about it, but I did not meddle with it. The administrator was not in Brenham, but somewhere in Northern Texas. I have no special knowledge of that
- of that.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Schutze?
  A. Yes, sir; I know him.
  Q. What is his general character and standing there?
  A. It is the possibly worst that a man can have.
  Q. What gave him that character; what was the cause of it?
  A. The man had a good showing in the commencement (of course he was a German), if he had behaved himself, and he could have had a good law practice in Washington County; but the way he lived there, and the way he treated his wife, besides what he wrote in his paper, made him very obnoxious to any decent man. Q. Did he become obnoxious also to the decent Republicans?
  A. Yes, sir, to Republicans and Democrats alike.

  Q. What do you know about Mr. Moore?

  A. I voted several times for Mr. 2.
- Q. When?
  A. When he ran, I believe, for county clerk, or for district clerk, I voted for him and considered him a right good man, until his associations and his speeches made me sort of fall out with him.
  Q. When did that change in him take place and what was the cause of it?
  A. It was about two years ago, when the People's ticket was organized.
  Q. What was the cause of that change of opinion in regard to him; what was the cause of his change in standing, if there was any?
  A. I do not catch that quite.
  Q. I mean if there was any change in Mr. Moore's standing, what was the

- Well, his making those speeches that he did at the last election. I did not

A. Well, his making those spectare.

A. Well, his making those spectare.

Iike it very much.

Q. What sort of speeches did you hear him make, any?

A. No, sir; I never have been to any.

I desire Senators to remember the Mr. COKE. I desire Senators to remember the fact that this witness, a substantial citizen of Washington County, pays taxes on $25,000 worth of property, is a man of influence and character, and that he gives to the three memorialists, Schutze, Hackworth, and Moore, as bad a character as all the other witnesses give them. The Secretary bad a character as all the other witnesses give them. will please turn to the testimony of Rinehardt Hoffmann, and read it.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF RINEHARDT HOFFMANN.

Rinehardt Hoffmann, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows

By Mr. Pugn:

- Q. What is your name?
  A. Rinehardt Hoffmann.
  Q. Where do you reside?
  A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
  Q. How long have you been there?
  A. Since 1865.
  Q. What is your pursuit there?

- A.Q.A.Q. I am a merchant.

- Q. What is your pursuit there?
  A. I am a merchant.
  Q. Do you do business on a small or on a pretty large scale?
  A. Well, I do an average business.
  Q. Where do you buy your goods?
  A. I buy my goods in New York.
  Q. Did you ever make any purchases of either one of these memorialists, Hackworth, Schutze, or Moore?
  A. I bought a piece of property from Mr. Hackworth.
  Q. What sort of property was it?
  A. It was his homestead in our city.
  Q. In Brenham?
  A. Yes, sir; in Brenham.
  Q. When did he make that purchase?
  A. In December some time, I think.
  Q. Last December?
  A. About the 1st of December.
  Q. The 1st of December last?
  A. Yes, sir.

- A. About the 1st of December.
  Q. The 1st of December last?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What did you pay him for it?
  A. I paid down $1,000 in cash, and I had to pay the taxes on the property, amounting to about $150. The taxes had not been paid for some years.
  Q. You paid $1,000 in cash and taxes amounting to $150?
  A. Yes, sir; about $150.
  Q. What was the reasonable market value of that property at the time you purchased it?
  A. I think I paid all it was worth.
  Q. What disposition have you made of it?
  A. I sold it since.
  Q. What did you get for it?
  A. I got $1,000.
  Q. You got $150 less than you paid?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Do you know about Mr. Hackworth's effort to sell that property before you purchased it?
  A. The same party that bought it was the one that Mr. Hackworth offered it to before.
  Q. How long before?
  A. I think perhaps twelve months previous, and he asked $1,200 for it.

- to before.
  Q. How long before?
  A. I think perhaps twelve months previous, and he asked $1,200 for it.
  Q. He offered that same property for sale twelve months before he sold it to you?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. How much did he ask for it then?
  A. I think he asked $1,200.
  Q. The year before?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What is your judgment as to the value of the property a year before?
  A. Well, the property was worth fully as much twelve months ago as when I bought it.
  Q. And you paid $1,150 cash?

- bought it.
  Q. And you paid $1,150 cash?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. How about the title?
  A. The title was all perfect, I believe. I had to get a release from some parties that had sold to Hackworth.
  Q. Did he owe any of the purchase-money for it?
  A. No, sir; the title was all clear, only I had to get a release from the former owner who sold it to Hackworth.
  Q. Why did you have to do that; didn't Mr. Hackworth have a deed?
  A. He had a deed, but there was something about it, and the attorney advised the gentleman who bought it from methat he would have to get a release from this party before I could make him a good title,
  Q. Had it been sold for taxes?

A. Yes, sir; it had been sold for State, county, and city taxes, I believe. Q. And you had to redeem those?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. COKE. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the memorial of Hackworth and others states that he had several thousand dollars' worth of valuable property which he had to sacrifice when he was forced to leave Brenham. This is the testimony of the gentleman was forced to leave Brenham. This is the testimony of the gentleman who bought the property from him when he left and gave him $1,150 for it, and Hackworth had offered it for $1,200 the year before and had continued to offer it for $1,200, and this gentleman bought it for $1,000 cash, and he had to pay $150 taxes on it. He kept it a year and then sold it for all he could get for it and he got but $1,000. He lost absolutely $150 by the purchase, and yet Hackworth in the memorial says he had to sacrifice the property he had in Brenham in order to get away from

DEATH OF HON. EDWARD W. ROBERTSON.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In pursuance of arrangement under an announcement heretofore made, the Chair lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 19, 1889.

Resolved. That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. Edward White Robertson, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana. Resolved. That in his demise the country has suffered the loss of a wise legislator, a valuable citizen, and an able and faithful public servant. Resolved. That, as an additional mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the House, at the conclusion of these memorial proceedings, shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk, and ask that they be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved. That the Senate shares with the House of Representatives in its expressions of sorrow at the death of the Hon. Edward White Robertson, lately a Representative in that body from the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That, as a mark of sympathy toward the family of the deceased, the Secretary of the Senate will transmit to them a copy of these proceedings.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, I must ask Senators to turn aside from their accustomed duties and solicitudes, from the turmoil of political strife and the heats of strenuous debates, and to join in commemorating the public life and character of a servant of the people who but a short time ago, eager as the most zealous among the representatives in Congress to promote the public welfare, was called to answer the universal summons that shall come to all, in private life or in the public employment, rich or poor, old or young, to render the final account of his stewardship upon earth. Louisiana mourns the death of an honored and ever faithful representative, and around her gather in generous sympathy her sister States while she places emblems of her sorrow and affection upon the tomb of her beloved son.

Hon, Edward White Robertson, after a long and useful public career in many positions of importance and responsibility under the government of the State, and after completing three terms as a Representative in Congress, and while a Representative-elect for the fourth term, departed this life, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, at Baton Rouge, the capital of the State, on August 2, 1887, surrounded by his bereaved and loving

The governor of the State in fitting terms announced the sad event to the people, and all classes from the town and from the neighboring country poured forth on the day of his funeral to testify their grateful sense of his public services and their appreciation of his personal character and worth. Groups of scarred veterans, his old comrades in the Mexican and civil wars, who had shared with him the joys of the bivouac and the privations and hardships of many sieges and campaigns, and had passed with him through the fiery furnaces of many battles, came to lay upon his grave the immortelles of love and grief. The members of the bar of which he had been an ornament assembled and adopted suitable resolutions expressive of the esteem in which he was held as an upright, safe, learned, and eloquent jurist and advocate.

Hon. E. W. Robertson was descended from those sturdy pioneers who, after the war for independence, in which they had contributed without stint their blood and treasure, crossed over the mountains to found new American commonwealths in the trackless wilderness inhabited by cruel savages. They bore as their birthright the cherished principles of religious and constitutional freedom and an aptitude for organization, and a knowledge of affairs that enabled them to build up in this western country commonwealths that quickly attracted immigration, and that soon became well-settled communities-republics modeled on the older States and members of the Federal Union on an equal footing with them. They constituted a remarkable class of men, bold, houest, just, benevolent, sagacious, enterprising, familiar with the state papers of that day, papers that set forth more fully and clearly than any, perhaps, had done before the true elements of popular liberty, the wise and necessary limitations upon the people as well as upon governments, the essential principles of our constitutional system with all its divisions of powers, checks, and balances. They and their fathers had read the Declaration of Independence, and had resolved with the They and their fatherspatriots of 1876 to make good its words with their lives; and they had listened with eager and enlightened interest to all the discussions in their neighborhood during and after the war of the Revolution on popular government. Many of course were unlettered, but most of them were well educated for the times, and adhered with stubborn fidelity to their convictions. They were familiar with the Federalist, Plutarch's Lives, Rollin's Greece, Shakespeare, and the History of England. Their lives were simple and noble—free from ostentations; their

Their lives were simple and noble—free from ostentations; their standards were taken from the best types, on which Washington himself was modeled, and many among them would have been welcomed as true knights at the round table of King Arthur—

To teach high thought, and amiable words, And courtiness, and the desire of fame, And love of truth, and all that makes a man,

Above all, they drew their ideas of right and duty not from speculative writers, but from the original fountain. They were accustomed daily to gather their entire households around the evening fireside in their humble homes and read aloud a chapter in the Bible, or if the head of the family did not do so, either his brave and gentle wife or daughter, companions of the labors and dangers of pioneer life, would perform the task; and thus it came to pass that the Ten Commandments and Christ's Sermon on the Mount formed the corner-stone of their faith and the firm foundation of their private and public virtues whereon governments of law, courts, schools, colleges, and churches, and the enduring ligaments that bind communities to concord and prosperity, freedom and stability were finally established and made fast.

Conspicuous among the pioneers of the State of Tennessee was General James Robertson, the grandfather of the recently deceased Representative. His own father, the late William Blount Robertson, soon after the birth of his son, Edward White Robertson, following the march of immigration, made his home in Louisiana, on the banks of the Mississippi River, in the parish of Iberville, where he and his descendants, always occupying positions of the highest respectability in private life, became leaders of the people in all the important questions vitally affecting the public welfare.

In Hon. E. W. Robertson were developed to the highest degree those characteristics and traits that had marked the pioneers, tempered by larger opportunities and wider associations. Whenever occasion permitted he sought recreation from the cares and responsibilities of a busy life, from the engrossing exactions of the law, and the still more absorbing occupations of a Congressional career, among the pine-clad hills and along the clear running streams of Eastern Louisiana, with his rod and gun and dog, and friends who knew him and loved him, not so much for his talent and public services, though these were highly appreciated, as for his joy in the chase and his devotion to sports that develop frankness and kindness and sympathy in our associations with our fellow-men.

Hon. E. W. Robertson was zealous in his attention to public duties and discharged with distinguished ability the responsibilities of his position as a Representative. He had hardly been sworn in as a member of the Forty-fifth Congress when the Speaker, Hon. SAMUEL J. RANDALL, conferred upon him the unprecedented honor of the appointment to be chairman of the Committee on Levees of the Mississippi River, and in that high position he rendered inestimable service. Captain Eads had promulgated a theory which had been applied for deepening the mouth of the Mississippi River successfully, and the representatives of the Mississippi Valley had sought to have it extended for the improvement of the river from its mouth to the highlands. In this great undertaking, from the time he became a member of the House, no one was more active or took a more conspicuous part than Hon. E. W. Robertson as chairman of the committee, and his name will long be remembered by the people of Louisiana with gratitude and affection.

As a lawyer he was trustworthy and learned; as a soldier he was brave and skillful; as a Representative he was indefatigable in the discharge of his duties and able and sagacious in shaping legislation; as a man he was pure and confiding. He died leaving a spotless name. He still lives in the grateful memory of his people, in the respect and admiration of his associates in public life, and in the person of an honored son who now fills the chair he left vacant in the House of Representatives.

Mr. EUSTIS. Mr. President, the enlogies which have been delivered upon the life and public services of Hon. Edward W. Robertson, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana, by his former associates in the House have been so extended that I do not feel called upon to repeat anything that has been said. I simply rise to bear testimony to the fact that the praise and admiration which have been expressed by those who have spoken because of the death of that honored Representative are fully deserved by his memory.

I knew the deceased well and intimately. I am familiar with the place which he occupies in the affections of the people of Louisiana. I am familiar with the public services which he rendered to that State. I know how deeply and sincerely his loss is regretted. And I know that the reason why he was so much respected and so frequently honored by the people of Louisiana was because he always deserved the full measure of their affection and of their confidence.

He was a man who was fond of public service and public life. In that respect he was a typical American. He believed that ambition to be laudable which found expression in a desire and a readiness always to obey whatever call was made upon him by the people of Louisiana. He died, as it was expected that he would die, in the public service, honored by a trusting constituency.

He was a man of simple tastes, of rugged honesty, carrying with him from what was then a Western State those habits, those tastes, those methods, those aspirations which were peculiar to the people of the State from which he emigrated. He came to Louisiana to seek his fortune among what was then considered a strange and almost alien population. With them, because of the difference in their habits, education, traditions, and foreign ancestry, he found himself willing and ready to form an immediate, cordial, and sympathetic association; and I remember, Mr. President, that the last time I had occasion to make a canvass of the State of Louisiana I was called upon to make a speech in French; and Colonel Robertson, although he looked and talked and acted and thought like a pure, unadulterated Anglo-Saxon, when called upon was able to make a speech in that difficult and polished language.

I refer to that circumstance to show that he was a man who was always ready to secure any of those accomplishments and any of those acquirements which would render him useful and sympathetic to the people whom he was called upon to serve, for a large number of his constituents were what are known as creoles; that is, the French-speaking portion of the State of Louisiana, a warm-hearted and refined population, who justly esteem it a compliment when an American acquires their mother tongue, for which they manifest a sincere attachment and a pardonable pride.

Mr. President, I can add nothing by mere formal expression, by the mere use of language, by the mere composition of phraseology, to this fact, which will stand out boldly in the history of Louisiana, that Colonel Robertson was a tried, faithful, honest, and able public servant. The people of that State have been called upon to undergo many trials and many tribulations. There have been situations, there have been conditions in the history of the people of that State which required from those who were placed in a position to give counsel to that people or to stand in the attitude of a guide and a leader, qualities representing the highest and best type of manhood, of courage, of political earnestness, political morality, and political sagacity.

He was one of those men who, in the darkest hours, when there was scarcely a silver lining to the cloud that overhung the almost hopeless destinies of that people, never lost heart, never lost courage, but always, standing forth in the front light, was willing to assume leadership in the public and popular councils, showing by his stern example that right and justice could be secured under the form of government to which we are all attached.

His memory will live among his old associates and among the younger generation, for the mantle which was worn so worthily and with so much dignity and with so much dignity and with so much pride by Hon. E. W. Robertson has fallen upon a worthy son, who now represents the State of Louisiana in the House of Representatives.

Colonel Robertson left to his family the priceless heritage of a spotless and unsullied name. I need say nothing more.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I shall do little more than second

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I shall do little more than second the adoption of the resolutions before the Senate which were proposed by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Gibson]. It was my privilege to serve in the House of Representatives with

It was my privilege to serve in the House of Representatives with Mr. Robertson for six years and to have more or less intimate acquaintance and association with him there.

I realize under circumstances like these the futility of words in the expression of our sorrow for the loss of friends. I can say truly, with the Senators who have spoken so feelingly of him, that Mr. Robertson in the discharge of his duty as a Representative was faithful, earnest, sincere, and that his convictions were strong upon every subject with which he had to deal. No man had more of the respect of those who were associated with him, and no man perhaps deserved that respect more than he

Mr. President, there is a lesson in events like this which should not be lost upon ourselves. In the transaction of the business with which we are connected we very often attach great importance to our own action, to what we are doing in this world and in our country. We should never lose sight of the fact that very soon we, like our honored friend, will only be remembered as of the past, that the places which know us now shall know us no more, and that whatever we do for good or for evil will soon be forgotten by men. If we could take this lesson more frequently to ourselves in our relations to one another and to the great business of the country I am persuaded that more charity, more virtue, more love of our kind and of our country would animate our hearts.

I once heard a thoughtful man say to a Representative in the other branch of Congress who was about to return to Washington for the discharge of his duties that he understood he was in the habit of working very hard in Congress. That gentleman observed that he found many duties to perform and endeavored to perform them. It was the fatherin-law of the member who spoke to him, and who said to him, "From what I learn you are likely to kill yourself by your application to duty; and what I have to say to you is that when you are dead the world will go on just as it does now, and soon you will be forgotten."

This was a strong way of putting that suggestion by a father-in-law to his son-in-law, but it is one that each of us may well take to himself as a most valuable lesson.

Mr. President, no one appreciated more highly than myself the character, the ability, the worth, and the patriotism of Mr. Robertson. If we had more such men we should have a better country than we have, we should be more disinterested, fair-minded, brave, earnest, and

Mr. President, I second the adoption of the resolutions of the Senator from Louisiana

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the resolution offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Gibson].

The resolutions were agreed to unanimously.

Mr. GIBSON. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect to the memory of Edward White Robertson, the Senate do now adjourn.

The resolution was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, February 16, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 15, 1889.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved. HARBOR OF ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, a report of a board of engineers upon the expediency of further improving the harbor of St. Augustine, Fla.; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

LAWS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 8309) to secure to the District of Columbia a compilation of the laws of said District, with amendments of the Senate thereto; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS AND MANITOBA RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 12443) granting to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company the right of way through the White Earth Indian reservation, in the State of Minnesota, with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 11, strike out "as to the amount of said compensation" and insert "to the provisions of this act."

Mr. NELSON. The effect of that amendment is that the Indians must consent before the grant of the right of way becomes operative.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota that the amendment of the Senate be concurred in?

Mr. HOLMAN. I desire to have the original language read so as to see what change is made by the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection, and the amendment was concurred in. Mr. NELSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senate was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to,

MILITIA OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 4961) to provide for the organization of the militia of the District of Columbia, with amendments of the Senate thereto; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. Whiting, of Michigan, for to-day, on account of sickness. To Mr. Stewart, of Vermont, until next week, on account of important business.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. MAHONEY, by unanimous consent, obtained permission to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the pension case of Timothy Dudley.

TARIFF BILL.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a privileged report from the Committee on Ways and Means. I report back the bill (H. R. the Committee on Ways and Means. I report back the bill (11. 12. 9051) to reduce taxation and simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenue, and the substitute of the Senate, with the report of the Committee on Ways and Means thereon, and with a resolution, accompanying the report, declaring that the action of the Senate is in violation of the Constitution. The resolution raises a question of privilege, and I give notice that I will call it up for consideration next Tuesday, immediately after the reading of the Journal.

Mr. McKINLEY. Mr. Speaker, this constitutional objection raised by the majority of the Committee on Ways and Means to a reduction of the revenue has only been called to the attention of the committee of the revenue has only been called to the attention of the committee this morning. The minority of the committee have had no time for conference and no time to prepare their views. I therefore ask leave for the minority to present such views hereafter as they may think proper, to accompany the report of the majority.

There being no objection, leave was granted.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9051) to reduce taxation and simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenue.

The SPEAKER. This bill will be referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. The resolution does not go to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. As the Chair understands the gentleman's statement—

Mr. BAYNE. Let the resolution be read. The Clerk read as follows:

The SPEAKER. The Chair so rules; it has been sent there.
Mr. MILLS. It does not go to the Committee of the Whole until the House determines whether it shall go there?

The SPEAKER. It will go to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union under the rules-

Mr. REED. Precisely.

The SPEAKER. The resolution submitted proposes, as the Chair presumes, some disposition of the bill, though the Chair does not know. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the substitution by the Senate, under the form of an amendment, for the bill of the House (H. R. 9051) entitled "An act to reduce taxation and simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenue," of another and different bill, containing a general revision of the laws imposing import duties and internal taxes, is in conflict with the true intent and purpose of section 7, Article I, of the Constitution, and that said bill and substitute be returned to the Senate with the respectful suggestion that said section vests in the House of Representatives the sole power to originate such a measure.

Mr. REED. I wish to make a point of order in regard to this resolution, and as the matter is new and I desire to examine it, I suppose it can go over.

The SPEAKER. The point of order will be reserved. The resolution will remain on the table. If in order, it presents a question of privilege which the House will have to consider. The Chair will reserve the point of order. The gentleman will have the right to make it hereafter.

RELIEF OF LABORERS ON PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. McCREARY. I rise to make a privileged report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky reports from the Committee on Foreign Affairs a bill, which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3949) to enable the President to protect the interests of the United States in Panama.

Be it enacted, etc., That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250,000 to enable the President to protect the interests of the United States and to provide for the security of persons and property of citizens of the United States at the Isthmus of Panama, in such manner as he may deem expedient.

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago the President of the United States sent to Congress a message referring to possible disturbances on the Isthmus of Panama in the event of the stoppage of work on the proposed interoceanic canal, and inclosed a report from the Secretary of State, with accompanying correspondence. Since that time work on the Panama Canal has stopped; and there are now something like 15,000 laboring men thrown out of employment, many of them very destitute. Of that number, as I am informed, between four and five thousand are Americans. This emergency has caused the minister of the United States at Bogota to send the following dispatch to Secretary Bayard:

The Colombian Government fears disorders, and requests the United States to provide means to transport home discharged laboring men from Panama Canal. Great Britain has been similarly asked.

MAURY.

After this dispatch was received Mr. Bayard wrote a letter to the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, from which I now read an extract:

I hasten to place before you a copy of a cipher telegram received late last night from Mr. Maury, our minister at Bogota, by which you will perceive the expediency of hastening as rapidly as possible the action of Congress towards enabling the President to provide transportation of United States citizens from the Ishmus of Panama, in order to save them from the disasters threatened by the stoppage of work on the Panama Canal.

As I have stated, work has now stopped. Members of this House are most of them familiar with the treaty of 1846 between the United States and New Granada. Under the treaty of the United States with New Granada (now the United States of Colombia), made in 1846, the United States is required to maintain an uninterrupted and unembarrassed right of transit across the Isthmus of Panama. Not only that, but our Government has guarantied the neutrality of the Isthmus of Panama, and also guaranties the sovereignty and the property which New Granada possesses on that island. The Senate of the United States has already passed this bill. The Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives unanimously recommend its passage; and action should be taken immediately. Between four and five thousand Americans are now in Panama, many of them in a destitute condition, and the object of the bill is to enable the President to protect the interests of the United States and provide for the security of the persons and property of citizens of the United States at the Isthmus of Panama. I hope,
Mr. Speaker, this bill will be passed immediately.
Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?
Mr. McCREARY. Yes, sir.
Mr. BLOUNT. I do not want, of course, to impede the passage of the bill, but it provides that the interests of the United States shall be protected, as well as those people who are in distress. My friend so protected, as well as those people who are in distress. My friend, so far as I have heard his presentation of the case, has made no estimate or statement as to what is deemed necessary to relieve the people who are in distress there, nor does it appear up to this time what is the particular interest which the people of the United States have in this matter other than one of mere charity.

Mr. McCREARY. In answer to the gentleman I will state that the relief asked in the bill is in compliance with our obligations under the treaty of 1846.

Mr. COX. How is this money to be expended, likely-in paying the

Mr. COA. How is this money to be expended, likely—in paying the passage of these people home?

Mr. McCREARY. In bringing home American citizens and in such manner as the President may deem expedient.

Mr. BLOUNT. How much of the money is to go that way?

Mr. McCREARY. The sum appropriated by the bill is $250,000, and is placed in the hands of the President of the United States.

Mr. BLOUNT. But what part for the special purpose, and what part to protect the interests of the United States?

Mr. McCREARY. The money will be used as needed and as the

Mr. McCREARY. The money will be used as needed and as the President thinks proper and expedient.

Mr. BLOUNT. But is there any estimate at all in detail of the amount necessary, and as to the probable manner of its disbursement?

Mr. McCREARY. I have already stated that I have received information to the effect that there are between four and five thousand

American citizens there who are in distress, without employment

Mr. ADAMS. And in danger.
Mr. McCREARY. Yes, and perhaps in danger; and I am informed that some of them are without shelter. Mr. FARQUHAR. Is this to be expended through the State Deto. The President will control the disbursement.

Mr. FARQUHAR. Would it not be well to amend this bill by saying "or so much thereof as may be necessary?"

Mr. McCREARY. The President of the United States will not use more than is necessary

Mr. McMILLIN. But what is the objection to putting that in?
Mr. McCREARY. An amendment will send the bill back to the Senate. Personally I think we can afford to trust President Cleveland as well as the President who is to be inaugurated on the 4th of March with this appropriation.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not think it is a question of whether we will trust the President or not. It is a question as to our own action here in appropriating the public revenues.

Mr. McCREARY. And I think there should be no delay in the matter. There is necessity for immediate action. The Government or Colombia is appealing to us, our minister at Bogota is telegraphing for assistance and instructions, the President and the Secretary of State are urging immediate action, the Senate of the United States has passed the bill and sent it to us, and I hope the House will not delay action.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. McCREARY. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand this is intended for the relief or for bringing back home some Americans who are left there destitute. Mr. McCREARY. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCREARY. American citizens.
Mr. KILGORE. Does it occur to the gentleman that there are a great many American citizens who are destitute at home? "Charity begins at home?" is suggested here near me.

Mr. KILGORE. Men who went there on their own motion.

Mr. McCREARY. I wish to say to the gentleman from Texas that under our treaty obligations entered into in 1846 the United States Government is required to maintain an uninterrupted and unembarrassed transit across the Isthmus of Panama. During the present Administration we have been compelled to send a war vessel to Panama and land marines to quell a disturbance and comply with our treaty obligations.

Mr. BLOUNT. But did you provide for that as you propose to provide for this, or simply by the use of the Navy?

Mr. McCREARY. The present condition of things did not exist

Mr. BLAND. The gentleman from Kentucky does not pretend that under that bill we will have the right to bring these people here?

Mr. McCREARY. I contend that it would be best for the United States, under our treaty obligations, to remove them from there.

Mr. BLAND. But does the bill authorize that?

Mr. BLAND. But does the bill authorize that.

Mr. McCREARY. It places the money at the disposal of the President, to be used as he may deem necessary.

Mr. OATES. I will ask the gentleman from Kentucky to have that part of the treaty read to which he has referred.

Mr. McCREARY. I will. I ask the Clerk to read the thirty-fifth article of the treaty.

The Clerk read as follows:

ARTICLE XXXV.

The United States of America and the Republic of New Granada, desiring to make as durable as possible the relations which are to be established between the two parties by virtue of this treaty, have declared solemnly, and do agree to the following points:

First. For the better understanding of the preceding articles, it is and has been stipulated between the high contracting parties, that the citizens, vessels, and merchandise of the United States shall enjoy in the ports of New Granada, including those of the part of the Granadian territory generally denominated the Isthmus of Panama, from its southernmost extremity until the boundary of Costa Rica, all the exemptions, privileges, and immunities concerning commerce and navigation, which are now or may hereafter be enjoyed by Granadian citizens, their vessels and merchandise; and that this equality of favors shall be made to extend to the passengers, correspondence, and merchandise of the United States, in their transit across the said territory, from one sea to the other. The Government of New Granada guaranties to the Government of the United States that the right of way or transit across the Isthmus of Panama upon any modes of communication that now exist, or that may be hereafter constructed, shall be open and free to the Government and citizens of the United States; that no other tolls or charges shall be levied or collected upon the citizens of the United States; that no other tolls or charges shall be levied or collected upon the citizens of the United States, that no other tolls or charges shall be levied or collected upon and collected from the Granadian citizens; that any lawful produce, manufactures, or merchandise, of lawful commerce, belonging to the citizens of the United States, that passing form one sea to the other, in either direction, for the purpose of exportation to any other foreign country, shall not be liable to any import duties whatever; or, having paid such duties, they shall be entitled to drawback upon their exportation; nor shall

Mr. McCREARY. I will ask the Clerk to read a letter from the Secretary of State. Mr. McMILLIN. Before that is done, if my friend from Kentucky will permit a question, I would like to ask him whether that treaty has been broken; and if so, to inform the House in what particular?

Mr. McCREARY. That treaty is now in force, and so recognized by the State Department.

Mr. McMILLIN. And has not been broken?
Mr. McCREARY. And has not been broken; and under that treaty this Administration sent a war vessel down there and marines were landed in order to quell a disturbance and keep open the route across the Isthmus and comply with the obligations of the treaty.

Mr. McMILLIN. If that has remained an unbroken treaty I want to know on what ground you ask for this appropriation?

Mr. McCREARY. The law authorizes our seamen to be brought home, and there are several instances

Mr. McMILLIN. But these are not our seamen.
Mr. McCREARY. I know that. And there are instances where laboring men have been brought home where it was necessary to comply with a treaty, preserve peace, and maintain neutrality.

Mr. McMILLIN. Bring our people home in order to keep peace!

That is a sad commentary upon the peaceful character of our people.

Mr. McCREARY. I wanted to say to the gentleman from Tennessee that under the treaty we are compelled to maintain uninterrupted and unembarrassed transit across the Isthmus of Panama.

Mr. McMILLIN. Here that been endangered?

Mr. McMILLIN. Has that been endangered?

Mr. McCREARY. We have information from the President of the Republic of Colombia that a disturbance is threatened there—

Mr. McMILLIN. But it has not occurred. Mr. McCREARY. On account of all these On account of all these men being thrown out of employment there is imminent danger. He has asked Great Britain to provide means to remove the subjects of that country.

Mr. McMILLIN. I want to enter my protest here against this House making an appropriation to bring our people out of any country in the world in order to keep the peace there.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask that the letter which I have sent to the Clerk's desk be read, after which I will yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox].

The Clerk read as follows:

413 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, February 10, 1889.

My Dear Sir: I have your note of this date, and do consider the situation to be sufficiently urgent to call for a resolution of Congress as rapidly as possible to enable the President in his discretion to provide transportation to the United States on the Isthmus of Panama for such citizens of the United States as may otherwise be unable to get away from the possible terrors of that locality. You are aware of our treaty obligations to keep open that trans-Isthmus route, and the cheapest way for us to perform that duty will be to deport those impoverished laborers who have been attracted there by the lavish expenditures of the late French canal company. The reasons are obvious why an exercise of this duty and power is highly expedient at this juncture, and I believe it would be very wise if you should ask unanimous consent for the instant passage of the resolution as suggested.

wise if you should ask unanimous consent for the instant passage of the resolution as suggested.

The Colombian authorities already have, as Congress has been well aware, notified our consuls of possible (probable) difficulties and disorder; and besides that, the appropriation has just now even greater significance than the performance of treaty stipulations.

The appropriation should be in general terms, so as to leave the Executive free to meet circumstances.

The probable line of action would be the charter and provisioning of steamtransports, and, as I mentioned in my note, I have telegraphed for information as to the probable number to be transported and cared for. The expenditure would be limited to actual needs, and the cautionary amount could be made $250,000. You will perceive the possible usefulness in indicating our earnestness in connection with the general subject. You will use this note in any way you see fit, and I will be glad to acquaint the Speaker of the House with its purport and intent.

Very respectfully yours,

T. F. BAYARD.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN, Chairman.

Mr. McCREARY. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from

New York [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. I suppose, Mr. Speaker, that the House may not have paid attention to the reading of the thirty-fifth article of the treaty of 1846 with New Granada. Under that treaty we are bound to guaranty the neutrality of the Isthmus and protection to persons and property of the citizens of the United States in New Granada. We can not escape from that treaty. It is still the supreme law of the land. That treaty was either the sequence or if preceded the difficulties on the Isthmus, I think in 1846. Then our people had gathered on the Isthmus on their way to California and there was a mob of large dimensions there that attacked our people. mensions there that attacked our people. They were there because the steam-ships for the South American ports and Pacific ports did not make connection. Our people there were shot by the miscegenated class of Greasers who make up that mingling of all races and colors upon the Isthmus. They are mulattoes, half white and half black; zamboes, half-breed Indians and negroes; with other crosses shading down into quadroon, octoroon, etc., until the cross vanishes into a nondescript hardly human. Such a composite and "rakebelly rout of ragged rascals" break down all the laws of humanity and order upon the Isthmus.

Afterwards along came the Cass-Heeran treaty, and New Granada was bound under that treaty to pay our people for the losses sustained because the New Granadian Government had not the power or disposition to protect our citizens. But it is the treaty of 1846 by which I will answer the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMillin]. This treaty tion to protect our citizens. But it is the treaty of 1846 by which I will answer the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMillin]. This treaty guaranties to our people their rights and immunities, not only in person, but in property. This great big mob of people there are thrown out of employment, extending between Aspinwall and Panama, and they have taken possession of that Isthmus. We are bound to do as the Secretary of the Navy and the Administration did some two years are as a second thing he was a second the second that it is the second that i ago-send vessels of war to make manifestations or something by which we may assert our authority there to protect our people, and by which to protect the property of the United States from these immense mobs on the Isthmus.

Therefore, I think, sir, if we will read this treaty carefully and see the nature of the obligation we are under, we shall forward this matter, for it is a matter of great urgency, as the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. McCreary] has well said.

Mr. McCREARY. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HITT], who is a member of the committee.

Mr. HITT. Mr. Speaker, this joint resolution to provide for bringing away our citizens and protecting our interests at Panama is urgent. The lavish expenditure that has been made by the French canal com-pany on the Isthmus has drawn there from the four quarters of the pany on the islamus has trawn there from a laborary distribution of earth probably 30,000 people beyond the former number of inhabitants. About 12,000 or 15,000 have been on the pay-rolls. The company has failed. All its millions are gone. All hope of further money is gone. That improvident army of day laborers is to be turned adrift; the last of them will be discharged to-day. Within a short time, perhaps within a week, under a weak government, and in a country where disorder among the people breaks out as readily as an earthquake in the ground, there will be, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] has just said, widespread disturbance; there will certainly be distress.

Those strong men, when their money is gone, when there is no more employment or pay, will not be quiet. Four or five, or perhaps six thousand of them, as nearly as we can learn, are from the United States. In those approaching disorders, what grave questions of rights invaded and property destroyed may arise. We can spend a million dollars very readily in a diplomatic quarrel, ensuing after the event, over the protection of even one American citizen involved in trouble. More than once has our Government become involved in grave disputes and large expenditures when the cause seemed a small thing. How much better to promptly remove all cause or prospect of disturbance. How much worthier our Government to answer the call of the Government of Colombia which has been made upon us, and which the gentleman from Kentucky has just recited, to relieve them from the danger of disorder and at the same time to relieve our own peeple of the dauger of distress and peril and death by a small expenditure to bring them away. Perhaps only a fraction of the $250,000 which we now propose to appropriate will be required. We are obliged by the treaty

How prudent is it to cheaply provide in advance to prevent trouble.

The English Government has been called on to remove its subjects, and will do it. Our people who are there will be involved in the widespread convulsions that may come, and the vindication or redress they will claim may be enormous in consequences. Our pledged national faith compels us to guaranty the rights of sovereignty and property of Colombia. Shall we wait till the Isthmus is in conflagration and revolution? Is it not prudent, with this small expenditure in advance, to vindicate the Monroe doctrine in its most beneficent form, in a generous and humane intervention-intervention this time asked for and promptly accorded? The Republic is rich enough to care for its children in distress. It can and will to-day and always assert its position on the American continent, its great traditional doctrine, and maintain its plighted faith, calm in the consciousness of right and the repose of strength. [Ap-

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, if no other gentleman desires to be heard, I move the previous question.

Mr. McMILLIN. I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to accept an amendment inserting the words "or so much thereof as may be neces-

Mr. McCREARY. I would like to accommodate my friend from Tennessee, but the proposed legislation is necessary and urgent, and I can not agree to delay action upon this bill by sending an amendment to the Senate. I am satisfied no more money will be used by the President than is necessary, and the gentleman's proposed amendment is not needed.

Mr. McMILLIN. One day's delay will not endanger the bill. Mr. McCREARY. I think the bill is properly drawn. The President will use no more of this money than is absolutely necessary.

The question was taken on ordering the bill to a third reading, and the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. KILGORE. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 122, noes 3.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.

ADMISSION OF DAKOTA, ETC.

The SPEAKER (at 12 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.). The hour fixed by the House to resume the consideration of the resolution which vas before the House at the adjournment yesterday has arrived and suspends this proceeding for the present.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call up the unfinished business.

Mr. McCREARY. As I understand it, the proceedings upon this bill are only suspended, and will be resumed immediately after action on the pending resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already stated that this business is suspended. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] calls up the unfinished business. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] to lay the motion to reconsider upon the table, and on that question the yeas and nays have been ordered by the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. I think the proposition upon which the vote was taken should be read, as a good many members were not present yesterday when we voted upon it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read that part of the proposition upon which the vote was taken and to which the motion to reconsider applies.

The Clerk read as follows:

2. That the bill may be so amended in conference as to provide for the admission of South Dakota by proclamation of the President under the Sioux Falls constitution, to be resubmitted to the people of South Dakota, with provision for a new election of State and Federal officers and without a new vote on the question of division.

Dargan,

The SPEAKER. The House by vote agreed to this resolution. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAKER] moved to reconsider that vote, and moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. The vote is now to be taken on the motion to lay on the table.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas

So the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. SPRINGER, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following pairs were announced on all political questions until further notice:

Mr. RAYNER with Mr. STEWART, of Vermont.

Mr. BRYCE with Mr. BRUMM.

Mr. PERRY with Mr. CROUSE.

Mr. WHITING, of Michigan, with Mr. BELDEN. Mr. GLOVER with Mr. BUNNELL.

Mr. BARRY with Mr. Yost.

Mr. COCKRAN with Mr. NUTTING. Mr. GREENMAN with Mr. YARDLEY. Mr. PHELAN with Mr. BUTLER.

Mr. MANSUR with Mr. WARNER. Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. LYMAN.

Mr. McShane with Mr. Laird. Mr. Snyder with Mr. Bowen.

Mr. NEAL with Mr. Houk.
Mr. Collins with Mr. Allen, of Massachusetts.
Mr. Buckalew with Mr. Dalzell, until the 18th instant.
Mr. Catchings with Mr. Grosvenor, on the Territorial bill.

Mr. WILKINS with Mr. GOFF, for this day. Mr. SENEY with Mr. DORSEY, on this vote.

Mr. SOWDEN with Mr. FITCH, on this vote.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.
The SPEAKER. The question is now on agreeing to the remainder of the resolution. Mr. COX. With the permission of the House I will withdraw the last paragraph of my resolution, embracing immaterial matters in regard to which I am informed by gentlemen of the committee the conferees will have no difficulty in agreeing. Mr. McMILLIN. Let us hear what that is. Mr. BAKER, of New York. Let it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

And further, that such matters as relate to the election of delegates and the apportionment of the districts from which members of the convention are to be elected, the date of holding conventions and the date of resubmission of the South Dakota constitution, and the location of the temporary seat of government in South Dakota, and such other matters as are not included in the instructions above recited, be referred to the committee of conference for their discretion.

Mr. BURROWS. Is that the whole of the third proposition?
The SPEAKER. That is not the third proposition; it is the concluding part of the resolution.

Mr. BURROWS. I would like to hear the third provision of the proposition read. The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis, 4. c., all of them under proclamation by the President.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York does not propose to withdraw what has last been read.

Mr. BURROWS. Let us have a vote on that first.
Mr. PAYSON. Does this proposition to withdraw a part of the resolution require unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It does.

Mr. PAYSON. Well, it is all nicely provided for; I think it had

The SPEAKER. If no further division be demanded, the question is on agreeing to that part of the resolution not already voted upon.

Mr. McMILLIN. Does that embrace the portion which the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] has proposed to withdraw?

The SPEAKER. It does.

Mr. McMILLIN. I demand a division.

The SPEAKER. On what part of the proposition does the gentleman desire a separate vote?

Mr. McMILLIN. The resolution, I believe, still embraces the third proposition?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read, and the gentleman will indicate upon what part he desires a separate vote.

The Clerk again read the third division of the resolution, as follows: 3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis,  $i.\ e.$ , all of them under proclamation by the President.

The SPEAKER. Upon what, then, does the gentleman demand a

Mr. McMILLIN. If that is all it embraces, I am willing the vote shall be taken.

The SPEAKER. If a division is not demanded, the question will be put on agreeing to the entire remaining part of the resolution.

Mr. McMILLIN. Did the Clerk read all that is to be voted on?
The SPEAKER. He has read that portion which the gentleman from New York proposes to withdraw. Then if there be no objection, the last paragraph will be withdrawn. The other part has not yet been read by the Clerk.

Mr. McMILLIN. The third paragraph down to the words "and further, such matters as relate to the election of delegates," etc., I have no objection to and am willing to adopt.

The SPEAKER. Then on what part does the gentleman desire a separate vote?

Mr. McMILLIN. Beginning with the words "and further, such matters as relate to the election of delegates," etc.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

And further, such matters as relate to the election of delegates and the apportionment of the districts from which members of the convention are to be elected, the date of holding conventions and the date of resubmission of the South Dakota constitution, and the location of the temporary seat of government in South Dakota, and such other matters as are not included in the instructions above recited, be referred to the committee of conference for their discretion.

Mr. McMILLIN. Was there objection to the withdrawal by the gentleman from New York? I hope, if not, there will be none.
Mr. SPRINGER. Except as to the last clause.

Mr. COX. This last proviso which has been read, which I propose to withdraw, is on matters immaterial. I am informed the gentleman from Illinois is in perfect concord on that subject. On the substantial proposition, number 3, we are now to take a vote.

Mr. PAYSON. It can work no possible injury to leave it as it is. This proviso looks to an arrangement of the conference committee as to This provise looks to an arrangement of the conference committee as to subdivision into districts, and a speedy admission of their representatives into this and the other body. Whatever looks to the facilitation of that action meets with my approval. The idea of withdrawing this matter from the committee of conference, I fear, is in the nature of an obstacle. It has been the only obstacle to the admission of Dakota.

Mr. COX. I withdraw my withdrawal in order to save time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to that part of the resolution which has just been read.

The question was taken and agreed to.

The question was taken and agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs next upon agreeing to the remainder of the resolution.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. I move to reconsider the vote just taken; and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. There being no objection, the latter motion will be agreed to.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The remaining portion of the resolution is the instruction clause.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

 $\it Resolved$  . That the House instruct the new conferees to recede from the amendments to Senate bill 185 in the following respects.

The SPEAKER. The first and second have been agreed to, and the Clerk will now read part third.

A MEMBER. Part fourth? The SPEAKER. No; part third. The Clerk read as follows:

3. Further providing that the proposed States of North Dakota, Montana, and Washington shall be admitted on the same basis; i. e., all of them under proclamations by the President.

Mr. BAKER, of New York. We have passed on that. The SPEAKER. It was not passed on; a separate vote was not asked on it.

Mr. McMILLIN. The third portion was what I thought the House had acted on.

The SPEAKER. It was not.

Mr. McMILLIN. I do not ask for a separate vote on that. I said I had no objection to it.

The SPEAKER. Then, if the gentleman withdrew his objection, there was no separate vote asked on it. The question now is on agreeing to the remainder of the resolution.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. What is it?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk has just read it.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Does it include the instructions along the second se

The SPEAKER. It does. This is a vote on the instructing clause.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. In reference to that, Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. If the vote on the instructing clause of the resolution is "no," does it leave the conferees free to go into the conference uninstructed?

The SPEAKER. Except in so far as they may accept these votes as expressing the sense of the House.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I know, but what I mean is it leaves them free-

Mr. COX. I object to argument.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I am not arguing the question.

Mr. COX. It is "in the nature of an argument," in the language of the Senator from Kansas. [Laughter.]
The SPEAKER. The question is not debatable.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. The question I desire to submit to the Speaker is this: If the vote is "no," whether the conferees go into the conference with full liberty to-[Cries of "Regular

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen must decide that for themselves. The Chair has simply stated that if this part of the resolution is not agreed to, the resolution will contain no positive instructions to the committee, or no instructions whatever, except in so far as the committee may consider itself bound by the votes of the House as expressing the sense of the House on the subject.

The question is on agreeing to the remainder of the resolution. The question was taken; and on a division there were-ayes 103.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative-veas 148, nays 103, not voting 71; as follows:

RELIEF OF LABORERS ON PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. McCREARY. I now call up the unfinished business, being the bill (S. 3949) to protect the interests of the United States in Panama. The SPEAKER. The tellers will take their places. The question is on ordering the bill to be read the third time, upon which no quorum

Mr. McCREARY. This is only on the third reading.
Mr. KILGORE. I understand this is only on the third reading of the bill and not on its passage?

The SPEAKER. That is correct.

Mr. KILGORE. I withdraw the point of no quorum.

So (no further count being demanded) the bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred upon the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division there were-ayes 106, noes 6.

Mr. KILGORE. No quorum.
The SPEAKER appointed Mr. KILGORE and Mr. McCreary as tellers.

Mr. McCREARY. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McCREARY. I withdraw the demand and will take the vote by tellers.

Mr. KILGORE. I renew the demand for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, there being 16 in favor thereof and 100 in opposition, the affirmative being less than one-fifth of the total.

The SPEAKER. The tellers will take their places.
The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 160, noes 6.

So the bill was passed.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. KILGORE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the fortifications bill, so that the report of the Committee on Appropriations may be adopted and the matter go into

Mr. TOWNSHEND. As I understand the purpose of the gentleman is simply to ask formal action in the shape of non-concurrence and put the bill in conference, I withdraw the objection I made the other day.

There being no further objection, the Committee of the Whole was discharged from the further consideration of the bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I now move the adoption of the report and ask for a conference.

The report was adopted.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. SAYERS, Mr. RANDALL, and Mr. BUTTERWORTH.

PENSIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FORAN. I desire to make a privileged report from the Committee on Appropriations on the bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, and ask concurrence in the report.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, together with amendments of the Senate thereto, having considered the same, beg leave to report: They recommend concurrence in the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and they recommend non-concurrence in the amendment numbered 1.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report. Mr. HOLMAN. I think the amendments should be read.

The amendments were read, as follows:

The amendments were read, as follows:

Amendment No. 1, in which non-concurrence is recommended, on page 1, line 12, after the word "separately," insert:

"And provided further, That a check or checks drawn by a pension agent in payment of pension due, and malled by him to the address of the pensioner, shall constitute payment within the meaning of section 4765, Revised Statutes; and the amount which may have accrued on the pension of any pensioner subsequent to the last quarterly payment on account thereof and prior to the death of such pensioner shall in the case of a husband be paid to his widow, or if there be no widow to his surviving minor children or the guardian thereof, and in the case of a widow to her minor children."

Amendment No. 2, in which concurrence is recommended, on page 1, after line 16, insert:

"For rents, $18,200. And hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury, where practicable, shall cause suitable rooms to be set apart in the public buildings under his control in the cities where pension agencies are located, which shall be acceptable to the Secretary of the Interior, for the use and occupancy of the said agencies respectively."

The report was adonted.

The report was adopted.

Mr. FORAN. I move a conference be requested with the Senate. The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. FORAN, Mr. GAY, and Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa.

FRANCES H. PLUMMER.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I rise to a question of privilege.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Upon the 18th of January the House ordered the previous question on passage of the Senate bill 2091, granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer. I have deferred to the wish of the House from time to time, in order that the appropriation bills might be expedited, until the session is nearly through. I now ask to call up that bill and take a vote upon it.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RICHARDSON. While that measure is pending, Iask the gentleman from Indiana to yield to me, so that I may ask unanimous consent to have time set apart for the consideration of bills from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I have no objection.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask that on Tuesday, immediately after the reading of the Journal, one hour be set apart for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Printing. There are many matters pending in which members are interested, and this are many matters pending in which members are interested, and this is the only way in which they can be disposed of.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will ask the gentleman from Indiana to allow me to ask for an evening session on Tuesday for the consideration of bills from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I have no objection.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask that on Tuesday, at 5 o'clock, the House take a recess until half past 7, and that the evening session be held for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. ROGERS. If it is limited to half past 10 I will make no ob-

Mr. KILGORE. Limit it to 10 o'clock and I will make no objection.
Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will accept that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois, that on Tuesday at 5 o'clock the House take a recess until half past 7, and that the evening session be devoted to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Military Affairs, the session to be limited to 10 o'clock? The Chair hears none, and it s so ordered.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask that Wednesday evening be given to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. CLARDY. I ask unanimous consent that the House take a recess from 5 o'clock until 7.30 p. m. on Wednesday, the evening session to be devoted to the consideration of bills reported by the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. McCREARY. I ask for Thursday night for the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. RANDALL. I shall object unless conference reports are permitted to come in at any time they are ready.

Mr. HOLMAN. There are two important bills pending before the Committee on Public Lands that ought to be passed, and I ask unanimous consent-

The SPEAKER. There is a request pending undisposed of.
Mr. ROGERS. I ask that the evening sessions be limited to 10 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARDY] asks unanimous consent that on Wednesday at 5 o'clock the House take a recess until 7.30 p. m., the evening session to be devoted to the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Commerce, to be limited to 100'clock, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania insists that reports of conference committees on all these evenings may come in.

Is there objection to the request?
Mr. TOWNSHEND. I object.
Mr. CLARDY. I ask unanimous consent that the Wednesday evening session be set apart for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Commerce.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. RANDALL. I do not know that it will be necessary to present conference reports, but if the public exigency require, it ought to be permitted.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to know whether that interferes with Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to know whether that interferes with Tuesday night's session.

Mr. CLARDY. I accept that modification.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania does not apply to Tuesday evening's session, I will not object.

There was no further objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. McCREARY. I yielded to the gentleman from Missouri, and now I ask for Thursday night for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. COWLES and others. I object. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. COWLES and others. I object. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

FRANCES H. PLUMMER.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, and the Clerk will proceed to read the title of the bill called up by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNE]

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2091) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer.

Best enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of Frances H. Plummer, widow of Brig. Gen. Joseph B. Plummer, United States Army, and to pay her a pension of $100 a month, in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The SPEAKEK. Under the order of the House the previous question is ordered upon the third reading and the passage of this bill, with the right to debate for thirty minutes

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to occupy the time of the House for more than one or two minutes, briefly to state the history of this bill. It originated in the Senate and passed there allowing the beneficiary $100 per month. The House committee, by an amendment, reduced the sum to $75 a month, and the bill as it is now presented for the consideration of the House is at that sum. report in the case is a somewhat elaborate one. It has been on the record since the 19th of January last, and I do not intend, so far as I am concerned, to read it, but simply to state the facts. General Plummer entered the regular Army in 1841 and was in the Mexican war from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico. At the breaking out of the rebellion he was stationed with his command at Fort Cobb, and, through great hardships and privations, he made his way to the States and was assigned to the Army of the Missouri. He was at the battle of Wilson's Creek, made historic by the death of General Lyon, where he was severely wounded by a minie ball. Subsequently he was promoted to colonel of volunteers and then to brigadier-general. He was in various battles in the Southwest. He was at Island No. 10, and from there he went to Corinth, and at Corinth, in 1862, in the line of duty, he died. He was complimented for his gallantry by all the generals under whom he served-by Pope, by Schofield, and by Rosecrans. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KERR. I ask for the reading of the report.

The SPEAKER. That can only be done in the time allowed for debate. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] has the right to take the floor in opposition to the bill and have the report read in his time.

Mr. KERR. I will do that.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report, which is as follows:

Mr. KERR. I will do that.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report, which is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2991) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

Mrs. Frances H. Plummer is now on the pension-rolls, under special act of Congress approved March 3, 1863, at the rate of $50 per month, as the widow of the late Brig. Gen. Joseph B. Plummer.

The records of the War Department show the following facts concerning General Plummer's services: Graduated from West Point July 1, 1841, and appointed second lieutenant; promoted to first lieutenant March 15, 1848; to captain May 1, 1852, and major Eighth United States Infantry, April 25, 1862. Served in the war with Mexico, at Vera Cruz and city of Mexico; subsequently in Texas and the Indian Territory, where he was stationed at the breaking out of the late war, in command of Fort Cobb. While most of the United States troops in that section of the country either surrendered or were captured, Captain Plummer, after a long and tedious march, during which the troops were on short rations, succeeded in bringing his men safely into Missouri, where he arrived at that critical moment which, for a time at least, gave the Confederate forces control of the southern and western part of that State.

Captain Plummer participated in the battle of Wilson's Creek, Missouri, August 10, 1831, in which General Lyon was killed and the Union forces, after a desperate fight against superior numbers, were finally compelled to retreat. Captain Plummer, while leading the regulars to a final charge, received a serious wound in hip from a large minic ball, which was never removed. He continued the fight until he fell from exhaustion. On September 25, 1861, he was mustered in as colonel of the Eleventh Missouri Volunteers, and on October 22, 1861, he was promoted to brigadier-general. He served with his regiment in Missouri until March 1, 1862, being engaged wi during the fatigues and exposures of active campaign. I know no officer of the Army of his grade who has rendered more valuable and distinguished services to his country or who is better entitled to the most favorable consideration of his Government."

Major-General Schofield, in a letter addressed to this committee, and who was personally acquainted and associated with General Plummer, speaks in the highest terms of the latter's ability and devotion to the Union cause, and his zealous discharge of every duty.

Mrs. Plummer is dependent upon the pension now received, not only for her own support, but for the maintenance of a daughter, who is a great sufferer from a nervous ailment which prevents her from making any exertions toward her support.

In view of the gallant services of the deceased officer, and the dependent condition of his surviving family, your committee are of opinion that the relief asked for should be granted, and therefore report favorably on the bill and ask that it do pass, amended, however, by striking out the words "one hundred" in line 6, and insert therein instead the words "seventy-five."

Mr. KERR (before the reading of the report was completed). Mr. Speaker, all of the report that I care to have read has now been read. and I have a few remarks which I desire to submit in regard to this bill. I know nothing about any special hardships in this case. the report declares that this widow is already receiving a pension of $50 a month. I do not know that there are any circumstances in her case showing any peculiar hardships which would entitle her to a larger pension than we give to the great body of the widows of officers of the United States Army. I do not think it is right for us to pension the widows of officers at any higher rate than $50 a month. I question whether it is right to pension them at that rate. I know that in the early days of American history, the days in which the character of our people was formed, the widow of Commodore Perry was allowed only $400 a year, and $150 a year each for the support of her children till they arrived at the age of sixteen years.

Mr. DUNHAM. It costs twice as much to live now as it did then. Mr. KERR. I know that there is no one in American history more distinguished or who accomplished so much for the country as that eminentseaman, Commodore Perry. He died in the service of his country on an important and dangerous mission in a foreign land. I know that there was no man in the American Senate at the time the question was up who advocated giving his widow a larger sum than $400 a year, and they refused a pension to his aged mother, and that action remained a precedent in American history for a great number of years. Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that gentlemen on our side of the House are in the habit of saying that this is only a small sum, and that it is not taken from the general fund of the American people which might be used for the pension of other deserving widows, but I know this, that the resources of the American people for these purposes are not illimitable.

There must be an end somewhere and sometime to these large expenditures of public money for such purposes, and I know of no better rule, in a government which recognizes the equality of all men before the law, and which has for one of its fundamental principles the doctrine that there shall be no privileged class, but that equal and exact justice shall be meted out to all, than to allow pensions to widows of deserving soldiers upon the basis of the most rigid frugality. I know this also, that if we appropriate large pensions to a great number of our soldiers or their widows there will be a very large proportion of deserving widows of men who died in the service of their country, who have been left with families to support, and who are to-day earning their living at the wash-tub or by other such means, and who will have no aid at all from the Government. Now, I appeal to gentlemen on this side of the House, right here and now, to put a stop to this business. I think that when a widow has $50 a month pension she ought not to come to the American Congress for any more, when she knows that there are thousands of other widows who have not the means to pay for their daily bread, and who are as much deserving of the gratitude of the American people and the care of this Congress as she is herself. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the residue of my time.

[Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to occupy the attention of the House a very few minutes in the discussion of this bill. It was reported from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, of which I am a member. I wish to say to the House candidly that it is a bill of more than ordinary merit. In the discussion of these pension cases a very great effort has been made to create prejudice on the ground that the committee and the House were doing injustice to the private soldiers and the widows of private soldiers in granting these large pensions to generals and the widows of generals. Mr. Speaker, during the brief term of service I have rendered in this House I have, on one or two former occasions, stated that I thought this House would not be able to do what has not been done either by the laws or by nature—to equalize the citizens of this Republic, or of the world, and put them upon a common basis so far as salaries or pensions are concerned. We pay generals a larger salary than we pay privates; we pay the widows of generals larger pensions than we pay the widows of privates. We have a right to do it under the laws. It is natural that it should be done. No man ought to stand on this floor and say that we do an injustice to the private soldiers or the widows of private soldiers when we do this thing.

A few days ago, when a bill similar to this was under discussion, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] made this statement:

I have been unable to find, and I challenge any member upon this floor to find, where there has been submitted to the American Congress a bill to grant to a widow of a soldier of the line a pension for a larger amount than is authorized by the general pension laws.

Mr. GALLINGER. We do it by special act.

Mr. CHEADLE. The gentleman from New Hampshire says we do it by special act. If gentlemen can name any acts which have been passed granting a pension for a larger sum than the amount authorized by the general law, $12 per month, I will pause and give them time to name the bill. I claim, Mr. Speaker, that no such cases can be found in favor of the widows of the men of the rank and file.

Mr. Speaker, when the gentleman from Indiana made that challenge to me on this floor I was aware of the fact that there were hundreds of pension bills passed by this Congress and preceding Congresses, and which he could find by consulting the statutes, paying to private soldiers and the widows of private soldiers larger amounts of pension than those authorized by the general laws. Since that time I have taken instance. just a moment to glance at the laws, and I desire to cite to the gentle-man some references. If he will look at the statutes of the Forty-eighth Congress, page 646, he will find that Julia A. Chambers, widow of John Chambers, a private, had her pension increased from $8 a month to $20 a month. He will find that by an act passed in the same Congress Polly Young, widow of Jesse Young, had her pension increased from $8 to $30 per month. He will find that by an act passed in the same Congress Mary A. Gremon, widow of William H. Gremon, had her pension gress Mary A. Gremon, widow of William H. Gremon, had her pension increased from $8 to $30 per month. And in the Forty-ninth Congress Isabella J. Ramsdell, widow of David D. Ramsdell, had her pension increased from $12 to $30 per month. And if the gentleman will extend his inquiries and look at the general statutes passed in the Fiftieth Congress (if they are printed, and I think they are, because I believe the act to which I refer was passed in the first session of this Congress) have a will find that the men assembled here passed a special act increashe will find that the men assembled here passed a special act increasing the pension of Martha Woodrum, widow of James Woodrum, a private soldier, from $12 to $50 per month. Now, Mr. Speaker, as I said before, there are hundredsof special acts which have been passed by the Congress of the United States increasing the pensions of private soldiers and the widows of private soldiers above the amounts authorized by the general pension laws of the country.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Is it not true that every case in which we have passed a special act was a case in which the general law would not give the amount of pension proposed?

Mr. GALLINGER. As the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCH-EON] very properly suggests, the very object of a special act is to grant to the soldier or the widow of the soldier a larger amount than could be obtained under the general law. But I desired simply to call attention to the fact that the statutes are the best answer that can be made to any gentleman who stands upon this floor and says that we discriminate against the private soldiers or the widows of the private soldiers of this Republic.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman will allow me to add in this connection that in the Forty-ninth Congress we passed a bill granting a The gentleman will allow me to add in this conension of $25 per month to the widow of Nat. M. Gwynne, of Kansas City, a private soldier. Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly; the statutes are full of these cases. The gentleman from Indiana ought to have consulted the record before he made his challenge on this floor, for the record does not bear out the assertions he has made here so repeatedly and which have gone out to the country, which would indicate that the Committee on Invalid Pensions and members of this House have been disposed to do a wrong to the private soldiers and the widows of the private soldiers of this country. The precise opposite is the fact. The committee have carefully guarded the rights of the private soldier, and most of our pension legislation has been in that direction.

Mr. CHEADLE. How much time is there now remaining to each side?

The SPEAKER. The order of the House provides that there shall be thirty minutes' debate, but makes no provision whatever as to the manner in which the time shall be divided. Therefore any gentleman obtaining the floor might occupy the entire time.

Mr. CHEADLE. How much of the thirty minutes remains?

The SPEAKER. Thirteen minutes.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I suggest that the remaining time be divided equally between those who are in favor of the bill and those who are against it.

Mr. CHEADLE. I will trespass only a moment upon the time or I thank my distinguished friend, the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], for finding upon record in the history of the private pension bills which have been enacted into laws six cases—think of it—six cases, out of the more than a million widows or cases—think of it—six cases, one of the more than a limited water of private soldiers of this country, where a greater sum than $12 a month has been granted by the laws of the land.

Mr. GALLINGER. The gentleman does not mean to say that there are a million of widows-

Mr. CHEADLE. I say there have been nearly a million widows of men of the line in the Northern army. There were more than 2,800,-000 soldiers in that war, and less than a million are now living.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Our soldiers were not Mormons. [Laughter.]
Mr. CHEADLE. Oh, no; they were not Mormons; but I say there are about one million widows of soldiers; and I say to the gentleman from Maine that in the Northland there are to-day nearly fifty thousand widows of the men who died that this Government might live, who are subjects of charity of those among whom they live, or are living in the almshouses of the land.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Fifty thousand?

Mr. CHEADLE. Yes, sir; fifty thousand. I will say to the gentleman that in the community where I live, a small place, there are more than a dozen of these widows who are not receiving a cent of pension.

I want to stand here in my place and denounce as non-American and as monstrous the proposition or theory advanced by the distinguished gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Gallinger] that there is no equality before the law in this Government of ours. I shall never say nor have I ever pretended to say that God, in His infinite wisdom, has given the same talents to each and every human being or that we can all obtain the same social standing. But, Mr. Speaker, it was for the purpose of demonstrating the fact that, politically and legally, there should be absolute equality before the law that this Government of ours was established. It is the very fundamental principle upon which the whole superstructure of our Government rests.

I ask the gentleman who has charge of this bill if there is any special reason, if the financial condition of this claimant shows that she is entitled either in law or equity to a greater sum than she is now receiving, $50 a month? Mr. WASHINGTON. Is she not now receiving the amount provided for the widow of a brigadier-general?

Mr. CHEADLE. She is.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Did she not get that by special law?
Mr. CHEADLE. She did. We heard the members of the Committee on Invalid Pensions say that the amount fixed for the widows of brigadier-generals was $50. It is against the injustice of this special class legislation I object. I denounce the principle, and not the individual to be benefited by it. The financial condition of this widow is not such as to entitle her to this special consideration at the hands

I say this whole system of special legislation in reference to pensions is radically wrong. Every pension allowed should be under a general law. It is a thousand times better in the administration of this pension question that a few meritorious claimants shall suffer than that the whole principle for which our comrades died shall be trampled in

I say he is a blind man and an unwise reasoner who does not see that the whole tendency of our legislation in the last ten years has been in the interest of classes and not in the interests of the people. Standing here to-day I ask any member to point me in the legislation of the Fiftieth Congress to a single law which has been in favor of the general welfare of the American people.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KERR. The remarks of the gentleman from New Hampshire do not at all affect the justice of this proposition.

Mr. SPINOLA. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. KERR. Certainly.

Mr. SPINOLA. That gentleman said when he was upon the floor, "Widows of private soldiers make their living at the wash-tub and other means, such as are common to our society." What does he mean by that?

Mr. KERR. Honorable means of making a living. The gentleman from New York will not intimate that working at the wash-tub is not an honorable mode of making a living?

Mr. SPINOLA. I do not so understand the gentleman.

Mr. KERR. The gentleman then will correct his impression.
Mr. SPINOLA. You did not stop at the wash-tub, but went furner. You said "the widows of private soldiers make their living at the wash-tub and other means which are common to our society." What other means does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. KERR. I am not responsible for the wanderings of the gentleman's mind.

Mr. SPINOLA. There are no wanderings on my part. Your language is ambiguous.

Mr. KERR. Other means, such as are common to our society—that is, all kinds of menial labor, if the gentleman wishes it made more explicit. His mind could not arrive at the same conclusion mine did in regard to the matter.

Mr. SPINOLA. That would be impossible.

Mr. KERR. I wish to say this, further, that the argument of the gentleman from New Hampshire cuts no figure against the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana. If there are any private soldiers' widows who are receiving pension more than is paid to the mass of these widows it is an act of injustice. It only shows that there are individual members of this House who come here and urge special pension claims for their constituents, and that they are not willing to pass a general law to grant the same amount to the widows of other soldiers who fell in defense of the country.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KERR. Yes, sir.
Mr. GALLINGER. If the gentleman will recur to the record he will be unwilling, I am convinced, to go before the country on the statement he has just made.

Mr. KERR. What statement?

Mr. GALLINGER. That the members have been persistent in pushing the claims of their constituents for these pensions. In all of these cases, and there were hundreds of them, there were special considerations why the legislation should be had.

Mr. KERR. That only sustains my point, that there have been no special considerations brought forward why this widow should have $75 a month, when other widows of officers of like grade are receiving but

Mr. MACDONALD. And I will add right here, if the gentleman will permit me, that I know there are none.

Mr. KERR. And the gentleman adds that he knows there are no such special reasons.

Now, I ask if gentlemen, members on this side of the House, are willing to put themselves on record of occupying the time of this Congress and of this country in bringing forward and advocating the increase of special pension claims from $50 to $75 per month, while the great mass of the widows of the soldiers, many of them in absolute want, are denied any pension at all, unless their husbands died of wounds or diseases contracted in the service?

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. KERR. Yes, sir. Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. In what way will the refusal to grant this increase help the widows of private soldiers who are not now getting pensions?

Mr. KERR. For this reason, that there is a limit to the ability of the country to pay pensions; and if you pay to a large and favored class of widows $75 per month you thereby diminish the fund out of which the mass should receive some sort of consideration.

Now I hold that this is a safe rule, and it was held to be so by the fathers of the country-that all partial laws are iniquitous, that all special privileges are wrong, and I, as a Republican and a member of this side of the House, enter my protest against this discrimination, which is an injustice to the great mass of the widows of this country.

Mr. LONG. Will the gentleman state what is the present law pro

Mr. LONG. Will the gentleman state what is the present law providing pensions for widows of this grade?

Mr. KERR. She is now getting $50 per month.

Mr. STEELE. The law provides $30 per month pension.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. Is not this increase in the direction of liberalizing pension legislation? My colleague is trying to restrict it by refusing this pension, instead of liberalizing the law.

Mr. KERR. I understand that this widow is now receiving $20 per month more than the general law allows widows of officers of the same grade. That is a still stronger reason for resisting any increase now. Under the general law she gets $30 per month, but by a special act she gets fifty, and if this bill passes we have no assurance whatever that she will not come in after awhile and ask an increase of $100 per month. I do not call that liberalizing; it is making a partial law. I do not call that liberalizing; it is making a partial law. month. I do not call that liberalizing; it is making a pattern and.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. How much time, Mr. Speaker, remains to this debate?

The SPEAKER. Two minutes.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I hope that time will be granted to some gentleman who desires to fight this widow's claim, and then we will have a vote.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to occupy that time in making a brief response to what the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cheadle] has said. That gentleman the other day threw down the gantlet of defiance to any person who would point him to a case where Congress had increased the pension of a widow of a private soldier. When I take up the gantlet and confront him with five cases, the names of which I give him, and tell him there are hundreds of others, he says that is no proof, that I have only found five cases in all of the vast mass of claims, and hence that he made only five mistakes. Again he says that all the legislation of Congress in regard to pensions has been in the direction of favored classes. That is not true.

been in the direction of favored classes.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions of the Fiftieth Congress have labored diligently. We have reported and we have passed hundreds of private pension bills, and almost every bill reported and passed has been for a pension to a private soldier or a widow, and scarcely one for a general or the widow of a general. The legislation of Congress passed for ten years tells the same story; and the general bills reported to Congress, some of them on the (alendar and some of them have become laws, provide for the benefit of the private soldiers of the Republic and their widows. The Mexican pension bill, which was a service pension, was for the benefit of men who fought in the ranks, and not for the complete of the description. and not for the generals of the Mexican war. And I want to say to the gentleman, when he arraigns the Committee on Invalid Pensions or the membership of that committee upon charges that they are legislating in behalf of a favored class, or for the generals of the Army, that he is stating what the record does not show to be true. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KERR. Does the gentleman insist that there are only a few cases of large pensions? [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The first question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time.

The question recurred upon its passage.

Mr. CHEADLE. Upon that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, 18 members only voting in favor thereof.

Mr. MATSON. I demand tellers upon the yeas and nays.

Tellers were refused.

Mr. CHEADLE. I desire to make a statement, with the consent of the House

The SPEAKER.

Is there objection?

Not exceeding one minute. I want simply to Mr. CHEADLE. state that this bill is one of a large number that came over from a Friday night session-

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, how does this matter come up for discussion now?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asked unanimous consent to make a statement not exceeding one minute.

Mr. HEARD. I object. Mr. SOWDEN. It is too late now.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, did not the objection come too late? The SPEAKER. The Chair had not asked for objection. The Chair simply stated the request of the gentleman from Indiana, and he proceeded to address the House.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I am satisfied we will expedite business of the House by consenting to a yea-and-nay vote on the passage of this bill, and I therefore demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were refused. Is there objection to that? The Chair hears none. The question now recurs on ordering the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MATSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Has the bill passed its third reading?

The SPEAKER. It has, and the question is on the passage of the bill, and upon that question the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 95, nays 84, not voting 143; as follows:

So the bill was passed.

So the bill was passed.
Pending the announcement of the vote,
Mr. DOCKERY said: I was called to the Senate. If I had been present, I should have voted "ay."
Mr. DAVIDSON, of Florida. I was in the Senate at the time the vote was taken. If I had been present, I should have voted "no."
On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, by unanimous consent, the reading of the names was dispensed with.
The following additional pairs were announced:
Mr. OATES with Mr. STEWART, of Vermont, until the 18th instant.
Mr. GRANGER with Mr. KELLEY, for the rest of the day.
Mr. THOMPSON, of California, with Mr. McKENNA, for the rest of the day. day.

Mr. Stockdale with Mr. Mason, for the rest of the day.

Mr. Cowles with Mr. Boothman, for the rest of the day.

Mr. Stahlnecker with Mr. Dorsey, for this day.

Mr. Johnston, of North Carolina, with Mr. Wade, on this vote.

Mr. O'FERRALL with Mr. Stephenson, on this vote.
Mr. Washington with Mr. Thompson, of Ohio, on this vote.
Mr. Thompson were present, Mr. Washington would vote "no."
The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table. The latter motion was agreed to.

MRS. MARY HEAP NICHOLSON.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. I send to the Clerk's desk the bill (S. 1831) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Heap Nicholson, on which the previous question has been ordered, and ask for its consideration at this

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask my friend from New York if this bill will take up any time in general debate?

Mr. WHITE, of New York. If any debate develops upon it I will withdraw it from consideration at this time.

Mr. BLOUNT. That was the understanding with the gentleman.

Mr. WHITE, of New York. This is the case of Mary H. Nicholson, Senate bill 1831, upon which the previous question has been ordered on the passage of the bill. I ask now a vote upon the question. Debate was limited to thirty minutes, but I think there is no disposition to debate; and if there is I will withdraw the bill from consideration. The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Heap Nicholson, widow of James W. A. Nicholson, late rear-admiral (retired) of the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month from the date of the passage of this act,

The SPEAKER. The question, if there be no debate, is upon ordering the bill read a third time.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time.

The SPEAKER. The question now is upon the passage of the bill. The question was put; and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. CHEADLE. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 75, noes 20.
Mr. CHEADLE. No quorum.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. RANDALL. I ask for the yeas and nays. It will save time.
Mr. CHEADLE. In the interests of public business I will withdraw the call for a quorum. [Applause.]
Mr. KERR. I renew the demand.

Mr. KERR. I renew the demand. [Cries of "Too late!"] The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is too late.

Mr. KERR. I will withdraw the point.

The SPEAKER. The ayes have it, and the bill is passed.

Mr. WHITE, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the bill (H. R. 6317) for the relief of Mary H. Nicholson will be laid upon the table. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question must be made at the time, and the gentleman does not call the bill up at this time.

My LAWLER. I would like to have it considered; but so as not to

Mr. LAWLER. I would like to have it considered; but so as not to interfere with the appropriation bill I desire to have it considered after the appropriation bill shall have been disposed of.

The SPEAKER. The question can only be made at the time.

Mr. LAWLER. I said that I would call it up after this appropriation bill was disposed of.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with the morning hour.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a report, and if I can have consent to do so I will not object to dispensing with the morning hour.

Mr. BLOUNT. I was going to ask consent that gentlemen desiring to present reports upon private bills may have leave to file them with the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT], to dispense with the hour for the call of committees

Mr. RANDALL. I desire to present a report, and if I am not interrupted in that by an objection I will not object to the motion to dispense with the morning hour. The bill that I desire to report is of a public nature.

Mr. MILLS. This is Friday, and such a bill is not in order.

The SPEAKER. If the hour for the call of committees is dispensed with, of course there will be no reports received to-day unless unanimous consent is given.

Mr. RANDALL. Then I shall object to dispensing with the morning hour.

Mr. MILLS. I desire to make the point against the gentleman's bill that this is Friday and that no public bill is in order.

The SPEAKER. That is a point to come in later. This being Friday, of course no public bill can be reported unless by consent.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will not raise any objection to dispensing with the morning hour.

Mr. RANDALL. But I will unless I can have an opportunity to present this report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that this being Friday, public bills are not in order unless by consent.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, I ask unanimous consent to make

Well, I ask unanimous consent to make a report upon a public bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Let the title of the bill be read.

Mr. RANDALL. The title can be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 12131) to amend the internal-revenue laws.

Mr. MILLS, Mr. TRACEY, and others objected.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] moves to dispense with the hour for the call of committee

Mr. TAULBEE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TAULBEE. I understood the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] to request, pending the motion to dispense with the morning hour, that gentlemen having reports to present on bills of a private nature be allowed to file them with the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. He did not. The gentleman stated that he would follow the pending motion with such a request if the motion was agreed to.

Mr. TAULBEE. Then I make that request.

The SPEAKER. But the motion of the gentleman from Georgia is still pending, and unless that gentleman yields—

Mr. TAULBEE. My parliamentary inquiry is this, Whether or not, if that permission is granted, gentlemen having reports of a private nature, or bills of a private nature, as to which there are minority views to be presented, can in each case have the views of the minority filed and printed with the report of the majority.

The SPEAKER. There is no parliamentary right in the minority of a committee to present their views in the form of a report. The universal practice is that the House must give leave for the presentation of the views of the minority, and of course if the reports are merely handed to the Clerk without action of the House, the minority in any case can not at this time have leave to present its views or to have them printed.
Mr. TAULBEE.

Is it in order for the House to grant such leave? The SPEAKER. The Nouse may do so in advance if it so chooses. Mr. TAULBEE. Generally, or in each separate case?

The SPEAKER. The House can grant the leave in advance, but there is no such request now pending. The pending question is on the motion to dispense with the call of committees.

Mr. TAULBEE. But I want to understand whether it is in order for the House to grant unanimous consent for the filing and printing of the views of the minority.

the views of the minority.

The SPEAKER. It is, at any time.

The motion to dispense with the morning hour was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I now ask unanimous consent that gentlemen having reports to present of a private character may have leave to file them with the Clerk, and that in each case the minority of the committee be allowed to present their views and have them printed with the report of the committee.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

FILING OF REPORTS.

The following reports were filed by being handed in at the Clerk's desk:

ELLEN B. FARR.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 3588) granting a pension to Ellen B. Farr; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ROBERT ZAHN.

Mr. WALKER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 3809) for the relief of Robert Zahn; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MARY HORNING.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 11627) granting a pension to Mary Horning; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JAMES M. BARRETT.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 12575) to increase the pension of James M. Barrett; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

MRS. LYDIA E. QUAW.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, re-ported back favorably the bill (S. 3857) granting a pension to Mrs. Lydia E. Quaw; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORRIN F. WALLER.

Mr. SAWYER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, re-ported back favorably the bill (S. 3749) granting a pension to Orrin F. Waller; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

HAMPTON AND OLD POINT COMFORT BAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. MAISH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 12574) granting right of way and other privileges to the Hampton and Old Point Comfort Railway Company; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

JOHN J. FREELAND.

Mr. MATSON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 12513) to restore John J. Freeland to the pension-roll; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ST. LOUIS AND MISSISSIPPI TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on Claims, reported as a substitute for bill H. R. 11546, a bill (H. R. 12591) to authorize the Court of Claims to take jurisdiction and adjudge the claim of the St. Louis and Mississippi Transportation Company; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

The bill H. R. 11546 was reported back with a recommendation that it be laid on the table.

CHARLES E. HASBROOK.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 12214) for the relief of Charles E. Hasbrook; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

FORMAN MATHEWS AND DAVID STOUT PARKER.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2013) for the relief of Forman Mathews and David Stout Parker; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

SURETIES OF GEORGE W. HOOK, DECEASED.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2783) for the relief of the sureties of George W. Hook, deceased; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF CHAUNCEY M. LOCKWOOD.

Mr. MANSUR also, from the Committee on Claims, reported back favorably the bill (S. 726) for the relief of the legal representatives of Chauncey M. Lockwood; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

M. JOSIE M'LAIN.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 11663) granting a pension to M. Josie McLain; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ELIZABETH A. JONES.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back with amendment the bill (H. R. 10255) granting a pension to Elizabeth A. Jones; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

NANCY POLOCK.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 3762) granting a pension to Nancy Polock; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WAGON-ROAD LAND-GRANTS IN OREGON.

Mr. STOCKDALE, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back the bill (8. 1939) providing in certain cases for the forfeiture of wagon-road grants in the State of Oregon; which, with the accompanying report, was ordered to be printed and recommitted, with leave to the minority of the committee to file their views, to be printed with those of the majority.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has been requested to ask permission that all gentlemen desiring to do so may print remarks upon the resolution disposed of to-day in regard to the action of the conferees on the bill to admit certain Territories as States into the Union. Is there obtection !

Mr. BIGGS. I object to printing remarks unless they were delivered. Mr. COX. I hope the gentleman will not object. The request has been made by several gentlemen.

Mr. BIGGS. Very well; I wit

Mr. BIGGS. Very well; I withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER. If there be no further objection, the leave requested will be granted. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to dispense with private business for to-day.
Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. This is private-bill day. I have a bill here in which very many members of the House feel an interest, and which it will not take five minutes to pass. If the gentleman from Georgia will allow this bill to pass, I will make no factious opposition to his motion.

Mr. RANDALL. Public business of great importance has been objected to already to-day. I think we had better make no exceptions in this matter.

A MEMBER (to Mr. STONE, of Kentucky). Is your bill a private bill?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. In one sense it is, and in another it is ot. It is a bill to pay what are known as "4th of July claims." Mr. BLOUNT. That can be passed any day.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BLOUNT to dispense with private business for to-day, there were—ayes 67, noes 17.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I make the point that no quorum has voted.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. O'FERRALL and Mr. BLOUNT were appointed.
The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 130, noes 34.

So the motion of Mr. BLOUNT to dispense with private business for to day was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I now move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of general appropriation bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DOCKERY), having put the question, said: The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I call for a division. The question was again taken; and there were—ayes 106, noes 6. Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. No quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, and Mr. BLOUNT were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 129, noes 24. So the motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. Turner, of Georgia, in the chair) and resumed the consideration of the unfinished business, being the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriation for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

The following pending amendments were read:

By Mr. Cannon:
In line 10, page 2, strike out "5" and insert "8;" so that the clause will read:
"For compensation to clerks in post-offices, $6,850,000."
By Mr. Horana:
After the word "provided," in line 14, insert:
"Provided, however, That the aggregate salaries as fixed by such classification shall not exceed the sum hereby appropriated."

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, there has been a misunderstanding as to the effect of this classification in increasing this sum. The average increase has been less than $200,000. It is claimed and estimated, I believe, by the chief of the salary and allowance division that this classification will increase the sum appropriated in this bill by the amount of $300,000. Now I ask the attention of this Committee of the Whole to a statement which I hold in my hand from that officer. In making his estimates, he takes the maximum and the minimum salaries, ascerand the minimum salaries, ascertains the average of the two, and then multiplies the number of employés by that. Take the matter of assistant postmasters. There are ninty-seven, I think. The average amount of salary is $2,250; and there are less than twenty of the ninety-seven who do not get the amount of this average. Yet this is the basis which is reported for the purpose of getting at the cost which this legislation will bring to the country.

Now, I desire to remark that the cost depends upon the administration; and I ask the attention of the committee especially to two items.

One item relates to mailing-clerks, letter-distributers, dispatchers, registry, money-order, and directory clerks, etc. Here are 2, 439 persons, the maximum salary being $1,400, the minimum salary $600. The average is made $1,000. He makes the aggregate salaries $2,493,-000. Now, it is to be observed that the great mass of employée belong to the laws greated but this bill life up these employées of the laws. to the lower grade; but this bill lifts up these employés of the lower grade. This minimum salary of $600 here contemplated is a lifting up from about $200. Suppose by proper administration you make $800 the average, and this is quite easily done, what have you, by reason of that change of administration, on that single item? You have an increase of the salaries, but you have, by taking $800 instead of $1,000 as the average, a saving of $541,800 on that single item.

Now, take separators and assorters, paper distributors, record clerks, general-delivery clerks, inquiry clerks, clerks for special-delivery mail, raters of third and fourth class mail matter, weighers of second-class mail matter, stock and supply clerks, and time-keepers. The average maximum salary proposed in the bill in this connection is $1,200, and the minimum $600, the mean average being $900. Now, it was brought up from about $200. Suppose you shall make it $700, you will have raised largely the grade of employés, and yet you have saved in this item alone some $347,000. You have saved on these two items, as estimated by the chief of the allowance division, $889,600, and yet the proposition is to increase the amount of the bill by the amount of 900,000. I ask, then, if it is not clear that the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, in giving an increase of $600,000, have been exceedingly liberal; and I beg gentlemen on this side as well as gentlemen on the other side, who are anxious for the success of this law, that they will not embarrass us at this time by a proposition to increase the appropriation, which is not justified upon any data whatever.

CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. BLOUNT. This is quite an important matter, and I hope I may be permitted to proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman will be permitted to proceed for five minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, so far as the classification of the clerks is concerned, the matter of the most importance is the legislation. I am willing to vote whatever money is sufficient for the perfection of the service; but I trust, sir, that we shall not now be embarrassed by such a proposition as that pending. In the nature of things there are none who can give us the absolute facts on which to base our legislation; in the nature of things this bill has been constructed upon the experience of the Department, in the offices of the country, and in the nature of things whatever defects may appear in the legislation will be fully exposed hereafter and the next Congress may take the benefit of it.

Mr. REED. What does the Department think the appropriation ought to be—the total, I mean?

Mr. BLOUNT. I have just stated, sir, that the chief of the salary and allowance division made an estimate, and that has been forwarded to us, making it about the amount of the amendment asked by the gentleman from Illinois. I have taken that allowance and I have endeavored to show that in two items alone to which I have just called attention the amount of the bill could be largely reduced and the clerks in all these offices elevated above what they are now.

I desire to be perfectly frank with the House, but I think, sir, there are ample funds provided for the purpose of elevating all of these salaries, and I think it is quite manifest to this committee that when the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads has put on already in the bill the sum of $600,000, when the increase has run from $100,000 to $200,000, that it has not failed to recognize the fact that we are proposing an increase of expenditures for the purpose of giving a better

But what I have said in reference to the salaries of the clerks runs through all the features of the bill. The calculation is based upon the mistaken idea of putting into each class the same number of men, whereas the highest class, as any gentleman will recognize, is composed of the highest type of intelligence and the most important men. The great mass of the work does not require it, and you may put it in the lower grade.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, all I desire in connection with this legislation is that we may thoroughly understand, first, as to how far this legislation will go in giving to the Postmaster-General discretionary power, or power to exceed the appropriation of Congress; and second, that proposition once determined, whether the appropriation stated in this bill for clerk-hire, covering $6,550,000, is sufficient to administer this part of the bill if enacted into law.

If this bill gives the Postmaster-General discretionary power to exceed the appropriation voted by Congress, then I am unqualfiedly against it, however much I may wish a classification of that service. And right there I desire to say that this bill does not give him that power; but in order to be sure in the movement we attempt to incorporate now by this provision, I am in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], which in effect declares the Postmaster-General shall not in the carrying out of this legislation exceed the appropriation by Congress.

Now, next, does this appropriation of $600,000, larger than the amount of the appropriation for the present fiscal year, cover the actual requirements of the legislation proposed to be incorporated in this bill in reference to the classification of the clerks? I have but this one fact before me. I take the report of the honorable gentleman from Georgia, the chairman of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and he gives as a reason in his report, indorsed by the committee, why this $600,000 additional asked in the estimates of the Postmaster-General should be acceded to by this House:

It has been found that for several years erroneous estimates and erroneous appropriations have left the Department so restricted in money as to force too low rates of compensation to employés and too few of them to handle the mail matter with which they were charged.

He comes to this House and uses this language as a basis for asking the increase. In that I yield to him my full accord, and believe his statement to be correct in every particular.

But since the estimates submitted by the Postmaster-General, reported to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury, and approved by your Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, giving this increase of $600,000 for clerical force in first and second class offices, we come to the date January 28, 1889, when there is formulated by the Department, after a review of the commission of a year ago, a classification of the clerks in the first and second class offices. The gentleman from Georgia distinctly states in his report with the accompanying bill that "it will result, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, in an increase of expenditures to the amount of $300,000." I therefore say to this House, to carry out the gentleman's first proposition, that for years past erroneous estimates and erroneous appropriations have left the Department so restricted in money as to force too low a rate of compensation to employés; $600,000 is the estimate of the Postmaster-General last December, as approved by the committee.

But in January of this year the classification of the clerks by unanimous consent of this House has been allowed to be incorporated as new legislation upon this bill, and the chairman of the committee apprehends in his report, which I believe in and which I have agreed to, that to carry out the details of this legislation, $300,000 more will be necessary. Therefore I think the House should agree to the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. DOCKERY. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania allow a question ?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.*
Mr. DOCKERY. Is it not true that the subcommittee of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads reduced the estimates of the Post-Office Department in respect to the amount of clerical hire $300,-000; but that after-

Mr. BINGHAM. All of which was held in abeyance.
Mr. DOCKERY. After we had agreed upon a classification of the clerks the committee restored the amount to the sum as it appears now in the bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. That is true.

Mr. DOCKERY. The judgment of the subcommittee, which consisted of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, the gentleman from Georgia, and myself, was that the amount of the estimate for clerk-hire ought to be reduced $300,000, but after we made the classification it was thought proper to restore the amount to what it was in the estimate.

Mr. BINGHAM. It was not positively determined by the whole committee. It was never reported to the full committee. The gentleman roust understand the point that I desire to reach. That is, that we make an appropriation that will allow a complete and full carrying out of this law if it is enacted. That is all. I do not care whether it takes three hundred or five hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. That is really the point at issue; and I submitted the state of fact in reply to the observation of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, so as to show the House that but for the classification this estimate would have been reduced $300,000.

Mr. BINGHAM. That the gentleman has no authority to state. The proposition never went to the full committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am not referring to the action of the full committee, but I am speaking of the subcommittee. The point I am making is, that in the subcommittee we reduced this amount $300,000; but after it was determined to classify the clerks, we restored it to the full amount required by the estimate.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, the House need not be misled. Whatever may have occurred in the committee; whatever reasons may have actuated it; whatever conclusion it may have reached; whatever it may understand as to the correctness of these conclusions, or whatever opinion we had, it is sufficient to say we are now in a position where we need not have the least doubt about the sufficiency of the appropriation in this bill. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] says, quoting from the report that I had the honor to make accompanying this bill, "that erroneous estimates and erroneous appropriations have brought about too low salaries and affected the service." That I admit, sir. That was with reference to a period for the last three or four years. This was due specially to legislation which provided for the clerks in post-offices known as money-order clerks, who were paid out of the fees, and which thereafter were provided to be paid for that service out of the item in the appropriation bill known as the sum for the compensation of clerks.

These clerks were transferred from one fund to the other, and there was too small an increase in the appropriation. It did produce trouble; but, sir, during this very Congress, with a view of correcting and remedying the wrong coming from that source, the round sum of $400,-000 was added to the service with a view of making up whatever damage might have occurred in that way. As I said to you, the appropriation ran over one or two years in this manner. We have proposed in this bill an increase of $600,000.

We have proposed it by reason of this classification. Now, sir, very much of the cost of this bill depends upon the use of this fund. If you should grant ad libitum authority to the Postmaster-General, then if he were inclined he could put them all in the higher grades. should restrict the amount of the appropriation, he must place many of them in the lower grades; and as you allow a greater or a less sum all along the line from the maximum to the minimum grade, he must govern himself in the distribution of this fund. Now, I have shown the committee, from a statement sent to me by the Postmaster-General, made by the chief of the salary and allowance division, and based upon the amount which the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] would make the appropriation—I have shown from that statement that you can raise all of these salaries largely, and yet by a reduction in two items alone from this estimate there will be a saving

Mr. HOLMAN. How is that saving made?

Mr. BINGHAM. What are those two items?
Mr. BLOUNT. I have a calculation which has been made by the chief of the salary and allowance division upon which this estimate has been made. I take two items: First, "mailing clerks, etc.," where there are 2,439 employés. The maximum salary is $1,400 and the minimum salary is $600. This calculation takes $1,000 as the figure, and gives to every one of these 2,439 clerks $1,000 a year. Many of these clerks are paid at this time below $300 a year. If you take $800 as the average salary of these clerks you make a saving of $541,000. Then take the very next item, separators and assorters. There are 1,213 of them, and by making the salary $700 a year instead of $1,000 you have a saving of $363,900; and these clerks are all receiving hundreds of dollars less now than they would be receiving under such an allowance.

Mr. HOLMAN. I will ask my friend to explain how it happens that the amount of the appropriation is decreased while these salaries are all increased? Is the number of employés reduced? All the salaries are virtually proposed to be increased by this classification, and the number of employés, I understand, is not diminished. How, then, do you diminish the amount of the appropriation?

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman must recollect that the estimate is

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman must recollect that the estimate is for the next fiscal year, and that we have proposed in this bill an increase of $600,000 over the appropriation of last year.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. HOLMAN was recognized, and yielded to Mr. BLOUNT.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] now asks me whether the number of these clerks does not remain the same, and if so, how I reduce the amount.

Mr. HOLMAN. When you at the same time increase all the salaries, how do you save eight hundred or nine hundred thousand dol-

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman will give me his attention I will tell him. I have not said that I reduce the salaries by the amount of eight hundred or nine hundred thousand dollars. There is where the gentleman falls into error.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then what is it that is being reduced some eight hundred or nine hundred thousand dollars?

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman will allow me I will explain. The item in this bill for clerk-hircis $6,550,000. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] proposes to increase the sum by $300,000. The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads have reported an increase of $600,000 over the appropriation of last year. This increase was designed for the purpose of increasing the salaries of all the employés. signed for the purpose of increasing the salaries of air the employes. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] claims that it is not enough and proposes to add $300,000 more.

Mr. HOLMAN. If my friend will allow me—
Mr. BLOUNT. I prefer to answer my friend's question without interruption. Then I will answer anything else he desires to ask.

Mr. HOLMAN. Very well.

Mr. BLOUNT. I am simply showing that I can take these two items that I have read and make a certain amount of saving. This is a calculation made at the Department as to what the cost will be. Taking the maximum and the minimum salaries, and taking the average of the two, I am showing that the result of that average is too high, and that I can go below that average and still pay the men more than they are paid now, and at the same time reduce the amount of the appropriation below the amount proposed by the gentleman from Illinois. I do not mean to say that I intend to do that, but I am simply taking this calculation from this paper for the purpose of illustrat-ing the point that the amount contained in this bill now is more than ample for the purpose for which it is designed.

Mr. HOLMAN. But, as a matter of fact, the amount of the appropriation for the clerical force is increased $600,000 by this bill, and that, believe, is about $450,000 more than the previous increase from year

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will quote from the books. His quotations heretofore have not been in conformity with the official reports.

Mr. HOLMAN. The increase has been from a hundred thousand to hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year, has it not?

Mr. BLOUNT. I will let the gentleman state it himself, as we do not agree about these official figures. The increase this year was over

Mr. HOLMAN. The appropriation does not show that.

Mr. BINGHAM. Yes.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think my friend is mistaken. I think the increase was about a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The increase I think has generally been about a hundred thousand dollars a year for several years past, but now in this bill it is $600,000, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] proposes to increase that by $300,000 more. The increase in 1834 over 1883 was $364,000; the next year the increase was $105,000; the next year $101,000; the next year $406,000; the next year $119,000; and this fiscal year it is in the neighborhood of $500,000.

Mr. HOLMAN.

For this present year? Yes, sir; for this present year. Mr. BLOUNT.

Mr. HOLMAN. I do not see how you reach those figures.
Mr. BLOUNT. Well, sir, a report accompanies this bill.
Mr. HOLMAN. My friend is more apt to be accurate on a matter of this kind than I am; but I examined into this question a few days ago and reached a very different conclusion.

Mr. BLOUNT. Why, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman had examined the statutes he would have found a very large increase.

The present Postmaster-General-I have not the figures, for I could not anticipate all these questions—the present Postmaster-General, during the last fiscal year, claimed that an appropriation, I think, of some $200,000 increase was not sufficient; and he sent in supplemental estimates to this House. I think there is hardly a gentleman here who will not bear me out in the statement that there was spent at the local offices everywhere by reason-

Here the hammer fell.

Mr. ADAMS obtained the floor and said: I do not wish to take the floor from the gentleman from Georgia.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Adams] yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT]?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia will proceed.

Mr. BLOUNT. Now, Mr. Chairman, the appropriations were much larger than usual during the fiscal year for the purpose of making up for whatever cramping had come by reason of the legislation changing the mode of paying clerks, a matter which had not been properly provided for by previous legislation.

Now, on the one hand, my friend from Indiana claims that this appropriation is extravagant by the sum of $400,000; while on the other, gentlemen here contend that we are short $300,000 in the amount necessary to be appropriated in order to insure represent the beautiful in order to insure represent the second of the state of the content of the properties of the second of th essary to be appropriated in order to insure proper service. I have given these figures, which have been made at the Post-Office Department. If this Committee of the Whole wishes to appropriate an extravagant amount of money for the payment of clerks in the post-offices of the country it can vote the sum of money here proposed; but if it wants to be anywhere in the region of conservatism, if it wants to make a reasonable classification of this service, the amount which we propose in this bill is ample for the purpose. I beg that gentlemen on either side will not be hasty in voting the enormous sum promen on either side will not be hasty in voting the enormous sum proposed.

It has been alleged loosely that this classification amounts to an increase of from $600,000 to $1,000,000. The information which I have had and which I have to-day contradicts that statement. I trust that this classification scheme is not to be discredited in the commencement of this debate by extravagance in statement one way or the other.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Chairman, there are two propositions before the committee. There is the amendment of my colleague [Mr. CANNON] proposing an increase in the appropriation; and then there is an entirely distinct proposition of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Hol-MAN] in the form of a proviso. I wish to speak in favor of the amendment of my colleague. I think gentlemen who have spoken during the last twenty minutes have argued these two propositions somewhat

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman will allow me to say that I do not think there is any difference about the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

Mr. ADAMS. Does the gentleman mean that there is not objection

Mr. BLOUNT. I do. Mr. ADAMS. Well, I wish to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] one question. How can the Postmaster-General keep the control of th amount of a classification within the amount of an appropriation except by a limitation of the number of employés-

Mr. HOLMAN. There is another mode.
Mr. ADAMS. Wait one moment; I will complete the question—or else by reducing to a lower-priced class those clerks that, according to the judgment of the Department in previous years, and probably in the judgment of the committee, would belong to a higher class? For instance, on page 3 of this bill I find that the salaries of stamp clerks are divided into ten classes, from $800 to $1,700. Now, I am aware that if all your stamp clerks are $800 clerks, you can employ more stamp clerks within a certain total expenditure than if some are $1,700 clerks; and I want to know——

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow me to tell him what the minimum salary of a stamp clerk now is?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. One hundred and fifty One hundred and fifty dollars; and this bill makes the minimum $600.

Mr. ADAMS. But the gentleman from Georgia evidently mistakes my proposition. I took this item because it was the first that fell under my eye. I find here that certain clerks are divided into classes, ranging from lower salaries to higher salaries. Now, I suppose it is the judgment of the Department that there should be different classes of stamp clerks, some receiving higher salaries and some lower salaries. Yet I can see how the Postmaster-General could keep the entire scheme of classification within the total sum appropriated if his authority were confined to the appointment of clerks of the lower grades.

I do not intend to say that this classification is defective; I know too little in regard to it to say that. What I say is that the proviso of the gentleman from Indiana is, I think, imperfectly understood by myself and perhaps by others on the floor.

Mr. HOLMAN. My friend from Illinois [Mr. ADAMS] can see very readily that the amount charged to the Treasury in the aggregate for salaries will depend upon how many clerks are put in the higher classes, how many in the average classes, and how many in the lower.

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, sir.
Mr. HOLMAN. So that under this bill, if you leave the subject without restriction, it is very clear that the Postmaster-General can make the salaries double or treble the amount appropriated; and he can make them fixed salaries which will be a permanent charge upon the Treasury.

Mr. ADAMS. You mean he might make a smaller number of higher-priced men instead of a larger number of lower-priced men?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir; he determines what number shall be placed in each class, higher and lower. Instead of expending the amount appropriated he can double, perhaps treble it, and make these salaries a permanent charge upon the Treasury whether you appropriate the money or not.

Mr. ADAMS. I doubt the policy of the proviso; but as members of the committee seem to be agreed upon it, I do not care to discuss it

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask the gentleman whether he does not think that

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask the gentleman whether he does not love a dewould be the law at any rate?
Mr. ADAMS. The gentleman seems to think the Postmaster-General would at the beginning of the year pay the clerks to perform the service of the country regardless of a deficiency in the appropriation; because, as the gentleman says, he could come back here and ask Congress to supply that deficiency which was found to exist. The gentleman from Maine and myself think technically he might do so, but we know that he would not because the Postmaster-General does not love a dethat he would not, because the Postmaster-General does not love a deficiency any more than the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BLOUNT. I yield now to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

CANNON

Mr. ADAMS. I wish to discuss my colleague's amendment when it comes up.

Mr. CANNON. I wish to say, in all kindness, I made this amendment to increase the amount by $300,000 for the reason that the chief of the salary and allowance division reported to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, as I learn from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM], that this classification would require for the next fiscal year $300,000 more than was recommended in the bill. And I wish to give notice, if this legislation is to be added, I propose to walk up and pay the bill. If you refuse to pay the bill, then I am against the legislation. I am ready to vote. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. BLOUNT. I have a word to say. I regret very much the statements of any officer of the Government, unwritten, should be introduced into this debate. As I am on the floor I will make some reference to it myself. When this estimate of $600,000, a most abnormal increase, was proposed by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads the chief of the salary and allowance division was sent for to come to the committee-room, and he was asked why he had made this extraordinary increase. His answer was that it was because we intended to classify the clerks. That was the reason distinctly given.

I am furnished with a statement from an official paper subsequently, in which he proposes to make it $300,000 additional. Now, I have shown to the House you can increase salaries of 5,559 clerks in first-class offices and 1,863 clerks in second-class offices on what they are paid now and bring down the amount proposed in the gentleman's amendment to the extent of $980,000. If that be true, then the argument is that the officer upon whom we relied for his statement was extravagant there and extravagant here.

I am persuaded, sir, that we have given a liberal estimate to the incoming administration for clerks in post-offices of the country. I am not of those who for any partisan advantage would cripple the postal service of the United States. This bill does not disclose any such spirit in any branch of the service.

The amendment of the gentleman from Illinois, in my opinion, honestly made after examination of official papers, would be a gross piece of extravagance. If this classification of salaries shall be reasonable and shall result in a large increase, I am just as willing as the gentleman from Illinois to vote the bill; but I am not willing to facilitate legislation of a beneficial nature, as I understand it, which is simply in behalf of enormous extravagance. I trust the House will not put on this amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. If the amendment of my colleague is before the committee, or is to be so regarded, I wish to say something about it. The question whether the amount in this bill is sufficient for the needs of the service may depend somewhat as to whether the postal service in the Northwest is to be neglected as it has been for a series of years. I want to put in the RECORD a statement which I have secured since I spoke on the subject last week, showing the business of the post-office at Chicago compared with that of other first-class post-offices in the country; and I now ask unanimous consent of the House that it may be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered. The statement is as follows:

Mr. ADAMS. This statement, Mr. Chairman, shows that the Chicago post-office has not been put on an equality with the post-offices in the other large cities of the country for a series of years, and I am not blaming anybody for it, but simply expressing regret, and am doing what I can to secure a change.

Gentlemen will remember that a very large part of the increase of the population of the United States takes place west of that city, and that that city is the post-office center of an enormous and rapidly growing that city is the post-once center of an enormous and rapidly growing section of the country. This reason—

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I have not been following the gentleman from Illinois closely, and dislike now to interrupt him—

Mr. ADAMS. It is no interruption.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman does not think that this bill fixes the amount of money allowed at the Chicago post-office?

Mr. ADAMS. No, not at all; but as I said the other day, if it is true, as my colleague [Mr. CANNON] thinks, and as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM], on the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads thinks, that the adoption of this classification feature would require an appropriation of $300,000 more than is carried by the bill, I fear that they make that classification on the basis of the existing state of the service, and the existing state of the service in that part of the country I help to represent is one of insufficiency and needs im-

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished chairman of the committee made a statement which, although I do not think it was purposely intended, did signify to the House that I gave utterance or expression to my friend from Illinois of the language of a confidential communication to our committee

Mr. BLOUNT. Oh; no; not at all.
Mr. BINGHAM. That is sufficient.
Mr. BLOUNT. The only idea was that there was a subcommittee in which the gentleman made the statement. I regretted it because that statement was in conflict with the statement made here, and it was necessary to bring it up, which I did not care to do.

Mr. BINGHAM. The proposition contained in the increase of $600,-000 shown by the committee, together with the $300,000 suggested by the gentleman from Illinois, simply presents itself to the House in this way: The Department entreats the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, in recognition of the growth of the service and the limited compensation paid the clerical force in the service-entreats and recommends an increase of $600,000, which will meet the demands of the gentleman from Illinois—from Chicago.

Mr. ADAMS. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania tell me what he thinks my demands are?

Mr. BINGHAM. A recognition of the growth of the service. Mr. ADAMS. That is it; the growth of the service at Chicago.

Mr. ADAMS. That is it; the growth of the service at Chicago.
Mr. BINGHAM. I do not know specifically at Chicago.
Mr. ADAMS. That is what I am referring to.
Mr. BINGHAM. But I speak of the great West generally. We did not take up specifically the different cities of the country. That is done by the Department itself. But in the estimates made to Congress they give us only the sum total.
Mr. ADAMS. True. But I will ask the gentleman whether it does not follow, when the new Postmaster-General is to run the postal service for the people of the United States on an insufficient appropriation.

for the people of the United States on an insufficient appropriation, the city of Chicago and every other city in the United States will be considerably affected by the total sum appropriated?

Mr. BINGHAM. That is correct.

Mr. ADAMS. Exactly, and that is the point I was making.
Mr. BINGHAM. And for that reason I say, recognizing the growth and development of the service, the committee have increased this amount $600,000 over and above what it has been for any preceding

But I want to go a step further. That $600,000 is given in recognition of the development and growth of the service, together with the well-known fact that the clerical force in the first and second class of-fices have heretofore been poorly paid. Now take the next step. The chairman of the committee makes the statement in the report that $300,000, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, is necessary to carry out the details of the legislation incorporated in the bill covering the clerical force of the first and second class offices.

With this classification?

Mr. BINGHAM. With this classification. That is the simple proposition for the House to consider. Now, if the House believes that $600,000 will be sufficient, in recognition of the growth of the service and recognition of the legislation carried in the bill, all right, let them so vote. But if the House believes that the $600,000 as recommended by your Postmaster-General, together with the $300,000 as stated by the same official for the carrying out of this recommended legislation is necessary, then the vote should be for the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois.

Will the gentleman permit me to ask him this ques-Mr. ADAMS. tion, because he is very familiar with the post-office business, perhaps as much as any gentleman on the floor? In the increase of $600,000, did the Department or the committee take into consideration the fact, for it is a fact to me, that in that particular city and in that particular part of the country there has not been adequate service in the past for the lack of adequate appropriations?

Mr. BINGHAM. The committee took up no special city or special section. We could not do that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will say this, Mr. Chairman, that in the making up of the estimate the report disclosed the fact that there was a large increase in the receipts at Chicago and in quite a number of first-class offices, and upon that an increase was made in the allowance.

Mr. ADAMS. If the gentleman will allow me a moment, I will say that the other day he spoke of an increase of 7 per cent. or something like that.

Mr. BLOUNT. That did not relate to the Chicago office.
Mr. ADAMS. Now, I suppose that is the increase for the whole country, and I feared that we should suffer in a part of the country where the percentage of increase has been very rapid, running from 17, where the percentage of the state of the sta

The committee informally rose to receive a message from the Senate,

Mr. McCREARY in the chair.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate insisted upon its amendments, disagreed to by the House, to the bill (H. R. 11658) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the House, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. ALLISON, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. GORMAN.

The message also announced that it insisted upon its amendments, disagreed to by the House, to the bill (H. R. 11917) making appropria-tions for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the House, and had appointed as conferees on its part Mr. DAWES, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. GORMAN.

It also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following title; in which concurrence was asked:

A bill (S. 3944) granting a pension to Juliet Opie H. Ayres; and A bill (S. 3560) for the relief of William S. Rosecrans.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the House of the following titles:

well;
A bill (H. R. 12303) granting a pension to Ester Gaven; and
A bill (H. R. 12506) granting an increase of pension to Patrick Geraghty.

The committee then resumed its session.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported-ayes 69, noes 47.

Mr. BLOUNT. I still insist upon the point of no quorum; but as there are not, in my opinion, a sufficient number of members present to pass a bill carrying an appropriation of sixty-six millions, I will move that the committee rise.

Mr. KILGORE. I make the point of order that that is not in order. The rule laid down is that when the Committee of the Whole finds itself without a quorum the Chairman shall cause the roll to be called and report the absentees to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The present occupant of the chair thinks that it is in order to move at this time that the committee rise.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. DOCKERY having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. TURNER, of Georgia, reported that the Committee of the Whole had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 12490) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and had come to no resolution thereon.

ADMISSION OF NEW MEXICO.

Mr. JOSEPH, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. 12592) to enable the people of New Mexico to form a constitution and State government, and to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the Territories, and ordered to be printed.

FOURTH OF JULY CLAIMS.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 12384) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Pending objection, I would like to inquire of the gentleman in charge of this bill how many claims there are and what the aggregate amount appropriated?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I do not remember the number of the claims. The amount is about $30,000. There is no legislation in the bill. It is supposed to be the last one of these 4th of July claims bills that will ever be presented to Congress. The one preceding this carried about $200,000, but this carries only about $30,000. The reading of the bill will give no information, as it simply contains the names of the parties and the amounts allowed to each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I think the first reading of the bill may well be dispensed with, but it will not take long to read the bill, and before we act upon it I think it had better be read. It is rather too early in the session to begin passing bills without reading them.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. I have no objection to the bill being read, but there will be no information given by the reading.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Cl The Clerk proceeded to read the bill. The Clerk will report the bill.

Mr. ROWELL (before the completion of the reading). Mr. Speaker, if this is the 4th of July bill, so called, I think we may as well consider it without reading, and I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. BUCHANAN, That request relates, I suppose, simply to the names and amounts. Any general provisions which may be contained in the bill ought to be read.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. The names and amounts are all there is of it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised that this bill contains only the names of the claimants and amounts appropriated to them, respectively.

Mr. HOLMAN. Are there no additional sections?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. There is no legislation at all in the bill.

There is one amendment, including a claim which was sent to the committee after the others had been received, and which we have added to the bill as an amendment.

Mr. ROWELL. There are no claims included in the bill, as I understand, except those that have been adjudicated by the accounting officers of the Treasury.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. None.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request that the reading of the bill be dispensed with?

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that that amendment be reported first. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the bill by adding the following: "To Edward Fitzgerald, of Little Rock, Ark., $17,385."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROWELL] that the further reading of this bill be dispensed with?

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to inquire of the gentleman from Kentucky when the item contained in that amendment was received by the committee?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. That item was referred to the Quarter-master-General by an act passed at the first session of the Fiftieth Congress and was examined by him as other claims of a similar character have been, and was reported back. The Secretary of the Treasury sent it with a letter supplemental to the letter transmitting the other claims, and when the committee received it they included it in the bill with the others

Mr. HOLMAN. Can my friend state what the original claim was for?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. Edward Fitzgerald is a Catholic priest, in whom the property of the Catholic church in Little Rock is vested, and the claim was for the use of that property during the war. was a bill passed at the first session of the Fiftieth Congress referring the claim to the Quartermaster-General for investigation and report, as other claims have been examined and reported upon under the act.

Mr. HOLMAN. And the Quartermaster-General recommends the allowance of this sum?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. He does.
Mr. HOLMAN. And the claim comes through the regular official channels?

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. It comes through the regular channels like the others, and the committee have attached it to the bill as an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. It went to the Third Auditor?
Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. It has gone through the regular channels

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with?

There was no objection.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky, moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment House bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 3766) for the relief of William Pfaender; and A bill (H. R. 11871) for the relief of Hardin County, Kentucky. The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, bills of the following titles; requested a conference with the House on said bills and amendments; and had appointed conferees on the part of the Senate as indicated, respectively:

A bill (H. R. 717) granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Maulding—conferees, Mr. Sawyer, Mr. Davis, and Mr. Turpie.

A bill (H. R. 3721) authorizing the President to appoint William English an officer in the regular Army of the United States—conferees, Mr. Davis, Mr. Manderson, and Mr. Hampton.

A bill (H. R. 9674) to regulate the course at the Naval Academy—conferees, Mr. Campon, Mr. Champton, and Mr. Plackerson.

conferees, Mr. CAMERON, Mr. CHANDLER, and Mr. BLACKBURN.

A bill (H. R. 11777) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith,
Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs in the State of Arkansas—conferees, Mr. Dawes, Mr. Platt, and Mr. Jones of Arkansas.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill (S. 3877) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the House now take a recess until half past 7 o'clock.

I hope the gentleman will not insist on that motion. Mr. BOWDEN. There has already been one request for unanimous consent granted on the other side.

Mr. TAULBEE. I hope the gentleman from Georgia will withdraw his demand until I can present a bill which I wish to have passed.

Mr. ENLOE. I would like to make a statement. [Cries of "Regular order!"

Mr. BLOUNT. I withdraw my motion.

STEAMER SCYTHIAN.

Mr. BOWDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 9081) to authorize an American register to be issued for the screw steel steamer Scythian, and that the bill be now considered and passed.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to permit the British screw steel steamer, called the "Seythian," of Glasgow, Scotland, of the burden of 240 tons, to be registered as an American vessel by and in the name of "The Baker Salvage Company," of Norfolk, Va., upon the submission to the Secretary of the Treasury aforesaid of satisfactory evidence:

First. That "The Baker Salvage Company" aforesaid is an American organization, with the principal office in Norfolk County, Virginia.

Second. That it has been duly incorporated by the Legislature of the State of Virginia.

Second. That is has been day more the bona fide owner of the said steamer Virginia.

Third. That, by purchase, it has become the bona fide owner of the said steamer Scythian, her boilers, engines, machinery, tackle, and apparel.

Fourth. That said purchase was made to enable "The Baker Salvage Company" aforesaid to extend its wrecking business and salvage operations along the Atlantic coast of the United States and in the Gulf of Mexico.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was read, as follows:

Add to the bill these words:
"Provided, That said vessel shall in no wise be used in the foreign or coast wise carrying trade."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. RANDALL. Let the report be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, reserving the right to object, calls for the reading of the report.

Mr. TAULBEE. That will defeat the bill, as the time is so short before the recess.

The Clerk proceeded to read the following report, by Mr. DUNN:

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9081) to authorize an American register to be issued for the screw steel steamer Scythian, have considered the same, and report it back with an amendment.

The Baker Salvage Company, of Norfolk, Va., is a wrecking company chartered under the laws of the State of Virginia, and operating mainly in foreign waters.

waters.

The British steam-ship Silverdale, being stranded off St. Domingo with a valuable cargo of iron for the Panama Railroad Company, the company sent their wrecking steamer the Resolute to her rescue, and the Resolute foundered in a gale on her way there.

The company endeavored to charter or purchase a wrecking steamer to enable them to comply with their contract, but a suitable vessel could not be procured in the United States, and they were therefore, to meet the exigency compelled to go abroad to purchase a suitable steamer. The steamer Scythian was secured in Glasgow, and the company being a distinctively American company and destring to carry on their operations, which are largely in foreign waters, under the American flag, ask that an American register be authorized for said steamship.

ship.

The facts in the case are as stated in the following letter from Charles Sharp, esq., to Hon. G. E. BOWDEN, of Virginia:

"LAW OFFICES OF SHARP & HUGHES,

"Had to charter in Scotland, as there was no wrecking steamer for sale in the United States.

"The charter-party credits the charter money or hire and charges interest on purchase-money instead, provided salvage company shall buy the Scythian, now on her way to the Gulf.

"This will be a great saving, but it can not be made unless Congress will very soon (for it is a short charter) allow the Scythian to be registered if so purchased.

"Remember, she is not to be in the carrying trade, generally operating in the Gulf, but must sometimes be used in towing the prizes into American (salvage) ports per United States court award of salvage.

"Remember, she is not to be in the carrying trade, generally operating in the Gulf, but must sometimes be used in towing the prizes into American (salvage) ports per United States court award of salvage.

"Even now salvage is deemed a reward for services of American mechanics, and therefore counting at Treasury Department as part of the repairs of a salvored vessel, foreign build, claiming registration, when purchased by American citizens at admiralty (salvage) sale.

"That analogy is perfect, applying well to case of foreign-built salvor steamers, to be used in the interest of humanity and commerce.

"Press these points:

"1. No such vessel for sale in America.

"2. Requires six months to build.

"3. Salvage service can not wait so long.

"4. Much money will be saved by crediting the hire on the purchase.

"5. Salvor vessel operating mainly in foreign waters.

"6. They are American seamen and mechanics.

"7. An industry to be protected by United States.

"8. Only casually used in American waters.

"9. And then only to relieve distress.

"10. Unless permission is granted, salvors may have to use her exclusively in foreign waters; they can not afford to give her up and lose the money already paid for hire.

"11. Not at all used in the carrying trade or in the coasting trade.

"12. A mere exception to the general (navigation) law, prompted by humanity and by tenderness to American wreckers.

"Will this do? You will have far more influence, then, than I.

"Yours, very truly,

"Hon, G. E. Bowden, M. C."

"CHARLES SHARP.

"Hon. G. E. Bowden, M. C." In view of these facts and the peculiar circumstances of the case, the commit-tee recommend the passage of the bill with an amendment prohibiting the use of the vessel, while so registered, in the foreign or coastwise carrying trade, by adding at the end of the bill the proviso there written.

Mr. FARQUHAR (before the reading of the report was concluded) said: I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of this report be dispensed with. This bill has been considered by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and has received their approval.

There being no objection, the further reading of the report was dispensed with; and the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and

Mr. BOWDEN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the

The latter motion was agreed to.

TARIFF ON HAT TRIMMINGS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McAdoo] offers a resolution for reference to the Committee on Ways and Means. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There being no objection, the following resolution was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means:

Whereas there is pending before this House a joint resolution to amend the tariff laws with relation to the silk schedule as it affects hat trimmings; and Whereas the Treasury Department and the legal representatives of the Government have insisted in the courts, and do still insist, that there is no necessity for a change of the statute: Therefore,

Be it resolved. That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General be directed to send to this House the facts and the law in the cases now pending in the United States courts with reference to the duty on said hat trimmings as they affect the existing silk schedule, and whether any compromise of said cases is contemplated by them.

The SPEAKER was tempore. This being Eviden and the hour of 5

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This being Friday, and the hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, the House, in accordance with its standing order, takes a recess until half past 7 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at half past 7 o'clock p. m., and was called to order by Mr. McMILLIN as Speaker pro tempore.

The Clerk read the following:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 15, 1889. Hon, Benton McMillin is hereby designated to preside at the session of the House this evening. JOHN G. CARLISLE, Speaker.

Hon. JOHN B. CLARK, Clerk.

ARMY NURSES.

Mr. MATSON. The bill (S. 373) for the relief of women enrolled as army nurses is erroneously on the Private Calendar. It is a public bill and ought to be on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. I ask that the correction be made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the bill will be placed on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. JACKSON addressed the House on the general subject of pension legislation, and, by unanimous consent, was granted permission to extend his remarks in the RECORD. He withholds them for revision. [See Appendix.]

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the special order.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, Mr. DOCKERY in the chair.

Mr. FINLEY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill increasing the pension of General Frank Wolford from $30 to $50 a month.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?
Mr. LANE. I call for the regular order.
Mr. FINLEY. Very well; then you will not pass another bill here to-night.

Mr. MACDONALD. When a request similar to this was made on a previous evening the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FINLEY] was the first man to object

Mr. FINLEY. Other gentlemen have obtained unanimous consent without my objection.

JOHN LIMERIC.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 5390) granting a pension to John Limeric.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Limeric, late of the Sixth Ohio

The report (by Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio) is as follows:

The report (by Mr. THOMPSON, of Ohio) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R, 5390) for the relief of John Limeric, make the following report:

The claimant was a private in the Sixth Ohio Independent Battery, commanded by Captain Beardsley. Claimant enlisted in October, 1861, and was honorably discharged. Claimant makes oath that while on duty, unloading baled hay from a barge, and while lifting the hay and placing it on the dock, he received a rupture; that Lieut, O. H. Payn, who was superintending the work, ordered him to his quarters for that injury so received as aforesaid; and that he suffered thereafter by reason of the rupture, and has continued to suffer up to the present time from that rupture, and that he is disabled thereby.

Claimant further makes oath that he was sent to the barracks at Louisville, Ky.; remained there one day and night, then went to a private house, 2 miles out of town, used as a hospital; thence to ward 12, Camp Denison, Ohio; from there was discharged by reason of a surgeon's certificate of disability.

The examing surgeon of the Pension Bureau says in his certificate:

"Judging from his present'condition, and from the evidence before me, it is my belief that the said disability originated in the service aforesaid in line of duty."

The committee recommend that the bill do pass.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the bill will be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass. Mr. FINLEY. I object.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I would prefer to withdraw the bill rather than have the point of no quorum raised and defeat the consideration of other measures to-night.

Mr. FINLEY. I have said that I would not allow any bill to pass to-night unless consideration is given to the one that I sought to call up pensioning General Wolford.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the question to the committee The question is, Shall the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation?

Mr. FINLEY. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is for the committee to determine. The question was taken; and the Chairman decided that the motion had been agreed to.

Mr. FINLEY. I do not understand, Mr. Chairman, when I object, how this bill could be laid aside.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair announced that the question would be submitted to the committee; the vote was taken, and no gentleman called for a division. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. FINLEY. Very well; let it go, but this will be the only one. So, no further count being demanded, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

BENNETT COOPER.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi, called up the bill (H. R. 12403) granting a pension to Bennett Cooper.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Bennett Cooper, who served in Captain Campbell's company, from the State of Alabama, Indian war, 1836, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The report (by Mr. BLISS) is as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12403) granting a pension to Bennett Cooper, have considered the same, and report as follows:

The claimant served in the Florida war, in Captain Campbell's company, from the State of Alabama, from March 1 to June 1, 1836. He was honorably discharged therefrom and received a land warrant in 1834. He is seventy-five years of age, in feeble health, and not able to work.

Your committee believe he should have a service pension, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill, amended by changing the word "Campbell's," in line 5, to "Cammel's," the latter being the correct manner of spelling the captain's name.

The amendment recommended by the committee was adopted. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside, as amended, to be reported to the House with a favorable recommenda-

Mr. FINLEY. I demand a division.

The committee divided; and there were-ayes 51, noes 5.

That is no quorum, I believe. Mr. FINLEY.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. FINLEY. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Baker] says that when his name is reached he will call up the bill to which I referred, for consideration. That being the case, I will withdraw further objection.

So, no further count being demanded, the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do

NEWTON C. RIDENOUR.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa, called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 12273) for the relief of Newton C. Ridenour.

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas by an error committed by the adjudicating officers of the Pension Bureau Newton C. Ridenour, late second lieutenant Company P. Twenty-third Regiment Iowa Infantry, was not placed on the pension-roll as a second lieutenant upon the allowance of a pension to him; and

Whereas by act of Congress a bill was passed for his relief in this regard, and to rate him in accordance with said rank and with the intention only of correcting this error, but which contained the words that it should "be in lieu of all other pensions;" and

Whereas he now claims to be entitled to an increase of pension on account of disabilities, for which he was originally pensioned, and to pension for additional disabilities; but the Pension Bureau and the Department of the Interior construe the language quoted of the act of Congress mentioned as barring his rights thereto, regardless of the merits: Therefore,

Bettenacted, etc., That said act of Congress for the relief of said Newton C. Ridenour shall be construed as only correcting the error of the adjudicating officers of the Pension Bureau as to the rank of said Ridenour and his proper rating by reason thereof, and that his right to increase of pension and to additional pension for other disabilities shall not be affected thereby.

The report (by Mr. SPOONER) is as follows:

The report (by Mr. SPOONER) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12273) for the relief of Newton C. Ridenour, respectfully report that the facts in the case are correctly set forth in the preambles to the bill. Upon the passage of the act of Congress approved June 3, 1884, which was manifestly only for the purpose of making the pension rate according to rank, the words that it should "be in lieu of all other pensions" were added. Thereafter, when the pensioner made a claim for increase on account of alleged increased disability, the same was rejected, without regard to the actual merits of the claim, and upon the ground that the words quoted in the special act barred the right to such increase. Upon appeal to the Secretary of the Interior this ruling was affirmed, and the following from the opinion of Hon. H. L. Muldrow, First Assistant Secretary, shows the view taken of the matter:

"The appellant, who is receiving a pension of $7.50 per month for varicocele of left side, is pensioned as a second lieutenant under special act of Congress approved June 3, 1884, which provides that said allowance shall be in lieu of all other pensions.

"September 27, 1886, he filed an application for increase based on the original disability, and rheumatism. * * Subsequently so much of this claim as related to the pensioner's disability was rejected, * * * on the ground that the appellant was then being paid the full amount therefor to which he was lawfully entitled, and that part thereof which embraced rheumatism was rejected on the ground that under the provisions of said Congressional enactment his right to an additional pension was barred. * * * The question involved is the construction of a private act which provides, * * * (quoting bill with part quoted above).

"While it may be true, as claimed by appellant, that the only question passed upon by Congress was the question of rank, yet the Department is precluded from going back of the plain language of the statute. * * * Claimant's only relief must be obtained from Congress, * * * the power which created the act alone can correct the error."

It is plain that the quoted words in the act and which brought about this result were in fact there by error or without any relevancy to the object of the act itself, and to now give them the effect of barring all claims of the pensioner for an increase of pension, or for additional pension to which he may be entitled, is manifestly unjust and we believe entirely out of any Congressional intention in passing the act.

The present bill simply removes the effect of this construction and leaves the pensioner to the laws as they now exist, with simply the right to avail himself of them.

Your committee therefore report the bill favorably, with the recommendation

Your committee therefore report the bill favorably, with the recommendation

Mr. ANDERSON, of Iowa. I move to amend the bill by striking out the initial letter "P," in the first preamble, and inserting "F." The motion was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY P. MYERS.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi. I ask consideration of the bill (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mary P. Myers.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacled, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary P. Myers, widow of David Myers, late a private in Captain Whitmore's company, Colonel Goodwin's regiment of Mounted Volunteers, in Florida war.

The report (by Mr. BLISS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mary P. Myers, have considered the same, and report as follows: The claimant is the widow of David Myers, who was a private in Captain Whitmore's company, Colonel Goodwin's regiment of Mounted Volunteers, in the Florida war with the Seminole Indians. The soldier volunteered at Orangeburgh Court-House, S. C., in February, 1836, and was honorably discharged in May following, at Tampa Bay, Florida.

The soldier died in August last, leaving surviving him a widow, the claimant, now seventy-four years of age, and in very poor and needy circumstances. This committee have, at the present session, reported favorably a service pension bill to pension the surviving soldiers of the Indian wars from 1832 to 1842, and the widows of such soldiers (Report No. 1194, bill H. R. 8594). This claimant would become a beneficiary under said bill.

Your committee are of the pinion the claimant should have a service pension. This bill will grant her $12 per month. Its passage is therefore recommended.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

LUCINDA MEWMAN.

Mr. ANDERSON, of Illinois, called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 12491) granting a pension to Lucinda Mewman.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lucinda Mewman, of Payson, Ill., daughter of John Mewman, late private of Company K, Seventy-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 a month.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Lane) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12491) granting a pension to Lucinda Mewman, submit the following report:

This applicant for pension is the sister of John W. Mewman, late of Company K, Seventy-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, who was killed in the battle of Kenesaw Mountain. A pension was granted to the mother of the soldier, and continued until the death of the old lady last year. The applicant lived with her mother and was ky bt by her during her life. Since then she has lived with her sister, who earns a living as seamstress. The affidavits of neighbors and physicians show that the applicant, Lucinda Mewman, is so weak-minded that she can not earn a living, but has to be watched and taken care of on account of mental weakness.

In view of the fact that neither the applicant nor her sister have any property of any value, and that the applicant can not earn a living herself, but has to be taken care of, your committee recommend the allowance of a pension at the rate of $18 per month.

The committee recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments:

ments: Insert in line 6, after the word John, the letter "W," and by striking out in line 6 the word "daughter" and inserting the word "sister," and by striking out in line 9 the word "twelve" and inserting the word "eighteen."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN B. COVERT.

Mr. ATKINSON called up for consideration the bill (S. 2314) granting a pension to John B. Covert.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John B. Covert, late a private in Company B, One hundred and forty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volun

The report (by Mr. LYNCH) was read as follows:

The report (by Mr. LYNCH) was read as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2314) granting a pension to John B. Covert, have had the same under consideration and beg leave to report:

The claimant under the bill, late of Company B. One hundred and forty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, filed a declaration for pension on account of rheumatism contracted in service, which was rejected on the ground that the evidence adduced fails to show that the alleged disease originated in the service or existed at date of discharge.

The records in the case show that ten witnesses, comprising doctors, relatives, neighbors, and acquaintances, testify to claimant's soundness before enlistment; that claimant and two comrades testify to rheumatism in service and treatment therefor; that while the hospital records do not show treatment for the specific disease alleged, they do show repeated attacks of sickness, and in one case specify inflammation of the knee-joint; that the claimant returned from service complaining of his disease, and that within ten days thereafter he was compelled to take his bed, and was treated for rheumatism, and that six witnesses, including physicians, furnish testimony which amounts to continuous disability since discharge.

While There is lacking in the case evidence of the highest class, there appears to be enough to warrant the conclusion that there is merit in the claim, and that the bill should be reported favorably and with a recommendation that it do pass, which is hereby done.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pas

Mr. MATSON. Mr. Chairman, this is a Senate bill, and itreminds me of a suggestion I desired to make to the House. It is that gentlemen having Senate bills, as well as House bills, on the Calendar ought, if possible, give preference to the Senate bills for consideration, because there is a possibility at least of their becoming laws, whereas the passage of House bills at this late date in the session is almost farcical, there being but little hope of their becoming laws.

JESSIE ISHERWOOD.

Mr. BACON called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 11184) for the relief of Jessie Isherwood.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Jessie Isherwood, daughter of James R. Isherwood, deceased, late private Company G, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $18 per

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. K. 11184) for the relief of Jessie Isherwood, submit the following report:
Jessie Isherwood is the daughter of James R. Isherwood, late private Company G, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery, who, as shown by his medical recommendations of the company G, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery, who, as shown by his medical recommendations.

ord, died in hospital at Washington, D. C., June 28, 1884, of wounds received June 18, 1884, in battle before Petersburgh, Va. She is now about twenty-eight years of age. Her mother is dead and she is dependent on charity for support. The testimony filed with the committee shows that she is now and has long been an imbecile, of feeble body, and unable to do any work. Up to her sixteenth year she was on the pension-rolls.

We recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

FRANK WOLFORD.

Mr. BAKER, of New York, called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 12062) granting an increase of pension to Frank L. Wolford.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frank L. Wolford, late colonel of the First Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and grant him a pension of $70 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The report (by Mr. HUNTER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Hunter) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12062) granting an increase pension to Frank Wolford, have considered the same, and submit the following report:

The claimant was colonel of the First Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and was discharged March 24, 1804, on account of gunshot wound of left hip and right leg. He is now drawing a pension of $30 per month, and his application for rerating and increased disabilities, resulting from his services in the Army, has been rejected in the Pension Office on the ground that under existing laws he can not receive a higher rating for the injuries admitted to have been incurred in the Army and in line of duty.

In his application for increase and rerating he alleges that he received a gunshot wound of left hip at Lebanon, Ky., May 5, 1862, causing a permanent fall of the lower bowels: that he received a wound of right leg above the hip at Monticello, Ky., and bronchitis contracted while in the service on the same day, by getting wet after riding 12 miles very fast in the rain, after which pneumonia set in, and that the wound of right leg was received in a fight with the rebels under Pegram, Monticello, Ky., June 10, 1863.

Captain Sweeny testifies:

"That claimant received a gunshot wound in left hip and lower bowels at Lebanon, Ky., in action; that he was by his side when wounded; that in said fight claimant was captured by the enemy and taken about 12 miles, when his men following recaptured him; Wolford's horse was killed and he was left in the road exposed to rain for several hours, thus contracting bronchitis."

Lieut Col. Silas Adams testifies the same as Captain Sweeny. Surgeon Rippe testifies that he treated claimant for gunshot wound of left hip and lower bowels in May, 1862, and that elaimant from exposure about that time contracted pneumonia and bronchitis. Assistant Surgeon Huffman testifies substantially to the same state of facts.

The medical board at Columbia, Ky., Novemb

The medical board at Columbia, Ky., November, 1887, gives his condition at that time as follows:

"Two gunshot wounds left hip, one passing into and through lower portion of abdominal cavity and coming out near juncture of ileum and sacrum, 6 inches from entrance wound. Second, entering lower edge of abdomen, striking body of pubis, imbedding itself in bone; ball extracted from entrance wound; cicatrices of former tender, adherent, and dragging; latter tender, inflamed, open, and discharging offensive pus. Shell and gunshot wounds of right leg, carrying away a considerable portion of tibla. Left leg from knee to ankle discolored, indicating recent discharge of pus; part very much swollen."

In view of the foregoing, your committee feel that this is a meritorious claim, and report back the bill with a favorable recommendation.

Amend the title and body of the bill by striking out the letter "L;" so that it shall read as follows: "A bill granting an increase pension to Frank Wolford," and crase the word "seventy," after the word "of," in seventh line, and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

CHARLOTTE T. ALDERMAN.

Mr. BAKER, of Illinois, called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 2439) granting a pension to Charlotte T. Alderman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charlotte T. Alderman, widow of James Alderman, who was a private in Company E, Forty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. LANE) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Lane) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred a bill granting a pension to Charlotte T. Alderman, have examined the same, and report:

This a bill to place the name of Charlotte T. Alderman, widow of James Alderman, who was a private in Company E. Forty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteers, on the pension-roll, subject to the usual restrictions. The soldier was granted a pension from June 17, 1855, to March 31, 1873, the date of his death. The Pension Office denies the widow relief on the ground that the soldier's death was not due to his service. There was an appeal, and the Secretary of the Interior sustained the bureau decision, and this action is based solely on the opinion of the medical referee. A bill for the widow's relief was introduced in a previous Congress and passed by the Senate, but was not reached by the House. The simple and single question now to decide is, did the soldier die in consequence of his wounds?

The soldier had three severe wounds. A gunshot wound of left shoulder, fracturing left scapula; a gunshot wound of left side, shattering a rib below the arm going backward, issued near the spine. A piece of shell struck him on the right temple, causing dizziness and injuring the optic nerve. The Pension Office official doctors admit that these wounds totally incapacitated him for labor. Nevertheless he was allowed only $\frac{3}{2}$ a month. The testimony of the physicians who attended him is that he died of chronic pneumonia, resulting in abscess of the left lung. Dr. Leavens, the doctor who treated him after his discharge and until his death, as he makes affidavit, avers that the ball which entered his left side lodged in the pleural cavity, and that, in his opinion, it was by constant irritation of the external surface of the lung by the lodged missile that a chronic form of pneumonia, resulting in abscess of the lung, was produced.

Several special examinations were made to show that the soldier's death was duced

Several special examinations were made to show that the soldier's death was caused by erysipelas and not by his wounds. To this end the purpose of the examiner seems to have been to depreciate Dr. Leavens, who says the wounds were the death cause, and to magnify Dr. Gordon, who says he died of erysipewere the death cause, and to magnify Dr. Gordon, who says he died of erysipelas.

The committee have no means of knowing Dr. Gordon, who was never investigated in the interest of the claimant, as was Dr. Leavens; nor can they properly estimate the opinion of the special examiner, who says the latter "is not possessed of a superfluity of medical lore."

Dr. Leavens is a graduate of the Medical College of Cincinnatt, and the Dr. Gordon referred to is probably an educated physician. The two may differ honestly and in accordance with the habit conceded to the profession; but, after all, there is not a wide divergency of opinion between them. Dr. Leavens says the man died of lung disease, which he traces to his wounds; not he swears he heard Dr. Gordon say he had abscess of the lungs. Dr. Gordon says he died of erysipelas, from which he might have recovered but for the prostration caused by his wounds; but, strange to say, he admits that he did not see the wounds, which the Pension Office board of surgeons pronounced totally disabling, until after death. The neighbors testify of the wounds and of their disabling and fatal character.

It is true Dr. Leavens, under the pressure of the Pension Office examining expert, exhibits some inconsistency between his affidavits and his testimony last delivered; but he finally says his affidavits were based on his own observations, what others intimate with the soldier's case said, and the statements of Dr. Gordon. This soldier was wounded in the service to an extent that disqualified him for any occupation from the time of his discharge until his death. He was covered with wounds, and a great sufferer. To insist that there was no connection between his disabilities and his death is, in the opinion of the committee, a mere quibble. For the committee to decide that the widow is entill d to a pension is in strict accordance with the facts, and it should entitle her to a pension.

The bill is reported favorably, with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

THEODORE WHITE.

Mr. BANKHEAD called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 12540) to increase the pension of Theodore White.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Theodore White, formerly a corporal in Company M, Seventh New York Heavy Artillery Volunteers, and to pay him a pension for disease of lungs, in addition to the pension he now receives for gunstate ward.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The claimant, Theodore White, is now receiving a pension of $4 a month for gunshot wound below the right shoulder.

Application for increase of pension has been denied by the Pension Bureau on the ground that the disease of the lungs, from which the claimant is disabled, can not be admitted as a result of gunshot wound.

There is conclusive testimony that no predisposition to lung disease has ever existed in claimant's family; also that he was in good health before receiving the wound, and that ever since he has been, at intervals, subject to hemorrhages. Your committee in determining the merits of the case have given great weight to sworn statements of Dr. Albert Vander Veer and Dr. Samuel B. Ward, both of Albany, N. Y. These gentlemen stand very high in the profession, and have recently examined the claimant.

Dr. Vander Veer, after stating in detail the particulars of the examination made by him, says: "From the present appearance of the wound it is reasonable to believe that the ball entered the cavity of the chest;" also, "That it is reasonable to believe that his present ill health is but the outcome of his gunshot wound."

Dr. Ward states in his affidavit: "The supposition that the ball did not penetrate the left lung is surrounded by very great difficulties." Dr. Ward also states "that in 1879 the claimant again had a severe hemorrhage, in the course of which a piece of clothing was discharged," and Dr. Ward, in concluding his sworn statement, says, "This is a history and a condition entirely in harmony with a supposed wound of the lung and different from those of any lung disease."

Your committee, in the light of so much testimony favoring the claimant, and considering his disabled condition, deem it proper to make a favorable report. They recommend that the bill pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

TRENE RUCKER SHERIDAN.

Mr. BINGHAM called up for consideration the bill (S. 3423) granting pension to Irene Rucker Sheridan, widow of General P. H. Sheridan. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Irene Rucker Sheridan, widow of Philip H. Sheridan, late General of the Army of the United States, and pay her at the rate of $5,500 per year during her natural life, from and after the 5th day of August, 1888.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3423) granting a pension to Irene Rucker Sheridan, widow of General P. H. Sheridan, submit the following report:

A similar bill introduced in the House and referred to this committee was favorably reported during the first session of the Fiftieth Congress.

There has been decided opposition in this committee to these unusually large pensions to widows, but this report is made favorable in this case upon the ground that Congress can not well refuse such action after giving large pensions to others who are less meritorious.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill, with an amendment striking out all after the word "year," in line 5.

Mr. CHEADLE. It will not be passed unless a quorum is present.
Mr. BINGHAM. Then, Mr. Chairman, I would move that this bill follow the form that has heretofore been accepted and adopted, and make the order for its consideration immediately after the reading of the Journal to-morrow, Saturday, February 16, the previous question to be considered as ordered on the the third reading and passage of the bill; and whatever may be agreeable as the time for debate.

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will let the hour be fixed for its consideration next Wednesday morning immediately after the reading of the Journal, and give to the opponents of the bill one hour and twenty minutes for debate, I shall not object.

Mr. BINGHAM. What do you want that length of time for? Mr. CHEADLE. There are more than one desiring to speak in opposition to this bill.

A MEMBER. Let them print.

Mr. CHEADLE. We do not desire to print. I am willing fort he previous question to be ordered on the third reading of the bill with the right to amend, and that the vote shall be taken by yeas and nays.

If that is agreeable I am perfectly willing for that order to be made.

Mr. BINGHAM. As I understand the gentleman in opposition, this is to be immediately after the reading of the Journal on Wednesday.

Why will not the gentleman let it be Tuesday?

Mr. CHEADLE. I am perfectly willing for this bill to be considered by a full House. There are more than one person opposed to the passage of this bill, as the yeas and nays will show, and there are more than one person who will speak in opposition. I trust it will not re quire more than forty-five or fifty minutes' time to discuss the question from the standpoint of those who are opposed to its passage; and I only ask that the previous question shall be considered as ordered with the further provision of the right to amend—to offer one amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. There is no objection to that.

Mr. CHEADLE. And that the vote shall be taken by the yeas and nays, in order that there may be no time lost in getting to a vote.

Mr. BINGHAM. I have no objection to that.
Mr. CUTCHEON. What is the understanding as to the length of time to be allowed for debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the proposition. The Chair understands the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to be that this bill shall be reported to the House with the recommendation that the previous question be ordered upon the third reading and passage of the bill, with the right to offer one amendment, and that debate be allowed to the extent of one hour and twenty minutes by the opposition to the bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. And half an hour for those in favor of it. Will the gentleman accept that?

Mr. CHEADLE. The vote to be taken by yeas and nays.

The CHAIRMAN. And the vote to be taken by yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, there is more business before the House than can be transacted before the 4th of March, and I will not while I am present agree to having any bill carried over from these night sessions with the previous question ordered which compels consideration in the House.

Mr. MATSON. I suggest to my colleague from Indiana [Mr. Cheadle] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILGORE] that this bill can as well be discussed to-night as at any other time.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Mr. MATSON. We have about an average attendance of the House even in the day sessions, and while perhaps there is no quorum here this bill might as well be discussed to-night and let it go over to be voted upon in a day session.

Mr. CHEADLE. I am not prepared to discuss it to-night, and one gentleman who has a speech prepared is not here at all, and his speech relates to the early history of pension legislation and will doubtless be interesting; but I am perfectly willing to let it go over.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is demanded, and the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is objected to. The question, then

NOAH W. YODER.

Mr. BLANCHARD (when his name was called). I call up the bill (H. R. 12542) for the relief of the heirs of Noah W. Yoder.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjudicate the pension claim of Catharine Z. Yoder, late widow of Noah W. Yoder, second lieutenant of Company G, Fifty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteers, as though the death of said officer had been directly chargeable to his military service, and pay to the surviving children of said Noah W. Yoder a pension at the rate provided by the general pension laws, from the date of his death until they severally arrive at the age of sixteen years.

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Yoder) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred House bill No. 12542, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to make the following report:

Lieut. Noah W. Yoder entered the service as second lieutenant of Company G. Fitty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, September 19, 1851, and resigned July 30, 1856, having lost his leg below the knee and sustained a fracture of the left clavicle in consequence of gunshot wounds received at the battle of Stone River. He was pensioned for the amputation of leg and injury to the clavicle and died March 9, 1877. The widow applied for pension June 21, 1877. Her claim was rejected in March, 1878, on the ground that the soldier's death was not the result of his military service. He was a physician in country practice, and his death occurred from drowning while on his way to visit a patient, as will more fully appear in the testimony. The claim was submitted to the Commissioner of Pensions, who, after giving it personal consideration, submitted the same to the Secretary of the Interior with the following communication of transmittal:

"In this case it appears that the officer was pensioned for amputation of leg and injury to clavicle, and was drowned March 9, 1877, while crossing a swollen stream in a buggy on the way to attend a sick patient. The buggy was overturned and the officer and a companion with him were swept down by the current until stopped by a fence, where the companion easily drew himself out of the water, but the officer, by reason of the loss of leg and injury to shoulder, was unable to escape, and was drowned.

The Secretary of the Interior transmitted the Commissioner of Pensions' communication to the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions in the following communication:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, "Washington, February 8, 1889.

"Sie: I have the honor to forward herewith a communication from the Commissioner of Pensions, and a complete record in the pension claim of the widow of Noah W. Yoder, second lieutenant Company G. "House of Representatives."

William Henry Shie testifies that he and the soldier were riding in a buggy, and endeavored to ford a creek which, by reason of rain, had become deeper and more rapid than they expected. The current turned the buggy so that the soldier and affiant were thrown out and carried down the stream to a fence, where affiant, having the use of his arms and legs, got out of the water without much trouble, but the soldier, for the want of the use of his left shoulder and left leg, was unable to get out and was drowned. Affiant believes that if he had had the use of said shoulder and leg he would have been able to get out as easily as affiant did.

Jacob A. Mast, M. D., testifies that the injury to soldier's left shoulder and the loss of his leg rendered him unable to exert and help himself as other men do, and that he believes that if he had had the proper use of said shoulder and leg he would not have been drowned. Affiant examined the body after death.

Peter Goeler and Jacob Kratz testify that the soldier was a man of good health and strong constitution; that he had a large, lucrative practice at the time of his death.

Medical certificates on file show that the soldier's leg was amputated about 4 inches below the knee, and that the wound of the left shoulder affected the strength of the shoulder and lessened the power to use the arm.

He also bore on his person the sears of other flesh wounds; but they caused no disability.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the report.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

WILLIAM S. KELLINGTON.

Mr. BLISS (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (H. R. 8225) for the relief of William S. Kellington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William S. Kellington, late of the Fifth Independent Battery New York Light Artillery.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

Fifth Independent Battery New York Light Artillery.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8225) for the relief of William S. Kellington, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

Kellington enlisted in the Fifth Independent Battery, New York Light Artillery, September 20, 1861, and was discharged therefrom November 7, 1864, His claim for pension on account of blindness and partial deafness has been rejected by the Pension Bureau on the ground that there is no record of the alleged disabilities, and that the evidence presented by a special examination falls to show the origin or existence of alleged disabilities in service or at discharge.

The claimant alleges that deafness was caused by continuous firing at the battle of Fair Oaks, in 1862; that the first injury to eyes was received on the sixth day of the seven days' fight; that his eyes became again affected in battle at Fredericksburgh, and again from the bursting of his gun at Gettysburgh. He further swears that his eyes became worse in 1864, during his services in the Shenandoah Valley, and at discharge his eye-sight was much impaired; became totally blind in right eye about two years later, and has been totally blind since December, 1885.

From the report of the special examiner the committee find the following facts as to the origin of alleged disabilities: Charles B. Wessman, a comrade of good repute, testifies that claimant had some difficulty with his eyes at Fredericksburgh, Va. At the battle of Gettysburgh the gun on which claimant and affiant were stationed bursted, knocking claimant down, after which he always complained of his eyesight and hearing; also remembers that claimant was nearly blind for two or three days while in the Shenandoah Valley, and took care of him; knows that claimant was deaf at discharge.

Comrade John Adlington also testifies to the bursting of the gun at Gettysburgh, and claimant's company repo

The most searching investigation failed to disclose any evidence adverse to the claim, while special medical examination clearly showed that the disease of eyes and ears have no connection whatever with any disease probably due to vicious habits.

of eyes and ears have no connection whatever with any disease probably due to vicious habits.

The special examiner, in submitting his report to the Pension Bureau, says:

"I do not think the evidence showing total blindness as due to the service strong enough to warrant the admission of the claim, and it is too strong to reject it. If this case was one for damages against an individual and before a jury. I think the jury would disagree. If before a jury as a case against the Government, the jury would find for the plaintiff."

The claimant is shown by the evidence to have entered the service of the United States a sound and healthy man. The arm of the service in which he was employed affords ample opportunities for the incurrence of disabilities from which this unfortunate claimant now suffers. He served more than three years and was engaged in many of the hardest fights of the war. His eyesight and hearing is shown by uncontroverted testimony to have been injured in service and line of duty. He may not have taken sufficient precaution after discharge to prevent the serious results now shown. But, unaware of the threatening danger, he labored on to the best of his ability to support his wife and seven helpiess children, until finally the disease became incurable.

Your committee believe this to be a very meritorious case, and deplore the inability of the Pension Office to grant a pension under the general law upon what we deem to be almost conclusive evidence of the incurrence of the disability in the service and line of duty.

For these reasons the accompanying bill is returned, with the recommendation that it do pass; amended, however, by adding after the word "artillery," in line 7, the words "and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month."

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIZABETH PETERSON.

Mr. BOOTHMAN (when his name was reached). I call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 10644) granting a pension to Elizabeth Peterson

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of lilizabeth Peterson, widow of Andrew Peterson, alias Peters, deceased, late of Company F, Sixty-fourth Ohio Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Yoder) was read, as follows:

The beneficiary named in this bill is the widow of Andrew Peterson, alias Peters, late a private in Company F, Sixty-fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteers. The husband died February 6, 1878. Prior to his death he drew a small pension on account of gunshot wound.

The Adjutant-General's records regarding the service of this soldier show that he received a gunshot wound through the breast at the battle of Stone River, December 31, 1862, from the effects of which he was in hospital some four months, when he returned to duty; that at the battle of Rocky Face Ridge, May 9, 1864, he again received another wound, which sent him to the hospital during the remainder of his service; that he was discharged October 26, 1864, having served three full years.

The evidence further shows that he was married to the claimant October 11, 1868, and as a result of the union one child was born October 6, 1869. The widow's claim for pension has been rejected on the ground that the death of the soldier was caused by congestive chills, not the result nor caused by the gunshot wound for which he was pensioned. This conclusion is based upon the opinion of the medical board of the Pension Office. The evidence on file relating to the cause of death is in substance as follows:

Dr. Z. Dresbach says that he was the family physician of Peterson and treated him for three years next prior to his death, and during his last illness; that he found him at this time "sick with congestion of the lungs, which was caused by a gunshot wound in his right lung, which caused inflammation of the lung, the immediate cause of his death, from which he died in about five or six days; "that "during all the time" he treated him he complained of this wound. He further swears that he is "firmly of the opinion" that the soldier never recovered from the wound in the breast, and that it caused his death.

The doctor has given three affidavits in the case and all substantially to the above effect. He is supported in this view by a number of the soldier's neighbors, whose veracity is certified to be good by the postmaster of Spencerville, Ohio, where they reside, and who substantially say that the soldier never was able after his return from the Army to do a full day's work; that he continually complained of the wound in the breast hurting him, and that it caused his death.

It seems apparent to the compatitor from the culture that it caused his death.

It seems apparent to the committee from the evidence that, whatever may be the "book theory" of the cause of death in this case, the fact of the existence of the wound; the soldier's complaint about it while living; the further fact that the soldier died from a disease of the lungs injured by the wound; that he died in middle age; that those who were present at his death and knew him say this wound caused his death; that the attending physician has no doubt upon the subject, and attributes the death to the wound—all these facts lead the committee to give the widow the benefit of the doubt, if any there be, and we therefore report the bill favorably.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN FAGAN.

Mr. BOUND (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan.

The bill was read, as follows.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Seretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Fagan, late of Company H, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves.

The report (by Mr. LYNCH) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. LYNCH) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan, have had the same under consideration, and respectfully report as follows:

That the claimant was a private in Company H, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. He enlisted August 25, 1862, and was discharged July 7, 1865, serving nearly three years. The application for pension is based upon disability arising from dropsy of the kidneys, and resultant weakness of the back an 1 spine. The evidence shows that the soldier was engaged in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, and that during the march from Sharpsburgh, Md., to Fredericksburgh, Va., after said battles, he was attacked by dropsy of the kidneys; was sent to the hospital, where he remained some time, when, upon partial recovery, he was transferred to the Invalid Corps, in which he remained, doing hospital duty until he was finally discharged.

The personal friends and near neighbors of the claimant testify, to the number of eight, that he was a person of good health and sound physical condition during the time before the war up to the period of his enlistment, and that since the close of the war he has been much broken in health, weak in the back, not fit for manual labor, frequently under treatment, often in bed, disabled much of the time. The fact that he had "rheumatism and a rheumatic diathesis" many years before the war does not, we think, go to show that he was not injured and disabled by his military service. The examining surgeons certify that he is not now suffering from any disease of the kidneys; but this is nothing against the fact that he is laboring at this time under weakness of the back and spine, and is laboring under disability permanently rendering him unable to perform ordinary labor.

He became an invalid in the service, was treated as such therein, remained an invalid, served as such, and was discharged as such, and is yet an invalid.

MARGARET A. HILLARD.

Mr. BOUTELLE (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (S. 2993) granting a pension to Margaret A. Hillard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is bereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Margaret A. Hillard, widow of Frank S. Hillard, late a lieutenant in the Seventh United States Colored Troops.

The report (by Mr. GALLINGER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2993) granting a pension to Margaret A. Hillard, having examined the same, report as follows:

as follows:

The report of the Senate Committee on Pensions shows that Margaret A. Hillard is the widow of Frank S. Hillard, who was a lieutenant in the Seventh United States Colored Troops. He applied for pension in consequence of kidney disease, but the claim was rejected on the ground that its incurrence in the service was not fully proved. In the Forty-eighth Congress he was pensioned by special act, and the report of the committee is herewith appended for information, and to show how strong the claim was:

"[Senate Report No. 1520, Fiftieth Congress, first session.]

"The claimant, Frank S. Hillard, was enlisted as a private in Company F, Fifth Regiment Massachusetts Militia Volunteers, July 16, 1864, for one hundred days, and mustered out November 16, 1864. He re-enlisted, and was mustered in as a second lieutenant of the Seventh Regiment of United States Colored Troops June 15, 1865, and discharged October 16, 1866, at Indianola, Tex., with his company.

"The claimant filed his application for a pension August 7, 1879, alleging that at Indianola, Tex., in the spring and summer of 1866, he contracted disease of the kidneys.

"The claim was rejected by the Pension Office 'because the records of the War Department fail to show the existence of alleged disabilities in the service,' and the origin in the service is not proved.

"The testimony shows the claimant to have been sound and healthy when he entered the service the second time, in 1885. There is no record of any treatment while in the service, but claimant swears he was treated several times for attacks of sickness by the assistant surgeon who was with the regiment. Lieut. J. N. Danforth swears that the claimant had quite a severe attack of sickness, contracted in the service and line of duty, after which he did not regain his former health and strength, and that he had during such service other attacks. The claimant and Lieutenant Danforth both swear that the situation of the camp at Indianola was a very unhealthy one, built on a shell reef but a few feet above high water; that they depended on rain-water and that drawn from shallow wells sunk in the sand and shell formation for their water for drinking and other purposes. This water, found at the depth of 2 feet or more from the surface, rose and fell with the tide, and was o strongly impregnated with lime and other substances as to be totally unfit for use.

"This is substantially all the evidence as to origin in the service, as the assistant surgeon is dead and his testimony can not be procured; the surgeon was absent on detached service, and claimant was during a great part of the time mentioned in command of the company. The captain was a Swede, and has since returned to his native country. Second Lieutenant Danforth is since dead, and his wife states that all his papers have been destroyed, to which his affidavit refers for data of above facts.

"As to the evidence of disability since discharge, the claimant swears that soon after his discharge he had several attacks of the same sickness, and a little later he began to pass blood in his urine, and has never since been free from it Lieutenant Danforth testified, in 1822, that he was cognizant of the fact that soon after claimant's disconarge he was totally disabled and incapacitated for performing manual labor, and has been in that condition the greater portion of the time since; that he saw claimant at 'frequent intervals after his discharge, and knew of his disability from personal observation.

"A.J. Phipps, general agent of the Massachusetts board of education, was a neighbor of claimant, and testifies that in 1867, when he became acquainted with him and for some time subsequent, he was afflicted with disease of the kidneys, and this disease continued cither totally or in a great measure till he left for California, in 1875 or 1876.

"The evidence of physicians who treated him, and others, shows that the disease has become chronic and that he is permanently disabled. The examining surgeon rates him as total, second grade, or 324 per month.

"The examiner in the Pension Office, upon the above evidence, made the following indorsement:

"The examiner in the Pension Office, upon the above evidence, made the following indorsement:

"From my examination of all the evidence submitted in this case, I am of the opinion that the claim should be admitted for disease of kidneys, if it is found upon special examination that said disease was contracted in the service and line of duty."

"A special examiner in California thereupon visited the claimant at his residence in Los Angeles, examined him, and several physicians, and closed his report by saving:

"From the testimony in the case, I believe this to be a meritorious claim, but recommend examination in Boston, Mass., as to treatment since discharge."

"Thereupon a special examiner in Boston, Mass., examined a number of witness. He states:

"'As to origin or treatment in service, I have been unable to obtain any trace of officers or comrades, as the Seventh United States Colored Troops was recruited in Texas, and officered by representatives of all parts of the country.'

"He also found that Dr. Morrill, who treated claimant first after his discharge, was dead, and his professional records had been destroyed. The father of the claimant testified he began to complain of his trouble very soon after return from the service, and long before he consulted a physician. A brother testified.

turn from the service, and long before he consulted a physician. A brother testified:

"My brother's sickness developed itself very soon after his return from the army, and he has been sick ever since; he did not seem to know what it was, and did improve under treatment."

"Upon the recommendation of this examiner the case was rejected.

"Your committee are of opinion that in view of the death of the surgeon and other officers the origin of this disease has been fairly established, and taking into consideration the unhealthy character of the water the troops were compelled to use for more than a year, the insiduous nature of this disease, its rapid development and persistent intractability to treatment by some of the best physicians of the country, they are not disposed to insist upon any technical doubt as to the period of origin as against this claimant. He appears to have been a good soldier; he was a healthy man when he entered the service, and the fact is he has hardly seen a well day since he left it; he has submitted to several dangerous and painful operations, and is now unable to work, dragging out a miserable existence in a distant State."

When soldier died he was drawing a pension at the rate of $30 per month for

When soldier died he was drawing a pension at the rate of $30 per month for "disease of the kidneys, resulting in incapacity for performing manual labor." Considering the fact that this case might properly have been allowed in the Pension Office, and that soldier unquestionably died of the diseases for which he was pensioned, your committee are of opinion that the widow should be granted a pension, and therefore report the bill back favorably with a recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. BOWDEN (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Mary Calvert Truxtun.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the committee rise for the purpose of considering that bill at this time, in order that the gentleman from Virginia may not lose his turn.

Mr. COOPER. Why not consider the bill along with the rest that will be reported from the Committee of the Whole this evening?

Mr. MATSON. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BOWDEN] wishes to have his bill considered. It has been once reported—
Mr. COOPER. But consider and pass it with the rest of the bills this evening after the committee rises

Mr. BOWDEN. I do not want to lose my turn, Mr. Chairman. Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I want to know whether it is distinctly understood, by unanimous consent, that when we go into the House this bill shall be considered?

The CHAIRMAN. That can only be an understanding, because the committee can not bind the House. There may be, however, an informal understanding, such as the gentleman suggests.

Mr. WISE. But the committee is the House; that is, the same men compose the committee and the House. The CHAIRMAN. Of course an informal understanding such as the gentleman proposes can be had, but no order can be made in committee to bind the House, and the committee can not make any order with respect to this bill because it is not before the committee.

Mr. BOWDEN. If it is understood that the bill will be considered in the House I shall be satisfied.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order.

Mr. WEAVER (when the name of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas, was reached). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the name of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas, be passed over with the right on his part to call up a bill hereafter.

A MEMBER. Not this evening.

Mr. WEAVER. Yes, this evening.
Mr. ATKINSON. I object, as the gentleman from Arkansas is not here.

He has been present this evening.

Mr. ATKINSON. I did not know that. I withdraw the objection. The CHAIRMAN. Is there further objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

ANN E. COONEY.

Mr. BREWER (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (S. 1822) granting a pension to Ann E. Cooney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ann E. Cooney, a volunteer army nurse during the late rebellion, and pay her, during life, a pension of $25 per mouth, from and after the passage of this act, in lieu of the pension now received by her.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1822) granting a pension to Ann E. Cooney, submit the following report:

The Senate report on this bill is as follows, namely:

"Ann E. Cooney, who was a prominent and efficient army nurse during the war, was pensioned at last Congress at $20 per month. The reduction of $5 per month from the usual rate was due in her case to the impression that she had been in receipt of regular pay during the term of her service. From information laid before the committee this is shown to be an error. She received no compensation up to October, 1864, except $24, which she was obliged to accept as payment for two months' service at Wilmington, N. C., in order to provide herself with funds to pay transportation to Washington, D. C., where she went at that date to take service under Mi-s Dix.

"In point of intelligent and devoted work in hospital and camp the claimant stands on an equality with the most distinguished of the women of the war, and the discrimination against her shown in the reduction referred to is unwarranted and unjust."

We are informed that the claimant is aged and poor, and that she incurred disabilities in the service and as a direct result thereof, from which she still suffers and will permanently suffer.

This committee has always made a distinction between persons who served as nurses without and those who served with pay, especially where, as in this case, the service was long in duration.

We recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recom-

WILLIAM A. TAYLOR.

Mr. BROWER (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (H. R. 9159) granting a pension to William A. Taylor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William A. Taylor, late of Company M, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. HUNTER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Hunter) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9159) granting a pension to W. A. Taylor, have considered the same and report:
That William A. Taylor entered the United States service August 19, 1862, as a private in Company M. Sixth Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and served until May 29, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. That claimant filed his claim for pension January 9, 1830, claiming disability on account of dislocation of shoulder received while in line of duty near Brentwood, Tenn., on or about April 1, 1863, and the same was rejected because he could not prove time, place, and circumstances of said dislocation and line of duty by officers or comrades and treatment for same.

Claimant shows by his own sworn statement that he with some sixteen other soldiers, not of his company or regiment and strangers to him except Lieut. George Richardson, were ordered on picket duty near Brentwood, Tenn., that they were fired upon and pursued the enemy. That in the pursuit his horse fell, threw him, and dislocated his left shoulder, from effects of which he has never recovered. That he was treated by Dr. Keeler, surgeon of the regiment, at Brentwood, but he is dead. That he does not know the post-office address of Lieutenant Richardson, if alive; has advertised for and used all possible means to find him, and the Pension Bureau has been asked to give his address, but he can not be found, so that he is unable to produce the evidence of any one who was present when he received his injury. That the records that would show his treatment were captured and destroyed at the battle of Chickamauga, and the records of the War Department fail by reason thereof to show his treatment for said injury.

But claimant shows by the testimony of John S. Perkins, of same reciment.

But claimant shows by the testimony of John S. Perkins, of same regiment, that he was sound when he entered the service; knows claimant left camp at Brentwood about April, 1863, sound and well, to go on a scout, and when he returned he had his arm in a sling, and learned from his comrades how it happened.

W. R. Wilson, of Glasgow, Ky., swears that claimant was sound when he left camp, and that he came back with his arm in a sing.

John W. Wilkerson and John W. Burch swear they were well acquainted with claimant since 1865, and that he has complained of his shoulder and is dis-

Drs. Gunshel and Biakely swear they have examined claimant, and that his shoulder has been dislocated, is deformed and is subject to dislocation, and rating him unfit for full manual labor.

Your committee has not given the exact language of the witness, but the sub-

Your committee has not given the exact anguage.

Examining Surgeon W. T. Watkins states that he examined claimant and found "evidence of injury to left shoulder; physical signs are fracture of distal end of the clavicle, enlargement and stiffness of the shoulder-joint." Claimant can not place the hand upon the top of the head without violent pain. The injury has resulted in partial loss of the use of left shoulder. Where the fracture occurred there is a piece of the bone over the shoulder-joint that has formed a prominence that is very painful to the touch.

From all of which your committee feel constrained to believe claimant received the disability, as claimed, in the service and in the line of duty, and recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ANNIE KRUMPHOLZ.

Mr. BROWN, of Ohio (when his name was reached). I call up the bill (H. R. 3737) granting a pension to Annie Krumholz. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Annie Krumholz, wido wo of Herman Krumholz, late a private in Company F, Fifteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, subject to the provisions and limitations of pension laws

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. Yoder) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2737) granting a pension to Anna Krumpholz, submit the following report:

Anna Krumpholz is the widow of Herman Krumpholz, who enlisted as a private on October 12, 1861, in Company I, Fifteenth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteers, and served in said command until December 15, 1862, when he was discharged on surgeon's certificate that he had heart disease and enlargement of heart, which entirely incapacitated him for the performance of duly.

Dr. D. Bramble, of Cincinnati, testifies that he commenced to treat him during the same month in which he was discharged and continued to treat him during the same month in which he was discharged and continued to treat him until December, 1874, when he was sent to the Military Home at Dayton, Ohio, and that during all his term of treatment he had hemiplegia or partial paralysis.

Dr. Weaver, of Soldiers' Military Home, certifies that he died at the Military Home on July 27, 1876, of paralysis.

This claim was rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions because, as alleged, he did not contract the fatal illness, paralysis, in the service.

Your committee are convinced from the testimony that paralysis was the result of the service, and that the Commissioner erred in rejecting same, and therefore recommend that the bill do pass, with an amendment correcting the spelling of claimant's name in both the title and body of the bill so as to read, "Anna Krumpholz."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to. The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

FRANK M. MARTIN.

Mr. JOHN R. BROWN. I call up the bill (H. R. 9113) granting a pension to Frank M. Martin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws of the United States, the name of Frank M. Martin, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. HUNTER) was read, as follows:

The claimant was a private soldier in Company H, Sixth Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, in the late war of the rebellion, and served therein from the 1st day of August, 1862, until July 14, 1865, when he was honorably dis-from the 1st day of August, 1862, until July 14, 1865, when he was honorably discharged.

In August, 1875, he filed his claim before the Pension Bureau for pension for disease of lungs, which he declared had followed and resulted from an attack of typhoid pneumonia, which he contracted in the summer of 1863 while in the line of duty.

The claim was rejected on October 3, 1885, by the Pension Bureau on the ground that there is no record of said disease at the War Department, and claimant was unable to furnish any medical evidence of treatment in service or prior to the year 1878, and the other testimony in the case does not show a well-defined lung disease at date of discharge.

Upon a careful examination of the papers in the case, together with the testimony procured by a special examiner of the Pension Office, your committee are of the opinion that the claimant is affected by a disease of lungs which is clearly chargeable to his three years of military service.

Your committee will briefly refer to some of the testimony which leads them to this conclusion:

Special Examiner Thomas J. Brown, who spent some time among the witnesses in claimant's neighborhood and cross-examined them, states in his report:

"I believe the claim to have merit, and respectfully recommend its admission."

The claimant in his statement before the special examiner testifies that at the time he contracted the fever which resulted in disease of lungs, he was treated in regimental hospital and subsequently for the disease in field hospital at Calhoun, Ga. The records of both said hospitals are not preserved, and hence claimant is deprived of the most usual and valuable source of proof of his discase during service.

claimant is deprived of the most usual and valuable source of proof of his disease during service.

Lieut. Frank M. Vowels, an officer in claimant's company, testifies before Special Examiner Brown that he remembers distinctly that about August, 1864, while in camp at Calhoun, Ga., claimant contracted disease of lungs, and was treated by the regimental surgeons (now deceased). He states:

"I saw him when he was sick. He was taken at the start with a severe cold and coughing, and was reported sick by the orderly sergeant, and sent to sick-call three or four times. He was then sent to a temporary hospital at a vacant house in Calhoun, Ga. * * After leaving the hospital he had a cough, and never afterwards appeared to be stout. I noticed claimant having this cough, heard him coughing of nights, and complaining of his lungs the remainder of the service."

the service."

Lieutenant Vowels is reported to be of good reputation for credibility and

Thomas Craven, a comrade of good reputation, also testifies to claimant's sickness in service, and states as follows:

"He was taken off sick to the hospital. He was complaining of being in a bad fix, coughing, before he was taken away. When he came back from the hospital he complained of not being able to do anything for a long time. I could not say where his trouble was located, only he had a powerful cough,"

James Cross, a witness of good reputation, who testifies before Special Examiner Brown, states:

"He has been complaining of his breast and side ever since he came home from the war. The side he complained of was his left side. * * * I saw him the day he got back from the Army, and he was complaining of these troubles then. Always when I would meet with him since his discharge he would complain and seem to be in the same trouble. * * * The first two years after claimant came home from the Army he worked for me at carpentering and was disabled by his breast or lung trouble about one-half during that time, frequently having to stop his work. * * * He has had a cough in bad weather pretty much since discharge."

An abundance of other evidence corroborates the above testimony, the comrades and neighbors testifying to the broken condition of his health during the last year of his service and since his return home. There is medical evidence of treatment in 1877 and since, and the doctor who treated claimant before that is dead.

is dead.

Examinations made of claimant's physical condition by three examining surgeons in 1880, 1881, and 1883 find disease of lungs existing and rate the disability at one-half of total, or $4 per month.

In view of the facts in the case, your committee return the bill to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

GEORGE HUNTER.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I ask the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12510) granting a pension to George Hunter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the general pension laws, the name of George Hunter, late captain Company A, Dayton Volunteers, of Washington Territory, who was severely wounded in the shoulder and neck in a battle with the Indians in the war with the Nez Percés, and to pay him a pension from and after the passage of this act.

The report (by Mr. BLISS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12510) granting a pension to George Hunter, have considered the same, and report:

This case comes to the committee with the recommendation that a special act of Congress be passed in favor of the claimant, as indicated by the following letter of the honorable Commissioner of Pensions, transmitted through the honorable Secretary of the Interior:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, BUREAU OF PENSIONS, "Washington, D. C., February 1, 1889.

"Sie: Pursuant to the provisions of the resolution of May 29, 1830, which directs that a several list's shall be furnished to the Senate and House of Representatives of such persons as shall have made application for a pension, and as, in the opinion of the Department charged with the execution of the pension laws, 'ought to be placed upon the pension-roll,' and 'for doing which they have no sufficient power or authority,' I have the honor to transmit, for submission to Congress if thought proper, the claim of George Hunter, captain of Company A, Columbia County (Washington Territory) Volunteers, in the war against the Nez Percé Indians in 1877, who appears by evidence in the case to have been wounded in the shoulder and neck in such service.

"This is a claim of great merit, which this bureau has been obliged to reject in compliance with the provisions of the third paragraph of section 4693, Revised Statutes of the United States, the officer not having been enlisted or mustered into the service of the United States, and the act of March 3, 1881, 'for the relief of citizens of Montana,' not having made any provision for citizens of Washington Territory.

"Yery respectful,"

"JOHN C. BLACK, Commissioner.

"JOHN C. BLACK, Commissioner.

"Hon. WILLIAM F. VILAS, "Secretary of the Interior."

It thus appears (and also by the records and evidence in the case) that this claimant, a soldier in the Nez Percé Indian war of 1877, is deprived of his pension for wounds received in such service, under the act of March 3, 1881, because said act by its title restricts its application to citizens of Montana, while this soldier enlisted from Washington Territory and is a citizen thereof.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIZABETH L. SNELL.

Mr. BUTLER. I call up the bill (H. R. 12482) to increase the pension of Elizabeth L. Snell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be il enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Mrs. Elizabeth L. Snell, dependent mother of the late Alfred T. Snell, a commander in the Navy, to $40 per month, instead of $25 per month, the amount which she is now receiving.

The report (by Mr. BUTLER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. BUTLEB) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12482) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth L. Snell, have considered the same, and report as follows:

Alfred T. Snell, the son of the claimant, was appointed a midshipman at the Naval Academy September 26, 1857. He was promoted to ensign June 1, 1861; promoted to lieutenant July 16, 1862; promoted to lieutenant-commander July 25, 1865; promoted to commander September 19, 1874. He died September 8, 1876, at San Francisco, Cal. He left neither widow nor children.

His widowed mother applied for pension, which was granted her at the rate of $25 per month, it being decided by the Pension Bureau that the fatal disease, apoplexy, had its commencement in malaria, which was contracted while the sailor, then a lieutenant, was serving in Panama, in 1864. Application made to the Pension Bureau for a rerating of her pension from the date of the officer's death, in 1876, at $30 per month, has been rejected. The latter rating would have been allowed under the general law had the fatal disease been held to have originated subsequent to July 25, 1866, when the officer was promoted to lieutenant-commander. There are facts in the case which give an equity to the claim that the rating should have been placed at $30 per month under the general law.

the earth that he rating should have been placed at 500 per month under the general law.

The sailor was in almost continuous service up to his death. In 1863 and 1864 he had a protracted attack of malaria and its sequences at Panama, and was sent to the United States as a means for his recovery. In October, 1864, while serving on the Glencoe, he was sick for fifteen days with pleuritis. The records show that he was again sick in September and October, 1870, with malaria, which the record states was incurred while attending to his duties as executive officer, and the sickness was of short duration. In April and September, 1872, he again had attacks or malarial illness, and in March, 1874, an attack of catarrh and soreness of the throat.

The death certificate, signed by Surgeon Ward, attributes the inception of the fatal disease to the climatic exposure in Panama.

The records do not show that the officer had any sickness of any kind from 1864 to 1870, and in July, 1866, when he was promoted to lieutenant-commander, he was medically examined and pronounced sound. Surgeon Ward, who signed the death certificate, seems to have had no extended previous acquaintance with the officer. The facts would thus seem to point to the conclusion that Surgeon Ward was incorrect in attributing the death cause to the attack of malaria in 1864, there being nothing to show that the deceased officer was ill at any time from 1864 to 1870.

The bill before the committee is for an increase of pension to $40 per month, and in the statement accompanying the bill the injustice of the present rating of $25, instead of a rating of the rank of commander ($30), is urged as a reason for the increase. Moreover, the claimant is seventy years old, wholly without means, with no child or other relative to look to for support, and she is in frail and delicate health.

Congress has established precedents in several cases by granting an increase of pension to $50 per month to the widows of commanders, the rank held by this claimant's son at the time of his death.

The passage of the bill is recommended.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

WIDOW OF MAJOR FARR.

Mr. MORRILL (when Mr. BUTTERWORTH's name was called). The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BUTTERWORTH] is unavoidably absent to-night; it was impossible for him to be here. He is very much interested in the case of the widow of Major Farr, an ex-member of Congress—I think he was a member of the Forty-seventh Congress. This bill proposes simply to increase the pension of this widow from $17 a month to $25. Major Farr, when he contracted the disability from which he died, was a lieutenant, but was mustered out as a major; and the bill proposes to give this lady the pension of a major's widow. I hope there will be no objection to permitting me to call up the bill and have it passed. The bill is lying on the Speaker's table. The re-

CATHERINE HAYS.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio. I ask the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5398) granting a pension to Catherine Hays.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to put on the pension-roll the name of Catherine Hays, widow of Stephen Hays, late first lieutenant in Company G, Sixty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

Stephen Hays was first lieutenant of Company G, Sixty-first Ohio Infantry Volunteers. He applied in July, 1855, for a pension, owing to a sunstroke occurring in July, 1862, and rheumatism contracted in December, 1862. He resigned February 3, 1863, upon a medical certificate, dated January 29, 1863, showing the foregoing facts. While his claim was pending—on July 15, 1886—he died. His widow, Catherine Hays, applied for pension, but the Commissioner of Pensions did not consider that the death of Stephen Hays was sufficiently proven to have been the direct effect of disability incurred in the military service aforesaid.

The testimony shows that Hays ice aforesaid.

The testimony shows that Hays, owing to his mind becoming affected by the sunstroke, acted very queerly before his death, and even before he applied for pension, and that he constantly complained of his head paining him, and talked so incoherently and insanely as to attract the attention of all persons who came in contact with him.

These facts are fully and conclusively set out in the testimony of his physician, Dr. John A. Ambrose: his priest, Rev. H. J. McDermott, and his neighbors, Daniel Demas, Thomas L. Conroy, Daniel Snyder, and others, all persons of the best reputation for veracity. The Rev. Dr. McDevitt testifies as follows, his statement being corroborated by all the others, to wit:

I live corner of Ludlow and Fifth, and am pastor of the Sacred Heart

"I live corner of Ludiow and Finil, and am passes.

Church.

"The deceased was a member of my church. I have known him about three years. I always thought him strange, but I could not say that he was not in his right mind. About two years and a half ago I took him home in my buggy, and then noticed he acted strangely. About six weeks ago I was called to his house by his daughter Mary. I went and found him complaining of pains in his head. His actions were so queer that I thought him deranged. I spoke of it to his mother and children. Frequently afterwards I asked about him.

"I have no doubt he was deranged. I met him two or three weeks ago, and talked with him only a few moments, and did not have any conversation with him.

On the evening of July 14, 1886, he acted more strangely than ever, and performed various crazy antics. At 3 o'clock the next morning he arose without the knowledge of his family or the inmates of the house, and left in a nearly nude condition. His body was found in mill-race about noon the same day, and the coroner's verdict, rendered in conformity to the testimony, showed that he drowned himself while in an insane condition.

Your committee have no doubt that he was insane from the effects of the sunstroke, for which he had been discharged from the Army, and that his death was the direct result thereof.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill, so amended as to read "subject to the rules and limitations of the pension laws."

The amendment recommended by the committee in the concluding paragraph of the report was read, and agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

W. W. WILSON.

Mr. CAINE. I call up the bill (H. R. 8429) granting a pension to W. W. Wilson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of W. W. Wilson, late in Company H. Eighteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, with the same rate of pension to which a private soldier would be entitled for like disabilities.

The report (by Mr. WALKEB) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8429) granting a pension to W. W. Wilson, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

William W. Wilson was drafted at Chillicothe, Mo., December 20, 1864, and assigned to Company H, Eighteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, in which command he served until mustered out, July 18, 1865. He alleges that while on the march from Savannah, Ga., to Goldsborough, N. C., in February, 1865, he incurred variocele of right side from straining himself in litting army wagons out of the mud. The claim has been rejected by the Pension Bureau on the ground that the evidence does not satisfactorily connect the disability with the service.

Comrade Joseph Gross, sergeant of claimant!

comrade Joseph Gross, sergeant of claimant's company, who is reported by the special examiner as of excellent reputation, testifies that while on the march aforesaid Wilson, after helping to lift wagons out of the mud, complained to afflant of being hurt. Afflant did not at the time understand the nature of the injury, but remembers distinctly that he was excused from duty by the surgeon, Dr. Randolph, now deceased. Claimant was allowed to march at leisure, but finally gave out and was left behind. Lieut, John J. Abrigg, also of good repute, testifies that claimant was train-guard on said march, and was injured in side or hip from lifting at wagons which were mired in the mud. Afflant's information was obtained from claimant at the time of the injury.

The records of the War Department show treatment in hospital from April 25 to July, 1865, but principally for rheumatism.

There is ample testimony of the existence of the disability, which by the examining surgeons is described as hydrocele complicated with hernia since discharge.

amining surgeons is described as a flavore charge.

The special examiner recommends the allowance of the claim. It is true that the proof in the case is not conclusive, but the fact that claimant was drafted, and that at discharge he was suffering from a disability which has ever since greatly disabled him for the performance of manual labor, together with the evidence of an injury heretofore referred to, would seem to warrant your committee in solving all doubts in the case in favor of the claimant.

The bill is therefore returned, with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ANNA J. WEAVER.

Mr. CANDLER. I ask the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8100) granting a pension to Annie J. Weaver.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject (except as to age of said Anna J. Weaver) to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Annie J. Weaver, daughter Julius G. Weaver, late of Company K, One hundred and fifty-first Regiment of New York Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. SPOONER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8100) granting a pension to Anna J. Weaver, respectfully report: Anna J. Weaver is the imbecile daughter of Julius G. Weaver, who was a private in Company K, One hundred and fifty-first Regiment New York Volunteers. She was pensioned under the general laws as the minor daughter of the soldier until June 10, 1878, when she became sixteen years of age, and such pension consequently ceased.

Her mental and physical condition is testified to in affidavits filed with the petition of her mother to the present Congress, of which the affidavit of Dr. J. A. Carson, of Maquoketa, Iowa, is fairly illustrative.

Dr. Carson testilies that he has known said Anna for the last six years, and has treated her from time to time for such troubles as she complained of. He "Know she is physically and mentally incapacitated for earning her own livelihood. Her mental condition is such she has to be taken care of like an infant child, and is a great charge to her mother; can not be left alone at any time; and it is my unqualified opinion that during my acquaintance with her she has been physically and mentally weak all of her life."

Your committee, following the line of precedent in a number of similar cases, report the bill with the recommendation that it be amended by striking out all after the word "pension-roll," in line 4, and inserting in place thereof the follow-after the word "pension-roll," in line 4, and inserting in place dielectric force ing:

"The name of Anna J. Weaver, imbecile daughter of Julius G. Weaver, late private of Company K. One hundred and fifty-first Regiment New York Volunteers, and pay to her legally-constituted guardian, for her use and benefit, a pension at the rate of $18 per month."

And that, as so amended, the bill pass, Also amend title of bill by striking out "Annie" and inserting in place thereof "Anna."

The amendments recommended by the committee in the concluding paragraphs of the report were read and agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MRS. NANCY SMITH.

Mr. CARUTH. I call up the bill (S. 3634) granting a pension to Mrs. Nancy Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Nancy Smith, daughter of the late Maj. Charles Fuller, of the Fourth Infantry Regiment, United States Army, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. HUNTER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. HUNTER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3634) granting a pension to Mrs. Nancy Smith, have examined the same, and adopt as their own the Senate report hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill granting a pension to Nancy Smith, have examined the same, and report:

"The claimant, Mrs. Nancy Smith, who now resides at No. 1220 West Jefferson street, Louisville, Ky., is the daughter of Maj. Charles Fuller, of the Fourth United States Infantry, and who was a gallant officer in the war of 1812 and of the Indian wars immediately preceding. He commenced making history for himself during the prevalence of the Indian troubles, and fought with General William H. Harrison through the battles of the Thames and Tippecanoe. He was captured and incarcerated in a Canadian prison hulk for over a year.

"Mrs. Smith is seventy-two years old, is in very feeble health, and is dependent upon her daily toil for her own and the partial support of an invalid brother, who was a soldier in the Mexican war.

"In consideration of these facts, your committee are of the opinion that the bounty of the Government should be extended to this old lady, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the word "Army," in the seventh line, and insert the words "and pay her at the rate of $12 per month."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

GERTRUDE NORTHROP.

Mr. CASWELL. I ask the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11707) granting an increase of pension to Gertrude Northrop. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Gertrud's Northrop, minor child of Marshall A. Northrop, late a captain of Company G. Sixth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month hereafter,

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11707) granting an increase of pension to Gertrude Northrop, submit the following re-ranting an increase of pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11707) granting an increase of pension to Gertrude Northrop, submit the following report:

It appears from the evidence presented to this committee that the father of Gertrude Northrop, the beneficiary named in this bill, was captain of Company G, in the Sixth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers. While in the service he contracted disease of the lungs and chronic diarrhea, with which he died on the 6th day of October, 1864.

He left surviving him a widow and four children. The widow died on the 81st day of July, 1872. The minor children received the pension of $20 per month, to which the father would have been entitled had he survived, until the youngest, the beneficiary named in this bill, reached the age of sixteen, which was on the 18th day of September, 1878, at which time the pension ceased. She is now twenty-six years of age, and single. She is a confirmed invalid and without means of support, entirely dependent upon others for the necessaries of life. Her physician, Dr. H. R. Clark, testifies that he has prescribed for her six years—

"That she is badly deformed by spinal curvature. Is unable to care for herself or do anything except the lightest work, being unable to walk, except as she places one hand on her knee, and much of the time is confined to her bed from abscess in her hip, caused by necrosis of pelvic hip bones. She also has chronic diarrhea. For these reasons she is entirely dependent upon others for her care and support."

Dr. S. J. Dean testifies, October 12, 1888:

"She has necrosis of some of the bones of the pelvis and upper part of the femur. She is wholly unfit for labor of any kind and really ought to have some one help to care for her."

The object and intent of the pension laws, of a general nature, is to confer aid upon the children of the deceased soldier during that period in which they are unable to earn a living. The beneficiary named in this bill is twenty-six years of age, and not within the age mentioned in t

The amendments recommended by the committee in the concluding paragraph of the report were read and agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARTHA RHODES.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Arkansas. I call up the bill (H. R. 12428) for the relief of Martha Rhodes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place upon the pension-roll the name of Martha Rhodes, mother of Joseph Rhodes, late a member of Company G, Second Iowa Infantry Volunteers, and who was killed in the line of duty at the battle of Fort Donelson, in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion; that the rate of said pension shall be $12 per month from the date of the passage of this act.

The report (by Mr. SPOONER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. SPOONER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12428) for the relief of Martha Rhodes, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

The proposed beneficiary is the mother of Joseph Rhodes, who was killed in battle at Fort Donelson in February, 1862. Being possessed of some property and income at time of the son's death she had no title to pension and therefore never applied at the Pension Office.

Hon. J. B. Weaver, of the House of Representatives, who is personally cognizant of all the facts in the case, makes the following statement:

"Her son, Joseph Rhodes, was a corporal in Company G, Second Iowa Volunteers, and was killed in line of duty while storming Fort Donelson, Tennessee, with his company February, 1862. I saw him fall, and assisted in his burial after the battle. His parents are now aged, and, though they were not dependent at date of soldier's death, very poor. I personally know that Joseph frequently sent a part of his wages to his mother. The soldier left no family, never having married."

The case comes clearly within the well-established rule of the House to grant

The case comes clearly within the well-established rule of the House to grant relief to the aged parents of soldiers who, although not strictly dependent at time of the son's death, are now dependent upon their own efforts for support. Your committee therefore report favorably on the accompanying bill and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN MANN.

Mr. CHEADLE. I ask the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6763) granting a pension to John Mann.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of John Mann, late private in Company D, First Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension of $8 a month, said Mann being in the military service of the United States during the period of the Mexican war.

The report (by Mr. BLISS) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. BLISS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6763) granting a pension to John Mann, have considered the same, and report as follows:

The claimant, John Mann, was a corporal in Company D. First United States Infantry, from November 18, 1841, to November 18, 1846. From the mmencement of the Mexican war until the date of his discharge he was stationed at Fort Snelling, Ind. T. His pension claim for a service pension under the act of January 29, 1887, granting pensions to the survivors of the Mexican war, was rejected on the ground that claimant was not in Mexico, on the frontier thereof, or en route thereto during the war with that nation.

At the first session of the present Congress this committee favorably reported a bill, amendatory of the Mexican pension act, and by which pension is recommended to be allowed to those soldiers who, though not in Mexico, were stationed at forts and elsewhere in lieu of soldiers who were sent to the seat of war.

war.

Under such an amendment this claimant would be entitled to pension.

Moreover, it appears in proof that this man, a non-commissioned officer, was detailed to remain at Fort Snelling to drill recruits who were subsequently sent to the seat of war.

Evidence before the committee shows that Mann is now over seventy years of age, in poor health, without property, and is supported along with his aged wife by two step-sons.

Your committee are of the opinion that a pension should be granted in this case, and hence report it back recommending its passage.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recom-

MRS. HELEN SUTHERLAND.

Mr. CHIPMAN called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 11984) granting a pension to Mrs. Helen Sutherland.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to put on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Helen Sutherland, dependent mother of Andrew Sutherland, late private Company H, First Regiment Michigan Light Artillery.

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. CHIPMAN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11984) granting a pension to Mrs. Helen Sutherland, submit the following report:

That the claimant was the widowed mother of Andrew Sutherland, private in Company H, First Regiment Michigan Artillery. He died in the service at Memphis, August 25, 1862. She is eighty-two years of age; applied for a pension, but was refused on the ground that she was not dependent on the soldier for support. While this decision was right, she is now in her extreme old age, without means and dependent upon others for support. We recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIZABETH SHRAKE.

Mr. CLARK called up for consideration the bill (H. R. 4203) granting a pension to the widow of Adam Shrake.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Elizabeth Shrake, widow of Adam Shrake, late a private in Company C, Forty-eighth Regiment of Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. SAWYER) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. SAWYEE) was read, as follows:

The report (by Mr. SAWYEE) was read, as follows:

The committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4203) granting a pension to Elizabeth Shrake, widow of Adam Shrake, deceased, late of Company C, Forty-eighth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, have considered this case, and find the following facts from the evidence:

The husband, Adam Shrake, enlisted in Company C, Forty-eighth Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, and served with his regiment until discharged, March 24, 1866. In 1875 the soldier was pensioned for eczema at the rate of $4 per month, to date from the day of his discharge. September 15, 1881, his pension was increased to $8 per month. He died February 3, 1883.

The testimony establishes the fact that the soldier, who was a man of correct habits, was afflicted with the disease for which he was pensioned constantly, from its incurrence from overheating, followed by severe cold in the service, down to the time of his death; that this disease became so aggravated as to cover the whole of his body and render him totally unfit for manual labor. In seeking some relief from this violent eczema, or disease of the skin, through its partial and temporary suppression from time to time, the soldier was invariably thrown into a severe diarrhea exceedingly difficult to check. The continuance of the diarrhea always produced congestion of the liver, followed by severe inflammation of that organ.

Under these attacks the soldier was constantly reduced, and in one of them died, his physician assigning hepatitis, or inflammation of the liver, as the immediate cause of his death.

His widow applied for a pension, which was rejected, because in the opinion of the Pension Office the soldier's death was not directly caused by the eczema for which he was pensioned.

His physician all of the time since then but about three months. Know him to have been afflicted with chronic eczema all of the time since lepatitis, which he was afflicted with when he d duced by the eczema, which was the fact in his case. I was present when he died and examined him after his death, and he was completely covered with the skin disease."

Dr. T. H. Chambers, an old and highly-respected physician of Grant County, Wisconsin. where the soldier lived and died, testifies:

"I have known Adam Shrake for the past fifteen or twenty years, but was not his family physician. Prescribed once for him. a few years before his death, for chronic eczema; did not see him again until the 2sth of January, 1883, in consultation with Dr. O. P. Sala, when I found hepatitis existing in a marked degree, which I believe was the result of the chronic eczema. I have practiced medicine for the past thirty years, and the most of that time in Grant County, Wisconsin."

medicine for the past thirty years, and the most of that time in Grant County, Wisconsin."

Dr. Willis H. Glasier, an established physician of the same county, who treated the soldier for several weeks shortly before he died, testifies:

"I have been intimately acquainted, as a neighbor, with Adam Shrake since May, 1879, and know him to have been an invalid unable to do manual labor since then. I was his physician during the months of November and December, 1882, and know that he suffered with eczema the whole of that time. Also that if from any cause the eczema was suppressed diarrhea was the inevitable result. This diarrhea was very difficult to check, and as it continued congestion of the liver became connected with it and was caused by it.

"This congestion soon increased to inflammation, which was present to some extent when I examined him December 19, 1882. Though hepatitis might have been one of the immediate causes of death, the eczema was the primary cause of the whole illness and consequent decease of Adam Shrake."

Your committee think there is no reasonable doubt but that the soldier's death is directly traceable to the disease for which he was pensioned. We therefore recommend that the bill pensioning his widow do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recom-

Mr. MATSON moved that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. Anderson, of Illinois, having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. Dockery reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar had had under consideration the special order, and had directed him to report to the House sundry bills with various recommendations.

HOUSE BILLS PASSED WITHOUT AMENDMENT.

Bills of the following titles, reported favorably, were ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, they were accordingly read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 5390) granting a pension to John Limeric;
A bill (H. R. 11184) for the relief of Jessie Isherwood;
A bill (H. R. 12540) to increase the pension of Theodore White;
A bill (H. R. 12542) for the relief of the heirs of Noah W. Yoder;
A bill (H. R. 10644) granting a pension to Elizabeth Peterson;
A bill (H. R. 9159) granting a pension to William A. Taylor;

A bill (H. R. 9159) granting a pension to William A. Taylor;
A bill (H. R. 9113) granting a pension to Frank M. Martin;
A bill (H. R. 12510) granting a pension to George Hunter;
A bill (H. R. 12482) to increase the pension of Elizabeth L. Snell;
A bill (H. R. 8429) granting a pension to W. W. Wilson;
A bill (H. R. 12428) for the relief of Martha Rhodes;
A bill (H. R. 6763) granting a pension to John Mann;
A bill (H. R. 11984) granting a pension to Mrs. Helen Sutherland; and

A bill (H. R. 4203) granting a pension to the widow of Adam Shrake. HOUSE BILLS PASSED WITH AMENDMENTS.

Amendments reported to bills of the following titles were severally agreed to, and the bills as amended were ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, they were accordingly read the A bill (H. R. 12403) granting a pension to Bennett Cooper;
A bill (H. R. 12273) for the relief of Newton C. Ridenour;
A bill (H. R. 12491) granting a pension to Lucinda Mewman;
A bill (H. R. 8225) for the relief of William S. Kellington;

A bill (H. R. 2737) granting a pension to Annie Krumholz (title amended to conform)

A bill (H. R. 8100) granting a pension to Annie J. Weaver (title amended to conform); and

A bill (H. R. 11707) granting an increase of pension to Gertrude Northrop.

SENATE BILLS PASSED WITHOUT AMENDMENT.

Senate bills of the following titles reported favorably were severally ordered to a third reading; and they were accordingly read the third time, and passed:
A bill (S. 3540) granting a pension to Mary P. Myers;

A bill (S. 2314) granting a pension to John B. Covert; A bill (S. 2439) granting a pension to Charlotte T. Alderman;

A bill (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan;

A bill (S. 2993) granting a pension to Margaret A. Hillard; A bill (S. 1822) granting a pension to Ann E. Cooney; and A bill (S. 3634) granting a pension to Mrs. Nancy Smith. Mr. DOCKERY moved to reconsider the votes just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARY CALVERT TRUXTUN.

Mr. WISE. I call up for consideration the bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Mary Calvert Truxtun.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Calvert Truxtun, widow of the late Commodore William T. Truxtun, of the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month; said pension to be in lieu of her present pension.

The report (by Mr. YODER) was read, as follows:

Your committee concur in Senate Report No. 1421, and adopt said report as their own, with recommendation that the bill do pass.

[Senate Report No. 1421, Fiftieth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Mary Calvert Truxtun, have had the same under consideration, and a pension to Mary Calvert Truxtun, have had the same under consideration, and report:

The object of this bill is to increase the pension of the claimant from $30 to $50 per month.

It appears from the papers in the case that Commodore W. T. Truxtun was entitled to the rank and pay of a rear-admiral from the 19th of February, 1886, (See Exhibit A. hereto attached.) It further appears from affidavit filed that Rear-Admiral Truxtun died leaving the claimant and five children, two girls and three boys, who are now living and entirely dependent for their support and education upon the claimant. The eldest is eleven years of age and the youngest between one and two years of age.

Dr. J. C. Byrnes, who has been the attending physician of the claimant for the last three years, testifies that—

"On account of nervous prostration she is physically disqualified for work of any kind whereby she could increase her income for the support of herself and children. The duration of her disease, which has existed for several years, is indefinite."

The committee would therefore report Senate bill 2275 favorably and recommend that it do pass,

EXHIBIT A.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE. Washington. May 4, 1886.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, May 4, 1886.

SIR: An opinion is asked by you upon the following case:
On the 18th of February, 1886, Rear-Admiral Earl English was, by virtue of section 1444 of the Revised Statutes, transferred from the active to the retired list of the Navy, and Commodore William T. Truxtun was nominated by the President to be a rear-admiral on the active-list of the Navy, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Rear-Admiral English, after having been duly examined and found qualified for promotion.

While this nomination was before the Senate awaiting final action Commodore Truxtun attained the age of sixty-two years, and was, by force of said section 1444, transferred from the active to the retired list to rank as a commodore. If Commodore Truxtun had attained the age of sixty-two after confirmation and appointment as rear-admiral he would have gone upon the retired-list with that rank.

The question arising upon this state of facts is, whether this officer could be still commissioned as a rear-admiral if the Senate should confirm his nomination for that position, which is now pending before them.

Promotion among officers in the line of the Navy goes by seniority, and seniority is determined by the date of commission; that is to say, the date from which the commission recites that the appointment to a given grade begins. By the law and usage of the service a line officer of the Navy has as good a right to promotion, if found qualified for it, and to his proper rank in the grade to which he belongs, as he has to his pay, and questions involving the right to rank or promotion are always important because of the bearing they have on the efficiency of the service.

By the settled practice of the service promotion to a higher grade includes the right to the rank of that grade from the date of the vacancy filled by the promotion.

By the settled practice of the service promotion to a higher grade includes the right to the rank of that grade from the date of the vacancy filled by the promotion.

This practice has the distinct recognition of Congress.

Section 1562 of the Revised Statutes provides that where an officer, through no fault of his own, is prevented from undergoing an examination for promotion at the appointed time and shall afterward pass his examination, the increased pay to which the promotion entitles him shall commence from the time when he should have been examined in regular course.

And by the first section of the act of 22d June, 1874 (18 Stat., 191), it is provided that "any officer of the Navy who may be promoted in course to fill a vacancy in the next higher grade shall be entitled to the pay of the grade to which promoted from the date he takes rank therein, if it be subsequent to the vacancy he is appointed to fill." Thus not only recognizing the practice of making the right to rank antedate the time of the appointment to which the rank belongs, but extending it so as to give pay from the time rank begins.

Before the legislation referred to several of my predecessors had decided that it was competent for the appointing power to give rank by relation in making promotions. "For instance," says Mr. Legaré, "an officer under arrest on groundless charges is not promoted, because promotion were a pardon; he is acquitted, and is nominated by relation back."

Everybody sees that this is no arbitrary advancement through partiality, but sheer justice and a faithful execution of the law.

So, if any law entitle an officer to promotion at the end of ten years, and the Executive, having neglected to give him his due for some time, afterwards confer it, relation back seems called for by the law itself. This is Vinton's case, 2 Sumner, 299 (4 Op., 124).

For other recognitions of the practice of promoting by relations I beg to refer to the opinion of Mr. Attorney-General Cushing on the Navy efficiency act, and to the precedents right.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,
A. H. GARLAND, Attorney General.

Mr. CHEADLE. This is one of the bills which went over to be considered by a full House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There has been no special order in this case at all.

Mr. CHEADLE. It went over. I think this is one of the bills. Mr. MATSON. The gentleman is correct; but the previous question was never ordered, and this does not stand in the category with the others.

Mr. CHEADLE. It was to be considered in a full House, Mr. MATSON. The gentleman from Virginia asks the previous question be considered as ordered on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CHEADLE. I am willing to let this bill go over with the pre-ious question ordered upon it. Mr. WISE. Very well; I w Mr. WISE. Very well; I will accept that—the previous question ordered upon the passage of the bill and that we take a vote on it without debate to-morrow.

Mr. DOCKERY. The request, then, is that the previous question be ordered and the bill go over until to-morrow.

Mr. KILGORE. No previous question. I have very serious objection to that. Gentlemen in charge of appropriation bills are completely obstructed every day for two or three hours by these matters coming over from night sessions.

Mr. BOUTELLE, This will not take over a half hour.
Mr. KILGORE. Why not let it go through to-night?

Mr. WISE. I wish I could; but between you and the gentleman from Indiana I can not get anything through. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Some time subsequently, Mr. CHEADLE said: Mr. Speaker, I am told that the claimant in this case, Mrs. Truxtun, is very old and is bed-ridden. I withdraw my objection. Mr. WISE. Then I ask unanimous consent to put the bill on its passage.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

Mr. DOCKERY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. GEAR. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2758) granting a pension to Susan P. Murdock.

Mr. LANE. I object.

The motion of Mr. MATSON was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PRIVATE BILLS INTRODUCED AND REFERRED.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 16, 1889.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D. GEORGE HEARST, a Senator from the State of California, appeared in his seat to-day.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communica-tion from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate for an appropriation of $10,-000 for surveys and reconnaissances in military divisions and departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of January 31, 1889, a statement of the total gross amount of the proceeds in money of cotton and other property which were received into the Treasury or by Treasury officials under the so-called "captured and abandoned property acts," and the total gross amount of such proceeds which have been restored to claimants or otherwise paid out from the Treasury under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury or upon judgments of the Court of Claims, and referring to a previous statement of May 11, 1868, transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury to the President of the Senate for detailed information on the subject; which, on motion of Mr. CHANDLEB, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 5th instant, a report from the president of the Board of Commissioners of the Solreport from the president of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home, near Washington City, with an accompanying statement of moneys received from the United States Treasury and other sources for ten years from the fourth quarter of 1878 to the end of the third quarter of 1888, under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1851, to found a military asylum for the relief and support of invalid and disabled soldiers of the Army of the United States; which, on motion of Mr. Cockrell, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 8, 1889, a letter of the Adjutant-General and a card-index record of the One hundred and sixty-second New York Volunteers; which was read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the communication may be printed with the accompanying documents, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. I know it is rather a large document, but it is exceedingly important. I think it is a stepping-stone to the solution of the question in regard to the muster-rolls of the volunteer forces during the late war. It is a card-index record of one regiment, and it has been arranged in a certain way. I want to have it printed so that Senators may see it, and see that it is the only sensible, practical method of having a record which can be accessible quickly at all times for use in regard to the records of soldiers. I should like to have the order to print made special so as to have the document printed immediately.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be so ordered.

The communication and accompanying papers were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in compliance with a resolution of the 29th ultimo, a statement in regard to the nature and extent of the recent accident to the stern of the cruiser Baltimore; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, stating, in response to a resolution of the 15th instant, that the Department is not in possession of a list of the general deputy marshals appointed during the last six months by Walter H. Bunn, marshal for the northern district of New York, but has instructed Marshal Bunn to furnish such list to the Department at once, when it will be transferred to the control of the control of the list of the department at once, when it will be transferred to list of the control of the list of the list of the list of the control of the list of t mitted without delay to the Senate; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

FRANCES H. PLUMMER.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2091) granting a pension to Frances H. Plummer, which was, in line 6, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one hundred" and insert "seventy-five." Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The amendment was concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 9081) to authorize an American register to be issued for the screw steel steamer Scythian; and

A bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations, and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 781) granting a pension to John Fagan;
A bill (S. 1822) granting a pension to Ann E. Cooney;
A bill (S. 2275) granting a pension to Mary Calvert Truxtun;
A bill (S. 2314) granting a pension to John B. Covert;

LIGHT-HOUSE STATIONS

Mr. PALMER. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3818) for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal at Old Orchard Shoal, in Princess Bay, New York, to report it with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and I would ask the Senate for its immediate consideration. It is a lighthouse bill, and will lead to no discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read at length for information.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Is there a report?

Mr. PALMER. There is a report of the Light-House Board.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

United States General Light-House Depot, Office United States Light-House Engineer, Third District, Tompkinsville, N. Y., January 25, 1889.

Tompkinsville, N. Y., January 25, 1889.

Sir: In reply to board's letter of 16th January, 1889, inclosing copy of H. R. bill 12126 for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal at Old Orchard Shoal, in Princess Bay, New York, I have the honor to refer to the joint report of the third inspector as to its advisability and location.

To make this light of the greatest practical use it should be in range with Waackaack to define the inshore channel; the latter light is at present too low both for this and its original purpose of marking the main channel. The present wooden tower is old and should be shortly rebuilt.

I therefore recommend in this connection that it be replaced by a skeleton fron tower similar to those erected at Cape San Blas, Sanibel Island, and Anclote Keys. These towers are 96 feet 7 inches from base to focal plane; the present tower is 68 feet; this increase in height would be sufficient. Such a tower in position would cost about $15,000.

For the proposed light on Old Orchard Shoal I recommend an iron caisson 30 feet in diameter, filled with concrete and surmounted by an iron tower similar to the one designed for Lubec Narrows. The caisson should be protected with riprap.

Engineer Third Light-House District,

The Chairman of the Light-House Board, Washington, D. C.,

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment reported from the Committee on Commerce will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK, It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting

That the sum of $60,000 be, and is hereby, appropriated for establishing a light-house and fog-signal at or near Old Orchard Shoal, Princess Bay, New York, and for a new tower at Waackaack light-station, New Jersey.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the establishment of a light-house and fog-signal at Old Orchard Shoal, in Princess Bay, New York, and for other purposes."

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 3972) for the relief of James Healy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MITCHELL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the agricultural appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. PLUMB, it was Ordered, That leave be granted to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers in the case of William J. Uhler.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 9081) to authorize an American register to be issued for the screw steel steamer Scythian was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 11970) to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

RODMAN M. PRICE.

Mr. CAMERON. I ask the Senate to consider at this time the bill (S. 2271) for the relief of Rodman M. Price.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Calendar, under Rule VIII, being in order, the Senator from Pennsylvania moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2271) for the relief of Rodman M. Price. The bill will be read for information.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust, upon principles of equity and justice, the accounts of Rodman M. Price, late purser in the United States Navy, and acting navy agent at San Francisco, Cal., ere 'iting him with the sum paid over to and receipted for by his successor, A. M. Van Nostrand, acting purser, January 14, 1850, and pay to said Rodman M. Price, his heirs or assigns, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, any sum that may be found due him upon such adjustment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear the report read if there be The bill does not show how large these sums of money are, nor what is the evidence upon which the bill states that the money was paid over and receipted for by Price's successor. I think we ought to have some information about it.

Mr. CAMERON. There is a report setting out the facts. Mr. EDMUNDS. Let the report be read. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. CAME-BON August 29, 1888:

RON August 29, 1888:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (8, 2271) for the relief of Rodman M. Price, having had the same under consideration, beg leave to submit the following report:

The facts in this case are briefly as follows: Purser Rodman M. Price, United States Navy, was ordered and directed by the Secretary of the Navy in 1848 to proceed to California, which territory had but recently been acquired by the United States, and in addition to his ordinary duties as a purser in the Navy was ordered to establish himself as fiscal agent of the United States in order to facilitate Government disbursements on the Pacific coast. The recent discovery of gold on that coast and the disturbed monetary condition of affairs caused some anxiety on the part of the Government with respect to the finances of the United States, and it was deemed important to prevent the exportation of gold to England and to secure a means of exchange on New York or Washington. This important duty was assigned to Purser Price under the following instructions from the Secretary of the Navy:

"Navy Department, Washington, December 6, 1848.

"NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 6, 1848.

"NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 6, 1848.

"Sir: The cost of obtaining funds for the naval disbursements in the Pacific Ocean has for many years embarassed the Department.

"The acquisition of an extensive front on that ocean, the certainty that a naval depot and yard for repairs on that coast will be authorized by law, and the great production of the precious metals, and the probable establishment of a mint, render it very important to the naval service that measures should at once be adopted to provide means for their disbursements without any loss of exchange, directly in the sale of bills, or indirectly by drawing on London.

"If it can be successfully established, as I doubt not it can be, that bills on the Department, at short dates, can be converted into coin at an advance beyond their value on their face, the results will be highly important—it will promote exchanges in the Atlantic cities, and may supersede the necessity of the expensive agency at Lima.

"The anxious wish to accomplish these results induced the preparatory orders given to you.

"You will, when required by the commodore or the senior naval officer present, effect such negotiations, taking care never to sell a bill below par, and realizing for the service any amount of premium which the market affords.

"If such negotiations are impracticable on the terms suggested, you are authorized to call on John Parrott, esq., temporary Navy agent at Mazatlan, and who has authority to draw on London.

premium to the extent of the disbursements.

"I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"J. Y. MASON, Secretary of the Navy.

"RODMAN M. PRICE, Esq., "Purser, U. S. Navy."

Under these orders he proceeded to California, arriving there in February 1849. The duties assigned him were performed until December, 1849, when he was relieved by A. M. Van Nostrand, acting purser:

The order relieving Mr. Price from duty is as follows:

"NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., August 4, 1849.

"Sir: You are hereby detached from duty at the naval station of California, as assigned to you under the letters of instruction addressed to you by this Department on the 6th of December last, and you will transfer all public money and public property remaining in your hands to your successor, or to such other disbursing officer of the Navy as may be designated by the commanding naval officer of that station.

"I mediately after such transfer you will repair to the city of Washington for the purpose of settling your accounts.

"I am, respectfully, etc.,

"W. BALLARD PRESTON,

"W. BALLARD PRESTON, "Secretary of the Navy.

"Purser Rodman M. Price,
"U. S. Navy, San Francisco, Cal."

He turned over to his successor the public property and funds for which he was responsible, and as no authority was vested in Van Nostrand to procure additional funds, Mr. Price, at the solicitation of Commodore Ap Catesby Jones, the commandant of the station, advanced for the use of the Navy on January 14, 1850, the sum of $75,000.

This latter advance became necessary by reason of the fact that the demand for money in California was so great that Government bills of exchange could not be cashed at less than 10 per cent. discount, and even at that rate no one after Price's departure would be authorized to draw drafts, as will be seen from the following communication copied from the files of the Navy Department:

"Exchange and Banking House.

"EXCHANGE AND BANKING HOUSE, "San Francisco, January 4, 1850.

"Sir: Mr. Van Nostrand has inquired of me the rate at which I could buy Government bills of exchange, or rather your bills drawn on the Navy Depart-Government oils of exemange, or raiser, you seement.

"I could not buy any exchange, however satisfactory, at less than 10 per cent. discount, and at this time of the month I should add the interest up to the 15th to this discount.

"There must have been some misunderstanding on the part of Commodore Jones when he called at our office a day or two since; Captain Green, with whom he conversed, understood him to ask at what rate we drew exchange on the United States, not at what we would buy.

"Respectfully, your obedient servant,"

"THOMAS G. WELLS.

"R. M. PRICE, Purser, U. S. Navy."

The money so turned over was receipted for by Van Nostrand in his official capacity, and it appears from a certified copy of his account that the sum so advanced by Purser Price was received and charged in his official accounts with the Department.

On being relieved from duty Price started on his way home, and while en route to Washington the steamer Olean St. John, upon which he was a passenger, was, on March 5, 1850, destroyed by fire coming up the Alabama River, and all his vouchers, accounts, and personal property were lost, he barely escaping with his life.

ms vouchers, accounts, and personal property were lost, he barely escaping with his life.

In the mean while, and before Price could duplicate his accounts, some contention arose between the Navy Department and Commodore Jones in regard to the appointment of Van Nostrand.

The following letter taken from the files of the Navy Department explains the appointment of Mr. Van Nostrand as acting purser:

"Flag-ship Savannah, Benicia Roads, January 30, 1850.

"Flag-ship Savannah, Benicia Roads, January 30, 1850.

"Sie: * * The recall of Purser Price and the inability of the newly-appointed navy agent to give satisfactory security left me no alternative but to make an acting appointment, vice Mr. Price, until the arrival of Purser Hambleton. Mr. A. M. Van Nostrand, the temporary successor of Mr. Price, has fulfilled all the requirements of the law of appointment and has entered into bonds with two unquestionable sureties, and from his long and honorable connection with the Navy on the New York station every confidence may be safely confided in Mr. Van Nostrand, whose duties to the public will be faithfully discharged whether he receives pay or not.

"I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,
"THOS. AP C. JONES,
"Commander-in-Chief Pacific Squadron.

"Hon. WM. BALLARD PRESTON, "Secretary of the Navy."

The Secretary of the Navy before the receipt of this letter had disapproved the appointment of Van Nostrand, and had so informed the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, and Price was refused credit for all moneys turned over to his successor. This state of affairs resulted in a suit against Price in the United States district court for New Jersey, where the validity of the appointment of Van Nostrand was affirmed and credit allowed for sufficient of the money turned over to acquit Price of an indebtedness to the United States. The validity of Van Nostrand's appointment was subsequently affirmed upon the opinion of the Attorney-General, as will be seen by the following communication:

"[Extract from letter of Secretary of Navy.]

"NAVY DEPARTMENT, March 17, 1854.

"Sir: The questions arising on the settlement of the accounts of Mr. Price as purser of the naval station of California having been submitted to the Attorney-General, I have received a communication from him on the subject, in which he states that his opinion upon the whole case is—

"1. That the appointment of Van Nostrand as acting purser by Commodore Jones was lawful and valid under the circumstances, and that the subsequent disapproval of the appointment by Mr. Secretary Preston could not retroact to make void previous lawful acts of the acting purser in his receipt from Mr.

Price of public money and other public property in obedience to the order of Commodore Jones.

"I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

"J. C. DOBBIN.

"The papers submitted by you are herewith returned.

"J. C. D.

"A. O. DAYTON, Esq., "Fourth Auditor Treasury Department."

In the mean time the accounts of Purser Price have remained unsettled upon the books of the Treasury. In view of the loss of many vouchers, through no fault of the claimant, your committee are of the opinion that the technical rulings of the Department ought not to be enforced, but that the accounts ought to be adjusted upon fair and equitable principles, and that Purser Price ought to be credited for all the funds that he turned over to his successor, with which Van Nostrand charged himself and accounted for with the United States. We therefore report back the bill, and recommend its passage.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, the first part of this bill, regarding having this gentleman credited with what the courts have found he had a right to have credited on the books of the Treasury to him, is evidently, on the statement in the report, clearly right; but the last clause of the bill provides for paying employés, in regard to which it is stated in one place in the report that this gentleman, thirty-rive years ago, really loaned the United States out of his own private funds about $75,000. How he did that, how thirty-five years could have gone by without that being in some way explained or repaid to him, I am not able to see from this report. I ask, therefore, that the bill go over without losing its place until I can make a little examination of the documents about it, to save time.

Mr. CAMERON. It is understood that the bill is on the Calendar to be taken up to-morrow immediately after the morning business.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It does not lose its place. It will be the first in order under Rule VIII.

Mr. CAMERON. If that is the case I have no objection.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont asks unanimous consent that the pending bill may be passed over informally, its consideration to be resumed to-morrow morning as the first order of business on the Calendar under Rule VIII.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It would be the first, would it not? Does it not stand at the head?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No.
Mr. EDMUNDS. I have no objection to its being taken up on Monday at whatever time is convenient.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the course suggested.

DR. DAVID BELL.

Mr. BATE. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to call up House bill 8557, Order of Business 2640.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8557) for the relief of Dr. David

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 6, after the word "Tennessee," to strike out "his pay as assistant surgeon of the Thirteenth Tennessee Cavalry" and insert "the pay of an assistant surgeon in the United States Army;" so as to make the bill read:

So as to make the oill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to Dr. David Bell, of Limestone Cove, Unicoi County, Tennessee, the pay of an assistant surgeon in the United States Army from the 15th day of May, 1864, to the 1st day of January, 1855; he having discharged the duties as such surgeon by the request and direction of the colonel of said regiment and General Gillem, commander of the brigade in which said regiment belonged. His services were required on account of an unusual amount of sickness in said regiment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JURISDICTION IN ALABAMA.

Mr. PUGH. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 4470, Order of Business 2490.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4470) to regulate the jurisdiction of the United States district judges, and of the courts over which they preside, in the State of Alabama.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments. The first amendment was, in section 1, line 8, after the word "judge," to strike out "and to courts;" so as to make the section

That from and after the passage and approval of this act the judge of the district court for the southern judicial district of the State of Alabama shall have jurisdiction throughout the middle district of said State, and shall hold the courts therein with all power and jurisdiction now appertaining to the judge of said middle district.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, line 4, after the word "State," to add "and he shall not be required to reside in said northern district, any law to the contrary notwithstanding;" so as to make the section read: That the present judge of the said middle and northern districts of said State shall continue to be the district judge of, and hold the courts in, both the northern and southern divisions of said northern district of said State, and he shall not be required to reside in said northern district, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the Alabama bill, is it not?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The title of the bill will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 4470) to regulate the jurisdiction of the United States district judges, and of the courts over which they preside, in the State of Alabama.

Mr. SHERMAN. I know there is a great deal of local opposition to that bill, and I would like to have the chairman of the Judiciary Committee [Mr. EDMUNDS] here, who has certain papers that were sent to him, and if the Senate will pass it by informally for a moment we can send for the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. PUGH. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will lie over.

PRIVATE LAND CLAIMS.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate that immediately after the disposition of the census bill the bill (H. R. 7643) to establish a United States land court and to provide for a judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims in the Territory of New Mexico and in the State of Colorado shall be taken up for consideration.

I shall be obliged to object to that. I do not know but that I shall withdraw the objection when the time comes, but at present there are bills upon the Calendar of so much importance that it seems to me to be too early to make assignments by unanimous con-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill named by him. Is there objection? Does the Senator withdraw his request?

Mr. RANSOM. I shall not press it now.

MILO M'CRILLIS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill 7718.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7718) for the relief of Milo McCrillis. It provides for the payment to Milo McCrillis, late postmaster at Weaver's Corners, Huron County, Ohio, of $75.76, for postage-stamps, postal-cards, and stamped envelopes feloniously taken by burglars from the office of the postmaster March 1, 1883, without any fault or negligence on his part.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES BELGER.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the considera-tion of Order of Business 2199, a bill which twice previously, I think, has passed the Senate at former sessions.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2766) for the relief of Maj. James

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and in lieu thereof to insert:

That the President is hereby authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint Maj. James Belger (now retired with the rank of major) to the position of colonel in the United States Army, and thereupon to place the said Belger upon the retired-list as of that rank and grade; and all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are suspended for this purpose only.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I should like to hear the report in that case. remember that the matter has developed a considerable difference of opinion, if I may so state it, in the Senate heretofore, and I should like to hear the report read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. BATE August 31, 1888:

August 31, 1888:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred life bill (S. 2766) for the relief of Maj. James Belger, having considered the same, beg leave to report:

The leading facts and considerations in the case are forcibly presented in the following extract from the report of the House Committee on Military Affairs, Forty-eighth Congress, made by General Rosecrans:

"I. That Maj. James Belger, United States Army (retired), has the following record in the Army Register for 1884:

"James Belgerentered from State of New York in 1832; was private, corporal, sergeant, Company H, and sergeant-major, Second United States Infantry, 7th November, 1832, to 15th October, 1838.

"Second lieutenant Sixth Infantry, October 15, 1838; accepted 15th October, 1838.

"Second lieutenant Sixth Infantry, October 15, 1838; accepted 15th October, 1838.

"First lieutenant February 27, 1843; captain, assistant quartermaster, 18th June, 1846; accepted 26th August, 1846.

"Acting major, Quartermaster's Department, 3d August, 1861.

"Appointed colonel and additional aid-de-camp 3d July, 1892; accepted; out of service November 30, 1863.

"Major quartermaster March 3, 1871; accepted April, 1871.
"Retired 19th June, 1879; over sixty-two years of age.

"2. That being an officer of high standing for ability, integrity, and efficiency, he was placed in charge of the quartermaster's depot at Baltimore on account of its immense business of purchasing, of employing transports, and forwarding supplies and troops, one of the most important in the service. (See Affidavit A, annexed.)

annexed.)
"3. That while so employed his services were regarded as of such importance that the Government declined to allow him to accept a commission of majorgeneral of volunteers, which Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, desired him to accept, to command United States volunteers, Pennsylvania troops.

"4. That he was also chief quartermaster of the Middle Department, under General R. C. Schenck, in addition to his duties as general depot quartermaster above named, and, under careful observation and criticism, performed the duties of that positions os as to command General Schenck's entire confidence and approbation. (See General Schenck's letter of the 18th of February, 1884, to chairman, hereto annexed, marked D.)

man, hereto annexed, marked D.)

"A political of the Charles, and the Statement of the guartermaster's department at Baltimore, he immediately applied to the War Department for a court of inquiry, although the newspaper in question in a subsequent issue disclaimed the statement aforenamed. (See A, annexed.)

"C. That the Secretary of War sent for General Schenck to consult with him about the matter of the charges, and appeared to be strongly prejudiced against Belger, disposed to believe all the charges, and that instead of a court of inquiry a court-martial ought to be immediately ordered to try him on them.

"This,'says General Schenck,' i declined too. I represented to him that such a trial could result in nothing but acquittal, and that the most thorough investigation would, in my opinion, discover not an act of corruption or scrious irregers in the command of my department than to order, against my judgment, a court-martial which I believed uncalled for, and would be fruitless. I preferred, if there was to be a trial under such circumstances, it should be ordered by the Secretary of thi and a half thereafter Major Belger, steeped in poverty, was unable to go into any business.

"11. Meanwhile, always protesting that he was as guiltless as the court found him, and cut off from the Army by an outrageous exercise of arbitrary power, he found among all who knew him a general conviction of his innocence, and on the 11th of November, 1867, the President, satisfied that Major Belger's dismissal was wholly illegal, issued an executive order restoring him to duty. But a captain, W. S. Hancock, had been nominated and confirmed to the place from which he had been thus unlawfully thrust. It was held that this executive order required legislation to give it effect.

"12. Accordingly, in 1871, after careful investigation, the Military Committee of the Senate unanimously instructed its chairman, Hon. Henry Wilson, to report favorably a bill restoring Major Belger to his position in the Army, with rank, pay, emoluments, rights, and privileges the same as if never dismissed, providing only that out of what would thus become due to him should be deducted what the Government had paid to him for services in civil employment between 1867 and the date of the act. This bill, modified on motion of Senators Howe and Nye, so as to restore him to his rank from the date of the act, became a law. But it is in evidence that those Senators expressed their regret for having procured the amendments offered on general principles, and as soon as made aware of the special circumstances of the case, that Mr. Wilson advised Major Belger to take what the bill allowed, making subsequent application to Congress for the further redress he now asks and for which this bill provides. (See A, parts annexed.)

"13. Moreover, the letter of the Adjutant-General of the Army states that had

"13. Moreover, the letter of the Adjutant-General of the Army states that had Major Belger remained in the service at the date of his restoration in 1871, he would presumably have reached the rank of colonel in the Quartermaster's De-would presumably have reached the rank of colonel in the Quartermaster's Department.

"14. Besides the honorable acquittal by the court-martia', the honorable testimonials to his rectitude and efficiency by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department on the settlement of his accounts, the issuance of the executive order in 1877 for his restoration, and the unanimous report of the Senate Military Committee in 1871, that he ought to be restored to rank, pay, allowances, rights, and privileges, as if never dismissed, we have also evidence in the affiaivits and statements of Rev. Dr. Charles H. Hall, General R. C. Schenck, and of Mrs. and Major Belger that subsequently even Mr. Stanton himself became convinced of Major Belger's innocence and expressed his deep regret for the wrong he had done him and his wish to do what he could to repair it."

The case is a peculiar one. The applicant appears to have been regarded at the beginning of the late civil war as a man of great force, energy, capacity, and military enthusiasm. On account of the immense business of purchasing and employing transports and forwarding supplies to troops he was placed in charge of the extensive quartermaster's depot at Baltimore. Whilst there he held the profoundest confidence and respect of General Schenck, his superior, and all others in authority over him. His reports show the handling and disbursement of an immense amount of money, assounting to nearly $11,000,000 in a single year.

ment of an immense amount of inches; and the single year.

In 1863 there appeared in a Philadelphia newspaper the critical article referred to above, which reflected upon the methods of his office.

Before the appearance of a subsequent retraction by the editor, Belger, jealous of his honor and unwilling, for a moment, to remain under the shadow of unjust imputation, demanded of the Secretary of War, Mr. Stanton, a court of inquiry. Then began the misfortunes that have clung so tenaciously to this worthy soldier. The Secretary, then as ever during the great struggle that was then shaking this continent, surrounded by most trying situations, conceived, as he afterwards admitted, a prejudice against Belger, and instead of a court of inquiry, ordered a court-martial. This, as is shown by the records, was duly constituted, made up of some of the best men in the Army, and gave thorough investigation to the various specifications and the charge. Vigorous prosecution resulted only in a complete vindication of the accused, who secured a verdict of "not guilty" as to cach and every specification and to the charge.

This honorable acquittal was, however, succeeded by an exercise of power on the part of the Secretary of War as unjust as it was arbitrary. Major Belger was by him peremptorily and dishonorably dismissed the service. This, too, in the face of the above decision and of the strenuous remonstrance from General Schenck and other trusted officers, under whose command Belger was at the time and to whem all of the details of his official life while at Baltimore were familiar.

Up to this time his services in his responsible position of quartermaster at Baltimore had been so highly appreciated that the Government had refused to spare them and allow him to accept the command of eleven regiments, with the rank of major-general, offered him by the governor of Pennsylvania.

Notwithstanding the severe blow that had been unjustly dealt him, such was Major Belger's patriotism that, in spite of his wrongs, he spent two years and a half succeeding his dismissal in adjusting and closing the vast accounts of the Government in his hands. At the end of that period his accounts were found to be absolutely faultiess, and Major Belger having performed this service gratis, and being without any income, found himself penniless.

Various attempts have been made to redress, as far as possible, the irreparable wrong done this soldier. It is even established indubitably by the evidence that the Secretary himself afterwards regretted ter from him, together with one from General Grant, constitutes a part of this report.

The present situation of this poor old man is such as appeals to the sympathy of those who are familiar with his career. After a long life spent in the military service of his country, he is left by that country poor, dependent, and helpless. Burdened with debts, contracted through no fault of his own, he sits crippled in a chair at Garfield Hospital and thinks of the honors torn away from him in the strength of his vigorous manhood. Age and disease are doing their work, and the country should not only do some part of justice to his past, but should take care of him until he dies.

The committee are of the opinion that it would not be more than proper recompense to this brave and faithful soldier, who has long suffered, that tardy justice should at last be extended and that he be promoted to the rank of colonel, being that to which continuous service in regular gradation would have entitled him.

The additional rank thus conferred would make grateful a heart long bowed

The additional rank thus conferred would make grateful a heart long bowed down under the seeming indifference of his countrymen, and the slight additional pay would do much to soften the hardships and mellow the decilning years of the old soldier.

The committee therefore report the accompanying substitute and recommend the passage of the substitute, and that the bill S. 2776 do lie upon the table.

APPENDIX.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, City of Washington:

District of Columbia, City of Washington:

James Belger, being duly sworn, says: While quartermaster in United States service at Baltimore, in 1863, I noticed a brief statement in a Philadelphia newspaper, emanating from its Washington correspondent, intimating that irregularities existed in my administration of my office as quartermaster.

Jealous of my honor, I at once demanded a court of inquiry, without waiting to learn the foundation of the charge, which charge was retracted in the same paper in an early subsequent edition, though without my knowledge until after the retraction. Secretary Stanton ordered a court-martial instead of a court of inquiry, and before said court martial I was arraigned on a charge containing thirteen specifications. The court, after a strongly-pressed hearing, in which evidence of unlimited extent, occupying thirty days, was presented, unanimously found me not guilty of the charge and honorably acquitted me.

The proceedings having been duly forwarded to the Secretary of War to be by him submitted to the President, in accordance with the law then in force, for the exercise of his personal judgment in the matter, were not referred to the President at all, nor in any manner submitted to him, as I have been informed and verily believe. Secretary Stanton, acting without authority from the President, and being influenced, as I have since been informed, by private are parte statements made to him from outside rumors, disapproved the finding of the court-martial and caused an order to be issued dismissing me from the United States military service. This order was issued November 3, 1863. Secretary Stanton afterwards, as I am informed and believe, expressed the deepest regret for his action, and said I had been unjustly dismissed by him from the service; that I had been wronged in the matter, and that I should be restored to my position, and that he would restore me if he had the power. His action in thus dismissing me from the service without cause and wrongfully, as he himself admitted by Secretary Stanton in 1863.

It was found that this order was incompetent to restore me to my position as the law stood, and Senator Henry Wilson, at the session of 1871, introduced a bill, which I am informed had the sanction and approval of the entire Military Committee, restoring me to my position as though continuing in the service, with all my pay, emoluments, and privileges.

This bill was reported late in the session, and Senator Wilson was compelled to accept two amendments offered by Senators Howe and Nye, respectively, striking out the provision relating to pay and emoluments. Senator Nye informed me the next day that he had offered his amendment without understanding the facts of the case and without knowledge of its merits, on general principles, and that he was very sorry for his action, and if I would present my claim at another session of Congress he would vote for my bill and aid me in every way in his power that was proper. He was convinced that his amendment was wrong and should not have been offered. I accepted the provisions of that bill under the advice of Senator Henry Wilson, who informed me that it was best to do so for the time being; that it would not injure my claim for complete reparation; that I could again come to Congress for my full remedy, and that he would assist me in so doing. I desire to add that the passage of the bill under the circumstances will not interfere with the rank, pay, or promotion of any other officer, as I am now and would remain under the bill appended on the retired-list. I have had in my possession the original letters and documents mentioned and referred to in Executive Document No. 72. House of Representatives, second session Forty-first Congress, and also Exhibits A, B, C, and D, mentioned and referred to in my petition to the Congress of the United States at the session of 1882, and said printed copies in said Executive Document No. 72, and said printed petitions are true and correct copies of the originals. The originals have been presented to the Military Committees of Congress at previous sessions and are not now under my control, but are believed by me to be in the possession in force of the required provided to the distance of the course of the Government.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, City of Washington:

Fannie N. Belger, being duly sworn, says:

I am the wife of Maj. James Belger, United States Army, a bill for the relief of whom is now pending before Congress.

The dismissal of Major Belger from the military service of the Government by order of Secretary Stanton in 1863 caused me and my two daughters to undergo the severest deprivations and sufferings. At times we have suffered for want of medicine, elothing, food, and the common necessaries of life, and during the entire period since his dismissal we have been limited to the strictes economy, and nevertheless have been involved in deep financial embarrassment. A bill introduced for the relief of Major Belger at the session of Congress, 1871, by Senator Henry Wilson, which received, as I have been informed by him, the unanimous support of the Military Committee, was passed at said session after the amendments offered by Senators Howe and Nye. Senator Wilson was compelled to accept said amendments, as he informed me, or defeat the passage of the bill, as it was then late in the session. He advised Major Belger to accept the provisions of the said bill, and to make further application to Congress for the full relief urgently asked for by him. Senator Howe informed me personally that he offered his amendment without understanding the facts in the case, and on general principles, and that he deeply regretted his action, and if my husband would again appeal to Congress he would heartily support his claim.

Charles H. Hall, D. D., of said city, being by me duly sworn, deposes and says: I am now the rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity in said Brooklyn; I was formerly rector of the Church of the Epiphany in Washington, D. C., and as the rector of said church became well acquainted with Hon. E. M. Stanton, then Secretary of War, who was my parishioner. My relations with him were intimate and confidential. I had been, up to the time of my leaving Washington, in 1869, well acquainted with Col. James Belger, U.S. A., and with his wife. Before leaving Washington I had an interview with Mr. Stanton relative to the action of the Secretary in dismissing Colonel Belger from the service. I can not now fix the date with precision, but it must have been between 1863 and 1869. After this lapse of time I will not undertake to give the exact language of the Secretary expressed himself to me in the strongest terms favorably to Colonel Belger and to his restoration to the Army. I am confident also, without undertaking to give the exact language, that the Secretary stated to me he would restore him to the Army if he possessed the power, but at the time he had not such power, owing to some cause the precise nature of which has escaped my memory.

Without undertaking to give the exact language of the Secretary, I can say with confidence that he expressed himself to me as deeply regretting the part taken by him in the dismissal of Colonel Belger after the proceedings of the court-martial acquitting him, and felt that he had done him an injustice which he would be glad to rectify if it were in his power. I do not remember distinctly that the Secretary stated to me in terms that Colonel Belger was dismissed without the actor knowledge of the President, nor that the proceedings of the court-martial avere not submitted to him for revision, nor that he (the Secretary) took action in the matter without any conversation with the President, but solely as his own act, but such was the purport of the whole conversation and expressing regret

Washington, D. C., February 18, 1884.

My Dear General: I have received your note in relation to the case of Major Belger, and will cheerfully answer your inquiries.

During the year 1863 I was in command of the Eighth Army Corps and Midde Military Department, with my headquarters at Baltimore. When I was assigned to duty there I found Major Belger acting as chief depot quartermaster, and he continued in that service during the greater part of the time of my being stationed at that point. He was also chief quartermaster of the department, though not of my corps. As a purchasing, disbursing, and forwarding officer at that point his duties were important, multiform, and onerous. Hearing at different times intimations of irregularities in the conduct of his business. I did not fail to make careful inquiry in regard to such complaints, but became satisfied that they were groundless. I found Major Belger an efficient officer, devoted, as it seemed to me, to a faithful discharge of his public duties, industrious, and making no serious error unless it was in undertaking too much work. He was surrounded with difficulties and doubtless made some mistakes, but I became satisfied that the complaints made against him originated mainly among dissatisfied contractors and persons who were in sympathy with Southern rebels and desired to have him removed. The reports against the administration and character of Major Belger being communicated also to Mr. Stanton, the Secretary of War, he sent for me to confer with him on the subject.

I found Mr. Stanton strongly prejudiced against Belger, and ready to believe all the charges made against him. Belger had, I believe, asked for a court of inquiry. Mr. Stanton thought that the charges against him ought at once to be formulated and a court-martial ordered for his trial, and that I ought at once to order such a court-martial. This I declined to do. I represented to the Secretary that I had become convinced that such a trial could result in nothing but acquittal, and that the wood be the service.

Perhaps, in justice, as well to the Secretary himself as to Major Belger, I ought to add to this statement the fact that some years afterwards, in conversation with Mr. Stanton at his residence in Washington, shortly before his death, when we were talking of Belger's application for reinstatement, he expressed to me his regret for having so arbitrarily dismissed him from the service.

I shall be glad if this statement of mine of facts, peculiarly within my personal knowledge, can have any influence in inducing your committee and Congress to do whatever may be needful and within their power to right a wrong done a deserving and faithful officer.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, D. C., April 19, 1882

My Dear General: A verbal message, purporting to come from you, is de-livered to me requesting information as to what would have been the rank at date of retirement of Maj. James Belger, formerly of the Quartermaster's De-partment, and now retired, had he served continuously from date of entry into service. In reply I have the honor to state that had he been continuously in service Maj. Belger's rank at date of retirement would have been that of colonel, with date of commission, presumably, June 6, 1872. Yours, very truly.

Yours, very truly,

R. C. DRUM, Adjutant-General.

Hon. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY, United States Senator.

New York City, December 4, 1883.

Dear Senator: I send you inclosed the petition of Col. James Belger, United States Army, retired, for restoration of pay and rank claimed to be unjustly, if not illegally, withheld from him.

May I ask that you will give the petitioner a hearing and such action as your undgment will approve of after due consideration? One fact stands out clear, that Colonel Belger was tried by court-martial and acquitted honorably; that the findings of the court were not approved by the Secretary of War-I say the Secretary, because I do not believe he presented the case to the President—who then dismissed the prisoner by order. It seems his accounts were settled promptly, thus affording some evidence of the injustice of the dismissal.

Very truly, yours,

Hon. John A. Logan, United States Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 16, 1888.

Maj. L. Thomas brings me the within list of my old colleagues, and a letter, dated at the Garfield Memorial Hospital, from that gallant and much-wronged officer, Maj. James Belger, whose very integrity has been the cause of all the years of penury inflicted upon him and his family. In that letter he begs me to ask such members as I can to give their just consideration to the bill (H. R. 9933) for his relief.

Unable to call on you, gentlemen, I send Major Thomas with this indorsement, asking your special attention to this case of long-delayed and inadequate justice.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N. Y., December 4, 1882.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N. Y., December 4, 1882.

COLONEL: In reply to your note of the 28th of November I have to state that an examination of the printed "statement and brief" inclosed herewith makes it apparent that you were wrongfully dismissed from the military service in 1863, and that your restoration by Congress was simply justice in your case. It seems to me, however, that in reinstating you as an officer of the Army you were manifestly entitled (considering all the facts attending your dismissal) to be restored in the grade to which you would have attained at the date of your restoration provided you had remained continuously in the service, and in this view of the matter I am of the opinion that legislation by Congress to that end would be fully warranted by the circumstances of your case, and this especially as such action in your behalf would not increase the number of officers on the retired-list (where you now belong) but would only give you that advanced grade thereon to which you seem clearly entitled.

W. S. HANCOCK.

To Col. James Belgen, United States Army.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, this case is one which has attracted the attention of the Senate a good many times in the course of the last twenty years, and I had supposed that it was finally disposed of by the act of 1871, when all the circumstances were brought into review and an act did pass providing for Mr. Belger's restoration to the Army in a certain grade, and he was nominated and restored. I believe I am right about that, am I not?

Mr. SHERMAN. Restored, I think, as major.

Mr. SHEKMAN. Restored, I think, as major.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Yes, but according to the act of Congress and according to the judgment of the two Houses upon the whole case as it was then stated and appeared, and there is nothing new about it, all the equities and the supposed injustice—and very likely it was an ininstice, I am not making any complaint of this gentleman—were disposed of according to the judgment of Congress then, as being on the whole the right thing to do; and so it was done. Now, after the lapse of time, it is proposed to have an additional retribution or recompense to this gentleman because Congress in 1871 did not give him all the reparation that he and his friends thought he was entitled to. I have been from the first extremely reluctant, as in the case of General Porter, not that I had any personal dislike to him, and in the case of a great many other Army and Navy officers, to Congress being called upon as a court of appeal to be continually reviewing the actions or mistakes or wrongs of the administrative department during the stress of war and undertaking to make a universal day of judgment and leveling up what appears from the ex parte representations of the friends of gentlemen who think that they had not been fairly promoted or had been unjustly dismissed, and all that, during those great operations. If we do it unto one we must do it unto every one who appeals to us, and come to constitute ourselves a kind of final board of review, as in pension cases from the Department; and then having once reviewed when everything was fresh, much more fresh than it is now, soon after the end of the war, and when many of the persons were living who could make counter-explanations, and so on, Congress having once disposed of this subject, it does appear to me to be against the public interest and the public justice in the sense of applying it to everybody—and it must be applied to everybody if it be public justice—now to undertake to re-review and reconsider and reprovide for the very considerable number of these gentlemen all over the country who think they were wronged in the course of the administration of the executive department during the war or since the war.

Therefore, upon the principle I have stated, and without going at all into the question of what Mr. Stanton would say in the way of explanation if he were living at this moment, or into what President Lincoln would say, if living, in the way of explanation, it does not appear to me to be wise legislation to be continually reviewing and re-reviewing these matters in cases where they have once certainly been disposed of, to try to provide what is supposed to be additional reparation. So I am compelled (and it is not necessary to say without the slightest personal application or impugnment of Major Belger) to vote against this bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not think it is necessary after the report has been read to discuss this bill. If Major Belger had not been removed without recease authority, he would have been size held the reads of without proper authority, he would have long since held the rank of colonel and would have been retired before this time with that rank.

Mr. EDMUNDS. If my friend will permit me to interrupt him, when he says that this gentleman was removed without proper authority, I think he will admit in a moment that he is mistaken, because the laws of the United States, as I remember them, positively and clearly provided that in a time of war the President of the United States might remove anybody, from the General of the Army down, and therefore the act was a perfectly lawful one.

Mr. SHERMAN. Congress has already settled the fact that this was an extraordinary act. A great injustice was done to Major Belger, but I do not think it is necessary to go into that at all. It is certain if he had remained in the Army he would some years since have been retired as a colonel and been now drawing the retired-pay of a colonel. The Military Committee, to which we defer in all matters of this kind, have reported in favor of allowing Major Belger the retired-pay of a It seems to me that is a sufficient justification for my vote.

I know Major Belger and have always sympathized with him. I simply ask that this measure of justice, or rather this measure of relief if you please to call it, which the Military Committee say should be allowed to him, may now be done. I have no familiarity with the case, further than the general familiarity which I think any man who has been in the Senate during or since the war must have with the case of Major Belger.

I hope in the few years he has to live-he must be getting to be a very old man now-he may receive the retired-pay of a colonel rather than that of a major.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Vermont to the fact that the amendment proposed by the Committee on Military Affairs is an entire change of the principle upon which the original bill was based. The original bill proposed to restore Major Belger to his position "as major and quartermaster by the act of March 3, 1871," and that he-

Be considered as having been continuously in the service from the 30th day of November, 1863; and the said James Belger is hereby declared entitled to all the rights, privileges, pay, emoluments, and promotion pertaining to such continuous service, deducting from pay due him the amount he has received while employed in the civil service subsequent to said 30th day of November, 1863.

In other words, the bill was to place him back in the position which it was supposed by mathematical calculation he would have attained had he never been out of the service; and that theory the Committee on Military Affairs thoroughly rejected, and probably as much out of sympathy as anything else they agreed to place him where he would nat-urally have been, in the position of colonel on the retired-list, for the few remaining days of his existence. He is quite old and quite infirm, and I believe is now in a hospital here. This bill as amended simply gives him the rank and pay of colonel from the day of its passage, and while I agree with the remarks of the Senator from Vermont regard to undertaking to overhaul all these matters, yet I agreed not to make opposition to this bill if it were reduced to the form in which it is now, and all claims as to the past should be abandoned.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I am not objecting to this bill on the ground that will take a thousand dollars, or two or three or four or five thousand dollars out of the Treasury of the United States, justly or unjustly, although that would be a matter of proper concern for every Senator who is disposing of the people's money; but I do not put it on that ground at all, and I do not put it on any ground of want of sympathy with this gentleman, who, so far as the evidence goes, I believe myself was unjustly treated, as a great many other people must have been and were, as we know, in both armies and in both administrations during the rebellion, from the public necessities of the military service where the Executive or the persons who had the power had to act upon such information as came to them ex parte and instantaneously, and think-ing that the public interest, acting in good faith themselves, required the thing to be done, that man must suffer. That is the fate of everything and everybody in times of that kind.

The point that I wish to make for the consideration of the Senateof course I know it is perfectly hopeless-is the principle of the thing, that this matter once having been thoroughly overhauled, either rightfully or wrongfully, and Congress having passed its judgment upon it and decided what ought to be done, and all that ought to be done, as a matter of principle-for this will be a precedent perhaps for many other similar propositions, the putting of people up-we ought not to do it. And the fact that this gentleman is infirm and ill, while it meets my entire sympathy and sorrow, does not alter the public conduct as it appears to me where the representatives of the States and the people ought to exert themselves in having a government of law that applies to everybody alike. That is all I have to say.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I do not fear so much the force of this act, if you make it an act, as a precedent. Congress necessarily does a great many things as a court of equity, and they are not to be called precedents unless in the impossible case that somebody shall come with precisely the same state of circumstances.

I want to say a word or two about this case, because I am an earnest advocate of this bill. I admit the objections made by the Senator from Vermont; but because I know the whole story from beginning to end, and know the old colonel and his wife and the whole of them well, I am willing to see this great Government do this act notwithstanding the criticisms which may be passed upon it.

The Senator observed that at this lapse of time persons were not living who could suggest the considerations upon the other side that were visible to them at that time. Mr. President, there are no such considerations. If Mr. Stanton were here he could have none. I do not think there is anybody who could have any considerations to submit that would differ with our opinion that Colonel Belger was treated with the greatest possible injustice; and in saying that I do not mean to pass any censure upon the great War Secretary, Mr. Stanton, because occasional acts, arbitrary and unjust, were inevitable in the management of two millions of men in a great war like that.

In the first place, Colonel Belger is a man whose capacity and integrity were never doubted by the men who knew him, from the time he was a private soldier in the regular Army until he became a major and quartermaster and trusted with very great and important positions. They never doubted him. There are plenty of old soldiers still alive, including Rosecrans and others, and some who have gone, like General Grant and others, who knew the old man well and never did doubt and never could doubt him.

There was a newspaper report that he was unfaithful to his duty in Baltimore, in charge of that great purchasing and disbursing station.

The old major was mad and he demanded an inquiry, and the court acquitted him absolutely, as being even without suspicion on the question. Then Mr. Stanton, who sometimes did what was just in these matters and was a great organizer of war, with a sweep of his pen—I have not the slightest idea that Mr. Lincoln ever heard of it—sent the old man out by an arbitrary dismissal. The old man would not submit, and, I am happy to say, his brave wife would not submit, and they brought the case strongly to the attention of the Government, and in 1867 the then President undertook to revoke that existing order and put Belger back in his place; but the opinion of the law officer stepped in and said that that could not be done.

Then the old man was given a place as clerk in the Treasury Department to support himself, and after he had been out of office, engaged two years and a half in adjusting his great accounts, his accounts were found right to a dime. Then he was in the Treasury Department, a clerk, a while, and then in 1871 the Military Committee of this Senate reported a bill aimed to do all and much more than all that this present bill does, to put him back with all his rights exactly as he would have stood in the Army; but somebody moved an amendment in the Senate to strike out and insert the word "major;" I think that was the only change; and rather than have the matter delayed any longer and the old man without any commission or pay, that was accepted. As a matter of course, in a sense that was a closure of the whole case and an estoppel against further demands; but it was not considered equitable then by the men who promoted the bill, including the subsequent Vice-President, Wilson, and others; they were not satisfied with it.

The question whether it would have been as well to submit and let it all go is not exactly the question here now, because the colonel and his friends would not let it go. They have been to Congress again and again asking for a fuller measure of justice. He is now far below in rank where he would have been but for that injustice, far below in He has been years out of commission, involved in debt necessarily in defending his claims, spending two years and a half in settling his accounts without any pay for it. This bill simply gives him the increase of pay due to the difference between major and colonel.

I admit that rank and commission upon the retired-list are very unequally held. Here we have just made a gallant cavalry commander a major on the retired-list. Another man who held high cavalry commands in many divisions and fought them gallantly has gone back to the retired-list, a man more or less broken in health, willing to take the place of captain.

This is not a case to which you can apply logic. It is a case in which the Government comes as a great father. Logic or no logic, I am willing to let the old man have the little difference in pay. He is seventy-five or eighty years old, and in the hospital now.

Mr. EDMUNDS. So am I, and I will subscribe for it myself to the extent of my means, if the Senator's views are correct.

The question is, if we are going to do this thing for this gentleman, with what face can we say we are going to do it to rectify the inequalities that the Senator from Connecticut confesses exist in the retiredlist now? Let us look at this case as it stood when the President of the United States dismissed this gentleman from the Army. The law said that in time of war the President of the United States might dismiss anybody from the Army, with reason or without reason. If the President thought that the interest of the public service required him to say to me or to my friend—though I was not in the Army except as a captain of militia, without a gun, during that time, and my friend was at the front all the time—that our service was no longer required, he had the power to say it. The law imputed that discretion to the President of the United States; it was a discretion that was necessary, and I suppose in the four years of the war the President of the United States dismissed probably two or three or four or five hundred, or perhaps, a thousand officers, going down from general to lieutenant, which I believe is the lowest commissioned officer.

Now, the question is whether the President of the United States, having exercised the power that the law reposed in him of dispensing with the services of a military or a civil officer, either of those citizens has any claim upon Congress to review that action of the President, and say you ought not to have turned this man out of the public service and remitted him to his condition of a citizen of the United States, and we are to be a board of appeal higher than the President under the Constitution, and say, "You did wrong in doing that; the public service would have been better promoted and this gentleman's emoluments and honors would have been greater if you had not done it, and we will therefore pass a law at some later time to rectify that error that we think you committed."

I do not believe you can carry on a government justly and wisely in that way. If you undertake to do it, it will become a government of bias, of favoritism or prejudice, depending upon the influences that can be brought to bear upon me—I will not speak of any other Sena-tor or Member of the House of Representatives—to push this particular gentleman's case because he lives in my State, or because his wife is a very persuasive logician, a sympathetic person who will lead you to feel that whatever she may wish at that time is just to her husband, and so on. It does not appear to me that government should go on in that way; and when the Constitution and the laws vest in the President of the United States the right to select, and negatively to dispense with, the services of public officers, either in military or civil service, and he does it, it is no part of the business of Congress to undertake to review that action of the President.

The present Administration has dismissed many persons from the civil service of the United States that I believe to have been wrongly dismissed, and whose dismissal was injurious to the public service. we waive the distinction which I admit does exist to an extent between the civil and military service in such matters, every person in the civil service who has been dismissed by the President of the United States in the last three or four years may come and say to Congress, "Now give me the pay and the rank of a judge in a Territory, or a collector of customs, or a postmaster, or an internal-revenue officer, or an Indian agent, or a consul, or a minister," or whatever may be the whole range that is covered by this exercise of a discretion which the Constitution and the law have imputed to another branch of the Government than this. That is my point. It has no relation to the personal question about Mr. Belger at all. It has relation to the broader thing, if we do right equally to all men, that we are acting upon a principle involved which is highly injurious, as I believe, to the public interests.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, just a word more and that is all.

I can not agree with the Senator from Vermont in saying that Congress is never to exercise anything like the reviewing power of a court of equity. I think it ought reasonably to be expected that when one of its great executive officers commits an act appearing and acknowledged to be, I may say, an act of great injustice, an act inflicting offi-cial infamy, as well as personal loss at the same time, it is within the power of the supreme government in those instances to make some sort of atonement—or if you do not use the word "atonement" to do some sort of justice to the man.

If the Senator will go into the office of the Secretary of State he will find that Congress itself has not been above repentance. He will find an act of censure placed upon a great soldier, afterwards President of the United States, which was expunged by express order of Congress, and worse than expunged—not erased from the book, but around it he will find heavy black lines of a subsequent disapproval and revoca-

Mr. HOAR. What case is that?

Mr. HAWLEY. The famous Andrew Jackson case.
Mr. HOAR. Not expunged by order of Congress, as the Senator stated, but by the Senate alone.

Mr. HAWLEY. By the Senate alone, then. That is enough for my purpose. I am only speaking of the Senate. This is not the first time in the world by any means that Congress has tried to do equity notwithstanding the severe letter of law.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, in reply to what has been said by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. EDMUNDS] I simply desire to read what has been stated by General Grant. It seems from his statement that the dismissal in this case was not the act of the President of the United States, but that of the Secretary of War. While the President has the right, of course, to make removals, yet the Secretary of War, as General Grant states it, acted without consultation with the President I desire to read what General Grant has said upon that point in behalf of this gallant old soldier who now seeks some reparation for the wrong done him.

This was written but a short time before the death of General Grant, to General Logan, and is as follows:

NEW YORK CITY, December 4, 1883.

New York City, December 4, 1883.

Dear Senator: I send you inclosed the petition of Col. James Belger, United States Army, retired, for restoration of pay and rank claimed to be unjustly, if not illegally, withheld from him.

May I ask that you will give the petitioner a hearing and such action as your judgment will approve of after due consideration? One fact stands out clear, that Colonel Belger was tried by court-martial and acquitted honorably; that the findings of the court were not approved by the Secretary of War—I say the Secretary, because I do not believe he presented the case to the President—who then dismissed the prisoner by order. It seems his accounts were settled promptly, thus affording some evidence of the injustice of the dismissal.

Very truly, yours,

U. S. GRANT.

Hon. John A. Logan, United States Senate.

U. S. GRANT.

I read that merely in response to what was said by the Senator from Vermont in regard to the right of the President to dismiss such officers. It seems that this gallant old soldier now tottering on the verge of the grave, and I believe in hospital, partly from poverty and perhaps paralyzed, was dismissed from the service dishonorably by an arbitrary He was sensitive as to his rights and his fame, and his friends sympathized with him and they would not let the matter rest. came to Congress and an act was passed during the administration of President Johnson, I believe, for his restoration. He was only partially restored. Something was necessary to be done. General Grant states that he would have restored him when President if he had had the power and such is the proof in this record. After that he continued knocking at the door of Congress for justice, and at last we find the Military Committee of the Senate, to which this matter was referred, examined all these reports and the letters of Grant and Rosecrans and Schenck, under whom he served, and taking all the circumstances into consideration (though it may be a bad precedent in one sense) agreed to make an exception of this case and override former prece-So the committee has asked the Senate to recognize the rights of this old man even at this late day, and to give him this relief.

It is very natural for a man who had received the military education Belger had, and who has gone along the checkered road he has, to prefer to be buried when he dies-and that must be soon-in the uniform and with the epaulets of a colonel. It is a passion with him, and the committee looked at all these things, which did make to some extent a strong case of equity.

I have read, in response to what was said by the Senator from Vermont, the words of General Grant, written just before his death, and I ask in the name of the Military Committee, which I think was unanimous—we have heard from the chairman of the committee—that this old man be restored to his rights. It is a small pittance to this great Government, it is true, but it is a great thing to him. He has served the country faithfully, $11,000,000 going through his hands in one year, and he settled his accounts without the loss of a penny. I say such a man should be recognized, and it is the duty of the Government to provide for him whenever it can be done consistently with its law and in keeping with its precedents.

I ask, therefore, that this old man may get as unanimous a vote as possible, even if it comes to a yea and nay vote, to sustain him and let it go upon the record, and when he dies let him be buried, as he desires to be, in the uniform of a colonel, which he has never disgraced.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HOAR. What is the amendment? Let it be again read. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read. Mr. EDMUNDS. Let us see what is the first proposition. Let the original bill be read.

The Chief Clerk read the bill and the amendment of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to inquire of the committee whether that last phrase—it is an unusual and very inartificial, technical one—is at all essential to their purpose:

And all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are suspended for this pur-

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the usual provision. The President can not appoint any officer above the grade of second lieutenant in the Army and below that of colonel—from colonel down—except by promotion from a lower grade; and we suspend the law requiring this appointment to be made by promotion.

Mr. HOAR. But the act of Congress suspends it without saying

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the usual form. That has been adopted to show that we suspend the law of promotion for this purpose.

Mr. HOAR. I will not make any point upon it, but it certainly strikes me as a very inartificial and clumsy phrase. If we make a law, that is the law, supposing it under the Constitution to be within our constitutional power, and that of course prevails over all other laws, and it is not necessary to suspend them for this purpose only. I will not move an amendment, but I wish to enter my protest.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts is manifestly right, and it is an improper use of language when we make a law which has the force and effect of repealing a previous or inconsistent statute to say that such previous statute shall be suspended temporarily, the law itself having that effect. But I think there is another point that should be made in regard to this bill. We sit as judges in a case like this, and here is a case where the public faith has been pledged to an officer to repair an injustice done him. So this report states.

The President of the United States himself declared in 1867, as the report states, that being convinced of the injustice of the treatment accorded Major Belger, he revoked the order of dismissal and restored him to the Army. This order failed of effect, Congressional legislation being required to render it effectual. The matter rested until 1871, when a bill restoring him to the rank of major from the date of its passage became a law. The report also states that the Secretary himself sage became a law. The report also states that the Secretary himself would have repaired the wrong. This action of the Secretary of War dismissing Major Belger was unauthorized by law, as it was manifestly

Now, with what propriety can the committee recommend or Congress declare that they will not redress a wrong done without authority of law and therefore of no legal validity, but still effecting all the injury that it would have done if it had been done with full authority of law? The Senator from Vermont objects to this bill, because he says that we should do equal justice to all, and we should commence doing this equal justice to all by doing injustice in this particular case! Because if we do justice to this man and do not redress every other wrong, the justice done will be unequal. That is to say, we shall not do justice to any man because justice can not be done at the same time to all men. There is no sound reasoning in this proposition of the Senator from Vermont.

Equal justice to all men may be impossible, but the proposition of the Senator from Vermont that therefore no justice should be done to any man is a non sequitur, and impossible, as a rule of either public or private morals.

Here is an officer removed without authority of law and in defiance of law, so interpreted by the Executive himself, by the general under whose command he served, by every succeeding general, and the proposition is to restore him to the position of which he was unlawfully deprived. What object of public policy can there be in saying that this man should not have the position which was wrongfully taken from him and all its emoluments?

Are you going to build up patriotic citizen soldiers in that way, by refusing to do them justice, by allowing unlawful and usurped authority to deprive them of their good names and of their just emoluments? The bill ought to pass giving Major Belger the rank and emoluments which belong to him by law, he having never been lawfully deprived of them, and as a question of law and right never having been out of the service. A man can not lawfully be deprived of his office by a Secretary of War without the President's approval. In this case it is proved that the President did not approve the Secretary's action, and that the Secretary himself did not approve his own action in the premises, but sought to reverse and annul it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Senate resumes the consideration of the unfinished business.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope this bill may be finished. I have no disposition to delay it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas [Mr. Coke] is entitled to the floor on the unfinished business.

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. COKE. I will yield if a vote can be had immediately, without further debate.

Mr. CALL. I do not propose to delay the consideration of this case. I only wish to point out the manifest wrong of the case.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas yield for further debate?

Mr. COKE. I am not willing to yield for further debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas objects to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida object to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. CALL. I do not.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask if the Senator from Florida will not yield and let us have a vote?

Mr. CALL. Yes, I yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on Military Affairs.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11879) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 717) granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Maulding, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the bill and amendment, and had appointed Mr. LANE, Mr. YODER, and Mr. SPOONER managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the

The message lutriner announced that the house had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher; and
A bill (H. R. 11777) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith,
Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs, in the State of Kansas.

The message also announced that the House had receded from its

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 12384) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 3949) to enable the President to protect the interests of the United States in Panama; and

A bill (S. 3865) to provide for writs of error or appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States in all cases involving the question of the jurisdiction of the courts below.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to Congressional elections

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I propose this morning to proceed with as little delay as possible to lay before the Senate additional testimony in support of the memorial read two days ago from citizens of Washin support of the memorial read two days ago from chizeles of the investigation of the Washington County, Texas, disturbances was had, and I will ask the Secretary to turn to page 471, testimony of E. P. Curry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF E. P. CURRY.

E. P. Curry, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For whadidate for magistrate on the People's ticket.

Q. Were you elected or defeated?

A. I was defeated.

Q. Who defeated you?

The Wirnsess. Do you mean who was my opponent?

Mr. Eustris. Yes.

A. Mr. Riggs Hackworth.

Q. What was the character of the canvass that you had; did you take an easily all the second of the convention of the convention of the convention of the citizens where they met at school-houses and places of that sort to discuss of the citizens where they met at school-houses and places of that sort to discuss of the citizens where they met at school-houses and places of the wort to yote the People's ticket were intimidated by Republicans?

The Wirnses. Whether they were intimidated by the Republicans?

A. I know they were induced to believe that they would be—

Mr. Stoonen. That is not an answer to the question.

The Wirnses. The were speeches made which were calculated to dissatisfy the negroes in our oounty, and make then believe they were not getting the rights that belonged to them, and they were told if they continued to support the Democrats it would finally result in ruin. I heard some of

Q. Were these threats that you are talking about threats that were made in ness meetings of secret societies?

A. It was, as a rule, in secret societies.
Q. Are you a member of any of those secret societies?
A. No, sir.
Q. Then how do you know anything about it?
A. I said I heard that reported from negroes.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Did you hear that from negroes?

Q. Did you hear that from negroes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who told you?
A. I think I heard a dozen or more negroes say so in Brenham; some who voted with us.
Q. Do you know S. A. Hackworth?
A. I do.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. I have known him about six or seven years.
I have known him by reputation ever since I can remember, but personally I have known him for five or six years.

Q. What is his standing and general reputation in that community?

Q. What is his standing and general reputation in that community?

A. It is not good.

Mr. Spooner. For what?

Q. Do you mean it is bad?

A. Yes, sir; it is bad.

Q. What is the general standing and reputation of Mr. Schutze there?

A. I do not know very much about Mr. Schutze, but I have heard the Germans speak of him, and from what they say about him it is not at all good; that he had quit his wife, and so forth, and was not very honorable.

Q. Do you know what the standing and reputation of Mr. Moore is there?

A. I have heard a great many say that he would not pay his debts, and things of that sort. I do not know a great deal about Mr. Moore, but I do not think he had any business, at least not just before he left.

Q. Do you think there is any reason, from the mere fact that a man is a Republican, why he has to leave that community?

A. I know it is no reason for his leaving.

Mr. Spooner. The witness's opinion on that subject does not amount to anything, or change the facts. We are trying to get at what happened. His individual judgment is not important. If you ask about the public sentiment, that is one thing, but his individual opinion we do not care anything about.

The Witness. I can give you the opinion of the public generally, if you want it. Mr. Eustis. Very well.

The Witness, Asto whether they would be safe or not there, I have not heard of any organized mob which would do anything to them, and I have been right in with the Democrats of that county, and I think the mere fact that part of them did stay and were never molested is a very good reason to suppose that the others were not in any danger.

By Mr. Spooner:

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. Yousay you think the negroes were intimidated against voting the People's ticket?
A. Yes, sir; I do.
Q. Do you know whether they were or not?
A. I think they were.
Q. Iask you if you have any personal knowledge of any negro being intimidated?

A. I have seen them pulled away from the polls by other negroes when they wanted to vote.

Q. You have seen white men pull them away from the polls when they wanted to vote?

A. I do not know that I have.

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. Pulled away when they wanted to vote what?
A. When they wanted to vote the Citizens' ticket. We had no Democratic ticket in our county.

Mr. COKE. I desire to call attention to one fact developed in the testimony of this witness. It is that he was a candidate for the office of justice of the peace, and that his opponent was Mr. Riggs Hackworth, who resides in Brenham, Washington County, a brother, as I have understood, of the memorialist, Stephen A. Hackworth. Mr. Riggs Hackworth was elected and this gentleman was defeated. I call attention to this fact to show that Mr. Riggs Hackworth, an active Republican and a brother of the memorialist, Stephen A. Hackworth, is in Brenham now exercising the duties of a magistrate, and is doing well. I desire that fact to be remembered in connection with the charge of intolerance against the people of Washington County.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to the testimony of Henry Hodde, and read it, on page 486.

and read it, on page 486.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Pasco in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF HENRY HODDE.

Henry Hodde, being duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Henry Hodde, being duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. What is your name?

A. Henry Hodde.

Q. How old are you?

A. I aw forty-eight years old.

Q. Where do you live?

A. I live in Brenham, Washington County, Texas,

Q. How long have you lived there?

A. I have lived there about twenty-seven years.

Q. What is your politics?

A. Merchandising.

Q. What are your politics?

A. I am a Republican.

Q. How long have you been a Republican?

A. Ever since I have been in America.

Q. What ticket did you vote in 1884—what local ticket?

The Witness. Do you mean two years ago, or this election?

Mr. Eustis. I mean two years ago.

A. I voted the People's ticket.

Q. What were the reasons for making up a People's ticket in that county?

A. Our county heretofore, for many years back, had been badly managed, and the good citizens of the county and tax-payers agreed to put polities aside and make a People's ticket regardless of politics, and select the men, and those men were selected and elected.

Q. Did many Republicans take that view of it?

A. Yes, sir, I think the German population, seven-eighths of them, belong to the Republican party, and they took the same view and supported the People's ticket—that is, the local ticket. But in national politics the ticket was headed either Democratic or Republican, so that they could vote as they pleased; but in local affairs they voted the People's ticket.

Q. That was caused, you say, by bad administration in county affairs previous to 1884?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What party was in power there in the county at that time?

A. It was said to be the Republican party, but there were some few Democrats also who were elected—for instance, the county clerk.

Q. Do you know what is the standing and general reputation of S. A. Hackworth?

A. In the community it is considered not very good.

Q. Do you know what the standing and reputation of Mr. Schutze is?

A. About the same; not considered very good.

worth?

A. In the community it is considered not very good.

Q. Do you know what the standing and reputation of Mr. Schutze is?

A. About the same; not considered very good.

Q. Do you know whether the mere fact that a man is a Republican in that community prevents him from living there peaceably and quietly?

- A. Under no circumstances. I have freely explained my opinions, Q. A man is not molested in his business or social relations on that account? A. Not in the least. Q. Do you think that Mr. Hackworth, Mr. Schutze, and Mr. Moore could have remained there if they chose?

  A. Of course; that is my opinion.
- Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 489 and read the testimony of William Thompson.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM THOMPSON.

William Thompson, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:

- By Mr. EUSTIS:
  Q. What is your full name?
  A. William Thompson.
  Q. Where do you live?
  A. I live near Brenham, in Washington County, Texas.
  Q. How far from Brenham?
  A. About two miles and a half.
  Q. How long have you lived there?
  A. I have been living two and a half miles from Brenham for sixteen years.
  Q. What is your business?
  A. I purchase cotton for Northern manufacturers.

By Mr. TELLER:

- Q. You are a cotton broker? A. A cotton dealer; yes, sir.

By Mr. Eusris:

- What are your politics?
  I have always voted the Democratic ticket since the war.
  Do you know Mr. S. A. Hackworth?
  Yes, sir.

- One of the memorialists?
- A. Yes, sir.
  Q. One of the memorialists?
  A. Yes, sir: I have known him for a number of years there.
  Q. What is his standing and reputation in that community?
  A. I know very little about Mr. Hackworth personally, and never had much association with him, but as an official there, I know he was odious to the best sentiment of the community and the county. He was an official only in one of the precincts of the county. In our town or justices' precinct his reputation was not very good.
  Q. Do you know anything about the standing and reputation of Mr. Schutze?
  A. Only from the general reputation of the man in the community. He is a man with whom I had no intercourse of any character. I do not think I ever knew a man afflicted with as great an amount of leprosy in my life as Mr. Schutze, personally.
  Q. By "leprosy" you mean moral leprosy?
  A. Yes, sir; I mean moral leprosy. As an official he was regarded as corrupt, and I think his social ostracism from the entire German families of that county (and they are very clamish) is complete and perfect. I do not think there were half a dozen families in the county that he would be admitted access to.
  Q. Do you know anything about the standing and reputation of Mr. Moore?
  A. Yes, sir; I have known Mr. Moore rather familiarly for a long time. I know nothing on earth against Mr. Moore's character. As an official he was regarded as having discharged the duties of his office always fairly and faithfully.
  O Do you know anything about the circumstances of his leaving?

- regarded as having discharged the discretizations fully.

  Q. Do you know anything about the circumstances of his leaving?

  A. I do not.

  Q. And he never told you?

  A. No, sir; I never heard him say a word about it. I think the could be raised to Mr. Moore was probably that sometime A. I do not.

  Q. And he never told you?

  A. No, sir; I never heard him say a word about it. I think the only objection that could be raised to Mr. Moore was probably that sometimes in his official intercourse he was not as courteous as he might have been, but I never felt the effect of that myself. I think Mr. Moore is a different man from the
- ficial intercourse he was not as courteous as he might have been, but I never felt the effect of that myself. I think Mr. Moore is a different man from the other two, entirely.

  Q. What is your opinion, from what you heard and from everything that has occurred and transpired, so far as your observation extends, as to these people being obliged to leave that community simply because they were Republicans; do you believe any such thing as that?

  A. I do not know anything of the sort. I can hardly realize that in a community like ours a man should have to leave on account of his politics. No, sir; I do not know that either of those political leaders, Hackworth or Schutze, had to leave, and I do not know that I have ever heard Mr. Moore charge that he was advised to leave; he has not testified, I believe. I think those other individuals were not odious because they were Republicans, but in regard to Mr. Hackworth especially I think it was because he manipulated the colored element of the Republican party, and that is only one element of it, because almost the entire German community there are Republicans. He manipulated the colored element of the Republican party in such a way as to impose upon the people of that county office-holders who were obnoxious, and I think the opposition to them was chiefly on that account. It gave birth, as has been testified here by a number of others, to a People's party, the People's ticket, which was the result of a fusion between the Republicans and the Democrats in the interest of good county government. of good county government.
- Mr. COKE. I desire to state of this gentleman that I know him well. He is an ex-member of the Legislature of the State of Texas, a gentleman who stands high in Washington County and everywhere else where he is known.

Now I ask the Secretary to turn to page 492 and read the testimony of Gus Hopkins.

The Secretary read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF GUS HOPKINS.

Gus Hopkins (colored), having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. EUSTIS:

- By Mr. LUSTIS:

  Q. Are you a white or a colored man?
  A. I am a colored man.
  Q. The reason I ask you that, preliminarily, is to get a photograph which has to go down in writing. How old are you?
  A. I am twenty-eight years old, or will be in a few months.
  Q. Where do you live?
  A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
  Q. How long have you lived there?
  A. I have been there about twenty-seven years.
  Q. What is your business?
  A. I am employed by the city.

  - Q. What is your business?
    A. I am employed by the city.
    Q. In what capacity?
    A. As a cartman.
    Q. What are your politics?
    A. I am a Republican.

- A Q'A Q'A Q'A
- et?
  The People's ticket.
  Did you vote that ticket in 1884, do you remember?
  Part of it I did.
  I mean two years ago?
  Yes, sir; part of the People's ticket I voted.
  How did you vote at the last election?
  I voted the People's ticket straight out and out.
  Why did you vote for the People's ticket instead of the Republican ticket he last election?
  WITHERS. Why did I do it this last time?
  FEUSTIS. Yes.

- A. I voted the People's ticket straight out and out.
  Q. Why did you vote for the People's ticket instead of the Republican ticket at the last election?
  The WITNESS. Why did I do it this last time?
  Mr. EUSTIS. Yes.
  A. Because the People's administration had shown to me that it was a more fair and honest administration, and was better for the people in general.
  Q. Do you know whether a good many of your colored people wanted to vote the People's ticket?
  A. Yes, sir; there was a good many who wanted to do it, and there was a good many who did vote the People's ticket.
  Q. Was it the opinion of yourself, and people like you, who voted the People's ticket, that your rights would be fully protected under that administration?
  A. Yes, sir; that was the conclusion that a majority of the people—well, a

- A. Yes, sir; that was the conclusion that a majority of the people—well, a large number of them, but not the majority of the colored people, came to.

  Q. Was it known among the colored people that the administration of their school affairs was better for the colored people under the People's administration than under the Republican ticket?

  A. Yes, sir; that was about one of the first things that caused the colored people—so many of them—to go that way. We had seen the difference. The teachers of the county never had any trouble in getting their money for teaching or anything like that since the People's administration had been in power there.

- teachers of the county never had any trouble in getting their money for teaching or anything like that since the People's administration had been in power there.

  Q. Do you know of any efforts being made by these white Republican leaders to prevent the colored people from voting the People's ticket?

  A. Yes, sir; there had been some effort made to prevent it, and it created quite a disturbance and excitement among them.

  Q. Among the colored people?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Haven't the colored people there a good many societies?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Church and charitable societies?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. And social organizations?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. And social organizations?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. Are not the colored people who want to vote the People's ticket threatened with losing their membership in the church and their membership in these societies if they vote the People's or Democratic ticket?

  A. Yes, sir; if they vote the People's ticket.

  Q. They consider it a great hardship, do they not, to be excluded from any of their societies?

  A. Yes, sir; from any of their societies at all.

  Q. Do you know a colored preacher named J. R. Bryan?

  A. Yes, sir;

  Q. Do you know of any trouble into which he got because he advised the colored people to vote the People's ticket?

  A. Yes, sir; 1 think he was notified by some of the members of his church that he had better pull up stakes and leave there, because the members of that church intended to starve him out there in this coming year if he staid there; that they did not intend to pay him; and he had several insults offered to him and was treated very rough by them afterwards.

  Q. And that was because he had advised the colored people to vote the People's ticket.

- A. Yes, sir; to vote the People's ticket.
  Q. You had two brothers who were killed, did you not?
  A. Yes, sir; two of my brothers were killed.
  Q. What were their names?
  A. Oscar Hopkins and Tom Hopkins.
  Q. Do you know whether they voted the People's ticket?
  A. Yes, sir; they both voted the People's ticket.
  Q. Did not that cause, so far as you know, a great prejudice against them among the colored people?
  A. Yes, sir; they both voted the People's ticket.
  Q. Did not that cause, so far as you know, a great prejudice against them among the colored people?
  A. Yes, sir; it caused a great prejudice against them, and was the cause of their lives being taken from them as they were.
  Q. Who killed them?
  A. Dan Nelson.
  Q. Who is Dan Nelson?

- Q. Who killed them?
  A. Dan Nelson?
  A. He is a colored man, and supposed to be a Republican; one of the Republican men there.
  Q. Is he an active Republican?
  A. Tolerably active; he is in with them a good deal.
  Q. Were your brothers killed on the spot?
  A. Yes, sir; they were shot down; one lived to get home, and the other one did not live to get home.
  Q. How were they shot?
  A. The first one was shot right in the center of the back, and when he fell the youngest one turned around to stand him upon his feet, and whilst he was stooping down to pull him on his feet, they shot him right in the forehead.
  Q. Was it generally known among the colored people that they had voted the People's ticket?
  A. Yes, sir; it was generally known. We had been out on several occasions playing for them in the band, and we had several insults offered to us about our being a Democratic band, and things of that kind.
  Q. Have any threats been made against you for voting the People's ticket; I mean by colored people?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. State what threats have been made; state fully what you know about it.
  A. There was a coloredman, a Republican, and a very prominent Republican, among them, came to me awhile after my brothers were shot and told me I had better go to work and sell my place np there where I was living at, becau-e I didn't have a friend in that end of the town; and he said that they didn't intend to come up to my face and hurt me, but they would do it like they did to the boys, they waylaid them; that they would kill me just like they killed the two boys; and he said that he could have told the boys a week before they were killed that they work lied up in that way, and if he was in my place he would sell the place and go nearer in to town, to a thicker settlement, where I had some friends living, but if I staid there I would be certain to be hurt, and there would be no telling which one would do it. He said he could have told me or the boys either, a week before the killing taken place, that they would be killed, but he didn't want trouble when he was in it; that he didn't want to lose his friendship by giving away anything that happened in their meetings. He said that they had a meeting in Mr. Frieke's office down there the evening before he told me about it, and had decided to kill three of us—that was me, Algie Hunt, and his boy—and he said they were going to meet and kill Algie and his boy together. One of the colored men in the meeting got up and told them that if they killed Algie to kill his boy with him, just like I told you about killing those two young Hopkinses; it would not do to leave him, because they ought to kill me first and then kill him.

Q. What did they want to kill you and Algie Hunt for?

A. I don't know, sir, unless it was for supporting the People's ticket. I asked him what did they say they wanted to kill us for, and he said it was on account of the course in politics that we had taken.

Q. In supporting the People's ticket?

A. Yes, sir. I asked him was there any more that he knew they was going to hurt, and he said no, that we three was the main ones they intended to hurt if they hurt any more.

Q. You, Algie Hunt, and Hunt's son?

A. Eighteen or nineteen years old, as near as I can come at it. He even told me, if I remained where I was, if my wife or child would die up there, there would never anybody come to us to see it unless it was Algie's family and Willis Bagby, another colored People's ticket man; that no one would even attend the funeral if either one of us was killed.

Q. That the colored People would not come to see your wife if she was sick or if your child was sick?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you heard any threats made against other colored people; did any other colored people ever tell you of threats made against them on account of their voting the People's ticket?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Brut they would not come to their funeral?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But they would not be allowed in their church or societies?

A. For what, if they voted the People's men to speak, and would obe mistreated in that way. But for

A. That is it, yes, sir.
Q. And that a colored man came to you and told you what threats had been made against you and your family for having voted the People's ticket?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. COKE. I call the attention of the Senate to what every man in the South knows to be true with reference to the intimidation of negro voters. It is that the only intimidation they are subjected to is by people of their own color. The negroes invariably intimidate the people of their own color in order to keep them in line politically. This man tells of intimidation in Washington County. Two of his brothers were shot down like dogs because they had voted the People's ticket. He states that they are excluded from the societies of colored people; that they are expelled from the churches. He tells of a minister, Mr. J. R. Bryan, who because he voted the People's ticket had to leave his congregation and be assigned elsewhere in another county to preach.

That is a phase of political life and warfare which is not understood outside of the South. I have never known of any intimidation of colored voters by white people; I have never heard of it; but there is not a county, I venture the assertion, in the South where everybody does not know that the colored people do intimidate and bulldoze each not know that the colored people do intimidate and bulldoze each other. They make a persenal matter of politics.

Now, when you put such men as Hackworth and Schutze and that sort of leaders among them it is not difficult to imagine the excesses to which they may be led. Naturally the negroes are docile and confiding and not prone to engage in conflict, but when they are led by such men as Hackworth and Schutze and Moore have been proved to be there is nothing that they can not be made to do. This negro's testimony discloses a condition of things in Washington County under the leadership of these men that I presume every man here from the South leadership of these men that I presume every man here from the South can truthfully say he has seen duplicated under similar conditions in his own part of the country.

I ask the Secretary to turn to page 499 and read the testimony of Algie Hunt. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF ALGIE HUNT.

Algie Hunt (colored), having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows: By Mr. Eustis:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Algie Hunt.
Q. Are you a white or a colored man?
A. I am a colored man.
Q. Where do you live?
A. I live in Washington County, Texas,
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. About forty-two years.
Q. Where do you live; at Brenham?

I live within 2 miles of Brenham. What is your business?

What is your business?
Farming.
What are your politics?
Republican.
Did you vote for Blaine and Logan?
Yes, sir; I did.
What local ticket did you vote for at the last election?
I voted the ticket that was made up by the people.
What was called the People's ticket?

A. I voted the ticket that was made up by the people.

Q. What was called the People's ticket?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How came you, a Republican, to vote for the People's ticket against the regular Republican ticket?

A. Well, the last Republican ticket we had proved so bad that the colored and the white people together made up a ticket out of the honest men, and when that ticket was made it was elected, I believe, all except one or two candidates; and then the administration of those men proved to be a success to the county, and got the county in better condition and taken care better of the people's property, and one thing and another; and this time—this last election—they sent out a petition—the citizens did—got up a petition inviting the same candidates to make the run over again, and I signed it, and afterwards I supported the whole of the People's ticket.

Q. You are a farmer; do you own a farm?

A. No, sir; I work on Col. Tom Swangeon's place.

Q. Is there much bitterness of feeling between the colored people, those who vote the People's ticket and those who vote the straight Republican ticket?

A. Yes, sir; there is a right smart of bitterness.

Q. What is the cause of it?

A. I think it is all caused by those white Republicans there amongst us who stir up strife and try to run themselves into office, and all such things as that. We have got some good, honest Republicans there, but those are the office-seckers.

seekers.
Q. Who do you mean by some of those white Republican leaders who stir up

Q. Who do you mean by some of those white Republican leaders who stir up this strife?

A. I mean such men as Hackworth and Schutze.
Q. S. A. Hackworth?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who else?
A. Mr. Schutze.
Q. Does this bitterness extend to your societies and churches?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you colored people who vote the People's ticket receive threats of expulsion from those societies and churches?
A. Yes, sir. and it is an every-day cry there amongst us. Some of the Republicans, colored men, are cussing us, and I can hear something of that kind every time I come to town.
Q. They abuse you?
A. Yes, sir; abusing us; and they even sow the seed of discord among the women, and they commence talking.
Q. Isn't it a sort of tyranny that they try to exercise to compel these colored people to vote the local Republican ticket?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You know what ostracizing means, don't you?
A. I think I do.
Q. Is there not a general system of ostracism there?
A. Yes; that is just what it is.
Q. And these colored people render your life almost unbearable, simply because you vote with the Democratic party for the People's ticket?
A. Yes, sir.
Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 502 and read the

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 502 and read the testimony of John Levin.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF JOHN LEVIN.

John Levin, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. What is your full name?
A. John Levin.
Q. How old are you?
A. I am fifty years old.
Q. Where do you live?
A. I live at Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. About twelve years; since 1875.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am engaged in the newspaper business; I am part publisher and editor of the Brenham Banner.
Q. What are the politics of that paper?
A. Democratic.
Q. Do you know Mr. S. A. Hackworth, one of these memorialists?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know Mr. Schutze?
A. I do.
Q. Do know Mr. Moore?
A. I do.

Q. What is the standing and general hood?
A. It is not good, not good at all.
Q. Do you mean by that it is bad?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In both cases?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. TELLER:

Q. Both of them are bad? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. What is the standing and general reputation of Mr. Moore? A. Mr. Moore has stood reasonably fair in the community up to the last election.

Q. Do you know what is the reason that the general reputation of Mr. Hackworth is not good there; why is it bad?
A. Principally on account of politics—that is, his actions politically, and his failure to pay his debts, and a generally meddlesome disposition.
Q. He has held office there in that county?
A. Since I have been there he has held the office of justice of the peace.
Q. How do you account for the bad reputation and standing of Mr. Schutze in that community?

in that community?

A. His general conduct has been such as to bring him into disrepute.

- Q. Do you know whether the mere fact of a man being a Republican in that community has anything to do with his business or social standing at all?

  A. None whatever.
  Q. Do you know that it is a reason for his leaving that community; do you know that the mere fact of a man being a Republican is a reason for his leaving that community?

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to the testimony of Mr. E. Rouse, upon page 541, and read it.
The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF E. ROUSE.

E. Rouse, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eusris:

- What is your name?

- By Mr. Eustis;
  Q. What is your name?
  A. E. Rouse.
  Q. What is your age?
  A. I am forty-six years of age.
  Q. Where do you live?
  A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
  Q. How long have you lived there?
  A. I have lived in the county twenty years.
  Q. What is your posities?
  A. I am a mechanic, and a dealer in oils, paints, and colors.
  Q. What are your polities?
  A. I have always voted independent; just as I pleased, regardless of party.
  I have voted for what I thought was the best man. I have voted for Republicans, Democrats, and Greenbackers.
  Q. Do you know Mr. S. A. Hackworth?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What is his general reputation and standing in that community?
  A. Mr. Hackworth's reputation is bad, sir.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Schutze?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. What is his reputation and standing in that community?
  A. Still worse, I think.
  Q. Do you know Mr. Moore?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. How does he stand?
  A. Mr. Moore has always stood very well in our county up to this last election.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 545, and read the testimony of J. M. Wesson.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF J. M. WESSON.

J. M. Wesson, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

By Mr. Eustis:
Q. What is your full name?
A. J. M. Wesson.
Q. How old are you?
A. I am twenty-three years of age.
Q. Where do you live?
A. In Navasota, Grimes County, Texas.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a lawyer by profession,
Q. Are you in the militia?
A. Yes, sir, I am captain of a militia company there.
Q. In November last were you and your company ordered to Graball?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. By whom?
A. I received a telegram from Adjutant-General King.
Q. Is he the adjutant-general of the State?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was that telegram?
A. I haven't the telegram with me, but as near as I remember it—
Mr. Spooner. See if this was it; I guess it was:

"Austin, Tex., November." "AUSTIN, TEX., November 8.

"Capt. J. M. WESSON, Navasota:

"Put your company under arms and report to J. H. Roberts, secretary of the citizens' meeting. Preserve the peace at all hazards.
"W. H. KING, Adjutant-General."

- "Put your company under arms and report to J. H. Roberts, secretary of the citizens' meeting. Preserve the peace at all hazards.

  "W. H. KING, Adjutant-General."

  The Witness. That is the telegram.
  Q. How many men did you take with you?
  A. Sixteen men of my company besides myself.
  Q. You went to Graball at once?
  A. Yes, sir; to Lott's Store, very near to Graball—a mile and a half on the other side of Graball.
  Q. When did you get there?
  A. I got there about half past 11 o'clock that night.
  Q. What day of the month was it?
  A. It was the 8th of November.
  Q. To whom did you report?
  A. When I arrived there I found some members of the citizens' committee. I did not go to Mr. Roberts's house; I sentsome of my men there, though. We were distributed then among the houses of the citizens in the vicinity. I think three of the men went to one house, and they were distributed around in that way. There was no reporting done to any one that night, though I reported to Mr. Roberts next morning at a citizens' meeting held near Lott's Store.
  Q. You went there armed and equipped?
  A. We went as militiamen to preserve the peace.
  Q. What did you understand from Mr. Roberts or the citizens was the occasion of your going there?
  A. I understood that they had been alarmed by reports from the negroes in the vicinity; that they apprehended trouble with them.
  Q. What do you mean by trouble?
  A. They apprehended that their houses would be burned and that they would be attacked.
  Q. That the white people would be?
  A. Yes, sir; the white people, the white Democrats of the vicinity.
  Q. In other words, you understood there would be an uprising of the negroes in that locality?
  Mr. Spooner. He is an intelligent man; let him tell.
  Q. I ask you if that is true?
  A. Yes, ithat is what you understood was the reason and occasion of your going there as a captain of a militia company?
  A. Yes, sir;

- Q. Ordered there by the adjutant-general of the State?

- A. 1 cs, str.
  Q. How long did you remain there?
  A. We arrived there, as I said, about 11 o'clock on the night of the 8th, and we remained there all day on the 9th, leaving about sundown, and returning to Navasota

- Navasota.

  Q. You say you scattered your men around?

  A. I scattered them around that night for lodgings. As I say, next morning we all got together and remained together while we were in the county.

  Q. Where did you remain together, at what place?

  A. As I said, they had a meeting near Lott's Store, and we left Lott's Store and went to Flewellen, where the killing of Bolton had taken place.

  Q. How far is that from Lott's Store?

  A. I should judge it was about 4 miles. We got there about 10 or 11 o'clock the next morning and remained there several hours, and then returned home by a somewhat circuitous route; it was sundown before we got out of the county.

  Q. When you left everything appeared to be quiet?

  A. Yes, sir.

  Q. And you considered that you had fulfilled your orders?

  A. Yes, sir; I saw no further necessity for remaining.

  Mr. COKE. I desire to say that this is the captain of a military com-

Mr. COKE. I desire to say that this is the captain of a military company, who is represented by these memorialists to have been sent to Washington County to bulldoze and overawe the Republicans and ne-groes. His statement shows that they were in the county only about a day and a half; that they were ordered there to preserve the peace, and finding that the alarm was unnecessary, they returned home.

I now ask the Secretary to turn to page 548 and read the testimony of B. S. Rogers.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF B. S. ROGERS.

- B. S. Rogers, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows; By Mr. EUSTIS:

- What is your full name?
  Ben S. Rogers.
  How old are you?
  I am thirty-five years old.
  Where do you live?
  In Brenham, Tex.
- A. In Brenham, Tex.
  Q. How long have you lived there?
  A. I have lived in Brenham a little over two years, perhaps three years, but I have lived near there for about twenty years.
  Q. What is your occupation?
  A. I am a practicing lawyer.
  Q. Did you ever hold any office?
  A. Yes, sir; I am county attorney of Washington County at the present time.
  Q. How long have you held that office?
  A. Since 1884.
  Q. You were elected in 1884?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. And re-elected in 1886?
  A. Yes, sir.
- A. Yes, sir. Q. Did you conduct the inquest over the bodies of the three negroes who were

- Q. And re-elected in 1886?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Did you conduct the inquest over the bodies of the three negroes who were hung?
  A. Yes, sir.; I was present during the inquest.
  Q. Were you present there in an official capacity?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Under the law of the State?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Representing the State?
  A. Representing the State in the examination.
  Q. Did you use all proper efforts to discover who the parties were who committed that act?
  A. Every possible effort that I could use was put forward in that investigation to ascertain who it was who hung them.
  Q. Did you take an active part in the last canvass?
  A. Yes, sir.
  Q. Did you hear any of those speeches made by the Republican leaders?
  A. I seard a great many of them.
  Q. Were they what you would call incendiary speeches, some of them?
  A. I do not know that I would term them that. They made use of a great many expressions and declarations that had a tendency to discontent the negroes and make them dissatisfied with their condition.
  Q. I mean did you hear any appeals made to their prejudices as colored people, or to their fears as ignorant people?
  A. Yes, their speeches had that tendency.
  Q. Go on and state what you recollect about it.
  A. I do not know that I could give what each or any of the speakers said particularly, except in a few instances perhaps. Some of the Republican speakers made use of the language that "the Democrats won't let you eat with them, won't let you eith them, won't let you sie their families, or sit in their parlors, or converse with their daughters, and I do not see why you should vote for them," and such expressions as that.
  Q. What else do you remember, if anything, showing the general character of their speeches?
  A. Well, they would go on and stell the negroes that the Democratic tariff was the cause of their situation, was the cause of their being poor, and the cause of their otton being worth but 6 or 8 cents, and the cause of their getting a low price for the picking of the cotton, that it was occasioned by the tariff; also that

- A. Yes, sir.

  Q. What is his general standing and
  The Witness. In the community at Brenham?
  Mr. EUSTIS. Yes.
  A. Well, I will say, from the way it is discussed there, it is bad.

  A. Well, I will say, from the way it reputation is. Do you spear
- Q. You are asked what his general reputation is. Do you speak of it prior to the excitement of the last election?

  A. Yes, sir; I mean ever since I have known him.

By Mr. Eustis:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. It has not improved since, has it?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. What is the general character, standing, and reputation of Mr. Schutze there in the community?

A. As bad as it possibly could be in the community.

Q. What is Mr. Moore's reputation and standing?

A. I think he stands better than Mr. Schutze.

Q. Do you know anything about any threats being made against either of those gentlemen, compelling them to leave there?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Did you hear of anything except what occurred at that meeting?

A. I did not hear that; I was not present.

Q. Did you hear among the leading Democrats there any statements or declarations made to the effect that they intended to expel those men from that community?

larations made to the effect that they intended to expel those men from that community?

A. No, sir. The nearest I heard towards anything of that kind was when these men were going around the streets and making these statements. George Campbell told me that Mr. Potter had just told him that they had carried the election, and rather than submit to being kept out of the offices they would resort to shotguns, or something of that kind. That was the only direct and positive assertion I heard on that point, but the rumor was that they were going around with that report among the negroes, and I had heard Democrats say if that was to be the result that such men ought not to be permitted to stay there; I do not know that any names even were called.

Q. That report did exist, then, that Mr. Potter had said they would resort to the shotgun?

A. Yes, sir; it was all over Brenham.

ne snotgun?
A. Yes, sir; it was all over Brenham.
Q. In order to recover possession of those offices?
A. Yes, sir; if it was necessary to resort to arms or shotguns that they would

A. Yes, SIF; If It was necessary to these things had been stated to the negroes do so.

Q. There was also a report that those things had been stated to the negroes there; do I understand you to say that?

A. Yes, sir; that was my understanding from what Mr. Potter told Mr. Campbell, that that was what they intended to do.

Q. Did you understand that he said that any negroes had been informed of that purpose?

A. No, sir; Mr. Campbell did not state.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 558 and read the testimony of Lewis R. Bryan.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF LEWIS R. BRYAN.

Lewis R. Bryan, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Where do you live?
A. In Brenham, Washington County, Texas.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. I have lived in the town of Brenham about six years, but have lived in Washington County for twenty-four years.
Q. What is your business?
A. I am a lawyer.
Q. What are your politics?
A. I am a Democrat.
Q. Have you had any regular Democratic nominations in that county since 1884?

Q. What are your politics?
A. I am a Democrat.
Q. Have you had any regular Democratic nominations in that county since 1884?
A. We have not. I will go on and state about that matter, knowing of course what you want, and it will save time. In 1884, just as the other witnesses have stated here, the condition of our county had been, from a tew years atter the war up to 1884, a peculiar one. The county had been mainly under Republican rule. I wish to state here that Washington County is a Republican county. It is understood that on a strict party vote on national and State issues the majorities in Washington County range from 600 to 500 or 900 in favor of the Republicans. My recollection is that Garfield got a majority of some 500 votes over General Hancock in 1890, and Blaine's majority was some 600 or 700 over Mr. Cleveland. The statement was made by some one here yesterday that out of 5,500 or 5,600 votes in the county there was usually about 2,500 colored and about 3,000 white. Of the white vote we usually estimate 1,200 or 1,300 as the American vote, and about 1,700 or 1,800 as the foreign vote, and in that foreign vote, as we call it, we include the Germans. Polanders, and Bohemians. The Bohemians generally vote the Democratic ticket, and there are about 200 of them.

The German vote is generally Republican with the exception of a few old Germans who came there prior to the war. The most of the Germans in our county have come there since the war and they are generally Republicans. They are these gentlemen we have here with us as witnesses. We had a commissioner's court, and from 1882 to 1884 Mr. Hodde was on that court; I forget who was with him. At any rate, there were two men, and they were a sort of check on what seemed to have been makedministration prior to that time. Things had been going on from bad to worse until finally we had such an existing state of affairs there that in 1844 a card was published in the Brenham Banner (I think Mr. Haynes, one of the witnesses here, signed that call among others) c our officers on this People's ticket, and the result, I think, fully justified our course in the matter. In 1886 we got up a petition. I know that in Brenham I carried around the petition myself and got a good many signers to it. It was a petition calling upon these incumbents of the various offices, including among others Mr. Joe Hoffman, a Republican candidate for assessor (the one who was re-elected at the last election), and I signed that petition myself, and a number of Democrats did also.

By Mr. EVARTS:

By Mr. EVARTS:

Q. What was the object of that petition; what did you ask to have done?

A. The petition asked the present incumbents to stand for re-election. The object I had was (and many who signed it expressed to us the same statement) that as we were satisfied with the county administration of the officers as they then stood, taking it as a whole, we wanted to re-elect them; we thought we would ask them to stand for re-election again. Times were very hard in our county, and they were especially worse at each election because of the demoralized condition of the negroes, their leaving their work and failing to gather the crops in the fall. The excitement of the election had a bad effect in that way; they were out at nights attending political meetings, neglected gathering their crops, and they didn't give their work the same attention that they ought to. I know that some of the merchants there spoke of that; they had made advances to them which they could not repay, and the farmers said they hoped there would be a quiet election, so that the negroes would stay at home and gather their crops and attend to their business: that it would be so much better for the county. I know some of the Republicans spoke in the same way, business men who signed this petition. I know at this election several gentlemen told me, Captain Smith and Mr. Couch and other men who were the most pronounced Democrats and extreme men, too, partisans, that they voted for Lockett on the Republican ticket. They said they did not consider that there was any politics in it, and there was no Democratic ticket in the field.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Mr. Lockett, I understand, was indorsed by the Republicans.
A. Mr. Lockett was the regular Republican nominee. Mr. Minkwitz was the one who had run before on the People's ticket, and who was called upon in this petition to run; was included in it.
Q. Do you know Mr. S. A. Hackworth?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you known him?
A. Ever since I can recollect, by reputation, and a good many years personally ally.

Q. What is his standing and general reputation?

It is bad, sir.
In that community, you mean?
Yes, sir; it is bad.
Do you know Mr. Schutze?

Yes, sir.
What is his standing and general reputation?
It is bad.
Do you know Mr. Moore?

Q. Do you know Mr. Moore?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is his standing and general reputation?
A. Mr. Moore among the Republicans, that is, among the Germans, stood well.
Mr. Moore stood well among the German Republicans, but among the Democrats his reputation was little better than the others; he conducted himself more decently, however. He had held offices that did not require the handling of any money. He was district clerk and was never charged with malfeasance or maladministration.

Mr. COKE. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 582, and read the testimony of D. C. Giddings.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF D. C. GIDDINGS.

D. C. Giddings, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. EUSTIS:

D. C. Giddings, having been duly sworn, was interrogated as follows:

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. I reside in Brenham, Washington County, Texas.

Q. What is your age?

A. I am fifty-eight years of age.

Q. Have you ever held any office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What office?

A. I was a member of the constitutional convention of Texas in 1866, and served three terms in Congress, in the House of Representatives, in the Forty-second, Forty-third, and Forty-fifth Congresses, I think.

Q. In regard to these outrages, the raiding on the ballot-boxes and so on, I want you to state what possible connection any of these disturbances have had with the Congressional election in 1886?

A. None whatever.

Mr. Stooner. All right, then.

The WINNESS. I meant this, that had the entire vote of Washington County either been counted out, or all had been counted in for the opposing candidate, for Colonel Mills, he would still have been elected.

Mr. STOONER. You do not mean to say that it did not have any connection with the Congressional result?

The WINNESS. I say it did not affect the result.

Mr. STOONER. That is another thing; that is what I think.

Q. Was there any canvass or any excitement with reference to the Congressional election at all?

A. Colonel Mills made two or three speeches in the county. There was no other canvass, and no particular interest felt; that is, it was regarded that Colonel Mills was so far ahead of his competitor that he was in no danger, and that no necessity existed for exertion on his part or on the part of his friends; that he was entirely safe in the election.

Q. That was generally understood, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do in the late canvass?

A. No. sir; nothing at all. I took no part in the election. I will state this; I am a Democrat, and have believed in keeping up the Democratic organization and making a square fight, even if we got whipped. I took no part in the election of 1886 except to go to the polls and vote, and was not out of my office more th before the meeting occurred. I was informed, and knew from my intercourse with those who came into my office, that there was a great deal of excitement. The belief there was (and it was universal so far as I know; I heard no contradiction of it) that young Bolton had gone to the poils simply to learn how his father was running. His father was candidate for county commissioner; and that he went there alone, unarmed, as a peaceable, quiet citizen, and that he had been shot down without any provocation whatever; and it was elicited in this examination that it was in pursuance of the instructions given to negroes in that community.

father was running. His father was candidate for county commissioner; and that he went there alone, unarmed, as a peaceable, quiet clitzen, and that he had been shot down without any provocation whatever; and it was elicited in this examination that it was in pursuance of the instructions given to negroes in that community.

A. By an egro named Polk Hill; and that it was in pursuance of instructions they had received from Gilder and Lockett, Republicans, who had been sent there to manipulate the vote during the day; that they had given the advice to the negroes to come to the polls armed and shoot down any white man who might come about here. It was described to me that he knocked at the door, and was told to come in by the proprietor of the house, and as the door opened that he was shot down right in the doorway, and without any sort of provocation; that he was alone; in fact, I never heard anything to the contrary until I came here as to anybody being along with him; until it was testified to by witnesses on the stand. There was intense excitement, and I, in the interest of law and order, went to the meeting and advised the observance of law, and although the his provocation was great, and although the character of the speeches that had been made, or represented to have been made, by these parties were, as I thought, outrageous, and made to ignorant, excitable, and credulous people as the negroes are known to be, still that the canvass was over, and, as we believed, the Pople's that had been committed, that the people should be quiet, should observe the laws, should be guilty of no violence and no excesses whatever; and I gave that advising, notwithstanding the outrages that had been committed, that the people should be quiet, should observe the laws, should be guilty of no violence and no excesses whatever; and I gave that advised, publicly, and one of the memorialists, I think, in a circular stated, in effect, that but for my speech violence would have been done to him and others probably that day. But I ne

Q. You are acquainted, I suppose, with the prominent German business men in Brenham?

n. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that not the prevailing sentiment among them, that there ought to have been a change, regardless of party lines and regardless of color?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. A large number of them supported the People's ticket?
A. Yes, sir.; I think so.
Q. Men who were Republicans?
A. I think the principal property-holders who are Republicans in and about Brenham supported the People's ticket, and many others through the county that I am acquainted with.
Q. What is the standing and reputation of S. A. Hackworth?
A. It is not good; it is bad.
Q. How about Carl Schutze?
A. That is also bad, judging from statements mainly by Germans. I know but little personally of Mr. Schutze. I never had any transactions with him, and had but little to do with him, but I know he is very unpopular with the Germans.
Q. What about Mr. Moore's standing?

Germans.
Q. What about Mr. Moore's standing?
A. His standing is bad also.
Q. Do you know anything about those men being obliged to leave, as they claim, on account of their being Republicans?
A. No, sir; I do not think they are obliged to leave on account of their being Republicans.
A. No, sir; I do not think they are obliged to leave on account of their being Republicans. I think they were what is termed there "Republicans for revenue only;" Republicans for the sake of getting office at the hands of the negro vote, and when they failed in that, in 1884, their occupation was gone. As they were ekking out a miserable existence making a living, it would seem natural that they would want to change their location. They had lost caste with the best element of the Republican party, and they would very naturally want to leave; and understanding, as they doubtless do, that they would find support in the Senate of the United States, it was the opinion—it was my opinion, at least—that they came on here purposely to pose as martyrs, with a view of recognition in a Federal position of some sort.

By Mr. Spooner:

By Mr. SPOONER:

Q. They could not expect to get any very remarkable Federal position at the hands of a Democratic administration, even with a Republican Senate?

A. I do not know about that, but I know there are a good many Republicans holding positions under the Democratic administration.

By Mr. Eustis:

Q. You mean by "posing as political martyrs" that they would, by being persecuted, as they claim, have some right of recognition in case a Republican President was elected?

A. Yes, sir; I think that is the sole object.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I wish to say just one word with reference to this witness, Colonel Giddings. He is a native of Pennsyl-He came to Texas when he was twenty-two or twenty-three years old, a poor young man, but by his force of character, his ability, and his business talent he has long been one of the wealthiest men in Texas. I suppose his draft among those who know him in New York would be as good for a quarter of a million dollars as the draft of anyone else there. He has been three times elected to Congress. He is known to many gentlemen in this Chamber and in the other House. He is a man of great honesty and of the highest character.

Among all the contributions-and they have been manythe State of Pennsylvania to the population of the newer States and Territories, she has never sent out of her borders a nobler specimen of manhood than De Witt Clinton Giddings, the man whose testimony has just been read. I now ask the Secretary to turn to the testimony of Robert J. Moore, on page 668.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TESTIMONY OF ROBERT J. MOORE.

Robert J. Moore (colored) swern and examined.

By Senator Pugn:

By Senator Pught:

Where do you reside?
In Washington, Washington County, Texas.
How long have you lived there?
I have been there between eighteen and nineteen years; since 1870.
About what is your age now?
Between forty-five and forty-seven; I don't know my exact age.
Are you in any position in Washington County?
Yes, sir.
What is it?
I represent Washington County in the twentieth legislature.
You represent Washington County in the Texas Legislature?
Yes, sir.
To what political party do you belong?
I am a Republican.
Have you ever belonged to any other party?
No, sir.
Have you ever voted for any other than Republican candidates?

Q. Have you ever belonged to any other party?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you ever voted for any other than Republican candidates?
A. Yes, sir; I have voted for men that were not Republican candidates; I have voted mixed tickets.
Q. Why did you vote at any time for others than Republicans; if you had any reasons, what were they?
A. Because the Republican ticket didn't suit me altogether.
Q. When were you elected to the Legislature?
A. I were elected at our last general election.
Q. Was that last year, 1887, or this year?
A. No, sir; it was two years ago this fall, 1886,
Q. How many times have you been elected?
A. I have been elected three times.
Q. You say you were elected as a Republican?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who supported you—anybody but Republicans?
A. I couldn't tell you who all supported me; I was elected.
Q. I mean did you have any opposition?
A. Oh, yes.

Q. I mean du you have.
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Did any Democratic candidate run against you?
A. Yes, sir; once—well, twice; I don't know but that there was a Democratic andidate against me every time; I don't know for certain.
Q. There were Democratic candidates running against you every time you rere elected?
A. Hold, right there, I know there were candidates; whether they were were elected?

A. Hold, right there. I know there were candidates; whether they were brought out by the Democratic party or not I can't say, but there were Democratic candidates against me

Q. But you were elected and declared elected in that county?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there at the election in 1886?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us all you know about the character of that contest, the election in November. 1885?

Q. Will you tell us all you know about the character of that contest, the election in November, 1885?

A. Well, sir, I know nothing more than what I have heard about it. I was a candidate, but I never went to but one box, the box I served at; that was the Graball box, and I went there and staid perhaps a couple of hours, and then right back home, and didn't go there again until they were counting the vetes, some three or four or five days afterwards—I can't recollect exactly how long. I went back home that night and staid at home for three or four or five days until, I believe, the last day that they were counting the votes.

Q. You were a Republican candidate for the Legislature in that election in 1886?

A. Yes, sir: I always run as a Republican.

Yes, sir; I always run as a Republican.
 You were elected, were you, that year to the Legislature from Washington

Q. You were elected, were you, that year to the Legislature from Washington County?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. That was the time you were elected for the term you are now serving?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know anything about the feeling, the excitement, that was gotten up, if there was any more than usual? If so, what was the cause of it?

The WITNESS: In that election?

Senator Pugh. Yes; in that election of 1886 in that county. Tell what the trouble was, what the contention was, if any, and what officers were to be elected.

elected.

The Witness, I know of no trouble before the election or during the canvass more than just heated debates with one another; that is, before the election.

Q. You had a contest, as you always had in such elections; was there any dif-

Q. You had a concest, and ference?

A. Yes, sir. We can vassed the county as we usually do—one party against another—and of course they had some pretty flery debates during the can vass, but there was no fighting that I know of; if there was any I didn't know it.

Q. Against whom was the principal opposition made; the county officers, or whom?

whom?

A. The opposition were altogether against the county officers, pretty generally.

Of course, every man tried to be elected, but the people seemed to be more interested in the county officers than the State officers, that is, representatives.

Q. In Washington County?

A. Yes, sir; in that county.

O. What was the reason there was more excitement about the election of

Q. What was the reason there was more excitement about the election of county officers?

A. The reason of that simply was that the county officers paid better than the representative's office, and of course they were more interested in it.

Q. Who were the candidates for the county offices?

A. I don't know that I could name them all from memory, but I can name some of them. Judge Kirk was on the People's ticket for county judge, and Judge Schutze was on the Republican ticket; well, I can't say that it was the Republican ticket, because the way that we have—I will give it to you just as it was; It was not a Republican ticket, as I understood it; in fact, that ticket was; It was not a Republican salways make a ticket.

Q. Which ticket?

A. The ticket that Schutze ran on. He was in opposition to Judge Kirk; Mr. Fricke was in opposition to Mr. Dever for sheriff. I can't name all of them exactly, but the county collector and sheriff and treasurer they took more interest in that election than they did any other county officers, because the offices pay better.

Q. Whom did you support in that election for those county offices?

A. I supported every one on the Citizens' ticket?

By Senator Teller:

By Senator TELLER:

Q. The Citizens' ticket? A. The People's ticket.

By Senator Pugn:

Q. Give your reasons for voting that ticket. A. Simply because every one on the other ticket was voting for me,

By Senator TELLER:

By Senator Teller:

Q. The other candidates were working against you?

A. Yes, sir. I do believe that perhaps there may have been a few candidates that were running that perhaps may have supported me, but I didn't know it, because I believe they thought more of me than they did of the man I was running against. If I got any votes among the candidates that were running on the ticket—on Judge Hackworth's ticket—if I got any votes on that ticket at all among the candidates, it was the white candidates. I am satisfied of that, because of the two men, I believe, every one has told me as far as I was concerned I was in the wrong place, but as men they liked me the best, or as well. I don't know any white men were running but what preferred me to the man running against me, but at the same time they couldn't do better than to make the canvass against me.

Q. You were opposed by Mr. Hackworth, or did he support you?

A. I don't really believe that Judge Hackworth opposed me, but, of course, he was on the other side, and he worked, of course, against me.

By Senator Pugh:

A. I don't really believe that Judge Hackworth opposed me, but, of course, he was on the other side, and he worked, of course, against me.

By Senator Pugh:

Q. You say Schutze was a candidate against Kirk? Was Schutze nominated by the Republicans?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did he come to be a candidate?

A. I will tell you if you will give me time. We usually, in Texas, and have been ever since 1870—our counties have been divided up into what is known as precincts—and we usually at each precinct have a precinct meeting just before the ticket is made, and elect delegates to go to Brenham, our county seat, to make a Republican ticket. That is what divided Judge Hackworth and me. Judge Hackworth and others and Blunt were in favor of just calling a mass meeting, and letting people in mass make a ticket. I opposed it. I reasoned with the other Republicans and did all I could to keep them from doing it. I didn't think the colored people would understand it, but I could do nothing with them, and hence they met and attempted to overrun me with the people. We called a vote on it when we met in county convention. We made speeches. But still, when we called the vote the people were with me, and the chairman wouldn't put the question, but got down out of his seat and went downstain and wouldn't put the vote.

Finally, after the people had gone away, in the night, he goes up there, and goes on the street and around town and gets a few of them into the hall again that night, after the people had gone away, in the night, he goes up there, and goes on the street and around town and gets a few of them into the hall again that night, after the people had the meeting. Then it was too strong for him, and the meeting broke up in a row. Later I had to go to Austin for some purpose. I think some weeks later they met there again. I was not in the meeting. I got back that night and calls a meeting, and of course then he tried to carry a vote for a mass meeting. Then it was too strong for him, and the meeting broke up in a row. Later I had

O. What are the causes of the division?
The WITNESS. You want me to tell you?
Senator Pugh. Yes; that is the reason I ask you the question.
The WITNESS. Very well; I will take pleasure in doing that. We had two very prominent men in our county, Mr. Harvin and Mr. Clayton. At the first split I was chairman of the county convention, and their names were presented to that convention. Mr. Harvin was nominated fairly and honorably and honorably. estly.

By Senator TELLER:

Q. For what office?

A. The office of county collector, the largest office, as I look at it, and the best paying office in the county. Judge Hackworth, for some cause, I don't know what it was, and Blunt and Caine and quite a number of others, boiled the convention and run Clayton anyhow. They made up a ticket after we had come out of the convention, and run a man by the name of Clayton. That split the Republican party. I and Judge Hackworth canvassed the county against one another, fought one another politically all over the county, but I beat him and elected my man, and since that time we have had a little split all the way up. I am sorry to say that, while the judge is a good Republican, he was the cause of our split. Before that there wasn't a sign of any bolt, but from that time they have been bolting more or less ever since. But before that time they would vote for anybody that I or Judge Hackworth or any influential Republican told them to vote for.

By Senator Pugn:

By Senator Fught:

Q. I understand you to say that the feeling of opposition and excitement was mainly in regard to the election for the office of county judge.

The WITNESS. Last election?
Senator Pught. And in 1886.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; I believe that was about the only real excitement, with one or two exceptions, at precincts. I have heard of it, but I have never seen it. Most of the excitement was created, as a general thing, from Mr. Schutze and Judge Kirk. I believe there was great opposition; of course I know it. know it.

Q. The contest between these two men was the cause of the excitement at the with one or two exceptions, at precincts. I have neared of it, but I have never seen it. Most of the excitement was created, as a general thing, from Mr. Schutze and Judge Kirk. I believe there was great opposition; of course I know that the contest between these two men was the cause of the excitement at the election that year?

A. Yes, sir; there was great opposition to Schutze, more than to any of the other candidates that were running, I think. The Democratic party didn'tilke Schutze, and they were opposed to having him as a candidate, and they did everything to beat him.

Q. What was the ground of the opposition to Schutze—that he was a Republican, or why were they against him? Was it on account of his personal character; e.g., and they were they against him? Was it on account of his character.

A. All I ever heard speak about it opposed him on account of his character.

Q. On account of his personal character; yes, sir.

Q. About what was the extent of the opposition to him in the Republican party—one-third, a quarter, or a half? How much opposition did he have from Republicans for that office?

A. I couldn't exactly say.

Q. What is your best judgment?

A. All could give you my best judgment about, sir, is, he was opposed by me, for one, and by my influence. I didn't want to see Judge Schutze elected, A good many colored people have been against him, I couldn't say how many, and there would have been quite a number voted against Mr. Schutze. We taught our Republicans down there not to scratch the ticket, but Judge Hack-couldn't be scratched; you had to vote that telete or not vote it. Of course, all the colored men wanted to vote the Republican ticket; then if you exatched it you couldn't insert another name, and many voted for him, and not only for him but for others because they couldn't make that change. I know that Mr. Schutze got votes that he wouldn't have got had it not been for that teleket.

Q. You say that Mr. Hackworth made that statement publicly, that they couldn't scratch off any man?

A. O

By Senator TELLER:

Q. So he could indict them, do you mean? A. So he could indict them, as a sort of detective.

By Senator Pugh:

By Senator Pugh:

Q. How many were indicted in that way?
A. God only knows.
Q. Five or six hundred?
A. I couldn't answer that question.
Q. There was a large number, was there not?
A. Yes, sir; there was a large number.
Q. Did you ever hear of his not reporting any who paid him to not do so?
A. Yes, sir; the heard that.
Q. Outside of the number that were indicted but not tried, did he get pay from any one that you know of?
A. He was charged with it, sir, in the county. I want to tell just exactly the truth, and nothing but the truth, what I swore to. He was charged with it in the canvass by Mr. Rogers there, and Judge Kirk and others, that dared him to deny it; said it was a matter of record, and that brought up several other charges. I don't know whether they are true or not. They said they were matters of record, and could show them, and he didn't deny them.
Q. The opposition from the colored Republicans was from those who had been reported by him and indicted, was it not? These persons who opposed him did it with knowledge that he had reported them for indictment, and got pay from them to stop the prosecution?
A. Partly so. But the colored people of Washington County didn't want Judge Schutze for county judge. They voted for him, as I stated, because he was on the Republican ticket, and we had ever taught them not to bolt the ticket.
Q. Not to scratch it?
A. Yes, sir; not to scratch the ticket.
Q. What was the general feeling, friendly or unfriendly, and what is it between the whites and blacks in Washington County?
A. The general feeling has been very good ever since I have been in Wash ington County. The feeling has been about as well as it could reasonably be expected to be in any Southern county. The colored people and the white people have got along. Of course, occasionally we would have trouble. What I have reference to, there is counties and States—I didn't see it—where they don't allow colored people to hold office, and where they give them a great deal of trouble at the ballot-box in voting. In Washington County I don't know of but one instance—I don't know that, I heard it; where I voted there is a very large colored vote, and I am always at the polls, and I have never saw in the part of Washington County where I am (at Washington) any man come up and deny any colored man the right to vote. The general feeling has been, except the trouble about Bolton and that trouble, very good.

I believe I could say safely that seven out of every ten colored men that get into trouble, as a general thing, have got Democrats to go on their bond. I know they went on my bond. For instance, the feeling is like this: A man's father was probably a slave; the children have grew up; one of those slaves gets into trouble, and they will generally go on their bond and get them-out on bail. They have did that. And really, I don't know what we people down there would do in Washington County, I don't know about anywhere else, but it is pretty general all over Texas, if they didn't go on our bonds and help us, there would be hundreds, yes, I reckon a thousand, in the jails of Texas to-day.

Q. They go to the white people for assistance whenever they need it, do they?

A. They are bound to do it.

Q. And they generally get it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they get it from these white people who used to own their fathers?

A. They are bound to get it from them; there is no one else to get it from, as a general thing. Republicans?

A. They are bound to get it from them; there is no one else to get it from, as a general thing. Republicans?

A. No, sir; I am speaking of Southern Republicans, American Republicans; this don't i to give all the necessary bonds and to help and give us the aid that we need at times in Texas.

Q. Where was the principal opposition to Schutze from the colored people; in what beats?

A. In Washington beat pretty generally, precinct I.

Q. What is the name of that?

A. Washington precinct. That is also the case in the Chapel Hill precinct.

Q. And Graball; where is that?

A. That is in my precinct.

Q. Graball is the Washington precinct?

A. It is in the Washington precinct.

Q. Then Flewellen; where is that?

A. That is in my precinct; that is in Washington precinct.

Q. Flewellen and Graball beats, as some of them here call them, are where the principal opposition from the colored people to Schutze came from?

A. Yes, sir; right there, especially Graball and Flewellen; they rousted him, Ibelieve, there more than they did in any other part of Washington County.

Q. Do you know anything about the destruction of boxes and all that trouble about the voting?

A. No, sir; I do not know who destroyed the boxes.

Q. You do not know anything about that?

A. No, sir; I don't know who did it.

Q. How have colored people been treated there by the county officials in respect to jury trials, sitting on juries, their rights in courts, and all that sort of thing?

A. Lbelieve they have been treated very well. Labare never heard any par-

Q. How have colored people ocen treated after by the County and all that sort of thing?

A. I believe they have been treated very well. Lihave never heard any particular complaint. I am hardly ever at Brenham—that is, during court time—unless I am summoned there, and I don't know that I have ever been summoned there more than once or twice. But I have heard no complaint.

Q. You have heard no complaint about the colored people not getting all the rights to which they are entitled from the Democratic officials in that county?

A. No, sir; that is, if there is anything of that I know nothing of it. I know that they treat me the same as a Republican. If I have business with them I go in there, and they treat me just like any other officer would. They have some colored men in there, employed there, around about the court-house. They have a colored constable there, and other officers. They have never bothered us in our holding offices, or anything like that. We have been beating them at elections all the time until five or six years ago, and then we commenced mixing up our ticket. This last trouble is the only trouble we have had amongst the officers, that I know of. We did have some trouble at Independence, but I didn't know what it was exactly, and that has been a year ago. I want to tell the truth as near as I can. the truth as near as I can. Mr. Наскwовтн. Don't forget Chapel Hill in 1884. Some men were killed there.

The Wirness, Yes, sir; there was some trouble there.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Texas if he will consent that I may ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the pending resolution be informally laid aside in order that the residue of the evening may be devoted to the Calendar?

Mr. EDMUNDS. I object.

RETURN OF DIRECT TAXES.

During the remarks of Mr. Coke,

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senator from Texas to yield that I may submit the report of a committee of conference, which I think it important to have acted upon.

Mr. COKE. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PASCO in the chair). The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Cinier Cierk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (8, 139) to credit and pay to the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia all moneys collected under the direct tax levied by the act of Congress approved August 5, 1851, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 2, and agree to the same amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to such person as shall in each case apply therefor, and furnish satisfactory evidence that such applicant was at the time of the sales hereinafter mentioned the legal owner, or is the heir at law or devisee of the legal owner of such lands as

That in all cases where persons, while serving in the Army or Navy or Marine Corps of the United States or who had been honorably discharged from said service, purchased any of said lands afterwards reverted to the United States, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to such persons as shall in each case apply therefor, or otheir heirs at law, devisees, or grantees, in good faith and for valuable consideration, whatever asm was so paid to the United States in such case. That before paying any money to such persons the Secretary of the Treasury shall require the person or persons entitled to rec

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio ask for immediate action on the report?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate agree to the report of the committee of conference?

The report was concurred in. Mr. BLAIR subsequently said: I ask the attention of the Senate for a moment to a personal request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state his request.

Mr. BLAIR. I was called from the room on a matter of importance, and, being detained some fifteen minutes perhaps, during my absence the direct-tax bill was passed. I requested the Senator who had it in charge that when it was called up I might be notified, as I desired to say a word upon the passage of that bill, which I opposed and voted against when it was first passed by the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent now for not exceeding five minutes to make a statement in regard to that bill, and that my remarks be received and considered in connection with its passage.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator move to reconsider?
Mr. BLAIR. I simply desire to say a word by unanimous consent. The PRESIDENT protempore. The Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE] being entitled to the floor, the Senator from New Hampshire can proceed with his consent. Does the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. COKE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, the direct-tax bill has been much discussed in the country, and its general provisions are of course thoroughly understood. The amount of money that will be returned under its provisions to the State of New Hampshire is $185,000, but, notwithits provisions to the State of New Hampshire is provisions to the State of New Hampshire is provided by standing that this is quite a considerable sum coming to our pockets, I standing that this is quite a considerable sum coming to our pockets, I felt under the necessity of opposing the bill and voted against it. did so without explanation or argument, and before it had become to any extent or in any sense a party measure. I opposed it purely and simply upon its merits. I gave, however, no reasons for my action upon the bill.

Naturally considerable criticism falls upon those who vote that their own States shall not receive money from any source and every source by which it can be derived by any process short of theft, and this, certainly, is not a process of that description. But it seemed to me that it was a proceeding unconstitutional in its character and injudicious for many reasons, and therefore I opposed it. I do not wish at this time to enter into any discussion of the legality or constitutionality of the measure. I had other practical reasons for opposing the bill, one or two of which I desire to mention.

For a long time there have been claims preferred against the General Government by various States, of one character and another, to which, by reason of their relations with the General Government, there are offsets, or offsets in the way of claims whether they be legal offsets or not, and this particular matter of the uncollected tax, which is due or supposed to be due from any of the States, has in discussions and in committee-work and in other more prominent work perhaps often been urged as a reply to specific claims which it is exceedingly difficult to collect or to establish on behalf of those States. Notable among these collect or to establish on behalf of those States. Notable among these are the swamp-land claims which have been preferred from time to time, and to which it has often been replied in committees and elsewhere by asking payment of this direct tax, and I think it has been the means of protecting this Government against injurious legislation in the past.

By this bill all these matters are to be wiped out; these States go scot-free; and those other claims, which may or may not have legality in them—perhaps they may have legality, but certainly nothing of justice so far as I understand their merits—are left to find their way to sattice so far as I understand their ments—are left to find their way to satisfaction out of the national Treasury, as I believe they will inevitably. I should have been very glad to have kept this direct tax due and owing from the States who preferred these large claims for swamp lands, and perhaps for other reasons I should have been very glad to have kept them where they were as a sufficient and perpetual bar to prevent the collection of what I believe to be, if legally right, morally exceedingly wrong.

But I have still another reason. We have not a great deal of money to spare in New Hampshire, and this is a proposition to take out of the people of our State at least $300,000, whereas they will receive not over one hundred and eighty or one hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars by the distribution.

Mr. President, this is not a proposition to repay to the States the money that was collected from them. The money has become merged money that was collected from them. The money has become merged in the general funds of the nation, and went, a quarter of a century ago, to preserve its unity and its integrity. That money has gone. It is proposed now to return to the States, not that money plus the interest due thereon, but simply the amount that was originally paid. This amount of money now in the Treasury and to be taken out of the Treasury to be applied in this way is money which but for its use of that character would be applied upon the national debt or to the current expenses of the Government, and it is money which must be replaced in the Treasury by taxation now existing or to be imposed hereafter. In other words, future collections from the people of New Hampshire are to take out of the people of New Hampshire the entire amount of money which is now to be returned from the Treasury; and beyond that, as I have stated, a very considerable sum in advance. our system of taxation, as we all understand, the funds in the Treasury are derived not per capita, but are a mortgage or a lien upon the consumption of the various States. The money is paid in the form of customs dues, which are ultimately paid by those who consume the articles which are imported. It is paid in the impositions upon articles subject to internal-revenue taxation, and from those sources the money that is now being taken out of the Treasury will necessarily lections. The people of the State of New Hampshire are consumers, as compared with the remaining people of this country, to the extent of at least $1.50, where the average is $1. Taking the average of the entire country at large and fixing it at 100 cents, you will find that the citizens of New Hampshire, by reason of the increased consumption of our people, pay of the taxation with which this money is to be replaced at least 50 per cent. more than the average citizen of the United States. Thus it is that this $185,000 which is to go to my own State is simply a loss to us in the aggregate effect of the operation of the bill by very nearly $100,000, or one-half of the whole.

This is one of those practical reasons which apply directly in refu-within a short time be replaced by still further impositions and coltation or in extinction of the motive which leads to the enactment of the bill. Ours is one of those States obliged to pay at least one-half more than they receive thus in advance. I was opposed to the bill, although I did not take the time of the Senate to express my reasons. I was opposed to the bill because it was a wrong to the people of my State in the matter of mere money, and because within the next two or three years every dollar of this $185,000 or $200,000 which we are to receive we shall replace with one-half as much more in addition

These are the ideas, very briefly expressed, which I desired to state more at length if I had been present when the conference report was I ask that they be printed in connection with the adoption of the conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.
Mr. EDMUNDS. I ask leave of the Senator from Texas to say a word about the refunding direct-tax bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas yield?
Mr. COKE. I yield.
Mr. EDMUNDS. I was not present in the Senate when the report of the conference committee was acted upon, but from having seen it a day or two ago in the newspapers I am very much of the impression that it involves a very heavy expenditure by the United States as regards certain parts of that bill, which do not rest upon principles of justice and will become a mere gift or gratuity not resting upon any foundation of principle or justice at all to some of the States of the Union. Had I been present at the time the matter came up I should have endeavored to ask the gentleman in charge of it to explain precisely what was meant and what would be the effect of certain phrases in the bill as it now stands.

I am very much afraid that we shall all be surprised one, two, or three years hence to see what its outcome is as it regards some of the States and as it regards the justice of taking money from the Treasury upon such considerations. But as I was not present at the time I have no right to move a reconsideration. My apology, or rather my justification, for not being present is the circumstance of my being a member of a joint committee of the two Houses concerning the Washington Aqueduct tunnel, which was authorized, and in fact required, in this late stage of the session, to come to a conclusion as soon as it may.

I now move, as my friend from Texas, I understand, does not care to conclude his remarks to-night, that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Vermont if we may not have brief executive session?

Mr. EDMUNDS. As it is Saturday evening, I think we had better wait until Monday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate adjourn. The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, February 18, 1889, at 12 o'clock m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, February 16, 1889.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EMPLOYÉS OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of State, transmitting a statement showing the names and compensation of the employes in that Department, the time each has been employed, and stating that their services are indispensable; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the State Department, and ordered to be printed.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of State relative to the appropriation for contingent expenses of foreign missions for the fiscal year 1886; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

FORT SMITH, PARIS AND DARDANELLE RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11777) granting the right of way to the Fort Smith, Paris and Dardanelle Railway Company to construct and operate a railroad, telegraph, and telephone line from Fort Smith, Ark., through the Indian Territory, to or near Baxter Springs, in the State

The SPEAKER. The amendments to this bill are merely verbal, the substitution of the word "of" for "with," and "amend" for "amended."

Mr. ROGERS. I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendments.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

J. EDWIN PILCHER.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10240) for the relief of J. Edwin Pilcher.

Mr. CARUTH. I will ask, Mr. Speaker, that the Senate amendment be concurred in. It simply protects more carefully the interests of the Government.

The SPEAKER. The Senate amendment will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

Insert, after the word "Texas," the words:
"Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall find that said Pileher's claims are within the class of claims heretofore paid by the United States out of the Texas indemnity fund; And provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall be satisfied that said bond and money are genuine: And."

There being no objection, the Senate amendment was concurred in.

DANIEL M. MAULDING.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 717) granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Maulding

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask unanimous consent that the conference requested by the Senate be granted.

The SPEAKER. The House must first dispose of the Senate amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask to non-concur in the Senate amendment and agree to the conference.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read. The amendment of the Senate was read at length. There being no objection, the amendment was non-concurred in, and the request for a conference acceded to.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. LANE, Mr. YODER, and Mr. SPOONER.

ADDITIONAL CLERKS, COMMITTEE ON ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. KILGORE. I wish to submit a resolution at this time for reference to the Committee on Accounts, in regard to additional assistance in the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Mr. RANDALL. The matter referred to by the gentleman from Texas relates to the employment of an extra force in connection with the enrollment of bills; and I think it had better be acted upon without reference to a committee, as it is manifestly proper.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is an important matter in expediting the business in the closing days of the session.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved. That the Clerk of the House be authorized and directed to employ for the remainder of this session four expert assistants in the enrolling-room of the House, at a compensation to be fixed by the Committee on Accounts, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. How does this come before the House?
The SPEAKER. It comes on the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolu-

Mr. SOWDEN. I have no objection, but move an amendment that the compensation be not more than $100 per month.

Mr. RANDALL. They will be employed only about two weeks, and

Mr. SOWDEN. I withdraw the proposition to amend. I understand they will be required to work day and night.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KILGORE moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM ENGLISH.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 3721) authorizing the President to appoint William English an officer in the regular Army of the United States, with a Senate amendment.

Mr. HOOKER. I ask unanimous consent to have the amendment

What is the bill?

Mr. HOOKER. I will state to the gentleman that the Senate amendment is a mere restriction on the bill that was passed last year.

Mr. REED. I would like to hear the bill read.

Mr. HOOKER. I ask unanimous consent to have the amendment

The bill was read, as follows:

Be itenacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint William English a second lieutenant in the regular Army of the United States, and to assign him to any vacancy in said rank existing therein.

The Clerk read as follows:

The amendment of the Senate is to insert the words "nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate;" so that it will read; "That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint William English," etc.

Mr. REED. Does this require unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It does. Mr. REED. Then I object.

Mr. HOOKER. Who is it that objects?
Mr. REED. I do.
Mr. HOOKER. It is simply a restriction of the bill that passed the House at the last session.

Mr. RANDALL. Regular order.
Mr. HOOKER. I request that the bill be retained for the present on the Speaker's table.

There was no objection, and that order was made.

NAVAL ACADEMY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9677) to regulate the course at the Naval Academy, with Senate amendment; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3877) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company; which was read twice, and referred to the Committee on the District of JULIET OPIE H. AYRES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 3944) granting a pension to Juliet Opie H. Ayres; which was read twice, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. PERRY, for ten days, on account of important busines

To Mr. WHITING, of Michigan, for this day, on account of sickness.

SPECIAL EXAMINERS IN PENSION BUREAU.

Mr. DARGAN. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report. The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas there were appointed, under an act of Congress approved March 3, 1834, one hundred and fifty special examiners, at a salary of $1,000 a year each, with a per diem allowance for subsistence of $3 per day each, with the view of sending said examiners to the residence of claimants and witnesses, to make a personal examination by seeing claimants and witnesses face to face, and ascertaining the merit of each claim referred to them for this purpose. Therefore, Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be requested to furnish to Congress a list of the persons originally appointed under this law and a statement showing how many of them are still in the service of the United States, and whether any of them have been recalled and assigned to other duty; if so, how many, and why these changes have been made.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, to whom was referred the foregoing resolution, recommend that the same be amended by striking out the word "appointed," in the first line, and insert in lieu thereof the word "authorized," and that the same as amended be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to, and the resolution as amended adopted. Mr. DARGAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on

The latter motion was agreed to.

EMPLOYÉS IN THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Mr. DARGAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a privileged report, which I send to the desk, from the Committee on Reform in the Civil

Mr. HOOKER. I hope the gentleman will withhold that for the present

Mr. RANDALL. This is a privileged report; let it be read.
Mr. HOOKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] withdraws his objection to the matter which I desire to have considered.
Mr. RANDALL. Well, I do not. [Laughter.]
The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed to read the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be requested to furnish to the House of Representatives the following information, to wit:

1. The number of clerks or employes appointed in his Department since March 4, 1855, without examination and certification by the Civil Service Commissioners, classifying them as to grades and compensations.

2. The number appointed as above that are now within the classified service, and how many of such have, since appointment, been examined and certified by the Civil Service Commissioners.

3. The number of divisions existing on March 4, 1856, which were specifically provided for by law in the several appropriation or other acts of Congress, the chiefs of which were not included in the classified service, with name of each division and the amount of compensation of chief in each case.

4. Number of divisions provided for as above now in existence, naming them.

5. Number of divisions recognized by the Department March 4, 1885, naming them.

of each division and the amount of compensation of chief in each case.

4. Number of divisions provided for as above now in existence, naming them.

5. Number of divisions provided for as above now in existence, naming them.

6. Number of divisions now recognized by the Department March 4, 1885, naming them.

6. Number of divisions made or organized since March 4, 1885, by bureau or departmental order and officered by chiefs or clerks in charge by appointments made since March 4, 1885, without examination and certification by the Civil Service Commissioners.

8. Number of clerks of class 4 ($1,800), provided for in the several appropriation acts of Congress, appointed since March 4, 1885, from outside the classified service without examination and certification by the Civil Service Commissioners; the number so appointed from each State and Territory, and the several duties to which they were assigned; also give the forms used in making such appointments.

9. Number of appointments made since March 4, 1885, as clerks, type-writers, or assistants to bureaus, or assistant bureau officers, chief clerks, heads of divisions, and others, without examination and certification by the Civil Service Commissioners, stating the position to which each was appointed and the duties actually performed by each, and the number so appointed that have been subsequently promoted or advanced in salary.

10. Number of clerks or employes in all grades appointed since March 4, 1885, and the number so appointed that have been subsequently promoted or advanced in salary.

11. How many of the ten clerks designated as principal examiners of land claims and contracts in the Bureau of the General Land Office and provided for by act of Congress approved July 11, 1888, Fiftleth Congress, first session, cb. 615, 1888, have been appointed; from what States or Territories were the several appointments made; were the persons so appointed examined and certified by the Civil Service Commissioners, and were any of the appointments made from clerks emp

Mr. DARGAN (before the completion of the reading of the resolution). I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the resolution be dispensed with and that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Is there any objection to adopting the resolution and putting it into effect?

Mr. DARGAN. No objection whatever.

The SPEAKER. That is the question before the House, but the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DARGAN] asks unanimous consent to dispense with the further reading of the resolution.

Mr. GRÔSVENOR. I have no objection to that, but I want the report of the committee to be acted upon.

The SPEAKER. It is now before the House for action. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. DARGAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Several Members. Regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

DIPLOMATIC APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. McCREARY. I desire to present a conference report which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Cierk read as 1010ws.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. H. 11879) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 5, 6, 7, 13, 25, 26, and 27.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24, and agree to the same.

Eathle.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered II and 12 and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Substitute for the sum proposed the following: "$378,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

JAMES B. McCREARY, CHARLES E. HOOKER, ROBERT R. HITT, Managers on the part of the House. EUGENE HALE, Managers on the part of the Senate.

The managers on the part of the House submitted the following state-

ACCOMPANYING STATEMENT OF THE HOUSE CONFEREES.

The conferees on the part of the House respectfully submit the following state-

The conferces on the part of the House respectfully submit the following statement:

The Senate conferces recede from amendment No. 5, which provides an appropriation of $100,000 for the survey, improvement, and occupation of the bay and harbor of Pago Pago, in the island of Tutula, Samea, and for the construction of the necessary wharves and buildings for such occupation, and for coaling station therein. An appropriation having been made for this purpose in the naval appropriation bill, it is not deemed necessary or proper to include it in this bill.

The Senate conferces recede from the amendments numbered 6.7.13.25.26 and tion of the necessary wharves and buildings for such occupation, and for coaling station therein. An appropriation having been made for this purpose in the naval appropriation bill, it is not deemed necessary or proper to include it in this bill.

The Senate conferees recede from the amendments numbered 6, 7, 13, 25, 26, and 27, the effect of which is to restore the rank of "consul-general" to the consul at Montreal, and to dispense with the allowance for a clerk at Ottawa.

The House conferees recede from their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24.

The first two are simply to make the gross amount appropriated conform to amendments.

The effect of number 3 is "to enable the President to cause to be paid to the Government of Japan, to be by it distributed among the families of the Japanese subjects accidentally killed or injured by the explosion of shells from the United States steamer Omaha while engaged in target practice near the island of Ikisima on the 4th of March, 1887, 25,000, the same to be received as full indemnity for the loss and injuries caused as aforesaid, said sum to be immediately available."

This appropriation was recommended by the President in his annual message transmitted to the Congress of the United States on the 3d of December, 1885, and the amount of 35,000 was recommended by the Secretary of State as being adequate to meet the exigencies of the case.

It appears from a report made by the United States consul at Nagasaki, under date of March 12, 1887, to the United States minister at Tokio that the United States steamer Omaha, engaged in target practice on the 4th of March, 1887, at the island of Ikisima, about 25 miles from Nagasaki, and fired about forty shells at a floating target below a high builf on the shore of the island mentioned. So far as those upon the vessel were in a position to judge, the shells fired appeared to have exploded without causing any injury, and thereupon the Omaha proce

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. Speaker, the statement made by the managers of the conference on the part of the House is very full, and I hope we shall have immediate action on the report.

The conference report was adopted.

Mr. McCREARY moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

TARIFF.

Mr. McMILLIN, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill (H. R. 12597) to reduce taxation and simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenue, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill (H. R. 12598) to reduce taxation, and for and Means, reported a bill (H. R. 12598) to reduce taxation, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. REED. Let the report be read.

The SPEAKER. It is not before the House for consideration.

Mr. REED. Is there not a report accompanying the bill?

The SPEAKER. The report can not be read until the matter is

The SPEAKER. The report can not be read until the matter is before the House for consideration.

Mr. REED. Is there a report with the bill?

The SPEAKER. There is a brief report.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Yes, there is a report with the bill.

ABBY J. SLOCUM.

Mr. SPOONER. I rise to present a privileged report. The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 169) granting an increase of pension to Abby J. Slooum, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

J. LOGAN CHIPMAN, S. S. YODER, H. J. SPOONER, Managers on the part of the House. PHILETUS SAWYER, C. K. DAVIS, DAVID TURPIE, Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following statement, submitted under the rule, was read:

Statement to accompany conference report upon bill (S. 169) granting an increase of pension to Abby J. Slocum.

The effect of the action recommended will be to restore the rate of pension proposed by the Senate bill and heretofore recommended by the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House.

J. LOGAN CHIPMAN,
S. S. YODER,
H. J. SPOONER,
Managers on the part of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I ask the reading of the House amendment, from which the conferees recommend that we now recede. The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "50" and insert "30"

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, in every case (with scarcely an exception, I believe) in which the House has adopted an amendment to a Senate bill reducing the amount of the pension, that amendment to a scenare birretateing the amount of the pension, that amendment has been receded from by the House conferees. There may be an exception to this statement, though I do not now recall one. It has become a matter of regular procedure that the Senate passes a bill, it comes to the House, and if the House reduces the amount it is accepted by the friends of the bill without any complaint; a conference committee is appointed; and then the conferees on the part of the House recede from the amendments of the House; and thus by the means of a conference report the pension as fixed by the Senate becomes the law.

Now, I know nothing about the special merits of this case; but we have had with iteration and reiteration almost every week during this session and a part of last session the proceeding which I have described; and I protest against the repetition of the practice in this case, scribed; and I protest against the repetition of the practice in this case, unless the gentleman on the other side [Mr. Spooner] can show some special reason why the judgment of the Senate that this lady should receive $50 a month is a wiser judgment than that of the House that she should receive only $30, for I presume that both of these sums are larger than that which she would be allowed by the general law, and the presumption in every case is that the amount allowed by general law is the proper amount. While I hold that Congress not only has the right, but in certain cases ought to exercise it as a duty, to give a larger amount than that allowed by the general law, the facts of the particular case ought to demonstrate that the proper occasion is presented for such action. I therefore protest against the adoption of this conference report, unless the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. Spooner], who I believe made this report—
